Munitions Act Is Amended In England

Women Workers Alleged to Be Underpaid in Factories.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, Dec. 23.

Women munition workers are deeply concerned with the proposed bill amending the Munitions Act. The text of the bill, which has been the subject of prolonged negotiation, was issued on December 13th. Its most important clause relating to women provides that where female labor is employed in a controlled establishment > the Minister of Munitions shall have power to require the owner of the establishment to comply with any direction given to him by the Minister as to the rate of wages or conditions of employment of the women so employed, and if the owner of the establishment, or any contractor or sub-contractor employing labor therein fails to comply with any such directions he shall be guilty of an offence under the principal Act, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $100, and to a fine not exceeding $5 in respect of each woman for each day on which the offence is continued after conviction thereof.

Some of the remarkable facts which have rendered necessary the immediate passage into law of such an amending clause are supplied by the Women's Trade Union League, of which Mary Macarthur is secretary.

The investigations of the League show that the health of large bodies of women, and, therefore, the future health of the nation, is being seriously undermined by the long hours worked and low wages paid in certain munition factories. The object of the new clause is to force these sweating houses to mend their ways.

Six cents an hour—a rate heartily condemned in a recnt speech by the Chancellor of the Exchequer—is still a fairly common wage for women in a variety of branches of the munitions industry. Women have recently been engaged on government work at 3½, 3, 4½, 5 and 5½ cents an hour. In the neighborhood of London one factory has just raised its rate for fuse-making from 4 cents to 5 cents an hour.

One of the very largest firms is paying women 5 cents to 6 cents an hour for labor connected with telephone making, with extra "war wages" of four-ninths of a penny. In this instance the rate of pay for women is the same for night as for day work, although the night rate for men formerly engaged on this class of job was $8.75 a week. Each woman has to look after twelve machines.

In all such cases the women's unions are fighting for a minimum of 8 cents an hour, anything below that being regarded by competent authorities as a sweating wage under present economic conditions.

A provincial firm engaged in the manufacture of aeroplanes has been paying 3 cents an hour to girls under 18 and 3½ cents to girls above that age for a working week of 55 to 60 hours. As a result of arbitration the scale has been raised, but is still well below the subsistence level. In the same district girls are making bombs for $2.50 a week of 55 hours. Girls belonging to a trade union applied for work, but refused it on being told the wages, whereupon the manager remarked: "Never mind, we can get soldiers' wives to do it."

A big firm in the North is working its women the full maximum of 72 hours a week allowed by the law as it stands, i. e., 12 hours a day for six days in the week; but this necessitates nearly all of the women being away from home for 96 hours a week, as only certain trams from the residential quarter may be used.

London is a center of sweated munition labor. A certain firm known to the authorities, has been working its girls 75, 77, and even 80 hours a week. As they kept bad time—which under the circumstances was not remarkable—a shift was taken off and the girls lost a day's pay. This particular factory appears to have been run under perpetual threats of appeals to the Munitions Court, which overawed the workers.

Where a process requires the employment of mercury, firms are working girls the full five hours at a stretch allowed by law, with the result that in one case at least the girls, who left home an hour before beginning work, were in the habit of bring-

Mine Owners Seek to Oust Gov. Hunt

Through Subsidized Press Operators Attack State's Executive.

Washington, Dec.—Will the mine owners of Arizona, backed by the millions of Cleveland H. Dodge, William Church Osborn, and other New York multi-millionaires, succeed in accomplishing the political ruin of Governor George W. P. Hunt and defeating the strike of 5,000 copper miners?

Because Governor Hunt has dared to treat the miners fairly and protect them against an invasion of lawless thugs and strike breakers, the mine owners are circulating petitions for his recall and bitterly attacking him through their subsidized press. The Committee on Industrial Relations has gathered interesting information regarding this strike.

The leading corporation involved in the Clifton-Morenci strike is Phelps-Dodge and Company, of which James Douglas is president, Cleveland H. Dodge vice president and William Church Osborn a director. The company in 1912 earned 23 per cent on its capital of $45,000,000, and paid a 15 per cent dividend. Today copper is higher than at any time in nine years, yet the company refuses to grant its men a wage increase or to make any concession. The pricipal property of the company at Clifton paid in 1912 a dividend of 146½ per cent on a capital of $1,000,000.

Governor Hunt's refusal to permit the importation of gun men and strike breakers has attracted wide attention. It has furnished a striking contrast with the policy of Governor Ammons in Colorado, where the Rockefeller interests coerced the governor and obtained the use of the state militia for escorting strike breakers.

Whereas Colorado became the scene of the worst strike violence seen in this country in many years, Governor Hunt's policy has prevented all violence in Arizona. Strikers themselves are maintaining order in the mining towns, and several of their number have been sworn in as deputy sheriffs. Instead of prostituting himself to the mine owners, the sheriff has been active in distributing supplies to the families of the strikers, and the state militia are engaged in protecting the workers instead of persecuting and massacreing them.

If the strikers are not starved out, there is every prospect that they will win their struggle for better wages and for union recognition. Their funds are exhausted, and help must be received from outside.

In a letter to the Committee on Industrial Relations answering a request for information, Governor Hunt says:

"In discouraging the importation of strikebreakers I have been actuated chiefly by the desire to avert bloodshed, to safeguard life and property and to keep in view the possibility of amicable arbitration of differences between employers and employes. It is, in my opinion, hardly reasonable to suppose that any considerable body of suppose that any considerable body of workingmen will voluntarily initiate and endure the hardships that invariably attend a large strike without being firmly convinced that they have grievances which need adjustment and that their cause is one entitled to the painstaking consideration of the companies or individuals by whom they are employed.

"It follows, as I believe, that in the average case where the men are not deliberately rendered antagonistic and not amenable to reason by the importation of thugs and gunmen, any fair compromise acceded to by their employers will be met half way by the workingmen. While the Clifton-Morenci strike is, as yet, unsettled, it has not been characterized by that violence which marks the progress, not infrequently, of industrial disputes. It is, moreover, my opinion that a settlement might long ago have been reached, had the managers of the mines affected been reasonable in dealing with their former employes and shown a fair disposition to arbitrate existing differences involving conditions of employment."

WORLD'S HOPE IS UNIONISM.

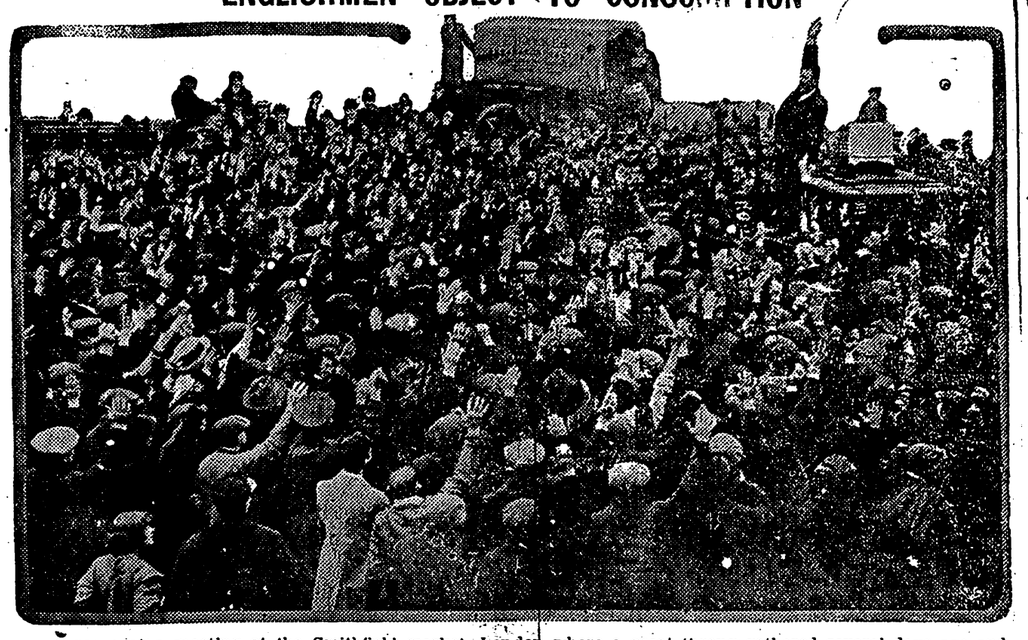
SEATTLE, Jan. 5.—"In organized labor lies the hope of the world, declared Prof. J. N. Bowman, in a speech in this city.

"The labor element is making itself the newspaper publishers in discharge ture, art, music and the church."

TO ACT ON DISCHARGES.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—The Typographical union has created a permanent board to act with representatives of the newspaper publishers in discharge cases.

ENGLISHMEN OBJECT TO CONSCRIPTION



A scene at a meeting at the Smithfield market, London, where a great throng gathered several days ago and vehemently expressed their sentiments against conscription and against the proposal of the government for the early closing of saloons. The photograph was taken when the speaker, who, making use of a carriage as a platform, asked all those against the proposals to put their hands up.

LABOR MUST BE ON GUARD.

Must See that Wage-Earners Are Represented on any Tariff Commission That May be Created.

BY LUKE GRANT.

Like a tidal wave, the statement in favor of a non-partisan tariff commission is sweeping over the country. Politicians, who at first tried to stem the tide, are fleeing to the high places. They are finding they must go with the tide or be swamped. Reports from Washington indicate that the opposition to a tariff commission is on the point of surrender.

Organized labor is playing its part in the campaign. Since the American Federation of Labor convention at San Francisco sounded the keynote that the tariff must be taken out of politics, the unions everywhere have taken up the refrain and are pushing the issue. Samuel Gompers, the "Grand Old Man" of the labor movement, is sending labor's message throughout the land in ringing tones. The campaign virtually is won.

But a note of warning to labor must be sounded. There no longer appears a doubt that the present Congress will create a tariff commission of some kind. The question is, will it create the kind of a commission that labor demands and that it is entitled to have? Will labor be directy represented on that commission? That is the point demanding labor's immediate attention.

The Tariff Commission League, of which Howard H. Gross is president, has from its inception declared that a tariff commission must be representative of all interests in the country, and that it must be non-partisan. The League is non-political in character, with no axes to grind. It holds that labor and agriculture are as vitally interested in the tariff question, as are manufacturers and commerce. It proposes, therefore, that labor and agriculture must be represented on a tariff commission.

This proposed recognition of labor has aroused opposition in certain quarters. There are those who fear the power and influence of organized labor. Others oppose it for economic reasons. This opposition must be defeated. Labor must see to it that it has direct representation on any tariff commission that is created. The time for action is now, before Congress acts.

The tariff commission proposed by the Tariff Commission League gives labor the recognition to which it is entitled. Will you get behind the League and help fight your own battle? Or will you by inaction and lack of interest, allow this opportunity to go by? Remember it rests with you and if organized labor is ignored in the bill the creating a tariff commission, the blame will rest upon you.

It is unnecessary to point out why there ought to be a non-partisan tariff commission. The old log-rolling, political methods of making tariff schedules are well known to all. Practically every responsible leader of labor in the country has condemned the old methods and has demanded a change. The people generally are aroused, for this is a movement of the people. They demand scientific accuracy instead of political guesswork in tariff enactments.

ACT NOW. Adopt resolutions and send them to your Senators and Representatives in Congress. Let them understand that you are in earnest. Insist on having a tariff commission and insist further that labor shall be represented on that commission. If you want further information or literature on the subject, communicate with the Tariff Commission League, 1322 First National Bank Building, Chicago. The work of the League has been indorsed by the foremost men in the labor movement and John Mitchell former president of the United Mine Workers and Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are on its advisory committee. The American Federation of Labor convention has placed its official stamp of approval on the work of the League. It is engaged in your work and it needs your co-operation. Get behind the movment and show you are alive to your own interests.

AUTOMOBILE FATALITIES.

Number of Machines in Use Increasing Much Faster Than Death Resulting From Automobile Accidents.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1916—Is the deadliness of the automobile increasing or decreasing?

This question seems to be answered in a very conclusive manner by the Bureau of the Census, in making public some preliminary mortality statistics for the year 1914, which indicate that during the five years from 1909 to 1914 the number of automobiles in use in the United States increased more than twice as rapidly as the number of fatalities caused by them.

At the close of 1909, according to figures compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, of New York City, from state registration reports, due allowance being made for duplicate registrations, the number of automobiles in use in the United States was approximately 200,000; by the close of 1913 it had riesn to 1,270,000; and a year later, at the end of 1914, it was 1,750,000.

In the meantime the number of deaths due to automobile accidents and injuries increased from 632 in the death-registration area in 1909, containing 56 per cent of the population of the United States, to 2,623 in the same area in 1914; and the increase from 1913 to 1914, for the registration area as constituted in 1913, then containing 65 per cent of the population of the country, was from 2,488 to 2,795.

Thus a five-year increase of 775 per cent—accepting as reliable the figures compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce—in number of machines has been accompanied by an increase of 315 per cent in automobile fatalities; and a one-year increase of 38 per cent in number of machines has been accompanied by an increase of 12 per cent in fatalities.

Perhaps a more reliable comparison, from the statistician's point of view, can be made between the increase in number of automobiles in use and the increase in the rate per 100,000 population for deaths caused by them. This is because, with a given number of machines in use in a given area, the fatalities due to them will tend to be proportional to the population of that area. When the comparison is made on this basis, it appears that a five-year increase of 775 per cent in number of machines has been accompanied by an increase of 258 per cent—from 1.2 to 4.3 per 100,000 population—in the death rate resulting from automobile fatalities. Similarly, a one-year increase of 38 per cent in number of automobiles has taken place along with an increase of only 10 per cent—from 3.9 to 4.3 per 100,000—in the death rate charged to them.

One cause of this proportional decrease in the destructiveness of the automobile is undoubtedly to be found in a reduction in average annual mileage per machine; but, after due weight is given this factor, and a suitable margin is allowed for possible error resulting from inaccuracy in the estimated portion of the automobile statistics, the figures still appear to furnish ample justification for the conclusion that the automobile today is being driven with more care and more regard for public safety than it was a few years ago.

HOW TO REGULATE TRUSTS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—"The federal government, a few years ago, thought they dissolved the American Tobacco company, the trust," says President Perkins of the Cigarmakers' International union. "Since then the stocks of this octopus have steadily gone upward and their operations are more potent than heretofore.

"Legislation in this direction and its resultant failure more clearly emphasizes the position of the trade unionist, who seeks by trade union activity to regulate and control purely economic questions.

"That has been our position all the time, and now. The Cigarmakers' International union should consider thoughtfully, and handle intelligently, first: The formation of an alliance, for offensive and defensive purposes, with the existing organizations now in the industry but outside the pale of the international union. And, secondly, the final organization of all wage-earning inside workers in the cigar and tobacco industry into one compact, formidable, strong organization, this to be accomplished not by force or through conquest, but by education and the furtherance of mutual interests.

"Through complete organization of the entire industry the real workers can come into their own regardless of whether the industry is controlled by the trust or split up into any number of corporations and firms. Fundamentally, organization of the workers is the true means insofar as the workers are concerned by which they may obtain fair wages, shorter hours, sanitary work shops and reasonable working conditions."

A FREE SPEECH VICTORY.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5.—The trustees of the University of Pennsylvania have ruled that henceforth no professor or assistant professor shall be removed until after a conference between a committee consisting of one representative from each of the faculties in the university and a committee of equal number from the board of trustees. Assistant professors are to be appointed for three years, instead of one year, and reappointments shall be for five years. Compared with the trustees' action in the case of Prof. Nearing, this latest rule is most drastic. One local newspaper, commenting on the change since Prof. Nearing's dismissal, says: "Its vital effect is that it marks an advance by the university toward higher ideals and wider usefulness."

Friends of the university declare the adoption of democratic principles of management establishes a new era in that institution, and that the fight of Prof. Nearing and others for the right of free speech has not been in vain.

OHIO MINERS UNEMPLOYED.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—Only 1 out of 8 Ohio miners were employed in June, 1914, while 2 out of 3 were employed in December, reports the state industrial commission. Pick miners worked an average of 150 days during 1914, while they averaged 206 ed an average of 189 days. Loaders averaged only 101 working days during 1914, while they averaged 206 working days in 1913. The coal production during 1914 was 18,736,407 tons. This was slightly more than half of the production for 1913, and smaller than for any year since 1899.

Awards under the workmen's compensation act were made during 1914 for 2,066 accidents in coal mines, of which 51 resulted in death, 1 in permanent total disability, 62 in permanent partial disability, and 1,952 in temporary disability.

COAL COMPANY BLUFF CALLED BY SMITH

As Result Assessment May be Raised to Eight Hundred Dollars Per Acre.

The new Allegheny County Board of Assessment and Tax Revision, one member of which, David B. Johns, has just been appointed will have before it for decision one of the biggest and most momentous questions of assessment and taxation that has yet been brought before this board.

The problem is: Shall the assessed valuation of some 150,000 acres of coal lands owned by the Pittsburgh Coal Company in Allegheny County be increased from Two Hundred or Three Hundred Dollars per acre to Eight Hundred Dollars per acre.

As the matter now rests the present board seemingly has no alternative other than to raise the assessment and thereby place on the books of Allegheny county an increased property assessment of Seventy-five Million dollars.

The question of an increased assessment on the holdings of this large industrial corporation was raised by Attorney A. G. Smith, who petitioned the Board of Assessment and Tax Revision representing taxpayers in the townships of Finley, Bethel, Baldwin, Forward, Upper St. Clair and Mt. Lebanon.

In his argument beforet he board, Mr. Smith cited numerous coal sales made in Allegheny County in recent years in support of his contention that the assessment should be raised. Mr. Smith said that a fair assessed valuation of Allegheny County coal acreage was Eight Hundred Dollars per acre.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company was represented at the hearing by its chief counsel, C. M. Johnston and its chief engineer. Mr. Johnston became very indignant when Mr. Smith made his demand for an Eight Hundred Dollar assessment and after consulting with his chief engineer "dared" Mr. Smith to offer his company Eight Hundred dollars an acre for any of its coal holdings in Allegheny County.

This challenge seemed to convince the Board of Assessment and Tax Revision that the assessment should not be raised. The members however may have changed their minds by this time, inasmuch as Mr. Smith called the bluff of the chief attorney of the Pittsburgh Coal Company by offering to purchase 300 acres of their coal holdings in Allegheny County at Eight Hundred Dollars per acre. To show the good faith of this offer and to prove that Mr. Smith really did have a purchaser for the property, Mr. Smith drew a certified check to the order of the Pittsburgh Coal Company for Five Thousand Dollars.

A formal offer of purchase was made the president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in which this corporation was given a week in which to accept. However, Mr. Smith received no reply and his offer to purchase Two Hundred and Forty Thousand Dollars worth of this coal at Eight Hundred Dollars per acre, the price he was dared to offer, was ignored.

This circumstance has been called to the attention of the present Board of Assessment and Tax Revision. With this undisputed evidence of value in its possession there is little else for the Board to do othert han to make the increase in assessment petitioned for.

On the holdings of the Pittsburgh Coal Company alone, this, at the present rate of county, township and borough taxation in Allegheny county, should amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

Records of recent sales of coal lands in and around Allegheny county cited by Mr. Smith to the Board showed that prices ranged from Eight Hundred Dollars per acre to Thirty-seven Hundred and Fifty Dollars per acre.

Mr. Smith's letter to the Board follows:

December 27, 1915.

Messrs. Charles W. Simon, James M. McKee and Charles B. Price, Board of Tax Revision, Court House Annex, City.

My Dear Sirs:—

I write to advise that the Pittsburgh Coal Company have not accepted the offer to sell three hundred acres of their INACTIVE coal at $800.00 per acre. I asked them to signify their acceptance by 12 o'clock today and they have made no reply whatever. They must not be heard to say that the contract submitted by me was unsatisfactory in other respects. I made it plain to them in my letter that I was willing to change the contract in other respects because my client wants the coal. In justice, you should now regard their pretentions as to willingness to sell as an effort to throw dust in your eyes, while trifling with my time.

I am informed that all the coal in Westmoreland county is assessed at $500 per acre. I have no reliable data as to this and perhaps your Mr. Eades may have complete information. The Westmoreland County coal is largely coking coal and has little value as a steam coal or gas coal. Its shipping facilities and marketing advantages are very much below the Pittsburgh district. I have thought over the difficulties suggested by your Mr. Price to the effect that if Allegheny County should run values above adjoining counties, it might be interpreted as a discrimination against industry. This is more theoretical than real. Suppose that the active coal (such as included in all of Mt. Lebanon, South Fayette, Baldwin and Forward Townships) were assessed at $900 per acre. A ten mill tax on this would amount to but $9.00 per year, in ten years it would aggregate only $90.00. Such could not be said to be oppressive nor confiscatory in the least. However, it is proper for you as a Board to consider this phase of the question? I think not. If by doing your duty, treating the corporation the same as the individual, it happens that the corporation should suffer disproportionately, then it is a matter for legislation. Let the Coal Company have recourse to the legislature if it cannot operate under present tax laws.

In conclusion, I beg to call your attention to the fact that the Coal Company has escaped a proper valuation for many years. Does not this afford a reason for now placing their values to the full measure of just proportions? Would it not be unjust to adopt a policy of raising them gradually? If there is anything that I can do to support you in the stand you have taken, I will be pleased to have you call on me. J. F. Wallace, Esq., is in accord with this letter.

Respectfully yours

A. G. SMITH.

EARTH'S BETTER DAY IS DRAWING NEAR.

THE DIVINELY APPOINTED REMEDY FOR THE WORLD'S UNREST.

The Opening of the Year Suggests the Dawning of the New Age—The Change of Dispensation Manifest to All, But Understood by Few—The King of Glory Soon to Come in—The Great Struggle in the Spiritual Heavens—"The Strong Man" About to Be Bound—The Lord is Judging His People—The Faithful Soon to Be Rewarded.

NEW YORK CITY, January 2.—Pastor Russell gave a very impressive discourse tonight at the New York City Temple, W. Sixty-third street, near Broadway. His text was, "He that sat upon the Throne said, Behold, I make all things new." (Revelation 21:5.) He spoke as follows:

The opening of a New Year is like the opening of a new ledger. It is a favorable time for determining what should be disposed of in the profit and loss account, for putting into effect good resolutions governing the New Year. Those who make no resolutions make very little progress in character-building. Poor fallen human nature needs all the braces and supports which a well-directed will can give it. We are not advocating hasty, and sometimes unreasonable vows, resolutions and pledges, thoughtlessly taken and soon broken. What we have in mind is a thoughtful, rational consideration of the matter, a full determination to pursue the way which deliberate judgment tells one is the proper course. In general, the New Year is a time of preparation for a fresh start in life.

On the other hand, the close of the old year is the time for taking stock and for estimating the profits and losses of the year. In other words, it is a time of judgment, or decision. It is a time for issuing dividends, or rewards, to those who have made wise investments. It is a time for the meeting of directors and for the election of officers and servants for the incoming year. So at the close of this Gospel Age, its affairs are being wound up. The Lord is judging His people, and is about to reward the faithful in glory. Meantime, the world must be set in order for the inauguration of the New Order, the Messianic Kingdom.

THE REAL CAUSE OF PRESENT CONDITIONS.

According to the Bible, earth is the one province of the Universe which is in rebellion against the Creator, and at variance with His wise and beneficent Laws. Man, the King of earth, was created in the image and likeness of God, with the Divine Law written in his heart, and only "a little lower than the angels." (Psalm 8:5.) But this earthly king, Adam, rebelled against his Over-Lord, Jehovah, disobeyed His Laws and brought himself under a sentence of death—"Dying, thou shalt die.—Genesis 2:7; Romans 5:12.

The laws of heredity have so operated that today the children of Adam find the average of life only thirty-five years, and but few individuals pass the century mark. But Adam in his perfection, although less favorably circumstanced, was nine hundred and thirty years in dying. The dying experiences of the race are manifested in mental and moral degradation, as well as in physical degeneracy. With all our knowledge and medical skill the race continue to weaken and the ratio of the insane to increase.

Once Bible students would have stated that God is upon the throne of earth and delights in the present order, which the Bible declares to be a reign of Sin and Death. Once Bible students would have declared that, not satisfied with present conditions, appalling as they are, the Creator has arranged that at death all humanity except the Elect Church shall be turned over fully to the control of demons, who by Divine foreordination will be empowered to torture everlastingly the poor unfortunates of Adam's family beyond the power of human tongue to tell.

These same Bible students would have resented the suggestion that God is NOT reigning over the earth; and that, instead, the world is under the domination of Satan, "the Prince of this world." (John 14:30.) But with facilities for Bible study far superior to anything which our forefathers enjoyed, Bible students are finding that Christian people have overlooked many features of the Divine Record. As the eyes of their understanding gradually open wider and wider, they are seeing lengths, breadths, heights and depths of God's Wisdom, Love, Justice and Power of which they never before dreamed.

We are finding that the horrible teachings of the past, which have caused so generally a spiritual nausea, came not from the Bible, but are "doctrines of demons," promulgated during the Dark Ages. St. Paul tells us that the present blindness and ignorance, which hinder mankind from seeing and appreciating the real character of God and the Divine Plan for human salvation, are deceptions by Satan, "the god of this world."—1 Timothy 4:1; 2 Corinthians 4:4.

A PERTINENT QUERY.

Now, properly enough, comes the query, "If Satan is ruling amongst mankind as a god, or prince of this world, where did he get his authority and power? Did God turn the control of mankind over to demons?"

The Bible answers all our queries. God did not give the dominion of earth to Satan, but to man. In proportion as man lost his perfection and became weak in mind and in body, he became the slave of Satan and Sin. Satan and the fallen angels have exercised —especially during the last forty centuries—all their power and ingenuity for the ensnarement and degradation of men. Their influence would have been all powerful for man's overthrow, had not the Almighty provided humanity with will power and to a large extent forced the evil spirits to respect it.

As a result, we see that human depravity has made much less rapid progress than it might have done. To some extent man still possesses the image of God, in which he was created. Many still possess a natural appreciation of truth and righteousness, which under God's arrangement the fallen angels are not able to overcome. If mankind realized the true situation, undoubtedly the human will would be more persistently than ever exercised in opposition to the wiles of the Devil. As it is, these evil spirits hide their identity, and through spirit mediums personate the dead, who according to the Bible "know not anything," being asleep in death until the Resurrection Morning.—Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6, 10; Psalm 146:4; Job 14:20-22; Genesis 3:19; John 5:28, 29.

"I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW"

By the Heavenly Father's appointment, the Redeemer of men is to be the great King of Glory, who will reign for a thousand years and "make all things new." Repeatedly He tells us that the first work of the New Dispensation will be the binding of Satan. Not only is this referred to in Revelation 20:1-3, but also in our Lord's parables.

Jesus declared that when the appointed time should come His Second Advent would take place. He likened it to the coming of a thief in the night, when men in general would be off guard, not expectant of a change in the rulership of earth. He intimated that His loyal saints will first be taken, while mankind will be in ignorance of the fact that the time has come for the Reign of Righteousness. Next the Son of Man will "bind the strong man, and then He will spoil his house."—overthrow present arrangements. (Matthew 12:22-29; 24:42-44.) This picture implies a struggle; for the strong man, Satan, has had a great host serving him, ignorant of the fact that he is a usurper and that many of his laws are unjust.

Many of them have never understood that He who redeemed the world by the sacrifice of Himself holds a Divine appointment to be the King of Earth, to quell the rebellion and to bring back into harmony with God all the willing and obedient. Many do not know that this Messianic Kingdom will be God's answer to the Redeemer's prayer, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven." Many therefore do not know that all things are to be made new; and that the time appointed by the Father for this great work is a period of one thousand years, now chronologically due to begin.

Not knowing these things, many will be found fighting against God, thinking that in supporting the institutions of the Prince of this world they are doing God service. The Redeemer intimated most distinctly that some of these ignorant ones will be prominent in the ministry of His own Church. They will be surprised, when the honors of the Kingdom are distributed, that they will receive none, but will suffer humiliation and tribulation as unfaithful servants. The Master's words respecting this class are, "Many will say unto Me in that Day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (preached) in Thy name? in Thy name have cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works?"

But the new King will say to them, "Depart from Me"—come not near to share in My Kingdom. Instead of working righteousness, you have been workers of iniquity. Instead of serving Me as ambassadors for My Kingdom and properly representing Me before men, you have done the reverse. You have upheld unrighteousness. You have promulgated doctrines of demons, and have been My adversaries, not My servants. Depart with weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, expressive of your disappointment, to be sharers with the world in its great Time of Trouble, from which My faithful Bride class shall be delivered.

Whatever reformation your share in that tribulation shall effect will determine what I may do for you or with you in the future, in harmony with the Divine arrangements. But I cannot recognize you as in any sense worthy of the glory, honor and immortality which shall be accorded to the Bride class—Paraphrase on Matthew 7:22, 23; 13: 40-43; 25:30; Luke 13:25-28; 12:45-48.

TWO PARALLEL AGES.

Looking at the time of the change from the Jewish Age to the Gospel Age, we perceive that during a period of forty years God dealt especially with Fleshly Israel—from the beginning of the ministry of Jesus until the destruction of Jerusalem by the army of Titus. That forty-year period the Master styled the Harvest of that Age. The gathering of the wheat class progressed close down to the consummation of that Harvest—the separating of the chaff class meanwhile taking place.—John 4:35-38; Matthew 3:11, 12.

Finally, when the wheat had all been gathered into the garner of the New Dispensation, by the begetting of the Holy Spirit, the chaff was consumed in a time of trouble which utterly destroyed the Jewish polity. The destruction of the chaff did not signify the annihilation of unbelieving Jews nor their eternal torture. It represented parabolically the complete destruction of their Jewish hopes. Those hopes have lain buried for eighteen centuries, and are only now reviving—in the form of Zionism.

The parable of the Wheat and the Tares (Matthew 13:24-30) pictures the Lord's work during the Gospel Age. The Master and His Apostles sowed only good seed, the pure Message of the Messianic Kingdom, to which a saintly few would attain and which ultimately would bless all the families of the earth. But Satan, through his various agencies (many of whom wore the livery of Christ), oversowed the wheat-field with tare seed—false doctrines, "doctrines of demons."

From this unauthorized sowing by the Adversary—as a result of these false doctrines which he caused to be promulgated throughout Christendom—many nominally came into the Church of Christ. These never really professed to be wheat, never had the begetting of the Holy Spirit, never were disciples in the only sense that Christ acknowledges any to be His followers.

As tares resemble wheat, so these deceived people, the progeny of false doctrines, think themselves to be Christians. They greatly outnumber the true Christians, just as the chaff of the Jewish nation outnumbered the "Israelites indeed." As God then gathered the wheat, the "Israelites indeed," into the spiritual House of Sons by the begetting of the Holy Spirit, so now He will gather the faithful ones of this Gospel Age into the Heavenly Garner by the change of the First Resurrection. As the prospects and the hopes of the nominal Israelites, the chaff class, were consumed in the great time of trouble which closed that Age, so the hopes and the prospects of the tare class will perish in the great fire, or Time of Trouble, with which this Gospel Age is closing.

"THE OLD ORDER PASSETH."

The dispensational change near at hand will be much greater than that of eighteen centuries ago. There, our Lord Jesus merely sent forth the Message for the calling out of His Church. But here, the Church, having been completed, is to be glorified; and the Kingdom of Messiah is to overthrow completely the kingdom of Satan. In illustrating the radical change which is to take place in the near future, the Scriptures refer to the Deluge, which completely overthrew the systems of wickedness and unrighteousness then prevailing.—Matthew 24:37-39; Luke 17:26-30.

The Apostle Peter tells us that in the end of this Age the overthrow of present institutions will be as complete as in the days of the Deluge. He declares that the present earthly elements—Capital and Labor, aristocracy and common people, plutocracy and socialists —will be engaged in a terrible strife, which can be properly symbolized only by a consuming fire. More than this, St. Peter declares that the heavens also will take fire—ecclesiasticism will become involved in the strife and will pass away with a great commotion.—2 Peter 3:1-13.

But let us remember that it is neither the physical earth nor the Heaven of God's habitation that will burn up. It will be merely the social and religious institutions which, under the supervision of the Prince of this world, are styled "the present evil world," or imperfect arrangement.

As St. Peter also points out, the present Order will be superseded by a new Order, which the Apostle calls "new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The new heavens will be the Church in glory, in Kingdom power. The new earth will be the new social arrangements instituted, guided, directed by the new heavens—Messiah's Kingdom. The New Kingdom will enforce its laws as with a rod of iron—inflexibly. No longer will it be true that whosoever will live godly shall suffer persecution, and have all manner of evil said against him falsely, as a reward of faithfulness to Christ and the Truth. On the contrary, in the Day of Messiah's Kingdom, the righteous shall flourish, and all wilful evil-doers shall be cut off in the Second Death.—Psalm 72:7; 37:9.

THE WORK OF THE KINGDOM.

Through the Prophet the Lord calls attention to this new condition, saying, "Behold, create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." (Isaiah 65:17.) Our context tells us of this same "new heavens and new earth" condition as taking the place of the present order of things. Then it describes the Church under the symbolism of "the New Jerusalem," the capital of Messiah's Kingdom, and the center from which authority will go forth for mankind's assistance out of the fallen conditions of sin and death.

We also read that through those blessed provisions, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things (the present evil world are passed away." The work of renewing will require the entire thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom, and will be successful to the highest degree.

Let all whose eyes of understanding have been opened to see these things repoice, and tell abroad the glorious story that the period of the reign of Sin and Death is expiring, and that the new period of the Reign of Righteousness is near at hand, bringing life everlasting to every one who will be obedient. With this thought before our minds, the New Year before us will bring us joyful suggestions, helpful in all the experiences of life—especially to those who have become followers of Jesus. Those who are seeking to walk in His steps, willing to suffer with Him for the sake of the Truth, shall in due time be glorified together with Him, as members of His Elect Bride class.

The great Divine Plan of the Ages is rolling onwards towards completion; and at every stage its progress makes for fresh blessings and fresh revelations of the glorious things which God hath purposed in Himself from before the foundation of the world. Truly, God's ways are higher than man's ways, and His thoughts than man's thoughts!—Isaiah 54:9.

LUTHER'S LITERARY ACHIEVEMENTS.

Luther and Beecher ha a few things in common. They were both lovers and orators of nature. Expresion and love usualy go together as in the great poets they are usually affected with lovesickness. They both had a strong sense of humor and hilarious jokers. From a literary point of view Luther takes many laurels. He not only produced many large and bulky volumes during his life, but wrote well and also wrote poetry. Beecher exerted most of his influence through his oratory, but Luther used both talents effectually. His publications amount to eleven hundred volumes, as reckoned by Lecendorf. Others place the number at seven hundred and fifteen volumes—one for every two weeks that he lived after issuing the first. Even the last six weks of his life he issued thirty-one publications—more than five per week." From these accounts his mind must have been very prolific.

His scope of observation was very broad-his mental range was not confined to any one set of subjects even though his special occupation was theology. "He studied human nature like a dramatist. Shakespeare drew from him. His memory was a museum of historical information, anecotes of great men, and old German literature, songs, and proverbs, to the later of which he made many rich additions from his own genius. Scarce a subject could be spoken of on which he had not thought and on which he had not something to say." (Froudel) From these facts it is evident that he was not b'goted and in all his learning acquired in life he did not lose his equilibrium to the extent of being dogmatic and regarding his product as the final expression of truth, as is evident in the following accredited to him: "Only a ittle of the first fruits of wisdom-only a few fragments of the boundless heights, breaths, and depths of truth-have I been able to gather." Concerning the language in which he clothed his thoughts we present the following:

"Luther holds a high and glorious place in German literature. In his manuscripts we nowmhere discover the trace of fatigue or irritation, no embarrassment or erasures, no ill-applied ephithet or unmanageable expression; and by the correctness of his writing we might imagine he was a copyist rather than a writer of the work." (Audin.) "Luther's language became through his writings, and has since remained, the language of literature and general intercourse among educated men, and is that which is understood universally it be meant when the German is spoken of. His translation of the Bible is still as much the standard of purity for that language as Homer is for the Greek." (Stowe.

Calvin

Calvin entered upon his public career very young—at eighteen he was preaching in a country parish in France. Shortly after this he became interested in Luther whose pamphlet had found its way from Germany into France. The contents of the pamphlet did not interest him, but the man who wrote it—he had defied authority. Just as Wesley's heart religion was an offense to the precise parsons of his day, Luther's blunt coarse and rollicking ways repelled the serious, sober and ascetic Calvin, who moved in royal society and amongst the cultured. He examined the pamphlet in secret with the intention of refuting it. He grew to admire the authors self-reliance and finally quit the priesthood and later began translating Luther's Bible into French and studying law.

Calvin's personality was very strong and his keen intellect and high social standing commanded the respect of those in authority, and was not molested. He later began to preach again and was ordained a priest. He contradicted everybody—the aged, and all, regardless of position. While others were being burned at the stake as heretics in France, for years no hand was laid on him. Finally, notice was served upon him by King Frances, asking him to desist and make peace with his superiors. He left Paris and escaped a fate that others had met for similar offenses.

Later Dr. Servetus, the "Papal Delegate" ("a revivalist") traveled through France preaching against "Lutherism and other forms of grievous errors." Calvin issued a challenge at long distance to debate the issues. Servetus accepted but Calvin weakened — no arrangements were made. Calvin finally reached Geneva, Switzerland, and turned it into a theocracy of prayer and Bible study. Students from all parts of Europe streamed into the city to hear the new gospel expounded, and amongst them was John Knox. Knox is said to be "very much like him temperamentally," but as we shall see differed in many respects. He carried this new religion to Scotland.

Servetus was very much like Arminius who was a rhetorician. He was gentle and considerate but diplomatic, and very much unlike Calvin, who was domineering and accusative. One authority says that "after Calvin reached Geneva he entered into a long correspondence with Dr. Servetus and the debate which had been purposed was carried on by correspondence. Servetus proposed to Calvin that the postponed debate should take place at Geneva. Calvin replied that if Servetus came to Geneva he would burn him alive." Servetus was enroute to Naples, but he never reached there. He did not take Calvin seriously and like other pilgrims he stopped at Geneva "to study the new religion" He was arrested and tried for heresy. In France Calvin was the heretic, in Geneva Servetus. Here heresy was a question of geography.

Presbyterians today have denounced their leader's public acts and creed. They have revised the Westminster confession of faith and have erected a monument to Servetus in Geneva, dedicated 1912, bearing the following inscription: "In memory of Michael Servetus—victim of religious intolerance to his time, and burned for his convictions at Champel on September 27th, 1553. Erected by the followers of John Calvin, three hundred and fifty years later, as expiation for that act, and to repudiate all coercion in matters of faith."

Here we note the consistency that Calvin's theology was as repulsive as his public acts—it produced Knox, Arminius, and later Wesley, Beecher and Russell, who all took issue with it.

Munitions Act is Amended in England

ing food with them and eating it secretly—a proceeding most dangerous to health.

In powder factories—where the wages sometimes rule as low as $2.50 a week—the sheds are not infrequently very cold, damp, and ill-ventilated.

Many of the women who are working terribly long hours for a pittance are quite young girls, according to the reports of the league's investigators. Fainting is frequent and the health of many of the girls is being permanently undermined to a degree, and in a manner, which must gravely affect the future stamina of the race.

Terribly inadequate arrangements are too often made for providing the women with food, but it is noteworthy that where proper canteens have been arranged the firms have noticed a marked improvement in the worker's output. "It pays," is the comment of those establishments that have instituted reasonable hours and an adequate commissariat.

What the Women's Trade Union League is steadily working for is the universal establishment of eight-hour shifts. Where the plan has been adopted excellent results have been achieved. From one factory in North London which recently adopted it comes this report: "Going on very satisfactorily, with steady improvement in health and output."

It is hoped that the Minister of Munitions may so administer the new clause as to make it a real Women Munition Workers' Charter. The fact that some women are earning as much as $15 a week in munition factories can be no excuse for the sweating of their less fortunate sisters.

The most instrinsically important proceedings in Parliament on December 14th were in the House of Lords, where nowadays most of the really sensible parliamentary suggestions come from—the House of Commons being in a very stagnant state so far as fresh thought is concerned.

Lord Parker urged the necessity of making proper provision for the industrial population of the country after the war. His theme was "preparedness for peace"—the turning of swords back into plough-shares.

For a year, said Lord Crewe, these grave problems have been under careful examination, and in particular, the Board of Agriculture has been making ready for the return of men to the land, on which a report will be presented before Christmas.

Lord Haldane wanted a Peace Book similar to the War Book, which guided the Departments in August of last year.

Lord Newton, for the War Office, said that demobolization woud be gradual, and soldiers so disbanded would receive four weeks' full pay, and allowances, with traveling expenses to their homes, a money gratuity for war service, and a year's insurance policy against unemployment. None of this machinery was available at the end of the Boer war when so much distress occurred.

Lord Lansdowne, in a very sympathetic speech, hoped that a central body woud be created to organize the situation after the war, and he also, like other peers, thanked Lord Haldane for his suggestions.

Labor opinion is generally in agreement with the statements and suggestions regarding methods of raising future War Loans. The one point upon which approval is definitely withheld is the proposal to make saving compulsory on every wage-earner.

Interviewed upon this important point James O'Grady, the Labor member of East Leeds, said that he doubted whether trade union speakers were giving any support to the cry that there were lean and disastrous times ahead at the conclusion of the war. "Trade union leaders—myself included," he said, "Agree that all this talk about bad trade after the war is sheer pessimism. It is not only possible, but very probable, that after the war England will be the workshop of Europe. Among the nations of Europe we shall be the least exhausted, not only from the financial but also from the industrial point of view.

"Labor leaders, of course, are anxious that the workers should save. We have always urged thrift upon our members, even in normal times, and we are urging it even more strongly now. We also want trade unionists to keep their organizations intact and to make them stronger, so that after the war employers shall not take advantages of the circumstance that a large amount of labor may be thrown upon the market by demobilization.

"If the government wish to secure the savings of the workers they must make their proposals for thrift as plain and as simple as they can. I thoroughly agree that working men do not wan't 'scrip vouchers,' 'bonds,' and 'stock certificates.' They do not understand these things. It seems to me that the best process is to make the post office the receptacle for their savings. The money would be transferred to war loan at a higher rate of interest when it reached a certain sum, but it must be proved that the men can get out their money up to a limited amount when they want it. There ought to be a clear understanding that the savings are not to be tied up. Interest is not the first consideration with our people, though it is only fair that if they invest their money they should get reasonable interest upon it. The essential things are a guarantee of security for the full amount and an assurance that they can obtain $25 or $50 on demand if they require such a sum. The element of speculation must be removed."

On the question of compulsory saving, O'Grady said that any proposal in this direction would meet with the most strenuous opposition that has yet been offered to a government action since the beginning of the war.

OBJECT TO OVERTIME.

SEATTLE, WASH., Jan. 5.—The Plasterers' union has notified employers that its rule will henceforth be enforced which debars its members from working overtime while other members are unemployed.

REFEREE OPENS OFFICE HERE.

Thomas J. Dunn, referee for the Pittsburgh district of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau, on January 3, opened offices on the Eighth floor of the Hartje Building, where it is expected, in the near future all the state offices located in Pittsburgh will be housed.

Mr. Dunn, in a recent interview stated that it would be his policy to see that the accident victim or his dependents receive their just dues under the compensation law and that no portion of the award goes to attorneys or other representatives.

In this Mr. Dunn will receive the hearty co-operation of the National Labor Tribune and all requests for information along this line will be referred to Mr. Dunn and given especial attention.

THE HOLY SPIRIT GIVEN AT PENTECOST

Acts 2:1-13.—Jan. 9.

What the Pentecostal Blessing Was. Its Importance to the Church Then and Now—The Lesson It Taught. How Understood by Some and Misunderstood by Others.

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?"—1 Corinthians 3:16.

PENTECOST was a notable day in the Jewish calendar. It marked the fiftieth day in the harvest—after the gathering of the first ripe sheaf. Our Lord in His glorious resurrection condition was the Antitype of that sheaf, the Firstfruits of God in the great Plan of Redemption. The first forty days, as we have seen, were used in giving occasional lessons to the disciples—helping them, getting them properly started, with proper faith in the resurrection to make a good witness and to gather out the Lord's jewels from amongst men. When at the end of the forty days Jesus left them, He instructed them not to begin their ministry at once, but to wait until endued with power from on High.

Accordingly, they waited ten days, and then came the outpouring of His Spirit upon them in the upper room on Pentecost. During those ten days they transacted just one item of business. But it was without authority from the Lord, and was never recognized by Him. It consisted in casting lots for a successor to Judas. As they cast lots on only two men, it followed that one of the two must be chosen. But we hear nothing more of Matthias, whom they chose. Instead, in due time God brought forth St. Paul.

Appeared In God's Presence.

When our Lord ascended, the Apostle declares, He appeared in the presence of God for us—for His Church. (Hebrews 9:24.) He did not appear for the world. He loved the world. He died for the world. But the time for the world's blessing must wait until the Divine Program respecting the Church shall have been carried out.

"Appeared For Us."

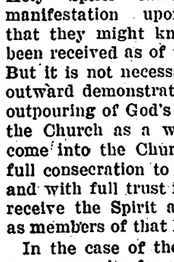
The events of that Pentecost were very valuable to the Church at that time, but have been equally valuable to all our Lord's members. The Scriptures represent that all who are received into God's family receive a begetting of the Holy Spirit. This begetting was what Pentecost meant to those waiting in the upper room. From that time onward they were sons of God. (Romans 8:17.) And so it is with us who have come into the Body of Christ since Pentecost. We do not receive special manifestations of Divine power, such as the cloven tongues; but we receive from God the same Holy Spirit which they received.

The Holy Spirit came with outward manifestation upon Jesus, the Head of the Church, that we might know that He was thus accepted by the Father. Then at Pentecost the Holy Spirit came with outward manifestation upon the disciples, that they might know that they had been received as of the Body of Christ. But it is not necessary for us to have outward demonstration today; for this outpouring of God's blessing was upon the Church as a whole. And as we come into the Church of Christ by a full consecration to do the Lord's will, and with full trust in Jesus' work, we receive the Spirit and are counted in as members of that Body.

In the case of the Apostles, we can see a necessity for outward demonstration. They were Jews who had believed in Jesus, had made their consecration and had been received into discipleship by Him. But the Father could not receive any into sonship until after Jesus had died, risen, ascended on High and made applicable the merit of His death on our behalf. The Pentecostal blessing was the beginning of the recognition of Jesus' followers as sons of God and heirs according to His Promise.

Gifts and Fruits of the Spirit.

At Pentecost the Lord gave gifts to the Apostles, and to the remainder of the Church through them—the ability to speak with various tongues, to heal the sick, etc. Evidently these gifts were necessary for the establishment of the Church. But they must have ceased when the Apostles, through whom alone they were bestowed upon others, fell asleep in death. While God has not continued the gifts with the Church, He has promised something still better—the fruits of the Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love. These are more valuable than the gifts, because they represent character, not merely powers, and because they evidence that their possessor has been begotten of the Holy Spirit.



Pentecost.

The Apostles were Galileans, and therefore used only one dialect. But under the power of the Holy Spirit, they spoke various languages; and their Message was appreciated by those who used those tongues. The miracle had the designed effect, and became a witness to the holy Jews gathered at Jerusalem from all the nations of the world.

Remember hatters' day, January 27, and the sacred duty to give the wages of an hour's labor of that day to relieve the Danbury hatters, the victims of the greed of labor's enemies and the perversion of the law.

APPRECIATIONS.

Frank, Pa., Dec. 28.

My subscription having expired since the 9th I am renewing this day through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. I very much appreciate your stand on religous subjects and for all that is just and right. I wish the Tribune a merry Christmas and prosperous New Year.

Yours truly,
EBEN EVANS.

Rome, Ga., Dec. 28.

Let me thank you for your kindness in not only supplying us with the very best labor-news paper in the world, and especially Pastor Russell's Sermons and the religous matter otherwise, but I am personally greatful to you that you have continued my subscription to your invaluable paper though I had dropped behind with my subscription woefully. I have had quite a great deal of expense to meet in the past but I am glad to tell you that a few days ago I renewed through the Watch Tower and we are safe for the Dear Old Tribune for some time yet. Greatfully Yours
ROBERT H. OSWALT.

Hamilton, Canada, Dec. 27.

I have renewed my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower Society and also renewed my friends Mrs. Chas. Chadwick 202 East Ave N. Hamilton, Ont., and I must say we enjoy the religious part of your paper very much, and we hope to be a subscriber as long as you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons.

With best Wishes
HENRY ALBINS.

Jamaica, B. W. I., Dec. 22.

I see from the wrapper of your most valued paper that the subscription has expired and truly regret that on account of financial lack I must ask you to hereafter discontinue to send same. I shall truly miss the many interesting features of your paper, particularly the religious section. May the Lord's rich blessing be with you during the ensuing year and as long as you stand up for the Truth. Wishing you a most joyous Xmas.

I remain yours sincerely,
M. H. MYERS.

Shinglehouse, Pa., Dec. 29.

Am renewing my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower office.

It is a pleasure to read Pastor Russell's sermons in a paper where so much of it is printed in such good type.

Wishing you the best success.
Sincerely yours,
MRS. J. E. NICHOLS.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 1.

Excuse me for writing you on the ject matter, as I think things in the Truth has kind of shifted, as it were. In reading the Watch Tower this week I see that the papers are rapidly dropping the Truth features. Is this to be wondered at? How do our friends expect papers, especially one like the Labor Tribune, to continue publishing the sermons when they are losing subscribers rapidly because a paper in the northwest is trying to obrogate all others to the newspaper graveyard, indeed, Mr. Editor, I am informed that the editor of this western paper says he is going to be Pastor Russell's successor. God save the mark. I am also told that this same man is trying to have the Truth headquarters moved to St. Paul, Minn. This would in my mind wreck the Truth in such a manner, that it would take years of hard work to put it back where it is now. Now, my dear friends, let us stick to our old friend, the Tribune, and bost it for all its worth next to the Watch Tower. There is only room for one Watch Tower, the one in Brooklyn, and let the one in St. Paul, severely alone. There is an old saying, which is very true, "Never give up an old friend for a new." Yours for the Watch Tower first and the Tribune second and all windbags to the rear, I remain,

Yours truly,
ALBERT DRIPPS.

Henderson, N. C., Dec. 25.

I write to ask you to discontinue sending me the Tribune, as I find I cannot pay for it. I am very sorry to have to give it up as I so much appreciate the religious features, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and hope to get on your list again if my financial condition should improve so I can do so. With best wishes
MRS. VIRGINIA WOODLUF.

Rutherglen, Scotland, Dec. 17.

I herewith enclose Postal Order being renewal of my annual subscription to your paper and also for Mrs. McGready, Laurel Bank, Burnside, Rutherglen.

My subscription was due last month I find, but I am not too late in sending it.

We continue to appreciate your paper here very highly, the special feature being Pastor Russell's sermons. We are glad to know you are continuing to publish these and give them such prominence, as we are convinced they contain a very special lesson for the world at this time when it is so much absorbed in this great European war.

We know you will receive your reward for this. With best thanks and wishes,

Yours faithfully,
ALFRED JOHNSON.

Columbiana, O., Dec. 29.

I have sent renewal subscriptions via Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society. I appreciate your paper in its general make up, especially Pastor Russell's sermons, apreciations, etc.

Sincerely yours,
ROBERT F. MARTIN.

Russell, in noting that the followers of Calvin have erected the monument in memory of Servetus, said: "It seems remarkable that only now we are realizing that a man so deficient in the spirit of his Master as to murder his brother, should not be an accepted teacher of the Word of God and its spirit. Only now are Bible students realizing that Brother Calvin was not the inventor of the doctrine of Election, but merely of the doctrine that all the non-elect would suffer everlastingly."

In line with this statement we quote Emerson who noted that Calvin's Fatalism is of Platonic origin, not of the Bible, he says: "Calvinism is in Plato's Phaedo." Platonism, fused with Paganism, and blended with the teachings of the Bible concerning the nature of the final punishment of the incorrigible wicked, certainly made a repulsive compound. It fired Knox into action and he fought it with his doctrines of man's Free Moral Agency.

In line with these deductions we have from the pen of Joseph A. Seiss, D.D., a more general description of the immediate and subsequent effect of the ecclesiastical state of which Calvin was sole lord and monarch. Seiss has noted that Calvin was very much like Zwingli in using the state to enforce his ideals. Zwingli was doctrinally ahead of Luther in one issue but had the falalistic and intolerant ideas of Calvin—he was a patriot and would have used the carnal weapons of Calvin with his radical and rationalistic spirit. The closer we get to those that surrounded Luther the greater his character stands out above them, and, after examining the case of Knox and subsequent history, it will develop that God, as in the days of the Jewish patriarchs of old, honors only one standard bearer at one time. Our quotation from Seiss follows:

"John Calvin was a man of great learning and ability. Marked has been his influence on the theology and government of a large portion of the Reformed churches. But the Reformation was twelve years old before he came into it. It had to exist already ere there could be a Calvin, while his repeated flights to avoid danger proved how inadequate his courage was for such unflinching duty as rendered Luther illustrious. He was cold, hard, ascetic aristocrat at best, more cynical, stern and tyrannical than brave. The organization for the church and civil government which he gave to Geneva, was quite too intolerant and inquisitorial for safe adoption in general or to endure the test of the true Gospel spirit. Under a regime which burnt Servetus for heresy, threw men into prison for reading novels, hung and beheaded children for improper behavior towards parents, whipped and banished people for singing songs, and dealt with others as public blasphemers if they said a word against the Reformers or failed to go to church—the cause of the Reformation could never have commanded acceptance by the nations, or had survived, had it been received. The famous "Blue Laws" of the New England colonies have had to be given up as a scandal upon enlightened civilization; but they are largely transcribed from Calvin's code and counsels, including even punishing of witches. For the last two hundred years the Calvanistic people have been reforming back from Calvin's rules and spirit, either to a better foundation for the perpetuation and honor of the church or to a rationalistic skepticism which lets go all the distinctive elements of the genuine Christian Creed—the natural reaction from the hard and overstrained severity of a legalistic style of Christianity."

TO TEST EMERGENCY LAW.

BOISE, IDAHO, Jan. 5.—The state supreme court is asked to test the legality of the emergency employment law, which provides that county commissioners must furnish work to those who demand same. This county's commissioners are defendants in the suit, and it is stated that they will plead that there are no funds available for the employment of laborers, that the county has no work, and that efficient work requires machinery, tools and supplies, with which the county is not equipped in a manner to make emergency employment profitable or beneficial.

Supporters of the law will deny the right of commissioners to pass judgment on the act, and will insist that they must obey it just as they must obey other laws upon the statute books, and that it is up to them to provide the ways and means for carrying out the plain mandate of the law making power of the state.

Because of the unusual provisions of this law, and the fact that it is the first of its kind by any state, the decision will be watched with interest.

Shipyard Men Seek Raise In Wages

Fngland Now Considering Placing Income Tax On Weekly Earnings.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Joint Trade Shipbuilding Committee, representing 157,000 shipward workers, have asked for a substantial national increase in the wages of shipbuilding men. No actual amount has been claimed, but the workmen's representatives suggest a 15 per cent advance.

Under the terms of the Munitions Act, the matter has been submitted to the Board of Trade for arbitration, and Sir George Askwith heard the arguments on December 16 th.

The decision of the Committee on Production (of which Sir George Askwith is chairman) is awaited with considerable interest in view of the fact that it is the first important demand submitted for consideration since the suggestion was put forward by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the trade unions a fortnight ago that wages demands should not be put forward at the present time by the skilled trades.

Although the Munitions Amendment Bill which was issued on December 11 is unlikely to be wholly satisfactory to the rank and file of labor, it unquestionably goes a considerable way to meet their objections on several not unimportant points. All the proposed changes relating to the issue of discharge certificates are in their interest, and so are those protecting from unreasonable dismissal within six weeks of their enrollment of war munitions volunteers. The contemplated "improvements" in the tribunals fall a good deal short of what the trade unions asked for, but the concessions of a right of appeal on questions of law and the proposal that one of the assessors shall be a woman where one of the parties to a case is a woman are alterations for which many will be grateful. Munitions Tribunals are to have power to order employers to give compensation to men who are unreasonably dismissed without adequate notice, and also to award costs to "defendants" where they consider the proceedings to the "vexatious or frivolous." The latter is obviously a trade union amendment, but it cuts both ways.

Employers generally are affected in an unexpected way by an amendment which is proposed to be made to Part III. of the Munitions Act. The Minister is to be given authority to require from the owner of any establishment in which persons are employed "costs of production and materials and the names and addresses of the suppliers of materials." A contemplated change of more general interest relates to the definition of the term "workman." Foremen, clerks, typists, draughtsmen, "and other persons whose usual occupation consists wholly or mainly in work other than manual labor" are to be workmen in the meaning of the act. One effect of the amendments as a whole should be considerably to enhance the importance and increase the work of the local tribunals.

A suggestion that income tax stamps should be issued to facilitate the collection of taxes on the wages of the higher paid workers, as arranged for in Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna's last Budget, was made at a meeting of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress on December 16 th

It was realized by the committee that difficulty in the collection of income-tax from the working classes was bound to arise, and much consideration was given to the question how to mitigate hardship. The plan most favorably received was that the treasury might issue stamps to the value of 25 cents, 36 cents, 50 cents, or 60 cents, which workers liable to taxation might purchase when they had such an amount to spare. These stamps they would retain until assessed for taxation. Thus the hardship of a worker being called upon for a lump sum would be minimized. The stamps would be on sale at all post offices. The committee agreed to discuss the matter with Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna.

The relationship of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers to the Labor Parliamentary representation movement is a little peculiar. In one ballot vote the members approved a proposal to affiliate with the party organization, and in another declined to make the necessary financial provision for giving effect to the decision. In consequence the Executive Council eventually found themselves with obligations amounting in all to about $5,000, which they had not authority to meet. Two months ago they invited

New Industry Established In U. S.

First Tin Smelting Plant in This Country Put Into Operation

"Commerce Reports" for today will announce the establishment of an entirely new industry in the United States. All arrangements have been completed for the importation of Bolivian tin ore by the American Smelting and Refining Co., and a large plant has been erected at Perth Amboy, N. J., for smelting and refining the raw material. It will be the first attempt to establish the industry on a large scale in the United States.

The first definite information that such an undertaking had been decided upon was contained in a letter to Secretary Redfield from William Loeb, Jr., of the American Smelting and Refining Co., in which it was stated that a new plant had been practically completed at Perth Amboy for the smelting of tin ores and concentrates and the electrolytic refining of tin. Mr. Loeb stated that this country imports about 45,000 tons of tin yearly, and of this about 90 per cent is Straits tin, which is consumed largely in the production of tin plate. The Straits Settlements impose an export duty on tin ores, thus compelling the reduction of metallic form in the country in which it is produced.

The Bolivian tin, according to Mr. Loeb's letter, contains impurities which, with the established methods of smelting, do not produce a tin suitable for tin plate, but the plant at Perth Amboy proposes not only to smelt the impure ores from Bolivia and other countries, but to refine the product by the electrolytic process. A recent analysis of this electrolytic tin by experienced chemists showed it to run 99.98 per cent pure, while the base metal from which it was produced contained only 93 per cent. For the manufacture of tin plate this tin is pronounced as good as the best Straits tin.

"In addition to building the plant and purchasing the South American tin ores," writes Mr. Loeb, "we are financing the miners by making liberal advances immediately on shipments from South America. We hope eventually to be able to extend our present plant and increase the business considerably. In the initial steps of our negotiations to secure these tin ores, we were greatly helped by the co-operation of the Chief of your Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the Commercial Attache of the Department in South America, and by the State Department."

There were many obstacles in the way of importing tin ore from Bolivia, some of which have been removed through the assistance of the State Department and some by the assistance of the Department of Commerce. The whole project was formally launched when Mr. Loeb called at the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commmerce and outlined the importance of establishing a tin-smelting industry in this country and the difficulties in the way of getting tin from Bolivia regularly and in the required amounts. The Bureau immediately got in touch with its Commercial Attache at Lima, Peru, who thereupon went to Bolivia and started negotiations with the Bolivian Government through United States Minister. Through these negotiations many misconceptions on the part of the miners were removed and most of the troublesome points that had prevented the drawing up of mutually satisfactory contracts were smoothed out.

In the meantime the Secretary of Commerce had addressed a letter to the State Department suggesting that the matter of Bolivian export duties be taken up with the Bolivian Government and that some expression of opinion from that Government be obtained as to future interpretations of the old treaty between the two countries. The State Department exchanged notes with Bolivia and the final result was that the Bolivian Minister of Foreign Affairs signed an assurance that there would be no future discrimination against the United States in the matter of export duties.

Although the United States is easily the greatest user of tin ,only a very small quantity of the metal is mined in this country and practically no smelting has been done here. About 90 per cent of the metal imported originates in the Straits Settlements, where the world's greatest tin mines are located, although great quantities are received indirectly by way of England, Belgium, and Germany. Important quantities imported from Europe also originate in Bolivia, the concentrated ore being shipped from that country to Europe for further refining. In normal times the United States imports about $50,000,000 worth of tin, which is somewhat more than a third of the world's production. Bolivia produces about $25,000,000 worth annually.

The value of a tin-smelting industry to the United States is great, but difficult to estimate in its full importance. The smelting industry itself will give employment to many workers and will be a great convenience in many ways to the great tin-plate industry. But the purchase of great quantities of ore from a South American country will establish credits in our markets in their favor and lead to the establishment of commercial relations with that country which would otherwise have been difficult to effect. The Bolivian Minister, Senor Don Ignacio Calderon, calls attention to this important point by emphasizing the necessity of buying in foreign countries as well as selling there. The ships that carry ore to the United States will carry back American products for South American markets.

PHILANDER C. KNOX.

KNOX, NEXT U. S. SENATOR.

Philander Chase Knox, former United States Senator from Pennsylvania, former Attorney General and former Secretary of State of the United States will, without doubt, be the successor of George T. Oliver in the Senate of 1917.

Knox's nomination at the hands of the Republican party in Pennsylvania has been agreed upon by the leaders. He will have no opposition that will be bothersome, probably none at all, at the primaries. And as such a nomination is equivalent to election there is little doubt but that Mr. Knox will take his seat in the Senate next year.

Of course Knox might be the next Republican president. He is one of the several men who might be struck by the lightning at the Chicago convention this year, and he is one of the three "possibles" mentioned as being acceptable to Colonel Roosevelt.

The tremendous majority he is likely to receive at the primaries in May might also be used as an argument in favor of his selection as the Republican standard bearer.

PROSPERITY TEMPORARY, SAYS SEC. REDFIELD

Member of Wilson's Cabinet Analyses Industrial Conditions.

Washington, D. C., 1916.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield today made public the following memorandum relative to a continuance of the country's prosperity which was recently submitted by him to the President:

December 17, 1915.

Memorandum for the President:

Pursuant to the suggestion that I send you a memorandum respecting a continuance of the country's prosperity, permit me to submit the following:

In the first place, it is not to be expected that our business-movement will continue in its present form. In the week which closed with the 11th instant our exports were nearly or quite one hundred million dollars in value, and the apparent favorable balance on merchandise transactions was sixty million dollars. No one dreams that we can now or in the near future maintain an export movement of over five billions annual value or that we may sanely expect an apparent net balance in our favor on merchandise transactions of three billions in any one year.

It is alike impossible and undesirable that these things should continue. It is impossible if for no other reason because the world has not the power to pay to any one nation such vast sums for any long-continued period in addition to the waste of war. The nations are not spending their income in our markets but their capital, and vast as it is there are limits to which the continuance of the processes is undesirable, for it would make us the Midas among the nations and produce a moral overstrain that would be dangerous. We should be subjected through having such a giant's strength to the temptation to use it like a giant. Every evil that excessive power brings to men would threaten us. It need not be discussed for no one expects it to exist.

We may turn, however, from the abnormal present to consider what promise there is of a normal prosperity based upon conditions after the war shall cease. When the war began we were third among the nations in international trade. Now we are the first. Whether we shall remain the first depends upon the vision and energy of our bankers, manufacturers, merchants, and farmers. If the false doctrine of American inability to compete and the provincial dread of transactions outside our own borders shall continue to control American enterprise, then we may react to our former inferior place. If a broader outlook and a sane confidence shall have replaced the former fear of ghosts, then we may look to certain existing facts as foundations not only for the maintenance of our relative place in the foreign field, but for the continuance of a high degree of prosperity.

We have for the first time in our history a sound system of finance. In this one respect is our preparedness complete. Our finances can be mobilized on demand to meet the needs of trade. By this is removed one of the great elements of that doubt which always hinders commerce, for uncertainty is the foe of trade and doubt has always existed heretofore as to our weathering a financial storm. That doubt exists no more. We were put to an unprecedented strain in August and September of 1914, when as yet our reserve system was but born. It stood us in good stead in its infancy. Indeed, the promise of its birth gave a new sense of security. Now that it is full rgown we rest safely upon it. Enterprise and investment may move with a certitude never known before as regards our fiscal system. The liquid wealth which the Federal Reserve System safeguards was never such as it is today. We hold the greatest gold reserve of history, and the new power to mobilize our resources is matched by an extension of those resources to a hitherto unknown degree. Both financial power and effective means of using that power are in our possession. Neither in its present degree has ever existed as a foundation on which to build our business. Together they form a basis of commercial and financial opportunity.

The wealth of the land is widely distributed. The "Annalist" for December 13 says:

"The rural population is rolling in wealth and the fundamental conditions are very sound. Corporate and individual economies have created a vast store of capital which is seeking employment in good securities."

The prosperous conditions which vast crops have happily brought our Farmer is not confined to them. Labor is employed the whole land over, and there are more than hints in places of an insufficient supply. The railroads, who are at once our greatest buyers and our largest employers, are becoming prosperous, and the opportunity opens to them for taking up development work long deferred. This will of itself give long employment to thousands, and by its indirect effects will keep many a factory busy. Students of the railway problem know that in the past hard days much needed work has been left undone and that vast expenditures are needed and needed soon to keep our railway system abreast of the national needs. The earnings now exist for these improvements and the financial system is available, and the fiscal power to carry them out.

The economies forced upon railways, industrial corporations and individuals in recent years are a potent factor in maintaining prosperity. Our business is being better done, less wastefully done, than hitherto. There is a new tone of efficiency in factory, in office, on the farm, and in the work of the railway manager. We shall enter the revised world's arena better trained for the struggle than we were when the former game closed. We have lost certain provincialisms. Our horizons are wider. Names that were strange are common at our breakfast tables. Our relation with the whole world is more conscious. It is not as strange a thing as it was to many of us to do business across the sea.

We have working tools that we have not had before. The Federal Reserve System at home is matched by the opening of American banks abroad, and of late we have had the beginning of deliberate promotive American financing of foreign enterprises, through which instrumentality our rivals have so long prospered.

If I am correct in the above analysis the buying power of the United States is greater than it has ever been, and this power is more widely distributed. The selling power of the United States is greater than it has ever been, and this is more widely distributed than hitherto. The loaning power of the United States is greater than it has ever been, and this is more widely distributed also. The saving power of the United States is greater than it has ever been and this also is widely distributed.

Back of all these lie resources well developed indeed, but relative to their total extent almost untouched, and the power and the resources are in the control of a people awake as never before to the opportunities which these give them.

The so-called war order bulks largely in the press and in the popular mind, and some say that the end of the war means the end of such orders and hence a slump. I find, however, that the "Annalist" I have quoted says also:

"Those who have been much impressed with the extent to which business improvement has hinged upon war orders are gratified to find it less and less so. Railroads again are alert and insistent customers, and their needs are truly great."

There is no doubt that with the war's end a change must come. The war order must be replaced by the peace order, and as been said, the whole foreign trade must readjust itself to a more normal basis. Certain good customers, however, have not bought much off us in the last year, and their business must in large part return with the war's close. We sold to Germany, Austria Hungary, and Belgium about four hundred and forty millions in value yearly. Much of this must return with the coming of peace. Our annual sales to Mexico should increase by thirty millions to reach their former limit.

We are, furthermore, the source from which purchases for rehabilitation must be made. The destruction by war is not yet over. No one knows how much farther it will go. Already, however, from both groups of belligerents there is assurance of heavy purchases of munitions of peace to offset in part at least the sales of munitions of war.

If my analysis is sound we shall lose the abnormal part of our export trade and shall fall back to a basis which we may fairly expect will be larger than that before the war. We may keep if we will the first place. It depends on ourselves. About it only this one thing can be said with certainty, viz., that this opportunity and the prosperity affected by it will be just what we choose to make it. Meanwhile other enterprise now in large part deferred by the abnormal export conditions wih come into life and effect. There must be readjustments from present conditions to future ones, the stress of which will depend upon the wisdom with which the present is utilized. But there seems nothing that threatens the continuance of a general prosperity based upon sound and well-understood economic forces.

Our merchant marine is larger than it has ever been and is growing. Our commerce, therefore, is increasingly under our own control and we may hope will soon be free from the restrictions which the necessities of those upon whom we have had to depend for carriage of our goods have imposed upon it.

(Signed) WM. C. REDFIELD,
Secretary.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 10.—A readjustment of wages, which will amount to an approximate increase of 10 per cent, will be put in effect on February 1 by the Pennsylvania Steel Company, it was learned here today. About 7,000 men will figure in the advance, but the salaries of those which were adjusted recently will not be raised.

BOOZE CAUSE OF RIOT AT YOUNGSTOWN MILLS

Bad Situation Develops Following Strike of Employes.

It is too early as yet to form any conclusions as to the factors primal responsible for the regrettable rioting and incendiarism that took place, last week, at the plant of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, Youngstown, Ohio.

Suffice it to say that the wholesale destruction of over one million dollars worth of property will not help the cause of the strikers. In fact, such riotous action may mean defeat of the cause of the men participating in it.

Besides having a tendency to throw the sympathies of the people to the employer these outbursts of savagery make arbitration of differences all the more difficult. In addition, it results in the calling out of the militia to take charge of the situation and naturally with such protection it makes it all the easier for the employer to operate his mills with imported labor.

Charges and counter-charges are now being made bearing upon the provocation given the employees to riot. Undoubtedly the facts will all come out during the several investigations now under way. The allegation that gun-men were imported to bring about the trouble should receive every consideration, for while it is possible that such was not the case, such things have happened.

But whatever the outcome, the men who participated in the riot, undoubtedly now remorseful, the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company and the community of East Youngstown, both of which lost heavily in property, must all realize that the direct cause of the rioting and incendiarism was—Whiskey.

STATE AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Butter brought the best prices in Delaware and Montgomery counties according to the December averages of the Department of Agriculture. In these two counties the average price was 40 cents a pound. In Fulton the average price was 25 cents a pound and in Bedford, Franklin ande Greene 27 cents.

Fat steers brought nine cents a pound on an average in Carbon, Montgomery and Philadelphia counties. In Clarion, Crawford, Jefferson, Montour, Sullivan and Tioga the average price was six cents a pound.

Montgomery county lambs were worth more money per head than the lambs in any other county in the state according to December averages. Montgomery lambs sold for $7.00; Bradford for $6.80; and Dauphin for $6.50. Low price lambs were $3.35 per head in Greene and $3.85 in Washington.

Eight years ago there were two licenses issued to oleomargarine dealers in Philadelphia and there were carloads of oleo sold on the streets of that city as pure butter. Today there are over 300 licensed oleo dealers in the Quaker City and with the color fraud removed the violations of the law are few.

Two oyster pearls were sent to the Department of Agriculture by residents of Bucks county who asked their value. The pearls were submitted to a Harrisburg jeweler who stated that while there was such a thing as a common oyster pearl they had no commercial value. The jeweler claimed that he did not know of a single case where oyster pearls found in oysters reaching Pennsylvania had any commercial value.

The Department of Agriculture is preparing a report on the number of automobiles in use by the farmers of the state. An unusually large increase in the number of cars on the farm is noted over last year when the figures reached 15,000.

Farmers' Institutes will be held next week in Cumberland county at Newburg, Centerville and Hogestown; in Fulton county at Rehobeth, Clear Ridge and Enid; in Butler county at Prospect, Bruin and Evans City; in Pike county at Greenstown, Paupack and Egypt Mills and in Lehigh county at Pleasant Corner, Serpstown and Macungie.

The Department of Agriculture is now preparing a list and description of Pennsylvania farms that are offered for sale. Over 300 farms have been registered, ranging in size from three acres to several hundred acres and in price from five dollars to one hundred dollars an acre. The bulletin will be published in a short time and will offer an opportunity for prospective farm purchasers to look over available farm lands in nearly all sections of the state.

Among the farms registered for sale with the Department of Agriculture is that of a Montgomery county farmer who was shot by hunters in the fall. The farmer writes that he had to have his arm amputated and is unable to work his farm. Under no other circumstances the owner says would he sell his home.

Eight prosecutions against business houses in Philadelphia selling stale eggs as fresh eggs have been made by the Department of Agriculture. In each case the eggs were represented as fresh eggs but were found to be stale and unfit for food.

WATCH THE TREE FAKIRS.

Losses of from fifty to a hundred thousand dollars to trees of Pennsylvania have been caused by fakirs or persons using injurious methods of tree treatment according to an estimate made by Zoologist Surface of the Department of Agriculture.

The New York Agricultural Experiment Station wrote to the Department of Agriculture concerning the operation in Pennsylvania of agents for a company who made a practice of using a preparation for injection into trees and the losses that have occurred in the State as the result of such treatment killing trees.

Professor Surface says: "There have been several companies attempting to do business in the way of injecting, inoculating or vaccinating trees. The operators reason by analogy that if vaccination is a good thing for human beings, it must be for trees, but their victims do not realize that the process, conditions, possibilities and results are vastly different. I know where many trees have been killed but I have never seen any beneficial results.

"I wish to warn Pennsylvania orchardists and farmers against allowing such treatment to their trees until they have secured the advice of some reliable person on the subject."

RURAL CREDITS TO BE DISCUSSED.

Rural credits, agricultural education, marketing and advanced agricultural methods will be the big subjects to be discussed at the two-day session of the State Board of Agriculture which will be held at Harrisburg on January 26 and 27.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles E. Patton has made some changes in the program as it consisted in former years and it is planned to have short reports followed by helpful discussions of all topics on which there is any divergence of opinion.

The chief speakers will be Congressman Ralph W. Moss, of Indiana, an authority on rural credits and marketing; Congressman A. E. Lever, of South Carolina, author of the Smith-Lever law for joint national and state aid for farm bureau extension work and L. H. Dannis, State Director of Agricultural Education. Governor Brumbaugh will preside at several of the meetings. The State Commission of Agriculture will meet on January 25 and the members will attend the meetings of the State Board of Agriculture. The trustees of State College; supervisors of Agriculture of Vocational Schools of the State; county farm bureau agents; Departemnt of Agriculture Farm Advisers and many prominent agriculturists from all sections of the State are expected to be present.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 10.

By the kindness of a brother I have had the pleasure of reading your excellent paper, and appreciate it very much. I am sending through the Watch Tower office, subscription for myself, as I dearly love to read Pastor Russell's sermons and weekly Sunday school lessons make the Tribune of great value to all.

Yours for the Truth,
MRS. C. G. SMITH.

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 7.

Please discontinue Labor Tribune. I have been almost totally blind for about two years, consequently must do without many things we appreciate. We note your stand for Truth and righteousness, and believe in God's due time that the righteous shall shine forth, &c., and all will be satisfied when we awake in His likeness."

Promise of Text Limited—Many Deceived as to Their Standing—Present Conditions in Europe a Forceful Illustration—Delusions of the Past Still Held by Many—Fruits of the Holy Spirit—Fruits of the Satanic Spirit—Church Called to be Priests and Kings—New Creatures to be Guided Only by the Will of God—Thus They Abide in Christ.

RICHMOND, VA., Jan. 9.—Pastor Russell gave one of his peculiarly interesting addresses here today. His text was, "If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." (John 15:7.) He said in part:

This is a very remarkable promise, and is limited to certain people under certain conditions. It does not say that anybody may ask what he will. The class that may so ask are those who abide in Christ. Before any one can abide in Christ, he must come into Christ. No one can be said to abide in Him who has not come into Him as a member of His Body, the Church. More and more the Lord's people are learning that a solemn transaction takes place when one becomes a member of Christ. To say, "I have companied with Christian people for several years, and I go to church every Sunday," would not constitute one's being in Christ, nor would simply saying, "I joined this or that denomination when a child," or at any other age. None of these steps would necessarily bring one into Christ.

When we look over into Europe and see present conditions there, we have an illustration of what it is to be merely a church member. We see that, in centuries past, people got a wrong idea into their minds—that the Church was to convert the world, so as to keep all mankind from going to eternal torment. This error was first held by the Roman Catholic Church, and was largely retained by the Protestants, who later came out from the Catholic Church and to whom much of her errors adhered. It is very difficult to get entirely out of error all at once.

Let us consider the facts. St. Augustine, one of the Church Fathers, was the one who especially advanced the theory that whoever died without having been baptized in water would go to eternal torment. His ideas were generally accepted, and as a result infant baptism was practiced. The bishops had gotten the thought that they had the right to make doctrines and creeds for the Church. Another wrong idea that had crept into the Church was the doctrine that whoever died outside of membership in the church organization would go to endless torture; but that church members would at death go to Purgatory for a longer or shorter time for purgation—a condition far better than that of Hell of endless woe. As surely as any one was baptized into the Church and buried in consecrated ground, so surely would he escape Hell and be safe in Purgatory.

This being the general thought, strenuous efforts were made by all church members to get all of their families and friends into the Church; for they did not care to have their loved ones go to eternal torment. Under the influence of this great error nearly everybody was drawn into the church organization, just as we see it over in Europe today.

WRONG CONCEPTONS ARE INJURIOUS.

All wish to be right. Nobody desires to be wrong. But in the increasing light of our day we perceive that our forefathers had become sadly confused respecting the true teachings of the Bible. However, we do not blame them; for the Scriptures place the responsibility for the confusion upon the Devil, who introduced "doctrines of demons" during the Dark Ages.—2 Corinthians 4:4; 1 Timothy 4:1; Matthew 13:37-41.

We all see what these warring nations that are supposed to be 95 per cent Christians are doing. Each side is jealous of the prosperity of the other. Yet both sides claim to be almost all Christian. The Italians, however, claim to be 100 per cent Christian. Everybody in Italy is a Christian. But, judging by the conduct of some of the Italians whom we see here in America, who would know that they are all Christians!

This wrong conception, this telling people that they are Christians when they are not Christians, this telling them that they are in the Church of Christ when they are not, surely leads to hypocrisy. The churches that have promulgated these wrong theories do not like to tell the people the truth, that they are not in the Church of Christ, that no one can get into the true Church except in the way that our Lord Jesus Himself directed. Indeed, they are all confused. We remember that the Apostle Paul says, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." (Romans 8:9.) Our Lord Jesus declares, "By their fruits ye shall know them." (Matthew 7:20.) Look at the fruits in Great Britain, in Germany, in France, in Italy, in Austria! Do we see the fruits of the Spirit of Christ there?

CHRIST'S SPIRIT VS. SATAN'S SPIRIT.

What are the fruits of the Spirit of Christ? Hear St. Paul; "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, self-control." (Galatians 5:22, 23.) Hear also St. Peter: "Giving all diligence, add to your faith fortitude, and to fortitude knowledge, and to knowledge self-control, and to self-control patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly-kindness, and to brotherly-kindness love." (2 Peter 1:5-8. We see very little of these fruits in Europe today—only in a few of God's true saints. The great majority of the people do not manifest them. We believe that in all nations there are true saints of God, yet as a whole no nation is saintly.

The Apostle Paul also tells us the characteristics of the opposite spirit. He says, "The work of the flesh are manifest, which are these:—Hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, envy, murder," etc. He did not add bomb-throwing, asphyxiation by poisonous gases, and other modern devices for killing and mangling our fellowmen; but all this is included with murder and other devilishness. (Galatians 5:19-21.) No savages ever fought more viciously than do these people who are deceived into thinking that they are Christians. They are not Christians at all. If ever we have had that idea, the sooner we get it out of our heads, the better. The Bible is entirely contrary to all that they are doing.

THE BODY OF CHRIST A COMPANY.

Our text presupposes that those addressed have come into Christ. The appropriate question is, How may we be sure that we have come into Christ? One might have much knowledge of Present Truth and yet not be a member of the Body of Christ. This Body of Christ is composed of saints, those who are really following Jesus in then arrow way. It is a company, a body, in the same sense that Congress is a body. There are many members in the Body of Congress all of whom are under a head. So with the Church. The Body of Christ, the Church, is composed of many members, over whom God has appointed a Head.

The Head of the Church is our Lord Jesus Christ. (Ephesians 1:22, 23.) He came first; and since then His members have been gradually united to Him throughout this Age. The Body of Christ is now almost completed. The Heavenly Father has done the calling and the electing of this class. But each individual who is called must make his own calling and election sure. The word Christ means Anointed. Long before the foundation of the world God had purposed the Christ—Jesus the Head and the Church the Body. The Apostle tells us that even our Lord Jesus took not this honor unto Himself, but that He was called of God.—Hebrews 5:4-6.

King David was called of God to an earthly kingship. He was a type of Christ. There was also an earthly priest, Aaron, anointed of God. He was a type of Christ as a sacrificing Priest. God has appointed Christ to still higher Kingship and a still higher Priesthood. In His glorified and exalted condition He is "a Priest after the Order of Melchizedek." This Melchizedek was a grand character who lived in Abraham's day. He was king and priest at the same time. Long, long ago God appointed Jesus to be the Head of the Priesthood that was typified by Melchizedek.—Psalm 110:4; Hebrews 7:11-17.

When Jesus presented Himself in consecration to God at Jordan and was there begotten of the Holy Spirit, it was for Him to make His calling and election sure to the Headship of that Priesthood. He said, "I delight to do Thy will, O My God!" He gave His life to the doing of the Father's will. He finished His course grandly, faithfully. The Apostle, after telling us of our Lord's faithfulness even unto the death of the cross, (says, "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name that is above every name." Philippians 2:8-11.) Our Lord is now the great Prophet, Priest and King after the Order of Melchizedek.

RIGID CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP.

According to the Master's own statement it was necessary that He be found faithful; otherwise He would have forfeited His life. Moreover, He was to be the Head of the Church, which is the Body of Christ. Of the Christ Body, the Apostle says that God, who foreknew Jesus, foreknew the Church also. He who foreknew Jesus as His Anointed, foreknew that there would be a Body of a limited number of members anointed in Him. That number is given in Revelation as 144,000. This we believe to be a literal number.

Each one of this class has been drawn of the Father through the Truth. God has called them in the sense that He has sent forth His Message speaking peace through Jesus Christ. If we have heard this Message and have responded to it, this constitutes our Call. Nobody has been forced. As that Message of Truth has come, some have been greatly attracted, others have been slightly attracted, and others have not been attracted at all. For 1,900 years God has been passing the Magnet of Truth up and down the earth, to find that particular class which has been drawn and held by the Truth. Just as soon as that work is completed, another work will be inaugurated.

The Lord permits the storms of life to blow upon this class which now responds to God's Message. If these experiences blow any individual of that class off from the Magnet, he is not of the kind for whom God is now looking. He is looking for those who will stick to the Truth despite any pressure that may be brought against them. He permits trials and difficulties for the developing and proving of those who have responded to the Call. These testings will blow off all who do not love the Lord and His service above all things else. He purposes to separate those who are of this true character from all others. He seeks those who are loyal of heart, and only these.

God Himself is the One who has the attraction. It is not that we first loved Him, but that He first loved us. (1 John 1:19.) It is the Love of God, the Love of Christ, that binds us to this Magnet. God's wonderful Wisdom, Love, Mercy and Power have indeed been a Magnet to our souls. The more we know Him, the more we are attracted to Him. There is something about the Divine character that is so wonderful that nothing else can compare with it. We are glad to leave all things else for His sake.

NEW CREATURES IN CHRIST.

We hear God's Message, speaking peace through Christ, telling us that we may have forgiveness of sins, telling us that God is now selecting a special class of people from the world for the purpose of blessing all the families of the earth. This is the Message that reaches our hearts. Then we take the Apostle's advice, and present our body a living sacrifice, our reasonable service. (Romans 12:1.) No one has come into the family of God who has not done this. No one has become a member of the Church of Christ until he has taken this step.

Our Lord Jesus thus presented Himself to God. He said, "I came not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me." In one respect, however, there was a difference in His case. He was holy, perfect; therefore He needed no Advocate with the Father. But the members of His Body need the imputation of His merit to cover the blemishes which they have by nature. His merit is like a covering robe. So we have an Advocate with the Father, and it is His advocacy which makes us acceptable to God. Thus we become united to Christ as joint-sacrificers with Himself.

As we are received, God gives us the begetting of the Holy Spirit. This constitutes us New Creatures. Just as an earthly begetting starts an earthly being, so this spirit-begetting starts us as spirit beings. Thenceforth the flesh is of the human nature, a child of Adam; and the New Creature is the germ of a spirit being, begotten in the fleshly body. This new nature is to grow and develop until finally it is brought to the birth, in the First Resurrection.

GOD'S WILL THEIR DELIGHT.

It is not that our flesh is different or that our brains are different from what they were before; but that with this new mind and this new will our purposes and our aspirations are entirely different. We are to be members of the Body of Christ and are to follow the will of our Head in every particular. And so during all the days of our life thenceforth, we should be thinking, "What is the Lord's will concerning me?"

Those who become New Creatures in Christ are no longer to follow their own wills. Whether they eat or drink or whatsoever they do, they are to do all to the glory of God. The New Creature is to be guided by the will of the Lord and not by his own inclinations. But he is not to remain a babe. A babe cannot understand at first what its parents are saying to it; but a healthy babe will grow and learn very quickly. If you watch a little babe, you will observe that it looks at its parents to see whether it may or may not do a certain thing. So the child of God should always be looking to see what our Father wishes him to do. Thus we become dear children as the Apostle says, children whom God especially loves.

Now, then, we have before our minds the class of whom our Lord speaks in our text. Those who abide in Him are those who have begotten of the Spirit, and who are walking in the narrow way. These constitute the Church of the living God, Jesus being their Head, their Forerunner and their Redeemer.

CONDITIONS OF ABIDING IN CHRIST.

"If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you," is the Master's promise to His faithful followers. We abide in Him by continuing as we began. The Apostle says, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice." This applies to us not only when we began our Christian course, but every day until the end. We have suggested that every morning we make a fresh presentation of ourselves to the Lord, not as making a new sacrifice, but as confirming the one already made, saying in effect, "My little offering is still here; and I am hoping that it may be used of Thee today in some manner, that I may have some opportunity of laying down my life for the brethren and for the Truth, that I may glorify Thee."

This is the way to abide in Him—by keeping our contract. Daily we are to grow in knowledge, that we may continually have better opportunity to make something out of the day. Each day, perhaps, there are fresh privileges of sacrifice.

If we would have the Master's words abiding in us, we must study the Bible. This is the only way to know what God has said to us. The Lord calls the Bible a storehouse. The Master represents Himself as the great Chef and Servant of God's Household, who "brings forth things new and old." God provides for His own more and more information on what relates to His purposes, the fulfilment of prophecies, etc. As time goes by, we are getting a better understanding of the Bible, since the day when we said from the heart, "Thy will not mine, be done."

Dear brethren, let us first make sure that we are in Christ. Then let us abide in Him; let us never even think of getting out of relationship to Him. Study the Word, to know what He has promised and what He has not promised. Use all the privileges which God has granted to His saints. Whoever faithfully does this may ask what he will and rest assured that he will receive it. But those who are thus abiding in Him will ask chiefly for spiritual blessings. They will ask continually for the Holy Spirit; for the Word declares that the Father is pleased to have His children ask for this gift. (Luke 11:13.) This holy influence will enable us to develop the fruits of the Holy Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love. Thus let us daily grow in His love and grace.

KNOX.

Knox, like Calvin, started his public life very young, about twenty, a very self-reliant youth, his chief weakness was his love for learning. At about this time he formed his acquaintance with George Wishart, a Scotchman, who spent considerable time in Germany and caught the spirit of Luther. They became fast friends. This friendship played an important part in launching him upon a stormy career.

Wishart's chief offense against his superiors was translating the new testament from Greek to English without permission, and getting tangled with some social affairs which displeased Cardinal Beaton who set the machinery in motion that ended in the death of this strong and earnest young man—he was burned at the stake on the campus of St. Andrews in Edinburg. This set Knox into action. It broke the haughty spirit that the learning of Knox had developed and caused the tears to flow. This crime being perpetuated in the name of Catholicism, made him swear vengeance against the whole institution, much unlike Luther, who at first tried to reform the church. Knox's vindictice nature is revealed in the fact that he set the machinery in motion that ended in the assassination of Cardinal Beaton, whom he styled "a son of Beelzebub." It did not occur to Knox that he was actuated by the spirit of Beelzebub in instigating this crime although he took no personal hand in it.

Knox and Calvin were said to be very much alike in temperament except that Knox was a violent lover by nature, Calvin was not. Calvin married merely out of expediency to rebuke the celibacy of the priesthood. Luther, though not so highly educated, was by far greater than either of these men, not only by nature but also in the fact that he was governed pre-eminently by Christian principle, whereas Knox and Calvin were governed principally by their emotions. The emotions of Calvin and Knox differed from this variation in temperament. Knox was a lover, Calvin was not. Knox was Calvin's superior in this respect and consistently we note that Knox came nearer the truth in theology—his doctrine of Free Will as against Fatalism.

Knox's love and friendship distinguishes him from Calvin. His friendship for Wishart was the principal thing that made him a reformer, for when Wishart got the fagots he was moved to action, but he treated lightly the case of Calvin who was instrumental in the burning of Servetus at the stake at Geneva. His love colored his theology as did his friendship his actions. His love often turned to hate. He not only hated the French people, a thing very unbecoming to a Christian and especially a reformer, but he was also a woman-hater and spent time and energy writing against them. (A woman-hater is one that is suffering from an over-dose). He wrote a book: "The Monstrous Regiment of Women," and his reward for this was in ceasing to (be a) protest—(ant): the voice that thundered threat and defiance at Rome, and fought Calvin successfully with the Doctrine of Free Will, piped in forced assent to a mere snip of a girl in the person of Margaret Stewart, whom he married in his old age! Friendship aroused this lion into action and love accomplished what all the power of Rome and Calvin could not. His love for Miss Stewart, who was an ardent follower of Calvin, silenced him. He spent his last days in subjugation and his name is now identified with Presbyterianism.

Luther fired the shot that shattered Catholicism, and Knox and Calvin kept the fragments apart. Knox, like Calvin, would have stamped out of existence every form of thought hostile to his own synthesis of theology as he understood it from the Bible. Had it not been for the strenuous Calvin, Zwingli, Melanchthon and Luther, Protestantism would have done what Catholicism did so effectually in the middle ages. Providence sent these men to counteract the influence of each other. Security lies in the balance of power. Sectarianism has served a purpose.

In evidence of Knox being of the same cast as Calvin in intolerance, we present from the pen of Knox:

"No power or liberty must be permitted to any, of what estate, degree, or authority they be, either to live without the yoke of discipline of God's word command, or to alter one jot in religion which from God's mouth thou has received."

LUTHER AT THE DIET OF WORMS

Luther was the only one of the group who recognized the principle of modern religious toleration advocated so effectually by Roger Williams. Luther, in justification of his own course at the Council of Worms, pointed to the contradictions and mistakes of the councils and synods in the history of the church, and rested his case on the possibility of his own enemies being wrong on the issues he contended for. He emphasized the fact that the history of the church disproved the claims of the infallibility of councils, and synods and this justified his course in using his own judgment in matters of faith and his course of correcting his superiors in the church, and expecting them to tolerate him.

In short the great controversy between Christ and Satan in religious conviction pitted against ecclesiastical domination, each the product of truth and error respectively. The truth tends to disintegrate the massed or corporate life of humanity. The separate the individual into the liberty of the truth and unity of faith of those of a like Christian spirit. The error tends to separate the intellect into sectarian creeds but consolidates and brings the individuals into institutional federation and bondage and produces the Satanic spirit of intolerance and persecution.

Standing alone requires strength of character and dependence upon God and His providence—it heans Gethsemane. This principle is illustrated in the lives of Calvin and Zwingli on the one hand, who both leaned in the direction of institutionalism and intolerance; and Huss and Luther on the members to vote a levy of six cents for the purpose of clearing off the debts. The levy has, I understand, been approved by 4,976 votes to 836.

Sir Alfred Mond's draft bill for a moratorium or suspension of rent and other long-term commitments for men entering the army is at present being considered by the War Office. It is rather difficult to see what the War Office can have to say to it. It would seem more the affair of the Home Office. There is not much sign that the government is taking this subject up very earnestly, yet it must be taken up if attested men are to be swept into the army without breaking up their homes and ruining them. France, as a conscript country, has had such legislation as a matter of course. Now that we are raising the army to 4,000,000, which is about as large as it would be if we were a conscript country with land frontiers, it is logical and quite necessary that we should have legislation of the same kind.

The Director of Labor Statistics, in his summary showing the state of the labor market in November, says that in that month the shortage of both skilled and unskilled labor became still more marked. To some extent women have been used to make good the deficiency, but there is room for further developments in this direction during the war. The number of women ordinarily employed is not, however, sufficient to meet all the demands of the situation created by the withdrawal of so many men from their usual occupations, and by the requirements of the forces. A new supply of labor is therefore required which, in the present circumstances, can be drawn only from among those women who have not hitherto been engaged in industry.

Compared with November, 1914, employment showed a general improvement, which was particularly marked in the industries engaged in war contracts. The war bonuses and increase in the rate of wages reported as taking effect in November affected about 330,000 workpeople, and amounted to over $120,000 per week. The number of disputes beginning in November was forty, and the total number of workpeople involved in all disputes in progress was 11,988 as compared with 20,502 in the previous month and 8,001 in November, 1914. The average weekly number of vacancies notified to all labor exchanges for the four weeks ended November 12 was 36,023, as compared with 34,838 in the previous five weeks, and with 31,932 in the four weeks ended November 13, 1914.

The Annual Trade Union Congress of 1916 will be held in Birmingham next September, and the Birmingham Trades Council already have taken the preliminary steps to prepare for the visit. At the next meeting of the council a representative committee will be appointed to make arrangements. The decision to hold the next congress in Birmingham has given much satisfaction to local trade unionists.

With the death of Vaillant, not only an eminent French labor and socialist leader, but also a Frenchman of the finest type, has disappeared from the contemporary stage. Born in January, 1841, he received his education at St. Barhe's College and then at an engineering school, after which he passed to the Sorbonne, where he attended lectures in medicine. Not content with that he went to Germany, and stayed there, with slight interruptions, for several years, studying at Turbingen and other universities philosophy and natural sciences, and cultivating an intimate friendship with Ludwig Feuerbach, whose famous book on the "Essence of Christianity" he translated into French. The outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War found him still in Germany, and it was not until the Sedan day that he found his way into Paris.

There he joined the revolution movement which arose out of the needs of the national defence and became a member of the Executive of the Commune of Paris, which for two months opposed the national Government of Thiers, and was ultimately suppressed in torrents of blood. Vaillant succeeded with great difficulty in escaping arrest by fleeing over the Spanish frontier, and was condemned to death in contumacian. From Spain Vaillant made his way to London, and for ten years he was a resident of the Soho quarter together with hundreds of other refugees. During this time he resumed his medical studies and became a qualified medical practitioner, interesting himself at the same time in the political and social questions of the day.

As a friend of Karl Marx, he joined the International Working Men's Association and participated in most of its annual conventions until its dissolution. It was not until 1830 that Vaillant returned to Paris in virtue of a general amnesty. Four years later he was elected to the Paris Municipal Council, and ultimately he got elected to the Chamber as one of the members for Paris. Since then he has been till the day of his death one of the most authoritative and most respected leaders of the French socialist movement.

Free from all affectation either in manner or in speech, of transparent honesty and devotion to his ideals, Vaillant was a highly sympathetic figure, attractive alike to friend and foe. Just as he had been one of the most active advocates of a rapprochment between France and England in the pre-Entente days, so he also was a continuous advocate of a reconciliation between his country and Germany. With all that, he always remains a patriot, nurtured on the traditions of the great French Revolution, and prepared to stake his very life for their defence. It was for this reason that on the outbreak of war he, the champion of the general-strike idea, an antimilitarist and internationalist, found himself, on the death of Jaures, leader of the socialist movement of National Defence. It was his agitation in "L'Humanite" and elsewhere that contributed more than anything else to the consolidation of French socialism and the French working class on the platform of National Defence.

The Christian's Umbrella.

When little rain-drops patter down.
And clouds go scurrying by Just spread a big umbrella up,
'Twill keep you warm and dry.
The saucy little drops will fall,
And on its surface hit,
But they will splash and scatter then
Nor trouble you a bit.

When little teasing trials come
And pelt you every hour,
Just spread your many blessings out
To keep you from the shower.
A big umbrella make of them
Then, though the trials fall.
They'll strike your shield and scatter then,
And not reach you at all.

And when you find that this is so
Just pass the word along.
That others, too, may shelter find
When things are going wrong;
For when they see your smiling face
So free from care and fret,
They too will lift their blessings up
To keep them from the wet.

ST. PETER'S PENTECOSTAL SERMON

Acts 2:21-39.—Jan. 16.

Signification of Pentecost—Speaking With Other Tongues—St. Peter's Explanation—David Not Ascended to Heaven—He Spake Not of Himself, but of Jesus' Resurrection.

"Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."—Verse 21.

THIS is a most interesting Bible Study; for it covers a wide range of Truth. In harmony with Jesus' instructions the Apostles had waited in the upper room for the Pentecostal blessing, as necessary to their qualification before beginning their great work as representatives and mouthpieces of Jesus and Jehovah. It came on the fiftieth day after Jesus' resurrection, in harmony with the type.—Leviticus 23:15-21; 1 Corinthians 15:20.

The Apostles received the begetting of the Holy Spirit, and with it certain manifestations of miraculous power which they were privileged to communicate to all believers by the laying on of their hands. These special "gifts of the Spirit" were evidently intended to assist in the establishment of the Church and to mark the Apostles as God's special representatives. These were but eleven in number until St. Paul was received of the Lord (2 Corinthians 12:11.) We still have these Apostles with us, represented by their teachings.

Pentecostal Sermon.

Although, later on, certain Bishops of the Church claimed to be Apostles also, they had no authority, according to the Bible, and could never convey any of the miraculous gifts. Our Lord refers to these as falsely claiming authority. (Revelation 2:2.) With the death of the Apostles and of those to whom they had committed these gifts, all such gifts necessarily ceased, being supplanted by the fruits of the Spirit, developed through knowledge, faith and obedience.

St. Peter's Sermon.

The eleven Apostles, exercising their gift of tongues, began to talk to the assembled Jews—not merely residents of Jerusalem, but thousands from all parts of the world, gathered at Jerusalem at that season, in harmony with the demands of the Law. From their dress, etc., the Apostles were recognized as Galileans. Much astonishment was manifested at hearing them speak in various languages.

The essence of the preaching was that Jesus, who had been crucified, had risen from the dead and had now shed forth this miraculous power upon His followers. This led to the prophecy of David which foretold Messiah's resurrection, saying, "Thou wilt not leave My soul in Sheol"—Hades. (Psalm 16:10; Acts 2:27.) The Apostle showed that this was fulfilled in Jesus, in that God had raised Him from the dead; but that it was never fulfilled in David, who was still in his sepulcher awaiting resurrection. As a prophet, David had merely foretold Jesus' resurrection.

With various details the preaching explained the righteousness of Jesus, the beauties of His teachings, the wickedness of those who had crucified Him, and the fact that the entire Jewish nation was guilty before God. As a people they were bound by their Law Covenant, and the action of their officials had brought condemnation upon the whole people. Three thousand believed. The case was so plain that they were pricked to the heart. They realized that Jesus was the Son of God, and that a great crime had been committed in crucifying Him. In further explanation they were told that they and their rulers had done this wicked deed ignorantly, and that God would graciously forgive those who acknowledged their sin and asked forgiveness of Him. They did so. Then they made a consecration of their lives, and became followers of Jesus.

Divine Favor to Return to Israel.

The Bible declares that although the Jewish people were cut off from God's favor because of their rejection of Messiah, nevertheless they shall one day return to Divine favor. For more than eighteen centuries their eyes have been holden, as are the eyes of the world in general. Only the few have their eyes of understanding open to see the truth respecting these matters. But God has assured us that in due time all the blind eyes shall be opened. (2 Corinthians 4:4; Isaiah 35:5.) To the Jew first, and also to the Gentile, will eventually come a full knowledge of the grace of God through Christ. It will then be for them to accept or to reject intelligently.—Acts 3:19-23.

Asking Forgiveness.

Another item of special interest is that the Hell to which Jesus went was the grave, the death state. God did not raise Him from Hell-fire, but from the dead. This same word Sheol, Hades, is used in the Bible respecting all mankind. Good and bad, old and young, of every nation go down to the Bible Hell; and according to the Bible they sleep there, awaiting the resurrection morning and the awakening of the dead—"every man in his own order."—1 Corinthians 15:23.

the other hand, who were both persecuted by institutionalism and forced to stand alone and witness for the principles they preached.

Calvin, when he challenged Servetus to debate in France, weakened and fled to Geneva and built an Ecclesiastical State where he had Servetus burned for his convictions. Had Calvin the convictions of Luther he would have welcomed the opportunity of witnessing for the truth while in France, even though it had resulted in the experience of Steven, the first Christian martyr.

The Swiss reformer Zwingli had the principles of the Reformation established in the church at Zurich, just as did Luther at Wittenberg. Dr. John Eck, who had debated with Luther and secured his excommunication, had arranged to have Zwingli appear before a council at Baden to discuss the issues in debate just as he did with Luther but had failed to secure his execution. Eck had cleverly arranged to have this debate at Baden where the people were not in sympathy with the Reformers—they had plotted to arrest him and dispose of the leader and thus quell the movement well started in Zurich. Zwingli obeyed the advice of the Council of Zurich, called to consider the proposal of Doctor Eck, and did not go to Baden for he felt that it was certain death. He carried on the debate through representatives just as did Calvin and Servetus through correspondence. Zwingli's representatives had their secretaries smuggle their reports of the disputations to him at Zurich over night and had the replies sent back for the next day. Here Zwingli exposed his representatives to the dangers he himself shunned. He thought his life was more important to the welfare of the Reformation than facing death for the truth he preached. Luther faced greater dangers and lived through them all, whereas Zwingli later took to the sword to defend the truth and was killed on the battle field long before Luther rested from his labors. Zwingli and Calvin were both lacking in the courage of Luther, and Zwingli held the same views on Reprobation and Election as did Calvin—he "was as Calvinistic as Calvin or Augustine himself." His preference for institutionalism to the extent of sacrificing principle and doctrine is indicated in the following remark concerning him: "The most open-minded and liberal amongst the reformers, he grasped the conception of a broad Christian union, beyond unessential differences in doctrine and ritual, to which it can hardly be said the Christian church has yet attained."

John Huss, the Bohemian reformer of the fifteenth century, influenced by the writings of Wycliffe, was summoned to appear at Constance to answer charges of heresy just as was Zwingli. Huss was promised safe conduct by the emperor, Sigismund, from and back to Prague, his home. He was arrested shortly after he arrived at Constance by the agents of the church and thrown into prison. In the trial that followed Sigismund was prevailed upon by the clerics to break his promise with Huss to take him safely back to Prague. They insisted that the council was superior to the emperor and "could free him from his word" and that he was "perfectly at liberty not to keep faith with a heretic." The emperor weakened and Huss was burned at the stake. His friends at Prague had anticipated this and endeavored to persuade him not to go, just as they did upon Zwingli. Upon leaving he wrote to his friends:—

"I am departing, my brethren, with a safe-conduct from the king to meet my numerous and mortal enemies * * I confide altogether in the all-powerful God, in my Savior; I trust that He will listen to your ardent prayers, that He will infuse His prudence and His wisdom into my mouth, in order that I may resist them; and that He will accord me His Holy Spirit to fortify me in His truth, so that I may face with courage, temptations, prison, and, if necessary, a cruel death. Jesus Chirist suffered for his well-beloved; and therefore ought we to be astonished that He has left us His example, in order that we may ourselves endure with patience all things for our own salvation? * * * Why, then, should we not suffer, also, particularly when suffering is for us a purification? Therefore, beloved, if my death ought to contribute to His glory, pray that it had come quickly, and that He may enable me to support all my calamities with constancy. But if it be better that I return amongst you, let us pray to God that I may return without stain,—that is, that I may not suppress one title of the truth of the gospel, in order to leave my brethren an excellent example to follow. Probably, therefore you will never more behold my face at Prague; but should the will of the all-powerful God design to restore me to you, let us then advance with a firmer heart in the knowledge and the love of His law."

PROPER CROP ROTATION SAVES SOIL.

The general tendency among farmers throughout the State to raise only the soil-exhausting crops such as wheat, corn, oats, rye, buckwheat, timothy, the millets, Hungarian grasses, potatoes and others, to the exclusion of the soil-improving crops, the legumes, is brought to attention by one of the farm advisers of the Department of Agriculture.

"In the work I have done throughout the State," says the adviser, "I have endeavored without interfering with the rotation followed by the farmers, to introduce into the rotation with or after each soil exhausting crop, a soil improving crop. I plan to recommend a soil-improving crop that will not interfere with the original crop, but will furnish the soil with as much organic matter and nitrogen as is used by the soil exhausting crop in in its production.

"Advantage is taken in this operation for early spring and fall growth of the cool and moist weather legumes such as winter vetch, crimson clover, (where this clover will grow) red and alsike clovers, and the Canada field peas. For hot and dry weather growth I recommend the mammoth clover, the sweet clover, the cow peas and the soy beans. These legumes are raised with or follow the soil-exhausting crops and in this way a beginning is made in the development of a permanent agriculture."

Trade Unions Will Discuss Conscription

English Labor Leaders State Positions on Compulsory Service.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 7, 1916.

The big topic this week in the labor movement of this country is the Government's proposal to adopt compulsory military service under certain conditions and within specified limits. It will be remembered that at the last annual trade union convention in this country hed last September a practically overwhelming vote was given against military conscription as a principle. Much water has flowed under London Bridge since then, however, and the immensity of the war that is being waged on the Continent of Europe is forcing all sorts of people to change life-long views. Conscription is certainly still distasteful to the British public. The Government is authoritatively declared to be considering a Bill to be introduced next week which shall authorize, if not conscription, then something very like it, although under another name. The British army is already immense in size and so far as can be gathered the only reason for proposing these additional military measures is to rope in those of the unmarried men of the country who have so far refused to enlist voluntarily despite big recruiting campaigns, many of these latter being organized by responsible trade union leaders. Lord Derby's campaign which finished a week or two ago was regarded as the last word in voluntary recruiting and it was alleged that if the figures did not come up to expectations some kind of compulsory measure would be introduced in the House of Commons. Hence next week's bill. We have not yet been told how many men finally came in under Lord Derby's scheme, so the public is unable to judge whether the numbers remaining unenlisted are few or great. Rumos puts the number of unenlisted unmarried men in the country now at from 300,000 to 650,000. The figures cannot be known with ary exactitude until the Derby figures are published.

Labor leaders met this afternoon to hear from Henderson, the representative of Labor in the Cabinet, the reasons which have induced the Government to decide upon a measure of compulsion. Whatever the outcome of this meeting, it is expected that a special session of the Trade Union Congress will be called immediately.

It is recognized that the forces of organized labor hold a very strong position, and one which enables them to make special terms and conditions. If they agree that the prosecution of the war demands compulsion for military service, they might well demand as a corollary the exceptional taxation of those members of the community exempted or incapacitated from bearing arms.

This afternoon's meeting may result in a qualified acceptance of the proposed Compulsion Bill; that is to say, there may be an arrangement made by organized labor with the Government under the Bill whereby the rights of labor and industry will be safeguarded. The compromise, if so it can be termed, will be strongly urged, the view taken by the supporters of the Prime Minister's recent pledge "that no more married men should be called up until all the single men were enlisted" being that the pledge was given at a time when it was necessary and in the belief that its fulfilment would never be required. Consequently it is felt that the trade union movement shoud now support it.

On the other hand, there is a powerful section which desires that the opinion of the whole of organized labor should be taken by means of a special Trade Union Congress.

The conviction is growing that the Compulsion Bill will follow the lines suggested—the measure of compulsion put upon the unmarried being that of presenting themselves for attestation.

Three sections may be noted in the Parliamentary Labor party:

The small band of irreconcilables—Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden, and E. W. Jowett. Other former members of the Independent Labor Party (which is a small constituent part of the Labor Party and which itself is officially anti-war) are entirely with the ministry, like G. H. Roberts, or supporting recruiting, like J. R. Clynes

Copper Miners Being Starved to Submission

Strikers on Point of Exhaustion — Governor Aids Them

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—Five thousand copper miners and their families are being starved into submission by the great copper mining corporations of Arizona.

Although their cause is just, and although Governor George W. P. Hunt has made a magnificent record of fairness in protecting their rights, the strikers will lose unless labor comes to their support with liberal contributions.

The strke fund is exhausted, and the miners' families are literally starving at Clifton and Morenci. Although most of them are Mexican or Spanish and able to live on flour and cheap Mexican beans, they cannot even get these simple articles of food. A friendly store-keeper who supplied them long after their funds were exhausted, has been forced to shut up his place and go away, ruined.

If the strike is lost, it will be worse than a local victory for industrial tyranny and oppression in Arizona. It may mean the political ruin of a Governor and Sheriff who have given a rare and splendid exhibition of just and fair administration of the law.

When the strike began the mine managers made a sensational exodus in order to convince the public that the strikers were desperate and lawless and to pave the way for bringing in hired thugs and strikebreakers.

Instead of taking the corporation program, Governor Hunt sent the adjutant general of the state militia to investigate. He reporttd that the strikers were orderly, that their grievances were real, and that all they asked was a conference with the manager. Hunt then sent militia to Clifton and Morenci, not to intimidate and terrorize, as in Colorado, West Virginia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and other states, but to assist the people in every way possible. Sheriff Cash appointed strikers as deputy sheriffs and kept out the companies' gunmen.

Governor Hunt's best service to the cause of law and order, with justice, was to insist that no professional gunmen of strike-breakers should be imported by the managers. A large consignment of these trouble-makers were already on the way. Hunt ordered them kept out and they have been detained at a town some distance from the strike territory, where they are fed by the mine owners and carefully watched by officers of the law. The mine owners have not been allowed to procure the killing or wounding of a single worker and there has been no violence.

If the strike is lost, as it will be unless liberal contributions enable the men to hold out, Governor Hunt's just and enlightened policy will be discredited by the subsidized press, and it may be many years before another governor or sheriff will consider it worth while to give the workers a square deal. Governor Hunt's humanity and fairness have earned him the eternal hatred of the great corporations that exploit labor, and their powerful opposition will dog him through the rest of his life. Men in public office like Governor Hunt, willing to risk their political fortunes in the service of justice and humanity, are rare. Labor cannot expect others to follow his lead unless it can show the world that it appreciates his sort of a Governor and will hold up the hands of an official who does his duty.

If the Arizona strike fails, it will be largely because labor was less willing to make sacrifices for its own interests than was the Governor of the State, who had nothing to gain and much to lose by pursuing the course he has adopted.

One of the big questions of the day for organized labor is whether Governor Hunt is to be left in the lurch, and simiar conduct by other public officials discouraged for years to come.

Shipping Trust Aims to Kill New Law

Enormous Pressure Brought to Bear to Repeal Seamen's Act.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 19.—Within a few months of the Eastland horror in the Chicago river, with the Titanic, the Volturno, and Empres of Ireland tragedies of greed still fresh in the minds of the world, the shipping trust is already battering at Andrew Furuseth's Able Seamen's Act for safety at sea and fairness to American seamen.

Two bills in Congress to nullify the Seamen's Act have been introduced. One is in the Senate by Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, the other is in the House by Representative Humphrey of Washington.

The whole labor movement is dircetly interested in protecting the Seamen's Act. Andrew Furuseth's success, with the especial help of Senator LaFollette, after twenty-two years of fighting, will, if left alone, restore another great employment to American workingmen, restore American ships to the seas, relieve the seamen's occupation from Oriental domination, and lessen the competition in land work in American coast cities.

The two bills in Congress are dangerous, but the worst danger that threatens the Seamen's Act is the danger from what has been called "limiting and softening" the enforcement of the law under the rule of the Department of Commerce.

The pressure for the repeal of the Seamen's Act, or for its defeat by non-enforcement, is enormous. The concentrated wealth of the shipping interests of the world is back of the efforts to keep American seamen underpaid slaves, to drive them from the seas, and to recruit the sailors of all vessels of all nationalities from cheap Oriental labor and from the helpless, hopeless outcasts of the capitals of Europe and America.

American shipping interests have from 300 to 400 million dollars invested in vessels flying foreign flags. Their interests are tied up with the federated shipping interests of all the world on all the seven seas.

These shipping interests fight the Seamen's Act because: (1), it makes the seaman a free man, free to quit his vessel in a port of call, as any other worker can quit his job; (2) it gives the seaman a right to receive half his wages if he quits, so that his individual liberty of action becomes real economic liberty; (3) it raises the standard of efficiency, provides that from 40 to 65 per cent of all crews must have had three years' experience as sailors, and requires 75 per cent of the deck crews to understand the language of the ship's officers; (4) it abolishes the present real crime by which the police power of the United States is now employed in every American port to hunt down the seamen of foreign vessels and force them back into involuntary servitude; (5) it increases the equipment for safety to passengers on all boats, and (6) because all these provisions, applying to all vessels, American or foreign, that touch an American port, will eventually raise the wages of all seamen, not only on American vessels but throughout the shipping trade of the world.

Most powerful interests, the combined shipping wealth throughout the world, are now assailing and trying to undermine the Seamen's Act. Will the people of the United States stand for it? Will Labor in the United States stand for it?

SHEET MILL WORKERS GET WAGE ADVANCE.

The bi-monthly examination of the sales sheets of the Brier Hill Steel company, Trumbull Steel company, Newport, Ky., mill and National Enamel & Stamping company of Granite City, Ill., was completed last week, showing that sheets are selling on a 2 per cent basis, entitling the sheet workers in the mills governed by the Amalgamated association scale to two-sevenths of the 12 per cent taken away last March. This advance is approximately 4 per cent.

The new scale effects the men employed at the plant of the Youngstown Iron & Steel company, all of the Niles and Warren sheet mills, besides plants located throughout the union belt.

On this settlement the manufacturers were represented by James H. Nutt, and the Amalgamated association by John Williams, national president; Walter Larkins, national vice president; Harry Gill of the Trumbull Steel Company of Warren and W. S. Collier of the Newport Rolling mill.

The examination of the sales sheets of the Republic Iron & Steel company, Western Bar association and Cleveland Rolling mill and Empire works of Cleveland, were made last week and the card rate was fixed on a $1.30 basis, entitling puddlers in the union mills to $6.20 a ton. This is the highest rate paid to puddlers for some years, and takes effect January 1, running during the months of January and February.

Oscar Pitt and William Mitchell of Cleveland represented the bar mill workers and puddlers in this examination. James H. Nutt acted for the manufacturers.

COMPENSATION FUND IS STABLE.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 19.—The state industrialcom mission, in a special report, shows in detail the absolute stability of the compensation fund and its ability to protect hundreds of thousands of employes and thousands of employers, despite the ruling of State Superintendent of Insurance Taggart, which permits private liability companies to do business in this state.

A suit to annul this rule is now pending in the supreme court, and is supported by the commission and the state federation of labor. The report declares this suit will end the contest, but the commission believes its figures show that a decision has been arrived at by employers and that their judgment is to stand by the state fund. The commission says its representatives were compelled to make personal visits to many localities and individual employers to counteract the campaign of misrepresentation carried on by opponents of state compensation.

ORGANIZING WOMEN WORKERS.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 19.—Organized labor is aiding the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union in its organizing campaign. It is estimated that 10,000 women workers are employed in over half a hundred shirt waist, corset and white goods factories in this vicinity. These workers do not average $5 a week, out of which they are compelled to pay two prices for cotton thread and needles. Employers are resorting to every petty effort in an attempt to keep their employes from agitation meetings conducted by trade unionists.

FREIGHT AND TALK COMPARED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—"The railroads get on the average 7 mills a mile for moving a ton of freight. The telephone company charges 6 mills a mile for carrying a three-minute conversation," said Congressman Lewis, in a speech in the house of representatives, last Monday.

The chairman of the house committee on labor was discussing government ownership of telegraphs and telephones when he made the statement that it costs an American citizen as much for his long-distance conversation over the wires, mile for mile, as it costs him to ship a ton of freight over the rails.

"You may realize how weighty your conversations sometimes are," he said. "They weigh about a ton on the long-distance wires." The speaker pointed to the benefits derived from parcel post as a demonstration of what may be accomplished by the "postalization" of means of communication.

AGREE ON COMPENSATION ACT.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Jan. 19.—A commission has finally agreed on a proposed workmen's compensation act and will submit same to the state legislature, now in session. An elective system of compensation is provided for, and employers may carry stock company insurance, carry their own risk upon proof of solvency, or insure in a state mutual similar to the Massachusetts and Texas plans. The maximum weekly benefit to be paid injured workers is placed at $12, and the maximum for death or total disability is $4,000.

The last legislature passed a compensation act, but this was declared illegal by Judge Dorsey on the ground that the state constitution prohibits a limit being placed on the amount of damages to be paid in case of death. Advocates of compensation held that this made it impossible for any relief under the present constitution, and the court of appeals modified Judge Dorsey's opinion.

"SAFETY FIRST" PROFITABLE.

HARRISBURG, PA., Jan. 19.—"Safety first" will mean a cash dividend to every employer insured in the state workmen's insurance fund, as state factory inspectors are indirect agents for the fund. When these officials inspect a factory or store they are provided with a blank which does not merely contain information about minors, their ages, ventilation, sanitary and other labor conditions, but includes safety conditions or lack of safety conditions. The reports are filed with the bureau of statistics of the department of labor and industry, where they are available for the state workmen's insurance fund.

DISCUSS IMMIGRATION BILL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The committee on immigration of the house of representatives announces that beginning January 20 public hearings will be held on the pending immigration restriction bill. This bill is practically identical with the one vetoed by President Wilson, and which came within a few votes of being passed by the house over the chief executive's veto.

Senator Smith, of South Carolina, has introduced a restriction bill in the senate. He is chairman of the senate immigration committee. Congressman Burnett, of Alabama, who introduced this bill in the house, is chairman of the house committee on immigration.

A PRIMARY IS NOT AN ELECTION.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Jan. 19.—The state supreme court has upheld the compulsory primary election law, adopted by the last legislature. Section 10 of this act aroused the greatest controversy. In substance it provides that where a voter is challenged he must make affidavit that he voted more than one-half of the ticket of the party at the preceding election and that he will vote the ticket at the coming election. The court holds that a primary is not an election in the sense that the term is used in the constitution, and that political parties have the right to control their own primaries and may bar "outsiders."

Section 13 of the law was declared illegal. This provided that candidates must pay an entrance fee equivalent to 1 per cent of the first year's salary of the office for which they are running.

LOAN SHARKS OUSTED.

DAYTON, O., Jan. 19.—The city welfare department reports that 10 loan shark establishments have been put out of business since the establishment of the department's division of legal aid, in 1914. The division has also given legal advice in defense against oppressive litigation by settling controversies amicably.

WILL ASK FOR WAGE INCREASE.

AURORA, ILL., Jan. 19.—The building crafts in this city are preparing to ask for a 5-cent per hour increase and Saturday afternoons off.

Give the wages of an hour's labor January 27, to relieve the Danbury hatters.

IMMIGRATION FIGURES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—There were 29,297 immigrants admitted to this country during last November, reports the bureau of immigration, department of labor. During the month of November, 1914, the number was 35,325, while 117,031 were admitted during November, 1913.

Of the 29,297 admitted last November, Italy led with 2,467. The stoppage of eastern European immigration because of the war is shown by the fact that Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro furnished but 36 immigrants, while in November, 1913, the number totaled 1,067. Last November, Roumania furnished 7; in November, 1913, 515.

The November, 1915, report shows that 6,485 immigrants were ticketed to New York state, 2,233 to Massachusetts, 2,162 to Michigan, 1,702 to California and 1,406 to Pennsylvania. The southern states received their usual quota, 7 going to South Carolina, 11 to Kentucky, 12 to Georgia and North Carolina and 13 to Tennessee.

Of the total number of immigrants admitted during November, 1915, 3,849 were classed as laborers, 1,866 as farm laborers, and 2,561 as servants.

THE LORD JESUS AS A YOKE FELLOW.

"COME UNTO ME, ALL YE THAT LABOR AND ARE HEAVY-LADEN."

Self-Surrender Absolutely Essential to Discipleship—Advantages of the Poor. The Church's Course Contrary to that of the World. "Prize of the High Calling" Compared with "Restitution." Jesus' Mercy Toward Honest Doubters. Blessedness of Yoke-Fellowship With Christ.

LOUISVILEE, KY., Jan. 16.—Pastor Russell gave a practical address here today from the text, "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me.....; for My yoke is easy and My burden is light." (Matthew 11:29, 30.) The Pastor said in part:

We are to remember that our Lord used these words to the Jews; and that He was not addressing so much those who labored and were heavy laden in a physical sense as those who were burdened in a mental and moral sense. This class had been striving to keep the Law. They knew the terms of the Law Covenant, that "he that doeth these things shall live by them." (Leviticus 18:5.) But they were all dying; and they well knew that if they had been keeping their part of the Covenant, God would have kept His part.

This class is illustrated in the case of the rich young ruler who came to the Master, saying, "What good thing shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" (Matthew 19:16-22.) He had been striving hard to keep the Law. It was no wonder that Jesus loved him; for he was a noble character. Then in kindness the Master told him in what respect he was still lacking. His heart was set upon his riches. So our Lord put him to the test. "If you are weary and heavy-laden with trying to keep the Law from your youth up," was the thought which Jesus presented, "and still cannot gain life, I will tell you the only way by which you can obtain life everlasting. It is simply to cease from your own works, and accept through Me, as a gift from God, the forgiveness of the sins which you cannot avoid. Then renounce all earthly things, become My disciple, and lay up treasure in Heaven."

But the young man departed sorrowfully; for he had much possessions. Others, however, poorer than this young man in worldly possessions, had also been striving to keep the Law—Peter, James, John, Nathaniel and the rest. Jesus presented Himself to them as the Messiah, telling them that if they would become His disciples and share with Him in the sacrifices of the present time, they should also share the Heavenly Kingdom hereafter. They gladly complied, unlike the rich young ruler, for they had less to fetter them to the earth.

We can readily see how riches of learning, of knowledge, of experience, of honor of men, of social standing, of wealth—riches in any form—would be something to hinder the majority of men from becoming followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. But our Lord had just one set of terms under which any and all may come to Him. There is no royal road to the Kingdom of God. Whoever does not care to come on His terms may stay away and wait for the opportunities of the next Age. God has a great deal in the future—Times of Restitution for a needy world. The Call of the Gospel Age is unique. Some learn of this Call; fewer accept it; and still fewer prove faithful to the end.

THE CHURCH VS. THE WORLD.

God's Plan for the world is to lift them up out of sin, degredation and death, back to all that was lost by Adam. But no one can get this Restitution now. However, it will not hurt men to know in advance that God is gracious, and that He has provided something good for mankind. As the Love and the Mercy of God shine into their hearts, they will come to love Him more and more. At present God is selecting the soldiers who wish to enlist in the battle now being waged between right and wrong. All others may in the future come into the family of God on a lower plane.

As Adam lost his sonship and all his possessions because of sin, so because of the deliverance which Christ will accomplish by and by, these sinners may come back into harmony with God and to all that was lost in Adam. Let us thank God on their behalf. But this will not hinder us from having some still better thing. The more we come to know our Heavenly Father, the better we love Him.

When we find that it costs something to be a disciple of Christ during the present time, we are all the more convinced of the value of the good things which He has for them that accept His Call of the Gospel Age. But during the Millennial Age it will cost something not to do God's will. For all such there will be stripes, and eventually destruction if they continue to be disobedient. But there will be blessings for all who will then walk in the way of the Lord. Now, whoever walks in the footsteps of Jesus must walk contrary to the spirit of the world. Yet this class are the happiest people in the world, even though the world, their own flesh and the Devil are all against them. Satan pays more attention to them than to other people. There is no need for him to give special attention to those who are asleep. But whoever is waking up will be beset with persecution, with worldly inducements and with everything to oppose His way.

But since He that is on their part is greater than all that can be against them, if only they retain their love, faith and obedience, the opposition will become a blessing. The Master told His disciples that all manner of evil would be said against them falsely for His sake. St. Paul also declared, "Yea, all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution," in the present time. But there is a far greater reward for following Christ, for doing the Lord's will under present unfavorable conditions, than there will be for doing the Lord's will in the future. We are glad to suffer now that we may reign then, when the world's opportunity shall come.

THE CHURCH'S GLORIOUS HIGH CALLING.

The High Calling of the Church is the most wonderful opportunity which God has ever given to any of His creatures. Those who have made a Covenant of Sacrifice with God may have severe experiences now; but later the faithful ones amongst them will have glory, honor and immortality, and in the ages to come God will show the exceeding riches of His grace toward them through Christ Jesus. (Ephesians 2:4-7.) But who amongst those that have this hope would surrender it and take Restitution instead—a perfect human body, a perfect home in a perfect earth, perfect fruits, beautiful flowers and all the grandeurs of Restitution Times? Not one!

How did we attain this hope? By obedience to the Call contained in our text. By nature we were sinners, even as others, members of the fallen race. But as the Apostle points out, we recognized in our nature the Law of right and wrong. We still retained a part of what was originally given to Father Adam and lost by him. Humanity still has something left of the image of God in which Adam was created. The world in general know about the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." But "there is none righteous, no, not one." Fallen humanity find it a hard battle merely trying to live right, to do justly by their neighbors, to be kind and just to family and friends.

To this class that have been trying to do the Lord's will and that have found it a hard task to live up to the Divine standard, our Lord Jesus says, "Come unto Me"—you who are weary and heavy-laden in your attempts to do what is right, to speak no slander, to treat your neighbor always as you would have him treat you. This class have found out that if God were to require perfection of them, they could never come to Him at all; for fallen humanity cannot measure up to His perfect standards.

But why should we come to Jesus, instead of going directly to God? It is because Jesus is God's appointed Way. (John 14:6.) God is aware of our fallen estate. He knows that we have inherited our weaknesses of mind and body. He could not accept us thus; hence He has provided for us a Savior and Advocate. He is seeking now for those who are striving to do right, those who realize the grandeur of His requirements in the Golden Rule. To this class He is sending a special Message. He is inviting them to have a share in the sacrifice of Christ.—Romans 12:1, 2.

HIS GLORIOUS PROVISION IN CHRIST.

But no sacrifice can come to the altar of the Lord except that which is without spot or blemish; and we are spotted and blemished. Therefore unless our Lord Jesus imputes of His merit to cover these spots and blemishes, we never could be accepted as joint-sacrificers with Him. He must do this before we can receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit.

Thus those who realize that they come far short of God's standard and need a Savior may come to the Lord. These enter by faith into the rest of God—not merely that future rest for the people of God who enter into the Kingdom, but even now, "We who have believed do enter into rest." (Hebrews 4:3.) We have rest even in these imperfect human bodies. We knew that there were weaknesses before, but we did not know how to get rid of them. Now we know that "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin," from all unintentional weaknesses. How glad we are that Jesus died for our sins! that He has furnished by imputation a covering for all of our imperfections. So we are resting, trusting, refreshed by this knowledge.

"According to thy faith be it unto thee," says the Master. Our justification is all by faith. God does not purpose to justify those who cannot believe. Some can believe more easily than can others. But the time will come when all can believe.

For my own part, cannot believe as easily as do some people. I must have a certain amount of evidence. But the Lord was willing to accept St. Thomas even if that disciple could not exercise faith quickly in what he had not seen; in fact, the Master even gave him the demonstration which he needed in order to believe. But unless we can accept the Gospel Call with the evidence which the Lord has furnished, we cannot be of the Kingdom class at all. We do accept. We are resting in the promises by faith. The Apostle says, "The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." (Philippians 4:7.) Just as surely as we are children of God, and are living in covenant relationship with Him, so surely is this promise ours.

So then, if there be any dear friends present today who have not yet come to the Lord, we would give them this Message, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden; and I will give you rest." If you have not been trying to do the will of God, then you are not weary and heavy-laden. But if you have been trying, and feeling your impotency, then listen to this Call. Do not stop there, however. "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me," advises our Lord and Savior.

OUR GREAT YOKE-FELLOW.

A yoke is a symbol of servitude. By the use of this symbol our Lord implies that those who are set free, either from the yoke of the Law Covenant, as were the believing Jews, or from the yoke of Satan, as were the believing Gentiles, should take His yoke, should become His servants, should learn to do His will. A yoke is generally arranged for two; and since our Lord speaks of it as His yoke, we are to understand that He also is a Servant. Having come to do the Father's will, He invites us to become true yoke-fellows with Himself in the doing of the Father's will, to be co-laborers with Christ in the great work of the world's deliverance from sin and death.

The secret of the ability to wear this yoke, to have companionship with Christ in His service, and to have as a result a great blessing in our own hearts, lies in our learning to be meek and lowly of heart, as He was. It is impossible for the proud, haughty, self-willed, ambitious or worldly-wise to labor in the same yoke with Jesus, or to find the true rest of soul which we properly seek. But if we are meek, teachable, humble-minded, ready to know and to do the Lord's will at any cost, then indeed we shall find rest.

Those who wear this yoke have the Divine assurance that all things are working together for good to them; that the heavier the burden now, the greater will be the blessing and the reward by and by; that the severer the experiences now, the brighter shall be their character and the surer shall they be of preparedness for the Kingdom. From this viewpoint every burden is light, not only because the yoke is easy, but because the Lord is their Yoke-fellow, and assumes the weight of the load for those who walk close to Him.

Having a strong, efficient Yoke-fellow is very different from trying to pull the load alone. Of our Lord it was written, "Of the people there was none" with Him. (Isaiah 63:3.) But how different it is with His footstep followers! Not only do they have brethren to encourage and assist them, but above all they have the Master with them. "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the Age," is His promise. Although we are now in the end of the Age, yet the Age will not close until the last member of the Church is called and proven. Moreover, the Lord will be with His followers all the way as a true Yoke-fellow.

"LEARN OF ME."

"Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me," says the Master. If we have taken His yoke upon us, we are in His School, learning of Him. Yet at the same time we are being taught of the Heavenly Father. He says, "I will put you into the School of Instruction; and the One who has redeemed you I have appointed to be your Teacher. You are to be under the care of your Elder Brother." So we are learning the necessary lesson day by day, growing in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Redeemer, in all the fruits of the Holy Spirit.

What are the fruits of the Spirit? Meekness, faith, gentleness, patience, self-control, brotherly kindness, love. The Apostle says that these fruits are manifest—can be seen. "If these things be in you and abound," declares St. Peter, "they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Peter 1:8, 10, 11. We must therefore exercise ourselves according to the Divine arrangements; and then we shall be ready for the graduation, when our Master shall say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things ——" you did not do very much, but you had the right spirit, you did the best that you could—"enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

"For I am meek and lowly in heart." This is one of the main lessons in the School of Christ. Whoever has learned to be humble-minded, submissive, gentle, obedient, shall find rest of soul, and finally shall enter into His rest—the Kingdom rest. Then the sons of God will have perfect bodies, complete in every sense of the word. They will have the glory, honor and immortality which God has in reservation for those that love Him supremely.

Those who have learned of Christ have made God's work the chief interest in life. Therefore they do not give all of their time to the ordinary vocations of mankind. On the contrary, they are determined to follow the Master, to labor for the good of others, and to let the light of Truth shine out wherever they may go. Having become members of the Christ company, henceforth for them to live is Christ. Their work is to serve the Truth and the brethren, to suffer with their Lord now, and to reign with Him hereafter.

Essay III.

When Huss was delivered over to the civil authorities and led away to the place of execution, an immense procession followed, imposing military procession and priests and bishops in their costly and gorgeous robes, and the populace of Constance. When he was fastened to the stake and all was ready for the fire to be lighted, the martyr was given the oportunity to secure liberty if he renounced his errors. "What errors shall I renounce," said Huss, "I know myself guilty of none. I call God to witness that all that I have written or preached has been with the view of rescuing souls from sin and perdition; and, therefore, most joyfully will I confirm with my blood that truth which I have written and preached."

Luther proved to be equally as faithful to his convictions as was Huss before him. Huss and Luther in standing alone upon their convictions before the Council at Constance and the Diet of Worms is a vivid contrast to the conduct of Calvin and Zwingli. Luther's circumstances were somewhat similar to those of Huss. John Eck had proven that Luther was guilty of the same offenses that led Huss to the stake. Eck had placed the evidence in the hands of the Pope. Chales V, the new emperor of Germany, had just ascended the throne. Rome insisted upon him to silence Luther either by edict or otherwise. Luther was a subject of Fredrick, the Elector of Saxony who had maintained a neutral policy respecting Luther and practically said, "hands off." The elector had considerable influence with the emperor for he had been instrumental in getting the emperor upon the throne and insisted upon having Luther tried and his teachings refuted before he was silenced. This the papists opposed, for the Pope had previously excommunicated Luther and to have him tried would be to disregard the Pope's Bull. But Frederick requested "that Doctor Luther be furnished with a safe-conduct, so that he might answer for himself before a tribunal of learned, pious and impartial judges." Against the vain protests of the priests the emperor summoned Luther to appear at Worms.

Luther was anxious to appear before the emperor in the interests of the Reformation and said: "Let us take care that the Gospel be not exposed to the scorn of the ungodly, and let us shed our blood in its defense rather than allow them to triumph. Who shall say whether my life or my death would contribute most to the salvatron of my brethren?" To his friends who tried to dissuade him, he said: "Though the road to Worms was lined with devils I'd go just the same. Expect anything from me but flight or recantation. Fly I cannot; still less can I recant." At the trial they were very patient—every opportunity was given him to recant. To the emperor he said, in reply to a direct question: "Since your most serene Majesty and your Lordships ask for a simple answer, I will give it after this fashion: Unless I am convinced by witness of Scripture or plain reason (for I do not believe in the Pope or in councils alone, since it is agreed that they have often erred and contradicted themselves.) I am overcome by the Scriptures which I have adduced, and my conscience is caught by the word of God. I neither can or will recant anything, for it is neither safe nor right to act against one's conscience." And glancing over the assembly of dignitaries upon whose will his life hung, he concluded, "Here I stand, I cannot do otherwise, so help me God." Amen.

The trial resulted in the emperor ordering that Luther be conducted back to Wittenberg and issued an edict forbidding him to preach his doctrines to the people. The agents of the Pope tried to have him executed there and then, referring to the action of Sigsmund against Huss a century ago. John Eck, who appeared against Luther declared: "We have long consulted on this matter. Let your majesty rid yourself of this man at once. Did not Sigismund bring John Huss to the stake? We are under no obligation either to give or to observe the safe-conduct of a heretic." Fredrick had looked with favor upon the teachings of Luther and was favorably impressed with his noble conduct at this trial and prevailed upon the emperor not to break his promise of safe-conduct. The elector, together with many other princes present, concealed their sympathy with the reformer and his cause. Fredrick plotted to arrest Luther as soon as he reached his domain enroute to Wittenberg to keep him from falling into the hands of his enemies.

Huss accomplished more in the interest of the cause he represented by his martyrdom than he would have, had been as "expedient" as Calvin and Zwingli. The same applies to Luther's stand at Worms. The execution of Huss, and later Jerome, kindled a flame of indignation and horror in Bohemia. It was felt by the whole nation that they had fallen a prey to the malice of the priests. While the people may not always appreciate the doctrines in dispute, they could judge as to the conduct of the disputants. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The result was that the writings of Wycliffe and Huss were read with greater interest and by people who had formerly opposed them. Luther could not be said to be tempting Providence by a hazardous risk that would accomplish nothing, for the issues of the Reformation were at stake at this Diet. He represented all the reformers and those whom they influenced and he did not betray this momentous trust. Luther's mysterious disappearance enroute to Wittenberg had the same effect upon Germany as the execution of Huss had upon Bohemia. The people belived him dead and the papists gloated over their supposed victory. When he reappeared nine months later at Wittenberg, his followers hailed him as one raised from the dead.

Luther furnishes us with a splendid example of the power of God—the conviction that an intelligent appreciation of the truth produces and the Christian character that is developed in its contemplation, is at the bottom of such courage. Even Luther himself, in recalling the event, was surprised at his strength on the occasion: "It must indeed have been God who gave me my boldness of heat; I doubt if I could show such courage again.". Even Luther's enemies at this Diet felt the presenec of this noble character and he commanded their respect. Said Audin, a Romanist writer, concerning this occasion:—

"When the approach of Luther was heard there ensued one of those deep silences in which the heart alone, by its hurried pulsations, gives sign of life. Attention was diverted from the emperor to the monk. On the appearance of Luther every one rose, regardless of the sovereign's presence. It inspired Werner with one of the finest acts of his tragedy. Heine has glorified the appearance at Worms. The Catholic himself loves to contemplate the black gown in the presence of those lords and barons caparisoned in iron and armed with helmet and spear, and is moved by the voice of 'that young friar' who came to defy all the powers of earth."

Another Catholic writer, Roscoe, compliments the fidelity of Luther thus: "All parties must unite in admiring and venerating the man, who, undaunted and alone, could stand before such an assembly, and vindicate with unshaken courage what he conceived to be the cause of religion, of liberty and of truth, fearless of any reproaches but those of his own conscience, or of any disapprobation but that of his God."

Luther at the Diet of Worms, like Christ before Piate and St. Paul befort Agrippa and Festus, he witnessed a good confession. This confession launched the central truth of the Reformation upon Europe "the just shall live by faith." Some writers date the Reformation from this event. Christ's atoning blood was to sound the death knell to the doctrine of the Mass and Indulgence. "They overcame. . . . . (Papacy) by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto dtath." Luther formulated seventeen articles containing the essence of the reformatory teachings. These he committed to Melanchthon for careful elaboration and they were presented by him to the Diet of Augsburg which was arranged for this special purpose. Luther himself could not be present at this Diet, he was forbidden by the princes and nobles that sanctioned it, for in the eyes of the law he was considered a dead man. Luther's teachings were formally ratified at this Diet and their formal action constitutes what is known as the Augusburg Confession. When Luther received a copy of the Confession he said: "I thrill with joy that I have lived to see the hour in which Christ is preached by so many confessors to an assembly so illustrious in a form so beautiful."

The principles of the Augustburg Confession became the issue of all the bloody religious wars that started in ed hard at recruiting, like Will Crooks and the railwaymen's leader, J. H. Thomas, who believe the results desired can be obtained immediately without compulsion.

Trade Unions Will Discuss Conscription

A larger body, probably the majority, who have taken a less prominent part in the controversy. They would undoubtedly prefer to maintain the voluntary system, but may be relied on to support the Government in any step they may consider necessary.

In outside labor circles there is a general disposition to hope that immediate compulsion in the sense of conscription for the single men as yet unenlisted is not implied in the Cabinet's decision. The suggestion generally made is that unattested men—single men certainly—would be compelled to attend before the local tribunals to give reasons for their refusal or neglect.

Through the medium of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Unions Congress negotiations are to be reopened between the National Union of Railwaymen and the Craft Unions, regarding employees in railway workshops. I refer to a recent deadlock which occurred some time ago, both sides taking up an uncompromising attitude. According to an official announcement on December 28th the Parliamentary Committee's intention is to clear up a difficult position which, in their opinion, may bring about the disruption of the British trade union movement. The Executive of the National Union of Railwaymen have agreed to attempt to reach an amicable solution of the trouble, provided that the terms do not involve any sacrifice of principle affecting the basis and constitution of the Union.

Ben Tillett, the general secretary of the Dock, Wharf, and Riverside Workers' Union, is again with the British troops in France. This is his second visit to the trenches, and was made at the request of many of the soldiers themselves.

There was a case before the Metropolitan Munitions Tribunal on December 21st where two boys of fourteen obtained certificates of release on the plea that they were expected to work from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m and from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m. on alternate days at the rate of 5 cents an hour.

This brings before the public a serious social problem which has been engaging the attention of social workers in the East End for some time. The effect of long hours on the physique of these boys is sufficiently serious to have been brought to the notice of the Munitions Health Committee. There has recently been some improvement, the interval between the night-work spell and the day-work spell having been increased from 24 to 48 hours.

Lloyd George states, in reply to a question in the House about a month ago, that there were 2,600 boys between 14 and 16 working at Woolwich Arsenal and I am told by people who have gone into the matter that the number is now somewhere about 3,000. The usual hours of working are from eight to eight in alternate weeks of day and night work. There is, of course, time off for meals and it is not continuous labor. Most of the boys live a long way from their work, and are often away from home from half-past six in the morning till half-past nine at night, and often go short of sleep. They often fall asleep in the train going home. They earn anything from $1.75 to $12.50 a week on unskilled piecework, the amount varying according to the machine and the number of breakdowns. A great part of the money earned by these boys is spent on candy, moving picture shows, and so on. In normal times most of these boys would be learning a trade, but they have been drawn into the arsenal by the lure of high wages, where their work, however useful, to the nation it may be, will not help them to earn their living in after life.

Appreciations.

Suffolk, Va., Jan. 10.

I have been pained to read in your issue of January 6th inst. a communication from a correspondent who signs himself Alfred Dripps, in which very serious charges are made against a brother in the Truth who is the editor and proprietor of a paper in which Pastor Russell's discourses are regularly published. For instance, said correspondent says the Labor Tribune is rapidly losing subscribers "because a paper in the northwest is obrogating (I suppose he means is trying to reregate, all others to the newspaper grave yard.")

All who read the above communication can have no difficulty in knowing what paper it is "in the northwest" which, he charges, is doing such a dirty business. I myself have been a reader of that "paper in the northwest", and I deem it my duty to say to you that I have never seen a line or a word in that paper which indicated any such disposition on the part of its editor and proprietor.

Again, your correspondent says in his communication, that "I am also told" (mark you, he does not claim to know the truthfulnes of what he says) that "this same man is trying to have the Truth headquarters moved to St. Paul, Minn." and in the sentence preceding that one, he again says "I am informed" (mark you again, he does not claim to know whether what he says is true or false' "that the editor of this western paper says he is going to be Pastor Russell's successor."

It seems to me that no man in his senses could believe that "the editor of this western paper" is such a consummate fool as to make either remark especially the one about becoming Pastor Russell's successor. Not only so, but since your correspondent indicates that he does not know whether these statements of his are true or not, charity to a brother in the Lord should have kept him from publishing such things, which, if true, would show that "the editor of this western paper" is worthy of the contempt of all lovers of decency.

For one, let me say that I do not for one moment believe a word of those charges, and I trust you will permit me to add, that such communications, if admitted to your columns, will do your paper incalculable harm. My first thought was to discontinue my subscription to your paper, but on reflection I decided not to do that, unless you continue to publish such letters reflecting on the character of a brother, which I earnestly hope you will not do.

This communication is intended for publication in your paper, if such shall be your pleasure, and I deem it but frank to inform you that I am sending a duplicate of it to the editor of "this western paper."

Very respectfully yours,

Have just renewed my subscription to your much appreciated paper through the Bible House.

You will please pardon delay in renewing and I wish to thank you for continuing to send it to me till I did.

Was very much pleased with the way the sermon was printed in the last issue with large clear type. Trust you can continue to give this much space in the future.

While we take your paper especially for the sermons by Pastor Russell, we enjoy reading the many other interesting things published.

Bro. Nelson's essays are also very good.

We wish your paper success and those connected with it a happy and prosperous New Year.

THE SONS OF GOD

Romans 8:12-30.—Jan. 23.

Divine Sonship Lost by Adam—Jews a House of Servants—Christ a Son. Head of the House of Sons—Evidences of Spirit-Begetting—Predestination of the Elect—To What Elected.

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."—Verse 14.

TODAY we have another wonderful lesson from the inspired Apostle Paul. It points out that the Church is a New Creation, begotten of the Holy Spirit and now being gestated for the resurrection birth to the spirit plane. There is no more important lesson than this. According to the Bible, Adam was created a son of God—in the image of God and only a little lower than the angels. (Psalm 8:5.) When Adam sinned, his relationship with God was forfeited. Forthwith he was a sinner under the sentence which God had foretold—not an eternal torment sentence, but a death sentence, accompanied with mental, moral and physical degeneracy.

After Adam's time there were no human sons of God—until Jesus. The Jews, received by the Lord under the Law Covenant, never understood themselves to be sons of God. Instead, they threatened to stone Jesus because He declared Himself a Son of God.—Heb. 3:5, 6; John 10:31-36.

Spirit-Begotten Sons of God.

St. Paul declares that no natural man can fully appreciate the deep things of the Bible; for God has had them so written that only the spirit-begotten can comprehend them. (1 Corinthians 2:14.) The Church is a company of regenerated beings. Once they were members of the Adamic race, and through sin "were children of wrath, even as others." (Ephesians 2:3.) But now they have accepted Jesus as their Redeemer, and the sacrifice of His life as the Atonement-price for their sins.

St. Paul at Rome.

When they accept the invitation to become Jesus' followers, He becomes their Advocate with the Father. By the Divine arrangement His meritorious sacrifice is applicable to them as a covering for sins past and imperfections future. This arrangement affords them opportunity to be accepted of the Father and begotten of the Holy Spirit, and eventually to attain joint-heirship with Christ in the Kingdom.

These regenerated, spirit-begotten children of God are not yet perfected; but if they continue in the School of Christ, the faithful will eventually reach perfection on the spirit plane as Sons of God, led by the Spirit. These, on Scriptural authority, exercising faith, are enabled to call upon God as their Father—"Abba, Father." Through the Word and their own experiences these receive the witness of the Spirit of God that they are His children, joint-heirs with Jesus—the grand perfection being dependent upon their suffering with Him. These have no obligation to the flesh; for they are New Creatures. These are no longer to live after the flesh, but in harmony with the Spirit of God as revealed to them through His Word.

In their weakness and ignorance these New Creatures might ask amiss. But God would not deal with them according to their imperfect asking. He would accept the spirit of their request. The groanings and desires of our spirits, our minds, will be accepted of the Lord as instead of our imperfect utterances in prayer.

Explanation of the Gospel Call.

Verses 28-31 declare that God has a special purpose in the special High Calling of this Gospel Age. Other Scriptures show that this Call is to joint-heirship with Jesus in His Messianic Kingdom, which is shortly to bless all mankind. To get a suitable class to be the teachers, rulers and judges of the world in the future has been the object of this Gospel Call. Jesus, the Head of the Church, was the first to respond and has been glorified. His followers, called during the Gospel Age, will be similarly blessed of God—glorified on the spirit plane, if faithful.

Privileged to Suffer.

Our Study concludes with an explanation of God's Call. God foreknew, purposed in advance, to have such a Church as the Apostle describes, to accomplish the work mentioned. But to be of that predestinated and glorified class, certain things were necessary; namely, all accounted worthy of a share in the Kingdom must be copies of God's dear Son—in heart, in character, and like Him also, in their resurrection, spirit beings. This is a glorious predestination, assuring us that God will have none others in the Kingdom than those who are character-likenesses of His Son Jesus.

Those called had brought to their attention this glorious opportunity. But before they could accept, they must first be justified through repentance and acceptance of Jesus as their Redeemer. Then they were glorified—honored—by being begotten of God's Holy Spirit and brought into His family as joint-heirs with Jesus, privileged to suffer for the Truth and to be glorified in connection with the Kingdom.

Luther's day and continued after his death for thirty years. Luther's superiority over the group of Reformers that rallied around his teachings is further indicated by the fact that he protested against using the sword to defend the gospel. Calvin, Knox and Zwingli, were apparently still blinded by the Papal maxim, "the ends will justify the means," for they advocated the carnal weapons of coercion and the sword against Papacy. Against all this Luther protested. While he leaned in the direction of the state for protection and saw no ill in the princes and nobles of state adopting the gospel as the state religion, he objected strenuously to the state taking up arms to defend the Truth and forcing it upon the people who could not appreciate it. Luther's sentiments on this question had been promulgated long before the carnal weapons had been employed in defense of the Reformation. Shortly after his return to Wittenberg from his prison at Wartburg Castle, he gave expression to the following paragraph, which will reveal his high perception of the power of God and it will be noted that Luther practically anticipated the teachings of Roger Williams and William Penn concerning religious toleration; note this in the following language of Luther:

"The mass is a bad thing. God is opposed to it. It ought to be abolished, and I would that everywhere the supper of the gospel were established in its stead. But let none be torn from it by force. We must leave results to God. It is not we that must work, but his Word. 'And why so?' you will ask. Because the hearts of men are not in my hand as clay in the hand of the potter. We have a right to speak, but none whatever to compel. Let us preach; the rest belongs to God. If I resort to force, what shall I gain? Grimace, fair appearances, cramped uniformity, and hypocrisy. But there will be no hearty sincerity, no faith, no love. Where these are wanting, all is wanting, and I would not give a straw for such a victory. God does more by the simple power of His Word than you and I and the whole world could effect by all our efforts put together. God arrests the heart, and that once taken, all is won. I am ready to preach, argue, write; but I will not constrain any one, for faith is but a voluntary act. Call to mind what I have already done. I stood up against the pope, indulgences, and papists; but without violence or tumult. I brought forward God's Word; I preached and wrote, and then I stopped. And while I laid me down and slept, . . . the Word I had preached brought down the power of the pope to the ground, so that never prince or emperor had dealt such a blow. For my part I did next to nothing; the power of the Word did the whole business. Had I appealed to force, Germany might have been deluged with blood. But what would have been the consequence? Ruin and destruction of soul and body. Accordingly I kept quiet, and let the Word run through the length and breadth of the land."

Rhonesboro, Tex., Jan. 14.

We have been receiving your paper for two years and have truly enjoyed its regular visits. I have never known a paper to be more promptly sent out. Wife and I usually race to the mail box on "Tribune day" to be first to feast on the good and interesting things it always contains.

Owing to financial conditions will ask you to please discontinue my subscription.

HUMAN VALUES GO UP.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—"An event which is shocking or dramatic or spectacular, even though its scene be far distant, impresses the people of this country more than an orderly but revolutionary economic change at home which vitally affects their own interests," says the North American of this city, in a leading editorial.

"Newspaper readers will follow the details of a Balkanbattle with closer attention than they give to the creation of a law which shifts the very foundations of our social system.

"A striking example of this habit of mind is to be observed in the fact that only casual interest has been manifested by the public in the new workmen's compensation law, which became effective on January 1. Yet that day saw the culmination of the most far-reaching social and economic change that has occurred in this state in our day.

"Hereafter, in Pennsylvania, lives which are destroyed and health and earning power which are impaired in industry will be paid for by the industry, in the same manner that broken or worn-out machinery has been paid for in the past. This marks the most important victory yet won in the commonwealth for the fundamental doctrine that the rights of human beings are superior to the rights of property.

"The new law, establishing the principle that human rights are paramount, provides that an industry which destroys a worker's earning power and his use to society shall make good his disability."

Labor Differs As To Need of Conscription

Trades Unions Discuss Compulsory Military Service in Britain.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, January 13, 1916.

The war has brought a period of abounding industrial prosperity to the workers in all our principal trades. Today the general average of wages paid is higher and the percentage of unemployment less than at any previous period in our history. Two causes are mainly responsible for this effect of the war. First the large number of men engaged in every industry who have voluntarily and patriotically responded to the nation's call; second, the enormous demand for munitions and all the other needs of a great army in the field.

Just at the present time reviews of the year 1915 are coming to hand. Perhaps, therefore, a glance back at the history of British labor in that year may not be out of place. The increasing demand for labor in all the principal industries, with the working of considerable overtime, accompanied by a general rise in the price of food and all other commodities, was the basis of the demand in the spring for increases of wages and war bonuses to meet the higher cost of living. The railway workers were among the first to move, and an agreement was made by the companies to pay a bonus for the period of the war of 72 cents per week to all employes earning $7.50 or less, and 50 cents per week to all men earning more. The underlying idea of helping the lower-paid workmen to meet the higher cost of living was an excellent one, but in practice it worked badly, causing dissatisfaction among the men holding the more responsible positions. An agitation began almost from the first day of the granting of the bonus, and in September a new arrangement was made, conceding the original demand made by the National Union of Railwaymen of an all-round bonus of $1.25 per week. This probably represents a weekly addition of $625,000 to the wage bill of British railways.

The miners' agitation for a war bonus proved the most difficult to arrange owing to the varying conditions of the trade, whether for the home or the export market. The miners' demand was made originally on a national basis, apart altogether from the economic position of the trade, to meet the increase in the cost of living. While conceding the principle of the demand that all the men employed were entitled to a war bonus, Premier Asquith ruled that the amount of the bonus must be fixed by the independent Chairman in each wage district. The award varied from 15 per cent in Durham, Northumberland and other districts, 17½ per cent in South Wales, 18¾ per cent in Scotand, to 23½ per cent in the English Federated area—15½ per cent on a new wage basis raised by 50 per cent. There have also been substantial advances in wages given in all the districts, and the money value of the war bonus and advances may be calculated at from $1.50 to $2.25 per week. In September the advances in wages in the coal trade were estimated by the Board of Trade to amount to $1,115,000 a week, and with the further advance of 5 per cent, and two advances of 6¼ per cent in Scotland and of 18 per cent in Northumberland the value of the advance in wage as compared with a year ago must be equal to $1,500,000 a week.

It is calculated that the advances since made in the coal mining, iron mining, pig iron, iron and steel, tin plate and other industries will further increase the addition to the wage bill up to $5,000,000 per week. It is also probably within the mark of estimating that advances have been made in other trades which have not been reported to the Board of Trade to the extent of a further $1,250,000 per week. This would bring the addition to the wage bill of the country to the huge total of $325,000,000 a year.

The returns from the trade unions and the insured trades show an unprecedentedly low percentage of unemployment. There has been work for every willing worker; for the unskilled an opportunity of acquiring skill and employment in many well-paid trades. Though there has been much industrial unrest, with agitation for higher wages and war bonuses, there has been a big diminution in the time lost by strikes and lockouts. The war has done much to put an end for the time of labor troubles. The only serious dispute was the stoppage in the South Wales coalfield in July with respect to the new agreement.

Turning to current affairs the most exciting topic of the moment is the at-

Another Report On Cause of Rioting.

Federal Investigators Assail Steel Operators.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Startling facts about labor conditions in the steel industry throughout the country are presented in a report on the Youngstown strike in its bearing on the general situation, made public today by the Committee on Industrial Relations.

The report is by Basil M. Manly, director for the committee and author of the main report to Congress of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations. Mr. Manly was director of research and investigation for the recent federal commsision. and in 1910 had charge of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. investigation into labor conditions in the steel industry of the entire country.

Asserting that hours are more reasonable and conditions better at the Youngstown plants than in any other part of the steel industry, Mr. Manly tells how the United States Steel Corporation has been able to maintain oppressive conditions and low wages by ruthlessly suppressing attempts of its employes to organize. The report follows:

"The discontent in the industrial hell-holes known as the "steel towns" of Pennsylvania. Illinois, Indiana, New York, Maryland, Alabama, Colorado, West Virginia and Southern Ohio, is more bitter and has a deeper seated basis than in the plants of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, where the overlordism and exploitation of the steel workers had been at least salved with profit-sharing, accident prevention and compensation, and a measure of so-called "welfare work."

"I was in charge of an investigation of the steel industry for the United States Bureau of Labor in 1910 which covered every steel plant in the country and probed to the very bottom of labor conditions. I know that the wages paid in the Youngstown district are as high, the hours more reasonable if any system of twelve-hour shifts can ever be reasonable, the mills as well built, and the system of espionage and brutal bossism less developed, than in any part of the steel industry. In 1910 the wage for common labor in Youngstown was 17 cents per hour, in Eastern Pennsylvania, 13½ cents. The tube mills worked 10 hours day shift six days in the week, and 12 hours for five nights, as compared with 12 hours day and night for seven days a week in other departments. The management in Youngstown had not only done much to safeguard their plants, but had installed a non-contributory system of accident compensation and were supporting workmen's compensation as a state measure.

"There were armed guards and brutal bosses in Youngstown, but less conspicuous and insolent than in the steel towns of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Colorado. The steel workers' villages in the outskirts of Youngstown were sickening exhibits of squalor and filth, but such is the typical condition of steel towns throughout the country. The mills were irregular in operation and unemployment was frequent and distressing, but even so the Youngstown mills had the reputation for low costs, big sales and steadier operations than other districts less favorably located.

"The entire steel industry North, South, East and West, is ripe for a strike, and the situation is not going to be relieved in the granting of a 10 per cent wage increase. The strike fever in the steel industry showed itself first in the Youngstown district apparently because the labor demand was a little keener than elsewhere.

"The investigation by the Bureau of Labor in 1910 covering all the steel plants in the United States showed that 65 per cent of all employes in the industry when working full time earn less than $15 a week, and that in the year of steadiest operation the industry had ever known, only 56 per cent of the employes, including even the high-paid rollers and petty bosses, had an opportunity to earn as much as $600 per year, if they worked every day the mills operated. This in spite of the fact that all investigations have shown that the very least a family can live upon with any degree of decency is $700 a year.

"The standard working day in the steel industry is 12 hours, in spite of the fact that the 12-hour day was condemned even by a committee of stockholders of the Steel Corporation. And while the public has been largely deceived by self-laudatory advertising of the steel companies regarding the abolition of the seven day week, the reports of the Bureau of Labor show that in the blast furnaces 80 per cent of the employes are still working seven days a week.

"Why have such conditions continued in so rich an industry Congress has investigated time after time, reformers have protested until they are blue in the face, and the industry has been muck-raked from top to bottom. "The answer is that the corporations, of which less than six produce 70 per cent of the steel manufactured in this country, are not only highly organized, but possess a complete agreement and understanding on matters of labor policy, while the workers are not only unorganized, but through a system of company espionage and terrorism more complete than that of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, every attempt at organization or even collective action is brutally stamped out and the leaders blacklisted. Organizers sent into the steel towns have been assaulted, meetings broken up by the company's guards and police, and the threat of discharge and starvation wielded over every man suspected of sympathy with ideas of organization.

"Youngstown is simply the first eruption from an industrial volcano that has many more dangerous craters. The whole mass is seething and strikes with ever increasing violence may be expected unless the pressure is relieved by a wage increase of not less than 20 per cent, a substitution of the eight-hour day for inhumane 12-hour day, and above all, the elimination of the system of industrial terrorism which is now maintained by the so-called "independents" as well as the trust to prevent orderly collective action on the part of the steel workers."

SHOES FOR SUFFERERS FROM THE WAR

Mrs. Price Post, prominent in the social life of Tuxedo Park and New York, is one of the many society women engaged in the work of obtaining shoes for the war sufferers of Belgium. She is seen in this picture with two little Belgian-Americans who have come with their mite to help the unfortunates in the country from which their parents came.

NEW PERIL TO WORKERS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Benzine and wood alcohol poisoning are the two newest forms of occupational diseases which will have to be combatted, according to the annual report of State Factory Inspector Oscar F. Nelson. Benzine poisoning occurs among makers and users of rubber cement in the manufacture of hats, clothing, leather, and rubber goods. Wood alcohol poisoning is prevalent among the makers of certain perfumes, hats, quick dryers in paints, and painted china.

As a result of the increase in the number of occupational diseases the state factory department has opened a clinic where employes may come to receive free examination and have their cases diagnosed.

WORD "ACCIDENT" IS DEFINED.

MADISON, WIS., Jan. 26.—The word "accident," as used in the workmen's compensation law, must be given a broad and inclusive meaning, rules the state supreme court in the case of Bystrom Bros. vs. Eric Jacobson. The case arose when a mason, in lifting a block, strained the muscles of the right side of his body. The company contended that this was not an accident within the meaning of the statute. Justice Marshal delivered the opinion of the court. He said that the English and American authorities quite generally agree on the broad interpretation of terms in workmen's compensation laws and that this court considers the legislature intended a broad interpretation of the word.

MINE HAZARDS REDUCED.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 26.—A report by John M. Roan, chief mine inspector of the industrial commission, shows that in 1915 one out of every 758 employed in the coal mines was killed in mine accidents during the year, or one person for every 300,000 tons of coal mined. The total number of fatal accidents in mines during the year was 62, a falling off of nearly two-thirds since 1913.

WILL TEST WAGES BY LAW.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—At the hearing before Supreme Court Judge DeCourcy to compel laundry proprietors to produce books to prove they are paying the minimum wage, attorneys for the defense announced they would test the legality of the law creating the state minimum wage commission. Judge DeCourcy suggested that this point be waived for the present, as the United States supreme court is considering the Oregon minimum wage law.

Under th Massachustts act the decision of the wage commission is not mandatory.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Jan. 26.—The decision of the United States supreme court in the Oregon minimum wage law case will have a bearing on the minimum wage law passed by the last state legislature. This law provides for a minimum wage of $1.25 for experienced female workers and $1 a day for female workers having six months' experience. The law was declared unconstitutional last summer by Judge Little of the Fort Smith circuit court and the state officials have appealed.

MUST ACCEPT SALARY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Jan. 26.—If a candidate for public office in this state promises voters he will not accept all of the salary of the position to which he aspires, this is bribery, under the corrupt practice act, rules the state supreme cout.

P. C. Prentiss was elected judge of the Henry county common pleas court. During his campaign he promised constituents he would decline to accept all the salary and would thereby save taxpayers $16,650 in six years. The supreme court now sustains the court of appeals that this is a violation of the law. The court, however, holds that the opponent of Prentiss is not eligible to the vacancy caused by the decision, and the governor must appoint.

PENSIONS FOR WIDOWS.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Jan. 26.—The Quarterly court of this county has ordered an appropriation of $4,000 for widows' pensions, to become available July 1. This is the maximum appropriation in counties where juvenile courts are held. The act was passed by the last legislature and provides for a pension of $10 per month for the eldest child under 16 and $5 per month for each additional child. Pensions will be under the supervision of juvenile courts.

INCREASE FOR STAGE EMPLOYES.

WHEELING, W. VA., Jan. 26.—State employes have raised wages approximately $1 per week per man. Stage carpenters, with $25 per week, receive the highest rate.

WANT 44-HOUR WEEK.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 26.—Typographical unions of this city and St. Paul are in a joint movement to improve conditions of their job printer members. The new scale will include demand for a 44-hour week and wage increases from $21 to $24 a week.

MANUFACTURE OF EXPLOSIVES.

Census Bureau's Summary Concerning the Industry for 1914.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 26—A preliminary statement of the general results of the 1914 census of manufactures for the explosive industry has been issued by Director Sam L. Rogers of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. It consists of a statement of the quantity and the value of the various products manufactured, prepared under the direction of Mr. William M. Steuart, chief statistician for manufactures.

The figures are preliminary and subject to such change and correction as may be necessary from a further examination of the original reports.

Reports were received from 111 establishments engaged in the manufacture of explosives during 1914, the products of which were valued at $41,453,339. At the census of 1909 there were 86 establishments, with products valued at $40,139,661. The increase in the number of establishments reported is due largely to the fact that existing companies have built new plants at various points for shipping facilities.

MATERIALS USED.

The 111 establishments reporting in 1914 used as materials 15,832 tons of sulphur, or brimstone, 25,885 tons of pyrites, 190,960 tons of nitrate of soda, 29,002,008 pounds of glycerin, and 447,437,676 pounds of acids—sulphuric, nitric, and mixed—including 295,437,398 pounds produced and consumed in the same establishments. The manufacturers also reported the production and consumption of 61,280,242 pounds of nitroglycerin, 3,616,895 pounds of cellulose nitrates, and 29,891,837 pounds of nitrate ammonia and other materials.

CHARACTER AND VALUE OF PRODUCTS.

The explosives manufactured for sale amounted to 482,003,100 pounds, valued at $39,656,310, as compared with 487,481,252 pounds valued at $37,983,868, in 1909. The quantity of the output thus decreased by 1.1 per cent, while the value increased by 4.4 per cent.

The decrease in amount of explosives manufactured is due to the decreased production of nitroglycerin, which is used largely for torpedoing oil wells. The output of nitroglycerin dropped from 28,913,253 pounds, valued at $3,162 434, in 1909 to 3,560.581 pounds, valued at $866,120, in 1914, the decrease being 87.7 per cent in quantity and 72.6 per cent in value.

The production of dynamite increased from 195,155,851 pounds in 1909 to 223,000,073 pounds in 1914, or by 14.3 per cent; while the value increased from $18,699,746 to $20,560,501, or by 10 per cent.

"PERMISSIBLE" EXPLOSIVES.

The output of "permissible" explosives—that is, explosives for use in mines, which conform to the regulations of the United States Bureau of Mines in not igniting inflammable gases or evolving permanent poisonous gases—increased from 9,607,448 pounds, valued at $863,209, to 18,113,601 pounds, valued at $1,604,072, or by 88.5 per cent in quantity and 85.8 per cent in value.

Blasting powder shows a decrease from 233,477,175 pounds, valued at $9,608,265, to 208,316,125 pounds, valued at $8,536,756, amounting to 10.8 per cent in quality and 11.2 per cent in value.

PRDOUCTION OF SMOKELESS POWDER AND GUNCOTTON.

While the production of gunpowder decreased by 5,177,664 pounds in quality and $758,972 in value, or by 10.2 and 43.7 per cent, respectively, the production of smokeless powder almost doubled, but the figures for it can not be shown separately without disclosing the operations of individual establishments. The output of this product, therefore, is combined with that of guncotton, or pyroxlin, and the total included in "other explosives."

The production of smokeless powder, guncotton or pyroxylin, and "other explosives" increased from 9,155,223 pounds to 26,400,071 pounds, or by 188.4 per cent. This amount includes the production of establishments operated by the Federal Government. The output of this class of explosives by commercial establishments increased from 7,464,825 pounds, valued at $3,913,787, in 1909, to 21,327,684 pounds, valued at $7,111,406, in 1914, the quantity increasing by 185.7 per cent and the value by 81.7 per cent.

LOCATION OF ESTABLISHMENTS.

Of the 111 establishments in operation in 1914, 33 were in Pennsylvania, 11 in Ohio, 9 in Illinois, 8 in New Jersey, 7 in West Virginia, 6 in Oklahoma, 5 in California, 4 in Missouri, 3 in Kansas, 3 in New York, 2 each in Alabama, Colorado, Indiana, Massachusetts, Tennessee, Washington, and Wisconsin, and 1 each in Arkansas, Delaware, Iowa, Kentuckey, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, and Texas.

WOMEN TO ORGANIZE.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—At a meeting of women employed at stenographers, office workers and bookkeepers it was decided to organize and ask the American Federation of Labor for a charter. Low wages is one of the principal complaints of these workers.

"REPUBLICAN SUCCESS ASSURED"--BOURNE

National Situation is Analyzed by Bureau Head.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Republican Publicity Association, through its president, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., today gave out the following statement at its Washington headquarters:

"Political dopesters all unite in saying that '1916 is another 1888;' meaning, of course, that again a Republican is to replace a Democrat in the White House and that Republican is to be named at Chicago in a convention where a dozen worthy men will contend honorably for the great prize.

"It is clear that one must go back to 1888 for any adequate parallel to present-day conditions. In 1892 a Republican president sought renomination. In 1896, 1904 and 1908 the nomination was determined long before the convention met. In 1912 there were conditions which can never again exist. Therefore it is to 1888 that Republican soothsayers must turn in constructing their horoscopes for 1916; and the parallel will be found to be most curiously exact. The field of candidates is about the same—one dominant and dominating Democrat in the White House, and a dozen vigorous and worthy contestants on the Republican side. From them, as in 1888, the Chicago convention will choose a leader to take the Republican message to the people.

"How will that message be received? Let 1888 answer that question, too.

"Benjamin Harrison carried twenty states and won the presidency. Those states are: California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin. In the electoral college of 1916 these states will have 286 votes, while a majority of the college is only 266.

"In 1888 Harrison failed to win in Connecticut, New Jersey and West Virginia. These states in 1916 will cast 29 electoral votes.

"Since 1888 the territories of Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming have been erected into states; and they will cast 45 electoral votes in 1916.

"The foregoing states have a total of 360 electoral votes, or 94 more than are necessary for an election.

"No reasoning Democrat makes any claim that Wilson can this year carry New York, Illinois. Indiana or Ohio. Few Democrats of any kind claim that Wilson can carry New Jersey. It remains to be seen, then, where, in the above list of states the Republicans are in any danger of losing and what those losses will amount to.

"In California it may be that the Hiram Johnson party will again run wild and thus give the state to Wilson. California has 13 electoral votes.

"Colorado has gone Republican only once since 1888. That state has six votes.

"Nevada, with three votes, has been Republican only once since 1888.

"Nebraska has twice voted for Bryan—but that is no sign that she will now vote for Wilson.

"Idaho has shown a divided allegiance since she became a state. So, too, have Montana and Wyoming. While Oklahoma and New Mexico have given their electoral votes to the Democrats.

"For the sake of argument we may assume that all these states will go for Wilson. In that case we must subtract 54 votes from the total 360 of Republican probabilities. There would still be left 306 reasonably certain Republican votes in the electoral college—or a majority of 31.

"Moreover, the chances are more than even that Missouri's 18 votes will be found in the Republican column; and there is more than a fighting chance of carrying Kentucky and Maryland against Wilson. Oklahoma, too, is debatable ground—and in no one of the states which have here been classed as probably Democratic can it be said that the Republican cause is without hope.

"In short, the political dope-sheet for 1916 is overwhelmingly Republican."

DODGE CITY CHARTER MANDATE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 26.—Trade unionists are demanding that city officials comply with the new municipal charter mandate that all city employees shall receive the "prevailing rate of wages." Organized workers feared favoring inserting "union scale of wages," because of possible court annullment, but during the campaign the intent of the "prevailing rate of wages" provision was thoroughly understood by citizens. The legislative committee of the Central Trades and Labor Union is now urging city officials to appropriate money sufficient to comply with the law, but the plan is given little support. The committee reports to the central body:

"Statements have been made by the city officials that the increases demanded by organized labor will increase the city pay-roll between 15 and 20 per cent, or approximately $100,000, and that an increase of 2 cents may be necessary in the tax rate to meet this advance. In this connection we wish to note that these officials did not show any conscientious scruples in accepting the handsome increases in salaries given them by the new city charter."

HOW COLORADO LAW WORKS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—At the last session of the Colorado legislature the state industrial commission was created. One section of this law provides that employers and employes shall give at least 30 days' notice before making any change in working conditions. The law further provides that in case the industrial commission is investigating a question of this character, and an employer forces a lockout or the employes a strike, the party or parties are guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to a fine of not more than $100.

Under this act strikes are illegal until the commission makes its award.

Writing in the Tailor, official magazine of the Journeymen Tailors' union Organizer Biggs, located in Denver, expresses this opinion of the act:

"If the negroes of Tennessee should ask for better wages or conditions at the beginning of the cotton picking season, and were restrained from enforcing their demands, and were compelled to continue working until the season was over and the cotton picked and were then given a hearing on the reasonableness of their demand, they would be in much the same position as are the journeymen tailors of Denver, Colo. But, fortunately for the negroes of Tennessee, they have more freedom to right their wrongs than have the journeymen tailors of Denver."

MINERS DEMAND INCREASE.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 26.—At the convention of Ohio miners it was agreed to demand a 10 per cent advance on machine and pick mining and a uniform inside and outside wage scale with a proportionate increase in the rate. It was decided to insist on the run-of-mine basis, which means that coal must be weighed before it is screened. The miners secured the passage of the Green anti-screen law, but this was practically invalidated by the next legislature when it passed the Gallagher bill. These workers, however, have enforced the run-of-mine basis through their local unions.

To prevent discrimination the convention declared that when men are employed they shall be accepted in the order they apply for work.

UNEMPLOYMENT LAW ILLEGAL.

BOISE, Idaho, Jan. 26.—The state supreme court has declared the unemployment law unconstitutional. This law was passed by the last state legislature and provided that county commissioners, when requested, should furnish employment to any one out of work. The commissioners of this county were defendants in the suit. They pleaded that there were no funds available for the employment of laborers, that the county has no work, and that efficient work requires tools, machinery and supplies. Supporters of the law insisted that the commissioners should devise ways to carry out the plain intent of the law.

The act was the first of its kind passed by any state.

SATURADY VERDICT LEGAL.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 26.—The state supreme court has refused to review the findings of a Cincinnati jury, which awarded a woman a verdict for $500 against W. H. Pugh on a note. Attorneys for Pugh raised the question that the jury might have hastily agreed on a verdict in order to get away and enjoy the Saturday half holiday, which is legal in this state.

The supreme court declined to be a party to this original attempt to thwart justice.

PROTECTION EXTENDED.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 26.—The court of appeals has upheld the extra territorial phase of the workmen's compensation law. This means that a workman employed by a New York state concern is entitled to compensation under the laws of this state for injuries received while temporarily working in another state.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

AN APALLING LACK IN EVERYDAY LIFE

GREAT NEED OF AN AWAKENING ON THE SUBJECT OF JUSTICE

Neglect of the Principle of Justice Very Manifest in Christendom Today — God's People Should Cultivate this Principle Carefully — Their Responsibility Great — Justice the Foundation of Character — Love the Superstructure.

FORT WAYNE, IND., Jan. 23.—Pastor Russell delivered a very impressive discourse here today. His text was, "Awake to righteousness and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame." (1 Corinthians 15:34.) He said in part:

This exhortation is not addressed to the world of sinners, but to Christians, as are all of the Apostolic writings. If we were to translate the text a little differently, it might better give the Apostle's thought. For instance, "Awake to a proper appreciation of justice. Do not sin against justice in your lives; for some have not a knowledge of God respecting justice, the principles of righteousness. And this is to your shame."

We who are in the School of Christ recognize that the Lord is teaching us and is preparing us for a great work in the future. The work of the Church during the incoming Age is, according to the Bible, to be kings, priests and judges, to be God's representatives in the Messianic Kingdom. As kings, they will be sharers with our Lord Jesus in the ruling of the world. As priests, they share in the work of healing, instructing and sympathizing with the world. As judges, they will administer justice, will give stripes or rewards to mankind, during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign. Manifestly, therefore, it is proper that whoever hopes to be of these kings, priests and judges should now attain the qualifications of heart and mind which will make him competent for the work; for we may be very sure that God will not appoint any who are not properly qualified.

It is for this reason that God has been calling His Church out from the world during the last nineteen hundred years, and has been giving us the glorious instructions of our Lord Jesus and the Apostles and of the Law and the Prophets. All these things have been for our upbuilding in those qualities of heart and mind which will fit us for the great service to which God has called us.

But God is not testing His children according to their imperfect bodies; for He knows that we cannot do the things which we would. He is dealing with our spirits, our minds. Through the transforming influences of His Word, He is giving us a new mind; and it is this new mind which He receives into His family. This becomes the New Creature. (Romans 12:1, 2; 2 Corinthians 5:17.) We accept a new will, the will of God, instead of our own wills, and the Divine arrangements instead of our own plans and purposes. Thus God is dealing with us as His children, according to this new relationship into which we have come by faith and obedience; and through Christ our Lord we are reckoned perfect in God's sight.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD'S WILL.

But how can we be perfect in will when our bodies are imperfect? We answer, as did the Apostle, "To will is present with me, but how to perform I find not." (Romans 7:18.) He did not always succeed in carrying out his will for righteousness. So it is with every one who seeks to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. We all know how to WILL right, but how to DO right is the problem.

Gradually we learn that God will not judge us according to the imperfections of our flesh; for so long as we remain faithful, these blemishes are covered with the robe of Christ's imputed righteousness. Therefore we do our best to show our Heavenly Father that we are trying hard to do right in every act, word and thought. And since He expects every member of His family to have a perfect will, it becomes a personal question as to what is the will of God for us. So we seek diligently to prove "what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

To prove what is God's will means to come to a knowledge of His will, to demonstrate it for ourselves. If we are faithful, we are progressing in this more and more as the days go by. At first we had a little knowledge, and this we put into practice. As we grew in grace and in knowledge, we became better acquainted with the will of God; and it was for us to put this increased knowledge into practice also. This knowledge of the will of God we obtained, not in any supernatural way, but through the study of the Bible.

Whoever has come into the family of God has given up his own will and accepted instead God's will. Whoever has not given up his own will to the Lord is not His child. As the Apostle declares, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." (Romans 8:9.) The spirit of Christ was the spirit of full surrender to the Father's will; and as we come to this same condition, we give up our own wills and take instead the Divine will. This we do because it is the proper course for all who desire to follow in our Redeemer's steps, and because our own wills have proved to be unsatisfactory to ourselves. Our minds and our bodies are so imperfect that we have frequently gotten into difficulty through doing our own will. Therefore we are glad to know and to do the will of God, especially since we see that it is so gracious a will.

During the present time it is the will of God that His children shall have trials, difficulties and polishings, in order that these experiences may develop in us a God-likeness of character, a crystalization of character, that will render us fit to be used of God in the great work which He has appointed to the Lord Jesus, that we might thus become joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord in that Heavenly Kingdom which is designed of the Father for the blessing of all the families of the earth.

JUSTICE FIRST, THEN LOVE.

Sometimes Christian people see the doctrine of love in the Bible, and forget that there is a lesson which precedes love. This primary lesson is the one to which we draw your attention today. It is the lesson of justice—righteousness. Our text really signifies, "Awake to justice!" We must all learn to distinguish right from wrong and to practice what is just, right. Justice is righteousness.

The Law of God was given to the Israelites at Mount Sinai to show what justice means. They were not asked to do anything more than justice. "Thou shalt not kill," said the Law; for to take another's life is wrong, except when God's own Law demands it. "Thou shalt not steal." To do so is wrong, unjust. "Thou shalt not bear false witness." To do so would be an injustice.

Thus we see that the Law of God given to the children of Israel amounted to this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul, mind and strength; and thy neighbor as thyself." To do justice to your neighbor as you wish that neighbor to do justice to you is the essence of the Law of God given to the Jews for their treatment of others.

Did God give this same Law to the Church? Yes; so far as the spirit of the Law is concerned. God's Law is over all of His creatures. But during the Law Dispensation there was a special Law Covenant which God had made with Natural Israel. No others have ever been under that Law Covenant. The Jew who could keep that Law perfectly could live forever; and, having everlasting life at his command, he might have the opportunity of becoming a part of that great antitypical Spiritual Israel which was to bless all the families of the earth. This our Lord Jesus did. Moreover, in His statement of the Divine Law to Spiritual Israel, He "has magnified the Law and made it honorable," by showing how far-reaching and comprehensive are its requirements.

No intelligent person will question the propriety of dealing justly with every one in the world. This subject has many ramifications in all the affairs of our daily life. The principle of justice enters into every transaction, even the most trivial. It applies not only to our dealings with the world at large, but with every member of our own family. The principle of justice must be recognized with our own as well as with others. If all might get this thought of the Golden Rule firmly fixed in the mind, if each one could awake to righteousness, to justice, the whole world would be revolutionized.

PRACTICAL APPLICATION OF JUSTICE.

If this principle of justice were recognized and followed, men would not be shooting one another today over in Europe. On the contrary, they would be doing something better, something good one toward another, just as they would wish others to do toward them. But men are not living up to this standard of righteousness, of justice. It is entirely ignored by governments and by individuals. The general excuse for violating the Golden Rule is, "It would never do for us to grant to others what we would expect for ourselves; for others would take advantage of us; they would not do their part; they would not reciprocate." Say the British, "It would not do for us to practice the Golden Rule toward the Germans; for we do not know what they would do to us." The Germans advance the same kind of argument.

This course of conduct is not the fear of God, but the fear of man; it ignores the fear of God. God says that if Christians are afraid of men and of nations and of what these may do, we are carnal, are living according to the flesh, are like the unbelieving world. How shall we who have come into relationship with God through the Lord Jesus Christ, we who have given our lives to Him, do under such circumstances? Shall we say that we fear to trust this principle of justice in our lives, that we do not dare to carry it out in every word, thought and act? Are we afraid to trust God and to obey Him?

God did not say that we were to observe the Golden Rule whenever others observed it toward us, and to ignore it whenever others failed to observe it toward us. On the contrary, we are to practice it on every occasion, regardless of what others do. Then we shall know that all things shall work together for good toward us, because we shall be in line with God and His arrangements. He has power to overrule in all of life's affairs. The very least that we must do is to give justice to one another; and to do so will mean a great blessing to our own characters.

Whoever is violating the principle of justice, the Golden Rule, in his home or in the Church of Christ or in business or social relations should, if he is a Christian, examine the matter earnestly and prayerfully, and "awake to righteousness (justice), and sin not." Thus to do violence to justice is sin; and so far as our knowledge goes, it is a sin that prevails everywhere. Many have not a proper appreciation of this fact. They do not see that justice is the very foundation of all character, of all right living. It is the foundation of the Throne of God. (Psalm 89:14.) In vain does any one practice love to his fellow creatures or even toward God while he is at the same time violating the principle of justice toward that one. Only after we have rendered justice are we at liberty to practice love toward another. Then we may do as much as we are able along the line of love. Justice first, love afterwards.

RESPONSIBILITY OF GOD'S PEOPLE.

Those who are children of God are expecting shortly to be made the judges of the world. As the Apostle says, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Corinthians 6:2, 3.) Moreover, God is seeking now to develop in our hearts and lives, in our characters, those principles which He desires. Therefore, unless we are just in our very hearts, unless we appreciate this principle of justice and rejoice to practice it, we shall not be fit for the Kingdom. We should not be unjust even to an animal. Every creature has its rights; and we should give each creature the rights which belong to it. The results are with God. Thus doing, shall we not be preparing our minds, our hearts, for the glorious condition which the Lord has in store for His faithful children?

We are not to think that the Kingdom of God is to be given on the basis of mercy or favor. There will be neither mercy nor favor in connection with the bestowal of the Heavenly reward. God shows mercy in connection with our sins and the weaknesses against which we are striving; but He will not allow in that Kngdom one individual whose character is not suitable. Those whom He approves for joint-heirs and rulers with our Lord Jesus must represent the principles of righteousness and must know how to apply those principles now. Whoever is not disposed to justice to such an extent as to be willing to suffer loss rather than do an injustice will not have a share in the Kingdom.

The Bible everywhere pictures God as the great Representative of Justice. If we receive a place in the Kingdom, it will b apportioned us on the basis of works, on the basis of our growth in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Lord Jesus. If we have been justified by faith in Jesus' blood, if we then have made a covenant with God and have been begotten of His Holy Spirit, He wishes to see us go on to perfection as New Creatures. We are not to think that our Heavenly Father is uninterested in us, and that He will coldly and indifferently judge us. On the contrary, we are to remember our Lord's assurance, "The Father Himself loveth you."—John 14:21.

SOME DEARER THAN OTHERS

This is a very beautiful text—"The Father Himself loveth you." This is not said of the world. We know that God has a love for the world—"God so loved the world that He gave His Only-Begotten Son" to die for them. But our Lord is here declaring God's love for the Church, who are as dear to Him as "the apple of His eye." (Zechariah 2:8.) Just as we protect our eye lest anything should hurt it, so Jesus and His Church are very, very precious to their Heavenly Father.

From the very moment that God accepts any as His child and begets that one with His Holy Spirit, from that moment He especially loves him. He has appointed our Lord Jesus, our Redeemer, to be our Elder Brother, to take charge of us as the sons of God. He is the Head over this House of Sons, as St. Paul points out. (Hebrews 3:5, 6.) The Father loves us in much the same way that an earthly parent loves his children, and for the same reason. Yet as an earthly father may find a difference in the degree of his love toward his several children, so with God. Some are very dear children, because they are very dutiful, very obedient. So in proportion as we are zealous to do our Father's will, we have more of His love.

While the Father loves the spiritual babe, yet He does not expect as much of the babe as of the grown child. As we develop, therefore, the Father's love increases. He wishes to see us so earnest that we will seek to know what things are written in His Book, and that we will develop a character like His own. Jesus said, "Be ye like unto your Father in Heaven." This is possible; for Jesus has a character like the Father's, and we are to become like that dear Son.

In conclusion, let us remember that if we are true, loyal children of God, all our blemishes are covered by the robe of Christ's righteousness; and if we are doing with our might what our hands find to do in this great matter of justice, dealing with all along the lines of the Golden Rule, we are showing the Father that we appreciate this principle as the foundation of His Government. Upon this sure foundation we shall build a superstructure of love. Thus shall we be blessed and made ready for the Kingdom.

LUTHER'S PERSONALE.

Judging from the great achievements of the reformers during the life of Luther, and the fact that he was the leading spirit of the group, he must have been a remarkable man. "In no other instance have such great events depended upon the courage, sagacity and energy of a single man, who, by his sole and unassisted efforts, made his solitary cell the heart and center of the most wonderful and important commotion the world ever witnessed." He must have had an amazingly strong faith to risk the dangers and endure the poverty which was his lot. Melanchthon, who knew him personally and worked with him, said of him: "He is too great, too wonderful, for me to describe. Whatever he writes, whatever he utters, goes to the soul and fixes itself like arrows in the heart. He is a miracle among men." The following quotation will give an insight into the human side of this remarkable character and indicate that he was a very versatile man.

"There was probably never created a more powerful human being, a more gigantic, full-proportioned MAN, in the highest sense of the term. All that belongs to human nature, all that goes to constitute a MAN, had a strongly-marked development in him. He was a model man, one that might be shown to other beings in other parts of the universe as a specimen of collective manhood in its maturest growth."—Dr. C. E. Stowe.

"I know of few things more touching, than those soft breathings of affection, soft as a child's or a mother's, in this great, wild heart of Luther's . . . I will call this Luther a true Great Man; great in intellect, in courage, affection, and integrity; one of our most lovable and precious men. Great not as a hewn obelisk, but as an Alpine mountain, so simple, honest, spontaneous; not setting up to be great at all; there for quite another purpose than being great. Ah, yes, unsubduable granite, piercing far and wide into the heavens; yet, in the clefts of it, fountains, green beautiful valleys with flowers. A right Spiritual Hero and Prophet; once, a true Son of Nature and Fact, for whom these centuries, and many that are yet to come, will be thankful to Heaven."—Carlyle.

"Luther's quality of mind, heart and attainment were transcendent. Though naturally meek and diffident, when it came to duty and conviction he was courageous, self-sacrificing and brave." . . . "Honest naturalness, grand simplicity, and an unpretentous majesty of character breathed all about him. An indwelling vehemency, a powerful will, and a firm confidence could readily be seen, but calm and mellowed with generous kindness, without a trace of selfishness or vanity. He was jovial, free-spoken, open, easily approached, and at home with all classes. . . . In society and in his home he was genial, playful, instructive, and often brilliant. His Table-Talk collected by his friends, is one of the most original and remarkable productions. He loved children and young people, and brought up several in his house besides his own. He had an inexhaustible flow of ready wit and good humor, prepared for everybody on all occasions. He was specially fond of music, and cultivated it to a high degree . . . 'I have no pleasure in any man,' he said, 'who despises music. It is no invention of ours; it is a gift of God. I place it next to theology.' . . . But if he was rough betimes, he could be as gentle and tender as a maiden, and true to himself in both . . . Feared by the mighty of the earth . . . the children loved him, and his great heart was as playful among them as one of themselves. If he was harsh and unsparing upon hypocrites, malignants and fools, he called things by their right names, and still was as loving as he was brave."—Rev. Joseph A. Seiss.

"The personal appearance of this extraordinary man," continues Seiss, "is but poorly given in the painted portraits of him. Written descriptions inform us that he was of medium size, handsomely proportioned, and somewhat darkly complected. His arched brows, high cheek-bones, and powerful jaws and chin gave to his face an outline of ruggedness; but his feature were regular, and softened all over with benevolence and every refined feeling. He had remarkable eyes, large, full, deep, dark, and brilliant, with a sort of amber circles around the pupil, which made them seem to emit fire when under excitement. His hair was dark and waving, but became entirely white in his later years. His mouth was elegantly formed, expressive of determination, tenderness, affection and humor. His countenance was elevating, open, brave and unflinching. His neck was short and strong and his breast broad and full."

This statement of Rev. Seiss regarding the refined features of Luther interwoven with the general rugged contours of his face is but what is to be expected from a man governed by the Spirit of God to the extent that Luther was. Audin, his Catholic biographer, confirms this: "His voice was clear and sonorous, his eyes beaming with fire, his head of the antique cast, his hands beautiful, and his gestures graceful and abounding—at once Rabelais and Fontaine, with the droll humor of the one and the polished elegance of the other."

Luther, in common with Pastor Russell, had a frail body and did not enjoy good health. His appearance did not indicate this. Though compactly built, he was generally spare and wasted. One of his friends says "his body was so reduced by cares and study that one could almost count his bones." He himself makes frequent allusions to his wasted and enfeebled body, but did not attribute it to his work—he rather insisted that the measure of health he enjoyed was derived from his enthusiasm and work. His remarkable vigor and vivacity was, as is with Russell, a case of mind over matter. He was a small eater. Melanchthon says: "I have seen him, when he was in full health, absolutely neither eat nor drink for four days together. At other times I have seen him for many days, content with the slightest allowance, a salt herring and a small hunch of bread per day."

A great deal of what has been said in these descriptions of Luther portrays Russell as well. In fact all Christians should have many things in common. Their special vocation is to develop the character likeness of Christ—"conform to the image of His Son." One thing that all truly great men have is candor, honesty, sincerity; these are the fundamental principles for character development. But there is a difference between character and personality—one is an attainment and the other is a gift. Christians can be measurably alike in character attainments and differ materially in their talents and natural inclinations; the latter is what produces their individuality. Two men may arrive at the same conclusion but by different methods, due to their inherent peculiarities. Luther excels Russell in some respects and the reverse also applies. Luther as an orator and writer surpasses Russell.

The man from Long Island may be said to be a very versatile man, but not to the extent of Luther. Our German reformer, like King David and Beecher, was a well balanced man. Prominent people coming in touch with the Brooklyn divine have admitted that he is a remarkable personality. His striking appearance and dignified deportment attracts unusual attention everywhere. I have been in the dining room of a hotel when he entered unannounced and immediately the usual chatter and rattle of dishes stopped. Adaptability is a gift that he has to a marked degree; he is not the same with all for the reason that people call out the qualities they can reciprocate and others are not called into play. ("Love is but the reflection of a man's own worthiness from other men.") He is habitually radiant, cheerful and kind, but can be ironic and sardonic—he will rebuke those who deserve it anywhere. I have seen people in his presence lifted to a state of ecstasy and delight quite foreign to their natures, and others so embarrassed that they could not speak. Some quake and tremble in his presence and he does not know it, and others feel perfectly at ease. I have talked with people that said they could not stand his heavy hand of discipline in the old "Bible House" who left to return later and fall into line in the interest of the cause. He has been branded an egotist yet he is naturally meek and diffident and feels uncomfortable in the public gaze; he has the proper estimates of his abilities and achievements and does not shun to declare them; remember they also branded Luther an egotist for taking issue with the accepted schools. He will condescend to men of low estate and make them feel at home and will match wits with the best of the clever and cultured. His humor does not consist of memorized jokes but of fine mental distinctions. Luther was a hilarious joker. Beecher could be heard for squares when he broke out on one of his peals of laughter. Russell smiles.

Emerson has said that all denominations "are the lengthened shadow of one man." This is true in a certain sense only. The followers of the Reformers are by no means a reflection of their leaders. Modern Presbyterians are superior to Calvin and Catholics today are better than those of titude of organized labor towards the compulsory military service proposals of the Government. These are now published. The details, which may be altered slightly, are briefly as follows: All single men and childless widowers between 18 and 40 (inclusive on August 15 last) will be regarded as having given their consent to join the army under Lord Derby's scheme for service for the duration of the war. Ministers of religion and men rejected since August 14 are excepted from the measure. Three appeal tribunals will deal with claims for exemption, and exemption will be allowed to men employed in necessary national work; men who are the sole support of dependents; men physically unfit; and those who conscientiously object to combatant service; but in the last case the exemption will be "from combatant militay duty only."

Labor Differs as to Need of Conscription

A large body of opinion in organized labor is opposed to conscription or compulsory military service. How large this body is may be partly determined today (January 6th) when the specially convened Trade Union Congress has finishtd its session. There is no doubt, however, that the clause exempting from the "killing" side of military service those people who have conscientious objections to fighting will swing a considerable portion of anti-conscription feeling round in the Government's favor. "Conscientious objectors" to military service however, will be required to give their services as above indicated in the non-combatant branches of the army which may include such dangerous occupations as mine sweeping and collecting the wounded on the field of battle. Writing these lines as the trade union specially convened congress is proceeding one or two facts for the better understanding of this convention may be mentioned. The assembly is called in fulfillment of a resolution carried at the annual Trade Union Congress held in Bristol last September. At the same time the present convention is not confined to trade unions. There will be delegates from trade councils in various towns and from organizations like the independent Labor Party which, although numerically weak in membership compared with the four million members of trade unions, are yet powerful in orators, thinkers and organization. Furthermore at least one-third of the trade unionists of the country are now serving with the colors, and, therefore, their present views cannot have been ascertained on these proposals. About nine hundred delegates have gathered under the presidency of Harry Gosling, chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress. The Miners' Federation of Great Britain has refused to attend the congress as it has its own special convention meets on this question on January 13th. At the same time although the Miners' Federation is not represented as a body, over 60 delegates will attend specifically from the South Wales Miners' Federation, a constituent body of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, but, of course, having powerful local autonomy. Differences of opinion will manifest themselves at today's congress and so many wide and deep ones have been revealed in the preliminary discussions that it has been thought best that these differences should be fairly thrashed out in public.

Yesterday a number of trade union executives met in London to discuss the Government's proposals. A specially summoned conference of the executive committee of the National Union of Railwaymen was held at Unity House, Euston Road. A. Bellamy presided, and there was a full attendance of the executive including J. H. Thompson, M. P., J. E. Williams, general secretary, and W. Hudson, M. P.

The conference passed a resolution strongly opposing compulsory service. The executive committee of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain met in the Westminster Palace Hotel. Last night Smillie, the president, said the following resolution had been unanimously passed:—

That we endorse the action of the officials of the Federation in sending word to the districts not to be represented at the Labor Conference tomorrow, and that a conference of the districts of the Miners' Federation in Great Britain be called for Thursday, January 13, to consider both tht question of the Government's Compulsory Military Service Bill, and also the attitude of the Federation in regard to future conferences which might be arranged by the Joint Labor Board.

This means that the Federation as a body will not be present at today's conference.

At a special meeting of the executive of the South Wales Miners' Federation held last night at Westminster Palace Hotel, a resolution was adopted expressing regret at the determination of the executive of tht Miners' Federation of Great Britain earlier in the day not to be represented at today's Labor Congress, and while reluctantly abiding by that decision regrets that the special miners' conference fixed for January 13 could not have been held in time to allow of the miners being represtnted today.

The meeting expressed its uncompromising hostility to any action of the Government to enforce compulsory military service, and resolved to convene a conference of the South Wales miners at Cardiff on the 12th, with a view of again protesting against any such action and "to continue to oppose to the fullest extent this interference with the rights of the people.

A deputation of five was received by the Executive of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain yesterday from the National Union of Railwaymen, including A. Bellamy, president, J. E. Williams, secretary, and T. Louth organizing secretary.

Bellamy stated that the railwaymen desired an expression of opinion from the Miners' Federation as to their attitude towards the resolution passed by the Trade Union Congress on the question of industrial unionism.

A friendly exchange of views took place, in which Smillie explained that the federation had not fully considered the question yet. A further meeting will take place, if necessary, at an early date.

The Boilermakers' Society met in London yesterday to consider the Government's proposals. While no official disclosure of policy was made, it is understood that opinion was very much divided, delegates from the north and north-west being strongly in favor of compelling unmarried eligible nonattested men in their respective areas to join the army.

The Gas Workers and General Labors' Union also considered the subject at a special meeting.

The New Year's honors list included two well known labor names, both these gentlemen having been made members of the Privy Council. One man was George N. Barnes, who has represented the Blackfriars Division of Glasgow in the labor interest since 1906, and is well known as a former general secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. As a platform speaker he has rendered good service to the national cause since the outbreak of the war. He is a member of the Government Committee for Soldiers and Sailors' Pensions and Allowances.

The other new Privy Councillor, Will Crooks, Labor Members of Parliament for Woolwich, has become highly popular throughout the country during the war as a result of his assiduous platform campaign on behalf of recruiting. He is in all situations an invincible optimist, and was popular in all parties even before the war.

On January 4th an increase in the minimum rate of wages for tailoresses employed in the wholesale bespoke and ready-made tailoring trade fixed under the Trade Board Act, 1912, came into general operation in Great Brit ain. The new rate is 7 cents an hour, instead of 6½c. as hitherto. Payment of the extra farthing an hour came into limited operation last July, but the Board of Trade will now, as provided by the Act, make the higher rate obligatory on all concerned. In addition to the wholesale trade the retail bespoke tailoring trade now comes within the scope of the Trade Boards Act, and the minimum rates for this section, which also came into general operation, are the same as for the wholesale trade. Tailoresses in Ireland are also to benefit, for the minimum rate in that part of the kingdom is to be increased from 6 cents to 6½ cents an hour.

Appreciations.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22.

As one who in times past has secured for you upwards of 300 subscribers amongst the Truth people, I presume to make reply to a letter by "Albert Dripps" which appeared in your issue of January 6th, the writer of which is unknown to me, and, so far as I can learn, unknown also amongst the members of the Pittsburgh ecclesia.

The referred to letter makes an unwarranted attack upon Wm. L. Abbott, of the Enterprise, who personally is well and most favorably known to me, has been entertained in my home, and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

I agree with Albert Dripps that the Labor Tribune has nobly stood by the Truth people and their interests; has most commendably presented in its columns the sermons and other religious features from the pen of the world-renowned Pastor Russell, and is worthy the patronage of all supporters of the doctrine he advocates in his relentless efforts to espouse the cause of Christ. But I must refute every charge he makes against the editor of the Enterprise as positively untrue. He admits having no evidence, but bases his conclusions upon hearsay and surmise, a thing not tolerated in even the worldly courts, much less shall a Christian do so. Such a letter tends to hurt the Labor Tribune amongst our people, who, first of all, regard justice and fairness as essential to a Christian life, and "Justice is the foundation of God's Throne." Real Truth people do not indulge in an attack upon individuals, a fact that this man Dripps needs to learn if he would forward the Truth interests and the interests of the Labor Tribune.

Wishing you continued success, I am yours, in the service of the Lord,

Ever faithfully,
J. A. BOHNET.

Kindly discontinue sending me the National Labor Tribune as I am unable to renew the subscription. It was sent to me the past year by a friend, which I appreciate. I enjoyed Pastor Russell's sermons especially. Thanking you kindly, I am STILL THEY COME.

The Tribune is in receipt of $2 from Mrs. M. DeMuth, of Highland Park, Ill., to pay the subscriptions of two friends of the Truth who are unable to pay for the paper for 1916. We have added two to our list, and we have no doubt two hearts will be made glad by the recipient of the favor of our sister. There are others who could emulate the example of this friend of the Tribune and a builder-up in the faith of the Truth.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. Who will start the ball rolling?

ST. PETER'S SERMON ON PENTECOST

Acts 3.—Jan. 30.

National Sin of Killing Jesus Pointed Out—God's Mercy and Willingness to Forgive—Immediate Repentance In Order to Get the Chiefest Blessing. Afterward "Times of Restitution." Church Officials Offended Because People Were Taught the Truth.

*"Times of Refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; * * * Times of Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy Prophets since the world began."—Verses 19-21.*

IN receiving the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, the Apostles received not a spirit of fear, but of courage and of a sound mind. Full of this courage St. Peter and St. John, leaders amongst them, went up to the Temple to pray, probably expecting that the Lord would there bring them into contact with the most devout Jews, thus giving them an opportunity of testifying the Gospel to this class. There they beheld a poor, lame beggar. Perceiving him to be a man of faith in God, St. Peter spoke to him. The man looked up, expecting to get money. But St. Peter said, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I unto thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise and walk."

The Lame Man Healed.

Astonished at such an offer of blessing, the man endeavored to obey. St. Peter took his hand, thus assisting him in the exercise of faith. God's blessing attended. His feet and ankle bones became strong; and he accompanied the Apostles through the Temple, shouting praises to God and acknowledging that Divine mercy had come to him through them.

A Notable Restitution Sermon.

A concourse of holy Jews immediately gathered about. Now came St. Peter's opportunity for a great witness to the Lord. In meekness and humility he said, "Why look so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man walk?" He then declared that this miracle was a manifestation of God's mercy through Jesus; that it was done in the name of Jesus, the Redeemer, who had died for the sins of the world. Then he proceeded to tell his hearers that the nation had wickedly crucified the Savior. But he also assured them of Divine mercy, and declared that they might still repent and return to God's favor, but only by renouncing their relationship with those who had done this evil and by taking their stand for the Lord.

Very briefly and comprehensively the Apostle stated the Divine Plan as a reason why his hearers should consecrate themselves to God. They should repent of sins personal and national, should be converted, turned around, to know and obey the Lord, to be followers of Jesus, whom they had crucified. The result of this course would be the covering of their sins by the Lord, permitting them to be accepted through Jesus as children of God; and ultimately their sins would be blotted out completely with the glorious change of the First Resurrection.

Following this blotting out of their sins and the giving to them the new bodies, free from sin and blemish, would come the Times of Restitution, foretold by all the holy Prophets. These would be Times, or years, of Refreshing, as well as Restitution—a thousand years. Therein would be fulfilled all God's promises to Abraham and to all the Prophets and to Israel—that in Messiah's glorious Kingdom the earth would be brought to Edenic conditions. (Isaiah 60:13; 66:1.) Restitution is the Bible Message. All things will be made new by Messiah's Kingdom, although it will require 1,000 years to accomplish this.—Rev. 21:3-5.

The Great Antitypical Moses.

St. Peter showed that Moses had foretold the calling out of a special Messianic class. (Deuteronomy 18:17-19.) Jesus is the Head of this class, and the Church is the Body. Moses was a type of this great Christ, and said to the fathers, "A [greater] Prophet [than I] shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren." God raised up Jesus first. Since Pentecost He has been raising up brethren of Jesus—the Apostles first, then all the saintly characters of these past eighteen centuries, called according to God's Purpose to be the members of the Body of Christ, otherwise styled the Bride. The full raising up of these will not be accomplished until the resurrection of the Church is completed.

Preaching Restitution.

When this great Antitype of Moses shall have been lifted up, then will come the time for the blessing of the world. During the Millennium, whoever will hear that great Prophet may come into a great blessing of perfection, of restitution—mentally, morally and physically—and thus to everlasting life. But whoever rejects that Prophet, the glorified Christ, will be destroyed—not preserved in torment.

The Apostle explains that God's blessing would begin with Israel, Abraham's children. Then the door of opportunity will open to the Gentiles. As soon as the foreordained number of the Elect are glorified, the Restitution work will begin.

APPRECIATIONS.

Graham, Va., Jan. 23.

I am yet an appreciative subscriber to the National Labor Tribune and look forward each week for its coming. For the first place because of its having in full our dear Pastor Russell's wonderful sermons; also other religious features of like nature.

There is evidence, too, each week in the columns of this great workingmen's paper that Labor is not satisfied with present conditions but longs to see better days, when man's inhumanity to man will not make so many mourn. We, the Bible students, who have been enlightened and encouraged by the Lord through an understanding of His word, as substnatially upheld and elaborated in "Studies in the Scriptures," (otherwise known as "Millennial Dawn") are also laborers and have no affiliation with any clan or condition that is against labor; yet we are for the Lord and His ways for He alone can save us.

So we say to brethren and many friends who read the Tribune: let us be "standpatters" for righteousness and freedom, remembering the preparedness of ourselves is what God wishes for us. We, most of us, like Gideon are poor and many of us "least" in our Father's house, but our Lord, who is our "might," has said to us as to Gideon, "Surely I will be with thee."

I wish to use this opportunity to state that I enjoy reading your paper, especially Pastor Russell's sermons, and think you deserve great credit for the fine, readable manner in which they are printed.

My papa wants me to ask you to please discontinue the paper. It was sent through the kindness of a friend. Papa is an old minister, and an old soldier, and is sick, and in poor circumstances and not able to take it. We appreciate it and enjoyed it. Please stop the paper.

Respectfully,

Santa Ana, Cal., Jan. 12.

I wish to express my appreciation of the Tribune, for the space it devotes to Pastor Russell's sermons, and so many other articles in behalf of the Truth.

I have been taking the Tribune over two years, and I feel that it is my duty to continue to do so as long as you publish our pastor's sermons in such an excellent manner.

I do not know of any other paper that uses such nice large type for the sermons or as good quality of paper, making them easy to read, for both old and young.

I am sorry to note that so many of the friends have been obliged to discontinue their subscription of late.

Sincerely yours.
W. L. EVANS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22.

As being a constant reader of your paper since Pastor Russell's sermons were first printed therein, it is truly with sorrow to see so many who have to give up receiving the same on account of financial conditions. Yet we hope others do not lose sight of why the sermons were given to the public press, to go out beyond self, where there is a spiritual famine in the land. Yet to the ones who are really handicapped I would like to state to them the following verses through your kindness:

The camel, at the close of day,
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off and rest to gain.

My soul, thou, too, should to thy knees
When daylight draweth to a close,
And let the Master lift the load and grant repose.

Else how couldst thou tomorrow meet with all tomorrow's work to do,
If thou thy burden all the night didst carry through?

The camel kneels at break of day
To have his guide replace his load
Then rises up anew to take the desert road.

So thou shouldst kneel at morning's dawn
That God may give the daily care,
Assured that He no load too great will make thee bear.

Respectfully yours,
ROBERT J. CRAIG.

You will find enclosed 56 cents in stamps to cover price cost of the American Whitaker Almanac, and we, me, my wife, and daughter Clara, have for some time back wanted to write expressing our appreciation for your stand as a hero in giving so much space to Pastor Russell's sermons and Sunday school lessons and the series of essays on "Theology Achievents" by N. E. Nelson.

We do appreciate the change in printing as it is so easy to read. We look with joy for it when we see it come. Every thinking laboring man should appreciate and patronize the Labor Tribune because it stands not one whit behind in setting forth the non-kept promises of presidential candidates. My prayer is: May the dear Lord please you as in days gone by.

I will send in one more subscription for myself through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, as I love to have one to give away and will send in the money for that 81 year old friend, G. Houchins, Huntington, W. Va. You kindly continue sending it. We love to read the testimonials of the friends. You may put this in your most valuable paper and you may depend on our support in spreading the glad tidings of great joy through the columns of your much loved paper.

Wishing a happy New Year and unfailing prosperity, we remain,

Sincerely yours,
MR., MRS., and daughter CLARA HAUSER.

Luther's day. But Lutherans are inferior to the great German reformer—they have retrograded from his teachings and example. That the spirit of Luther is dead in the professed followers is indicated by the fact that they refuse to go beyond the teachings of their founder and join hands with other sects to persecute others that attempt to push a little further north in Bible study. To those of Luther's followers, and others that honor his name and work, who have joined hands to besmear the character and misrepresent the teachings of the last of God's standard bearers—Pastor Russell—we present the words of Luther respecting his enemies: "They have already torn to pieces my honor and my good name. All I have left is my wretched body; let them have it; they will then shorten my life but a few hours." And in reply to enemies of Russell who point to methods of advertising himself in connection with his lectures and brand him as an egotist in taking issue with the accepted schools, we remind them of another statement of Luther: "Who does not know that one can seldom advance a new idea without having some appearance of pride, and without being accused of exciting quarrels? Why were Christ and all the martyrs put to death?—Because they appeared proud despisers of the wisdom of the times in which they lived, and because they brought forward new truths without having first consulted the oracles of the old opinions."

Union Congress Votes Against Conscription

Alleged that Body Did Not Represent Organized Labor.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, January 22.—The special labor congress summoned in London to discuss the government's compulsory military service bill on January 6th gave a big vote against compulsion, the balloting being actually 783,000 for the government measure and 1,998,000 against. The proceedings were very lively and the real fear in the minds of the delegates seemed to have been that compulsory military service would lead to compulsory industrial service. This jarred some.

Chairman Bellamy of the British National Union of Railway men declared afterwards to me that he had never attended any national labor convention that was more generally representative than was this special Trade Union Congress. With the exception of the miners, he declared that every industry in the country was represented at the congress. He defended the congress against charges of misrepresentation of the views of labor and declared that taking away the whole of the vote of the Independent Labor Party at the congress and also the whole of the votes of the trades councils and local labor parties, leaving thus only the purely trade union vote, there would still be a big majority for the anti-compulsory service resolution.

Secretary Naylor, of the London Society of Compositors, may be quoted as declaring, on the other side that this special particular congress was largely unrepresentative of organized labor. It is difficult to convey his reasons briefly but the soundness of many of them cannot be disputed. The congress was emphatically not a trade union congress pure and simple. It was a mixed convention called together in a hurry to consider a resolution which was badly drafted and which endeavored to hit the happy mean between the pro-compulsionists and the anti-compulsionists and fell to the ground between the two, leaving the field open for an anti-compulsion amendment which thereupon swept the board and became the resolution of the congress. It has to be borne in mind that there are easily more than a million trade unionists in the army now and none of their views were obtained prior to the voting of the congress. Furthermore, there were plenty of delegates present who represented not trade unions but non-trade union labor and Socialist organizations, whilst there was also overlapping.

Compositors' secretary Naylor declared that no one can say definitely what is the opinion of the trade union rank and file on the Compulsory Service Bill. There was no time to take a plebiscite of the membership and only a very few unions were able to call delegate meetings. At the same time he agrees, as we all agree, that it is up to the government to secure the support it wants by proving the necessity for the compulsion bill. Suspicion is the mother of opposition; remove that effectually, and organized labor will not be found wanting in any respect. Conscription has a nasty sound in British ears and the government has avoided the word, preferring compulsory military service; but it has not been able to remove suspicions in the minds of the working classes that some underhanded move is possible. The feeling amongst them for what is vaguely called "Conscription of Capital" is very widespread. The workers think there should be less borrowing and more taxation of wealth, together with at least a recognition of the expendiency of nationalization as regards national essentials, such as mines, railways, and especially munitions. Finally, there is the very real suspicion that conscription, if once admitted, will develop into industrial compulsion. An explicit and solemn pledge on this point from Asquith, Lloyd George and Lord Kitchener would do much to restore national unity.

So much for the special labor congress and its representative or unrepresentative character.

The resignation from the government of the three labor members of the ministry, Henderson, Brace, and Roberts, which followed necessarily upon the vote of the above mentioned congress, is another date in the Parliamentary history of the labor movement. In a table of such dates, the first would be 1874, when two working men made their appearance in Parliament. They were Thomas Burt, who was elected in that year for Morpeth, and Alexander Macdonald, who was returned for Stafford. Burt was returned as a Liberal, but Macdonald was helped in by a Labor Representation League, and was therefore the first

G. O. P. Leader Analyses Income

Senator Bourne Says Wilson Administration Blames Failure on War.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., today gave out the following statement at its Washington headquarters:

"The European war is the official goat of the Democratic party. Every failure of the Administration's policies is blamed to the mighty convulsion abroad. But the persistent argument of the Department of Commerce, and Democratic leaders, that our declining customs revenues result chiefly from the war's curtailment of our importations is rebutted by the Department's own figures. The true reason is to be found in increased imports of duty-free goods, or goods paying minimum rates of duty under the Democratic near-free-trade tariff law. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce recently published a statement to the effect that revenues for the fiscal year 1915 were 27½ per cent below the 1914 revenues. But imports were only 11.6 per cent below the 1914 record. For the last few months imports have steadily increased in volume, those for November, 1915, being $11,000,000 greater than for November, 1912, under the Republican tariff law.

"The following table shows the value of our imports for the past four calendar years, the customs duties collected thereon, and the average yearly rate of duty on all imports: (Imports for December, 1915, included in the total for that year, are approximated, based on the imports entered at the 13 principal customs districts of the United States, handling 92 per cent of total imports.)

1912 (1)—Value of imports, $1,818,000,000; Duty collected, $326,340,000; Average duty rate, 18%.
1913 (2)—Value of imports, $1,792,600,000; Duty collected, $310,800,000; Average duty rate, 17.4%.
1914 (3)—Value of imports, $1,789,250,000; Duty collected, $241,250,000; Average duty rate, 13.5%.
1915 (4)—Value of imports, $1,790,000,000; Duty collected, $198,606,000; Average duty rate, 11.1%.

(1)—Full year under Republican law.
(2)—Last three months under Democratic law.
(3)—Last five months under war conditions, temporary curtailment.
(4)—Full war period.

"An analysis of the table shows that in 1915 (a full year war period), imports fell off but slightly over 1½ per cent, compared with 1912 (a full Republican year), but customs revenues fell off over 39 per cent. Compared with 1913, nine months of which was under Republican law, imports fell off a little over one-tenth of one per cent, but customs revenues fell off 36 per cent. Compared with 1914, five months of which was war period, imports were practically the same, but customs revenues fell off 18 per cent. Comparing the first calendar year of the Democratic tariff law (1914—five months of war) with 1912, imports fell off a trifle over 1½ per cent, while customs revenues dropped 26 per cent; imports were nearly the same as for 1913, but customs revenues dropped off over 22 per cent.

"In this respect things are going from bad to worse. For the past five or six weeks imports have been on a Democratic free trade basis, and the average rate of duty on imports entered at the 13 principal customs districts of this country has been between 8 and 9 per cent. Notwithstanding these facts, the estimates submitted by the various departments of the government,—those made public, together with supplemental estimates furtively presented — represent increases over previous estimates which, if appropriated by Congress, will more than offset the additional amount estimated as being necessary to be expended on the first year of our preparedness program. We are rapidly approaching the worst financial muddle in the history of the United States Treasury."

FAVOR COMPENSATION CHANGES.

LANSING, MICH., Feb. 2.—A committee appointed by the state federation of labor is considering changes in the Michigan compensation law. Meetings have been held in Detroit and in this city and it has been decided to recommend that the waiting time be reduced before benefits are paid and increasing compensation rates. While the committee will favor asking the legislature for these changes, it is believed thatt he referendum will have to be finally invoked.

LABOR TO BE EXPLOITED BY FAKE BENEFITS

Gross Receipts Will Be Twenty-five Thousand Dollars--Labor's Share Twenty-six Hundred Dollars

The carnival of graft is on, and extensive preparations, with the most elaborate setting are under way preliminary to putting into execution the contrivances for extracting, in the most extraordinary manner at least $25,000 from manufacturers, merchants, bankers, employers of labor and politicians.

Of the monumental sum, $2,600 goes to labor and for the latter stipend the name of labor is sold with all the privileges that would gratify even the highest expectation of the most desperate highwayman.

On Monday a meeting was held at which the ground work was laid and the conclusion reached that the cudgel to be placed in the hands of each "representative" of labor is a "credential" bearing the seal of the Allied Trades council and this "endorsement" given under authority of union labor is sufficient to blackmail any captain of industry, employer of labor, banker, merchant or politician.

Never before has labor been sacrificed and the principles of trades unionism placed on the auction block as at present and unless the more conservative leaders shall take hold and wrest from the control of the extortioners, who are responsible for the deplorable condition into which labor has fallen, all hope of recovery will be lost.

Everywhere the question is being asked, Are men like John Williams, Van Bitner, Padgett, of Typographical Union No. 7, and Shaffer, of the street car men going to submit to this mob who seem to be in control at present; are these men going to permit the name of the Allied Councils to be used for the purpose of threatening or blackmailing the employers to whom they go for recognition of their union.

Men high in the councils of labor now fully realize the opinion prevails that union labor is a joke and the very principles extolled are merely a farce in which the misleaders are daily taking part.

Everywhere the question is asked why should men be permitted to intimidate employers of labor or threaten them into either giving up money in the form of "donations" or "advertising" in what may be called a "program," or other sheet when no equivalent is given in return.

No honest union man has given the union farce advertising dodge any thought without coming to the conclusion that it is the rankest kind of blackmail and this, too, perpetrated under the guise of aiding union labor when in reality abundant evidence is at hand to show the spoils go chiefly to individuals who are drawing large salaries for their work as business agents.

Only this week the "official" program was awarded to a prearranged "expert" solicitor and this premature granting of the "contract" was to outwit the new officers in the event a change should take place at the election which is scheduled for this Thursday evening.

The last year's "program" is declared by labor leaders to be nothing less than a crime as nothing is given in exchange for the money taken save page after page of advertising punctuated here and there with a cut of some prominent labor leader. This for the purpose of giving the hold-up the aspect of standing for labor, when in reality the unfortunate labor leaders are used as a blind to give this infamous undertaking the color of respectability.

There are two McGraths running for the presidency of the Allied Trades Councils, one of the "politicians," Bob McGrath, who with colleagues placed James McKee of the plumbers on the auction block and disposing of Jim sat under the plum tree himself. Honest Jim McKee was sacrificed and Bob was made the candidatee, but McKee remained in the running and so did McGrath. McKee had the sympathy of all honest men, McGrath the contempt; both were defeated but in the defeat of McKee labor lost out. McGrath was the victim of his own strategy. This same McGrath is trying to defeat P. J. McGrath, secretary of the street railway employes. The latter a splendid young man who has the respect and esteem of every man who knows him. A type of man that represents labor and stands for all its principles which are his highest ideals. Bob McGrath appeared before the legislative body in Harrisburg during the last session of the legislature and in the very presence of that august body he declared he represented 2,000,000 trades unionists. Bob sacrificed McKee and ran for office, but those who remembered Bob's vauntings of representing 2,000,000 are now wondering what happened to the army. The election returns indicate he was a general without an army and his idle vaperings after election culminated in a roar of laughter and a ridicule of labor's strength.

If labor is to be lifted from the ignomy into which it has fallen the present gang must be cleaned out and McGrath of the railway employees must be elected. To save labor something must be done as those who once looked upon labor as standing for the principles of honesty and fair dealing look upon it now as though it were a band of pirates and the very name of "union" has actually become a stench to the nostrels of decency.

The general conversation in labor circles is the enormous graft propositions that are being worked in the name of labor and how long is labor going to stand for it. The more reputable leaders are holding themselves aloof from contamination and the "business" agent is looked upon by every employer as nothing more than a professional grafter. This condition has been brought about by the abuse heaped upon labor and by the practices of hold-up men who can roll around in automobiles and with the same contempt that a highwayman sticks a gun under the nose of his victim the employer or the politician is assailed.

No regard is shown for the toiler: he is sold with the rest. The unfortunate workman believed he was being honestly lead but he has awakened with a sudden jolt to a realization that he is not even considered in the deal. The "business" agent hands him what is coming to him and the "union" is worked to perfection.

The $25,000 raid, however, it is contended promises to climax all previous efforts and the division of the spoils was well parcelled out before the "contract" was awarded. The plan of campaign has leaked out and it is rumored that every employer of labor is to be made a victim. Should he refuse to come across a significant hint that danger lurks in the vicinity of his plant is to be handed him. The plant is not to be pulled immediately, but the organizer is to be given a quiet tip of the "prevailing" conditions and effort is to be made to organize or if there is an organization some flimsy excuse is to be trumped up for action. Bankers must come across and merchants, of course are always included. The brewers and the saloonkeepers, as well as liquor dealers always want legislation and they are swell feed for the vultures.

They are compelled to "produce" under the threat that "labor" will be against them or that the "union" refuses to endorse the legislation they want. It is estimated that in this state alone over $1,000,000 is contributed by the brewers and liquor dealers to legislation or political influences necessary to protect that business and that out of this vast sum the "labor" grafters get a monumental portion.

There are to be elected Congressmen. State Senators, Representatives to the House, and in addition to a United States Senator an Auditor General and all these are to be pie for "labor." It makes no difference what their past record is or what their future policy is to be. The attitude toward labor is not material; the endorsement of "union" labor is to be handed over to any one who "comes across" and pays the price.

The grafting has not only been practiced in the name of organized labor but until the election of President Padgett of the Typographical Union No. 7, the union label has been regarded as a monumental joke. The allied printing trades label has been peddled by the labor grafters in every shop and irrespective of whether the organization prevails or not the label is there for use and can be found when needed.

In all fairness it must be said the grafters have no influence with the Amalgamated Association, the United Mine Workers, the Street Railway Men, or the Printers, nor the Plumbers so far as McKee can control the organization. There are other organizations that are honestly administered but never in the history of trades unionism were there so many vicious and foul practices as at the present time and the extent to which this infamous gang has gone is almost unlimited.

Employers have lost confidence, and the conditions described are dawning upon the unsuspecting laborer who has been devoting his time to honest toil and until recently could not conceive of the crimes that are committed in the name of the "union."

The question has been asked why is it that the manufacturing industries no longer tolerate union labor. The answer is that the men themselves have lost confidence and have no desire to become identified with labor unions. The "business" agents no longer strive for the interest of the men, but are bargaining and selling labor either to a political clique for some other source for personal revenue.

Labor Unions Want Tariff Commission.

Organizations Pass Resolutions Demanding Creation of Non-Partisan Body.

By Luke Grant.

With one voice the labor unions of the country are demanding that Congress enact a law creating a permanent non-partisan Tariff Commission. Taking their cue from the action of the San Francisco convention of the American Federation of Labor, the unions are adopting resolutions and sending letters to the Senators and Representatives in Congress.

In Chicago especially the unions have been active. The Chicago Federation of Labor, the Federation of Musicians, the cigarmakers, carpenters, streetcar men and other unions have written to Senators and Congressmen. What have the unions done in your locality? You believe in the idea of taking the tariff out of politics, but are you doing anything to help the movement along?

Every labor leader of prominence has indorsed the movement to take the tariff out of politics. The advantages are so many that there is no argument on the other side. But that is no proof that Congress will act. Many times organized labor has asked for legislation that it did not get. Its wishes have been ignored more often than they have been respected. It requires persistent effort to get results.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor says: "In my judgment there ought to be something done by which the tariff question might be taken out of politics and adjusted scientifically and beneficially." Mr. Gompers does not advocate measures that are not for the benefit of the wage-earners of the country and there is no man who has had more experience with the evil effects of tariff-tinkering than Mr. Gompers.

Frank Duffy, secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and vice president of the American Federation of Labor says: "I firmly believe that if the tariff question can be taken out of politics, much will have been done for the uplift and advancement of the wage-earners of the country."

"If we must have a tariff system," says John F. McNamee, editor of the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen's Magazine, "then it is vastly better that the tariff question be taken out of the realm of politics and handled scientifically by a Tariff Commission, than that it should continue to be utilized as a campaign issue and a periodical disturber of business conditions."

These men and hundreds of others in the labor movement speak with authority and from experience. The tariff question has been a periodical disturber of business. It will continue to be so until it is taken out of politics. No other country in the world makes its tariff policy a political issue. The tariff question affects the business life of the country and any legislation on the subject should be the result of the most careful inquiry and serious study. Schedules should not be juggled by politicians for the purpose of furthering party or personal ends. They should not be the result of political compromises, as they have been in the past and as they will continue to be until the methods of making them are changed.

Congress should create a Tariff Commission with full powers of investigation. The Commission should be authorized to hear and investigate all complaints and recommend such tariff changes from time to time as may seem necessary to put and keep the tariff on a fair and equitable basis. It should have power to work out a scientific tariff system, to the needs of the whole country. This county never has had a definite tariff policy and the result has been business disturbance, uncertainty and loss of employment to wage-earners with each national election.

Opposition to a Tariff Commission is gradually disappearing. Leaders in all the political parties are beginning to feel the weight of public opinion. President Wilson has admitted a change of mind on the subject and is now advocating the creation of a non-partisan Commission to deal with conditions which inevitably must arise after the close of the European War.

Organized labor is a powerful factor in the affairs of the country. Its demands will receive attention, if they are made known in the proper manner. The time to act is now. Don't put it off and say, "Let the other fellow do it." Have your union adopt a resolution favoring a Tariff Commission and send it to your Senators and Congressmen. Let them know you are interested and watching developments at Washington. This is a campaign in which you have interests as stake. Show that you are alive to your interests.

NO LOCAL OPTION BILL WILL BE PASSED IN 1917

Brumbaugh Appointments Weaken Chances of Anti-Liquor Legislation.

After weeks of diplomatic manouevering upon the part of Republican leaders in Pennsylvania to bring about harmony in party circles the decks are now being cleared for a fight. Diplomacy has failed. Penrose with his back against the wall has been forced to stand up and battle.

Within the next few weeks representatives of the Brumbaugh-Vare and Penrose-McNichol factions will have carried the fight into every county in the state. So far as Penrose and McNichol are concerned it is a battle for life. If they are defeated now they will be through politically. If they surrendered without a fight the same would also be true.

Penrose did not court a battle. It was the last thing he wanted. But threatened desertions of his lieutenants to the Vares in the event of his surrender forced the senior United States senator into the fray.

On one issue alone will there be harmony—the candidacy of P. C. Knox for United States senator. All factions have agreed to support the former secretary of state for this office.

But the elimination of this fight leaves plenty of other issues to be fought over. Chief of these are:

The election of a state treasurer and auditor general.

The election of delegates to the National Republican convention.

The election of state committeemen.

The election of members of the State senate and assembly.

And interlaced with all these issues with the exception of that of the election of National delegates is the question of local option.

The liquor interests of the state are up in the air. They are afraid of Brumbaugh and his local option pledges. They don't know whether the Vares are to be trusted with control of state politics—yet they realize that the Vares had it in their power to have passed a local option bill at the last session of the legislature.

Then there is the "suspicious" candidacy of Mr. Ambler, speaker of the House of Representatives. Mr. Ambler is a protege of Governor Brumbaugh and is backed by him for the powerful position of auditor general. Ambler is said to be as dry as the Sahara desert, and with the support of the Brumbaugh-Vare-Magee organizations throughout the state undoubtedly will win. But, reason the wets, will not the nomination of Ambler make easier the nomination of dry members of the legislature?

Again the wets do not feel inclined to allow Brumbaugh to obtain control of the state committee, because such control might result in the writing of a local option plank into the Republican State platform.

Undoubtedly the fight for control of the state committee will be warm, as much may depend on its outcome. With P. C. Knox growing stronger every day as a presidential possibility, the control of this organization will be much sought after by both factions. For should Knox be named as the standard bearer of the Republican party at Chicago, in June, the party in Pennsylvania would be without a nominee for United States Senator. Penrose wants control of this committee so that in the event of such a vacancy, he could make E. V. Babcock senator. Brumbaugh will also seek to control it for similar reasons, although not in the interest of Mr. Babcock.

So far as delegates to the National convention are concerned there will be little opposition to the Brumbaugh slate except from professional political interests. The people as a whole evince but little interest in such a contest except in such cases as in 1912 when it becomes an issue between figures of National interest. But as it appears as if sentiment in favor of real presidential possibilities will not crystallize until after the primaries there will be little interest in this particular fight.

But the liquor interests of Pennsylvania have little to fear from Governor Brumbaugh. There will be no local option bill passed by the legislature of 1917, unless the Vares turn in the Philadelphia delegation for such a bill at the eleventh hour. Brumbaugh's actions do not corroborate his utterances on local option. As proof of this it is pointed out that he has not attempted to fortify his position for a wet and dry fight by a single appointment. No man recognized as a champion of the drys has been put into any office of consequence. On the contrary, nearly every one of the present governor's appointees are men who have been identified with wet politics.

And while all these appointees will go along with the governor on the major portion of his political program, it would be impossible for them to become local optionists without severing lifelong political friendships and thus risking their own dethronement as party leaders.

No one realizes this better than Mr. Brumbaugh. He knows that when it comes to a showdown that ninety per cent of his lieutenants will refuse to aid him put a local option measure on the statute books.

Of course, no one expects that the governor in naming men for the many responsible public offices of the commonwealth should use as a criterion of fitness the applicants local option or anti-local option tendencies. He has named, in a majority of instances, able and respected officials.

But there are many instances where, were he sincere in his local option utterances, he could have fortified himself for the enactment of such a measure in 1917, by a more judicious distribution of patronage.

CALL OF THE CHRIST BOTH HEAD AND BODY.

"AS HE WAS, SO ARE WE, IN THIS WORLD," SAYS THE APOSTLE

God's Work During the Gospel Age Peculiar — Justification Now Imputed, Not Actual — Purpose of This — Robe of Christ's Righteousness — Begetting to New Nature — New Creatures Tested in Blemished Mortal Bodies — God's Deep Love for the Church — Dear as the Apple of His Eye — High Calling and Restitution Vastly Different — Church's Experiences Like Their Lord's — Only a "Little Flock" Walk the Narrow Way — Attune With the Infinite.

FALL RIVER, MASS., Jan. 30.—Pastor Russell delivered an able discourse here today, from the text, "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow His steps." (1 Peter 2:22.) He said in part:

The Call of the Gospel Age has been unique. During this Age there is a different kind of justification from what the world will have during the next Age. The world will eventually have actual perfection of body, mind and morals. But now, in His manifold Wisdom God has a different arrangement, so that from the time when we hear the Lord's Call and accept His conditions, we receive justification by faith—imputed justification, not the real thing; for it does not make us actually perfect. We have the same brain, the same body, as before. It is merely a matter of reckoned righteousness.

But why will God reckon us right when we are wrong? He does so because we accept the One whom He has appointed to be our Advocate. "We (the Church) have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (1 John 2:1.) By and by the world will have a Mediator; but the Church have an Advocate. We come to the Father through Him. We give ourselves by consecration to God, realizing that His arrangements are all in Christ. When we have done this the merit of Christ is imputed to us and covers all our blemishes. This merit is figuratively called a wedding garment—an allusion to the plain white garment given to each guest at an old-time Jewish wedding.

The pure white robe of Christ's righteousness is put on by all who become disciples of Jesus. We are not appearing in the filthy rags of our own righteousness, but in the perfect robe of our Lord's furnishing. When we gave up our own wills and God accepted our sacrifice, we received the begetting of the Holy Spirit and became New Creasures in Christ. (2 Corinthians 5:17.) Old things passed away, and all things became new. This robe of Christ's imputed righteousness covers our flesh, which is imperfect. The New Creature needs no covering; for it is begotten of God. It is only because the New Creature has not yet received its new body that it needs its old body as a tabernacle and as an instrument of service.—2 Corinthians 5:1-10.

This was not true with us before we became Christians. It is only since we became New Creatures that we are not at home in the body. God has prepared a Heavenly, spiritual body for every one of us who are His people. This spiritual body He will give us in due time, but not until we develop the necessary character in these old bodies. It is as if He said to us, "Keep this old body for a while, and let Me see how you will make out with it. Let Me see how you will fight against the flesh. Remember, however, that you are not to fight with carnal weapons, but with the weapons of My spirit."

As Christians, we have the whole armor of God—the helmet of salvation, the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the shield of faith, and the Sword of the Spirit, with which to fight against the Adversary and the imperfections of the flesh. (Ephesians 6:12-18. The mind is the great battleground. Surrounded by the imperfections of the old nature and beset by temptations from without, we find it necessary to wage a continual warfare, to fight a good fight, that we may come off conquerors, yea, "more than conquerors, through Him who loved us" and gave Himself for us.

"THE FATHER HIMSELF LOVETH YOU."

Meantime God is not looking coldly on and indifferently. "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that reverence Him." (Psalm 103:13.) He is deeply interested in those who have become His children and are seeking to walk in the footsteps of His Son. "The Father Himself loveth you," said the Master. (John 16:27.) This is one of the most precious texts in the Bible, and one of the most wonderful as well. We might see how God could feel an interest in us as His offspring; but to think that God loves us, if we have become members of the "us" class!

"God so loved the world (with a sympathetic love) that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.) But this love that God has for the Church is a special love, such as He had for His Only Begotten Son. (John 17:26.) They are as dear to Him as the apple of His eye. He sees to it that nothing shall hurt them. When the eye is in trouble, it has the attention of the whole mind. So it is with God's care for the members of His Church. We are very glad to have this special love which has led God to put upon us the robe of Christ's righteousness. Our Father is not now looking upon us as sinners; for our imperfect flesh is covered by the robe. But the flesh is not to be preserved. Our bodies have been presented as a living sacrific. (Romans 12:1.) They are to be consumed.

It is a wrong thought to suppose that God will give us who have consecrated ourselves the best of everything for our mortal body, and will so guard us as to prevent any injury to our body. It is the New Creature that the Father is preparing for glory, not the natural man; and this He is doing by means of His precious promises, which are all made to the New Creature. The old nature is perishing. God will not give us Restitution. That blessing is for the world in the future.

We who have received the High Calling cannot get Restitution. Like the child who went to buy a cake with a penny, and who found that he could not keep the penny and get the cake, we cannot get the glory of the High Calling and at the same time hold on to earthly blessings. We have become heirs of the Heavenly things, having been begotten again as spirit beings, like the Lord Jesus. Therefore let us not think that God is offering us Restitution also. We are to sacrifice our humanity. If you find that you have no sufferings for Christ, you have every reason to question whether God is dealing with you as a son.

God delivered up Jesus freely for us all, and permitted His enemies to smite Him, to spit upon Him, to put a crown of thorns upon His head, to mock and to crucify Him. Jesus truly said, "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head." (Matthew 8:20.) The Father permitted all this because He was dealing with Jesus as His Son, whom He had begotten to a new nature, and who was demonstrating His worthiness by obedience in the things which He suffered. If we are true to the Lord, it will be so with us, even as it is written: "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of Him; for whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth."—Hebrews 12:5-11.

BUT FEW FIND THE NARROW WAY.

God did not choose angels for this High Calling, but all who have received the begetting of the Holy Spirit, all who have been received to become joint-heirs with Jesus Christ. He must choose every one of them, because of the honorable and exalted position to which He has called them; and every one of them must receive chastening, disciplining, testing. It is a wonderful thing that God wishes to test the loyalty and faithfulness unto death of every one who will be of that glorious company. So then, instead of thinking that you are having such great trials, that you are always in some kind of trouble, that you are peculiar in that respect, you will rather think, "How is it that the Lord lets me have so few of those terrible trials? I should think that He would wish to prove me more thoroughly."

Not many will prove themselves worthy. "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," said the Master. (Luke 12:32.) It is only a "little flock" that the Father is calling out now. He is the Chief Shepherd of this "little flock," who walk the narrow way. "Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." (Matthew 7:14.) The Heavenly Father is the One who has called us. We are following Jesus because God has appointed Him to be the Captain of our salvation, whom the Father made perfect through suffering. Every one who follows Jesus must first be called, then proven and found faithful through sufferings, even unto death. In all this the Father is deeply interested.

THE COVENANT BY SACRIFICE.

I remind you, dear friends, you whom God has called, if indeed it be that you have heard His voice, that Jesus did nothing but what He heard from the Father. He said, "My word is not Mine, but the Father's who sent Me." So the Message that Jesus gave us is the Message of the great Chief Shepherd, the Father. This Message coming to us from the Father has been for the purpose of calling us now to be His sheep. "Gather My saints together unto Me," saith Jehovah, "those that have made a Covenant with Me by sacrifice." (Psalm 50:5.) As the Apostle puts it, "Ye see your Calling, brethren."—1 Corinthians 1:26-29.

This class are called to make a Covenant with Jehovah God by sacrifice. There are those who will come into covenant relationship with God without sacrifice, but not during this Age. But those who come now are called to sacrifice. There are no exceptions. If you are not a sacrificer, then you are not of this class. These have heard the Father's Call, and have presented their bodies to be living sacrifices, holy acceptable unto God. (Romans 12:1.) Jesus, our great High Priest, has made an atonement for our sins, and thus has made possible our approach to the Father. He has become our Surety, our Advocate, and makes us acceptable as sacrifices.

At the age of thirty, Jesus came to John the Baptist at Jordan. He came as soon as it was possible under the Law. There He presented Himself to the Father. What He did on that occasion we all know. The Prophet speaking for Jesus and telling what were His heart sentiments, says, "Lo, I come to do Thy will, O, God!"—everything written in the Book of the Law and the Prophets. Everything that God had caused to be written respecting the Messiah Jesus was ready to do.—Psalm 40:6-8.

There was the serpent which was lifted up in the wilderness by Moses. There was the bullock slain by the high priest, Aaron, on the Day of Atonement, in connection with the Tabernacle service. There was the lamb that was slain every spring at the Passover. All this was "written in the Book" concerning Him, the Lamb of God. It was prophesied, too, that He would be led as a lamb to the slaughter, and that as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He would not open His mouth.—John 3:14; Isaiah 53:7.

When at the time of His consecration Jesus said, "I come to do Thy will, O My God, as in the volume of the Book it is written of Me." He could not then understand all that was written. But nevertheless He said, "I delight to do Thy will, O, My God!"—Whatever Thou hast written in the Book, show it to Me, dear Father. I cannot see it clearly now; but whatever is there, I will delight to do it, no matter how severe or how great the sacrifice. Then Jesus symbolized His consecration unto death by His baptism in the Jordan, thus showing forth both His death and His resurrection.

CONSECRATION MUST BE TO GOD ONLY.

This same figure of baptism in water is for all the consecrated, and it becomes an outward confession that whatever is written in the Book concerning us we will gladly do. We rejoice to do the will of God, and desire that His will may be done in us, even as it was done in our Master. This is the only kind of sacrifice that God will accept. Not all of God's people see this point, however. One says, I have consecrated myself to my church. Another says, I will consecrate myself to God and then will try mission work. Still another says, I will consecrate myself to work for God in the temperance field. But God has not asked them to do these things. He says that we are to consecrate ourselves to Him alone and to put no restrictions whatever around our sacrifice. "Thy will be done in me, whatever may be that will," should be the sentiment of our hearts.

So then we see what God has arranged for us, and how reasonable it all is that we should have been invited to become partakers of Christ's sufferings now in order that we may become sharers in His glory to follow. It has been an invitation, not a command. A command to sacrifice our lives would not have been just. God sets before the Church a great prize. (Philippians 3:13, 14.) He has made no threat, used no force. If we do not wish to come without being forced, we cannot come at all. He has merely sent forth His Message; and wherever that Message goes, it appeals to certain hearts, and to those only.

IS YOUR CO-HEARER IN TUNE.

The Gospel Call is like the message that goes forth from the wireless telegraph instrument. Waves of sound go out from that instrument clear across the Atlantic Ocean. But it is not everybody that can catch the message. The sending instrument is tuned to a certain key. If one has a good co-hearer, or receiving instrument, and yet does not have it properly tuned, he cannot receive the message. Often it is necessary to tune the co-hearer higher and higher before it gets in tune with the receiving instrument.

So you and I must have been in tune with God before we could hear His Message; and we must continue to keep in tune with Him if we would continue to receive messages from Him. God's messages pass over the heads of millions of people, and they do not hear. "Eyes have they, but they see not; ears have they, but they hear not." "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear." In Jesus' day many had co-hearers that were not properly tuned to receive the Message of the Son of God; and they refused His words. Their thoughts were not attune. So it is today. God is finding the humble and sincere, those who are in tune with Him.

I trust that we are in tune to receive the Message which our God is sending forth; that we have true co-hearers, and are keeping our instruments in tune with the Infinite One, so that we shall be able to hear the Message more and more fully; that we are continuing in that love which rejoices to lay down life itself in His service; for God has foreordained that all who would be of the Church class in glory must be copies of His dear Son. None others can obtain the prize of the High Calling.—Romans 8:29.

"CHANGE" OF THE CHURCH AT HAND.

Judging from the Word of God, we believe that the Church will soon reach the end of her race course. We certainly are in the time when "men's hearts are failing them for fear." Every financier and every statesman is fearful respecting the future. The things coming upon the earth are causing great perplexity. But the Lord's true people, as they see these things beginning to come to pass, are lifting up their heads and rejoicing, knowing that their deliverance draweth nigh.—Luke 21:26-28.

ARMINIUS.

Arminius was a native of Holland. A professor and preacher of high reputation. He was tutored under Theodore Beza of Geneva, a rigid Calvinist. At Basle he was tendered the degree of doctor of Divinity. He was made a professor of theology at the university of Leyden. Like Luther, and unlike Calvin and Knox, he did not cause any commotion in the sphere in which he moved until he was in his forties. From then on his troubles began. He was constantly engaged in a series of bitter disputes with the opponents in which his manhood was manifested to be dignified and honest, his argument clear, bold and vigorous, principally framed from Paul's epistle to the Romans on the question of Election. He carried out the ideas of Knox concerning man's Free Agency and coupled the doctrine of Election with it—Conditional Election as against Calvin's Absolute Predestination.

Arminius was commissioned to defend Calvinism by opposing the changes which the ministers of Delet had proposed to make, just as our American clergy who were ashamed of the Westminister Confession of Faith, tampered with it to hide its true character. He was the first college professor of influence since the Reformation to recognize and publicly proclaim the distinction between Foreknowledge and Foreordination. He made this discovery by examining the Scriptures that his opponents used against Absolute Predestination and proved himself exceptional in having the courage of his convictions in publicly adopting the thought he had been commissioned to refute. Men of his type, in the limelight, feeding on public approval, who dare to stand for a germ of truth at the possible expense of loosing a professorship of a prominent college, are rare indeed. In this respect he proved himself superior to Luther, who, in a dispute with the Swiss reformer Zwingli, on the question of Transubstantiation, on perceiving that he was wrong, was too stubborn to embrace the truth. Ability to yield is often a sign of strength. In justice to Calvin we mention the fact that he also discovered Luther's doctrines in an attempt to refute one of his pamphlets that reached France; but Arminius' superiority is attested by the fact that he retracted in public, Calvin in secret.

From this moment on Arminius was forced to defend the truth he discovered. His principal opponent was Gomar who served to draw him out and develop his ideas, just as was John Eck, Luther's and Zwingli's; Calvin and Knox sparred; Wesley was developed theologically by Whitefield a Calvanist; and Russell was started in creating by Paton and Barbour, who both became infected with Darwinism. Dr. Eaton and Elder White, who both debated with Russell, did not serve this purpose, for his theology stands as originally written. His debates were simply a clever ruse to get his sermons in the secular press after the debates—The Pittsburgh Gazette and the Cincinnati Inquirer, and a hundred others that followed their example.

Arminius further demonstrated his manhood in the bitter conflict with the clergy of his day, who were forced to protect their prestige as beacon lights of the people, by his persistency in proclaiming the teachings of the Bible on Conditional Election, especially when he offered to arbitrate the custion in applying to the states of Holland to convoke a synod for this purpose. His stormy career cut his life short, and he did not live to see the matter through. He died in the dawn of the seventeenth century. His strenuous public life was supported by a peaceful domestic happiness which rewarded him with seven sons and two daughters.

Arminius elaborated upon the doctrine preached by Knox before he succumed to Calvinism, and both reformers have the singular distinction of not having found a sect of followers that grew into a powerful denomination as has been the case with other reformers. After the death of Arminius his followers gained strength and boldly asserted their views but remained in the minority. They presented to the assembled states of Holland a "Remonstrance" (from which they were styled "Remonstrants"). They were opposed so strenuously by the Calvinists that at times the state was obliged to protect them from personal violence. The Dutch Republic finally issued an edict of full toleration of both parties. While the Armenians were constantly decreasing in number their doctrines were spreading amongst others. The principles they formulated were adopted by other sects, especially in England. In fact the Armenian principles are the very foundation of Evangelical Christianity and are held by multitudes of individual members of the churches whose formularies are Calvinistic and also modern Catholics. The essence of their teachings has been summed up in the following five propositions:

(1). That God had indeed made an eternal degree, but only on the conditional terms that all who believe in Christ shall be saved, while all who refuse to believe must perish; so that predestination is only conditional. (2). That Christ died for all men, but that none except believers are really saved by His death. The intention, in other words, is universal, but the efficiency may be restricted by unbelief. (3) That no man is of himself able to exercise saving faith, but must be born again of God in Christ through the Holy Spirit. (4). That without the grace of God, man can neither think, will, nor do anything good; yet that grace does not act in men in an irresistable way. (5). That believers are able by the aid of the Holy Spirit, victoriously to resist sin, with the possibility of falling from grace.

The period commonly called "The Reformation" was from Luther to Arminius when the church and state were linked. The reformers lived stormy tumultous lives, torn by plot and counterplot. Only bold, rough and coarse men could have defied the reigning power and done the work that God had intended for them—He used both good and otherwise. Life is a sequence and, we, today are what we are because of what these men were and were not. Our modern civic life is the fruit of their labors and these liberties and advantages produce men of a more marked variety and type. Whereas those of the past were, owing to their environments, were more or less of a given type, all having a dash of lavender, it will develp in our endeavors to give a description of the subject of our sketch that Wesley, Beecher, Miller and Russell are of decidedly different types of temperament and training, yet with this in common with all, that of being governed by principle or emotion, good and bad.

The great variety in the natural characteristics of modern reformers, as in contrast to those of earlier periods, is due to the fact that modern civilization is essentially individualism as in contrast to the corporate life of the Reformation period. The liberty of applying natural endowments, to come into possession of themselves by developing the dormant power, is possible only where men are unmolested by the violence the early reformers experienced. The modern facilities of education amongst the common people has put the reformers of our day in direct contact with the people where their endowments and human characteristics are brought into play. Their progress in reform is just as effectual as that of earlier centuries if not more so, though not so noticeable generally as with the reformers of the earlier period who affected politics directly and the people indirectly. The political principles growing out of the Reformation period have become fixed and crystalized into governments and serve to protect modern individualism.

Concerning the close of the Reformation at the end of the 16th century,

Labor member. In the eighties Burt and Macdonald were followed into the House by a number of trade unionists—mostly miners—who were both inwardly and outwardly indistinguishable from the average Liberal M. P., and the next date of importance is 1892, when Keir Hardie, who first struck the independent note, arrived in Parliament in company with J. Havelock Wilson and John Burns. It was in 1906, after the electoral successes of that year, that Labor ceased at least to be a "group" and became a party.

Meanwhile, in 1886, Henry Broadhurst, who had been elected for Stoke in 1880 as a Liberal working man, was given an Under-Secretaryship by Gladstone, this being the first inclusion of a trade unionist in the Administration. Burt was the first member of his class to become a Privy Councillor—it was said that he was the first Privy Councillor who had worked underground in the mine. It was in 1905 that a trade unionist first became a member of the Cabinet. This was John Burns, a member of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. Roberts, who has just resigned, was the first trade unionist to be one of the Government Whips.

The following statement has been communicated by the National Advisory Committee on War Output, which works in co-operation with the Ministry of Munitions, to several trade unions whose members are engaged in the production of munitions. I give the exact wording of this message as it is too important to risk misrepresenting; it has aroused very mixed feelings as can well we understood:

His Majesty's Government have given earnest attention to the financial position of the country, to the great and increasing demands which will still be made upon its resources to meet the needs of the war, and to the imperative need for economy in all forms of expenditure and consumption, both public and private. They have also had regard to the general advances of wages that have already been given since the beginning of the war, and to the measures already taken to tax or limit the profits of undertakings. His Majesty's Government have come to the conclusion that, in view of the pressing emergency, any further advances of wages (other than advances following automatically from existing agreements) should be strictly confined to the adjustment of local conditions where such adjustments are proved to be necessary.

The above announcement is a corollary to the appeal made by the Prime Minister to the wage-earning classes, at the labor conference on December 1, to abstain in the interests of the conservation of the national resources from pressing demands for anything like a general increase in wages. In support of the appeal the Prime Minister mentioned that since the beginning of the war 4,500,000 work people had obtained a rise, on the average of about 84 cents a week on their rates of wages, as distinct from their total earnings.

It is stated semi-officially that the application of the Joint Shipyard Trades for a wages advance of 15 per cent throughout the country has been refused by the Board of Trade arbitrators, in conformity with the Government decision. The application was put forward on behalf of 150,000 shipyard workers. If this assertion proves to be officially confirmed it will certainly go a long way towards supporting the organized labor view that the Government is anti-labor even in these days when the productive capacity of the working man is being taxed to the uttermost and with his willing assent.

Amongst the new proposals for federating trade unions is that of the affiliation of the London and Provincial Vehicle Workers union to the National Transport Workers federation. The executive council of the vehicle workers have agreed upon a certain policy, which, if ratified by the branches, will bring the vehicle workers within the operations of the newly formed triple alliance of the railwaymen, miners, and transport workers.

The Committee on Wage-earning Children, in their annual report, state that the tendency of the moment is to go back and to remove some of the restrictions on child labor. The committee are watching events carefully, and are using their power to prevent, as far as possible, the lowering of the school age and the granting of special exemptions. The committee feel that there is no excuse for exempting children from school until those over school age and all available female labor has been utilized, and at present there is no proof that this has been done, or that with re-organization the need for child labor would still exist. In fact, many adults who offered their services for harvesting in the summer holidays were not called on; nor were the soldiers used to any great extent, presumably on account of the wages that had to be paid. Unfortunately, those members of local authorities and employers who have always been opposed to education have been able to plead urgent public necessity, and have obtained cheap child labor.

INCOME TAX LAW IS UPHELD.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The United States supreme court has unanimously upheld the constitutionality of the income tax provisions of the Underwood tariff act in a decision that interprets in the broadest manner the taxing power of the federal government.

The effect of the decision will be to increase sentiments for higher taxes on large incomes. Representative Hull, the author of the law, said:

"The decision has unfettered the income tax as a source of revenue. All doubt is removed and congress is left much freer to act. I believe that congress will take advantage of the opportunity to amend the law materially. Without any unusual or unjust charges it can be made to yield $185,000,000 to $295,000,000 a year, as against $85,000,000 a year at present."

According to last year's returns there were 357,515 incomes subject to the federal income tax. Included in the list were 60 of $1,000,000 and over. The minimum amount taxed, $3,000 to $4,000, was paid by 82,764 persons. It is predicted that a definite movement will now be started to levy on large private fortunes to pay for the army and navy increases.

Appreciations.

Norfolk, Va., an. 28.

As my subscription for your much appreciated paper expires in the month of February and I here wish to thank the kind friend who has sent it to me for the past year as I have read it with joy and many blessings have come to me through the sermons of my beloved Pastor Bro. Russell who caused me to seek and search our Father's words more diligently leaving all things in his hands to be worked out by Him for my God and His glory. I truly thank the loving Father for His goodness to me and I can say, dear friends, I know I have passed from death unto life because I love the Brethren. After reading I pass from one unto another that all may read of the Great God's love for His little ones and of the love of our dear Redeemer for the world of mankind. I know and realize, dear editor, it is worthy of the support of all who love Truth and who wish to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. Also, I wish to congratulate its editor on the stand he has taken in the support of present Truth against this evil day of opposition for we are indeed nearing the end and we see that Michel will soon stand up and claim his kingdom as we see these things how can we keep from singing, I love the dear paper and all the Lord's little ones and I ask their prayers that I may walk by faith the narow way along the home stretch and faint not but be strong and courageous in Him and His blessed promises that I may build up treasures in heaven and touch lightly the things of this world, esteeming them of little value, that I may live for Him and Him alone. So I will say please discontinue the paper. It is with regret I ask it being a lonely widow whose means are limited, I must bid it adieu. May God bless the editor and his work of spreading the Truth. My goal is Christ and Christ alone.

Yours in the bond of Christian love,
ELLA MAY McCLOUD.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 26.

I am sorry to drop my subscription to your valuable paper but can't see my way clear to take it but we wish it the success it deserves for holding up the Truth. May the good work go on.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. MARY REDDISH.

Ogden, Utah, Jan. 24.

Please accept my heartfelt thanks for sending me your valuable paper. I have not missed a single copy since my subscription expired the 15th of November. I notice it is paid for until the 11th of March and I know it is through some dear friends generosity that I am still permitted to feast upon the good things published in the Tribune. My main interest is in the religious features, it is indeed meat in due season that we are provided with through that faithful servant, Pastor Russell. Thanking you again, Mr. Editor, and also the dear unknown friend, I remain,

Yours truly,
MRS. M. C. FRIESE.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 28.

Am glad to note, since the beginning of the year, the larger type and consequently increased space given to Pastor Russell's sermons. Previous to this your type was larger than that in which the sermons are usually printed and I hope this added improvement will enhance its value in other eyes as it does in mine.

I greatly enjoy N. E. Nelson's articles and hope to see them later in book form.

May the high standard of the Tribune in all its parts be continued.

Respectfully yours,
J. P. KLASEN.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 29.

My subscription having expired some time since, I renewed it for another year through the W. T. B. & T. Society. I wish to express my thanks for your efforts in presenting the Truth, the medium of Pastor Russell's sermons. I especially appreciate the change to larger type and the absence of so many typographical errors that formerly crept into the sermons. The labor articles and other departments are all of interest to these interested in the signs of the times. Assuring you of my best wishes for the coming year. I remain,

Yours, etc.,
T. L. MARSHALL.

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 27.

I notice by the wrapper around the Tribune that my subscription expires on the 27th inst. and regret to be in the position (for reasons best known to myself) of having to ask you to discontinue sending me the paper.

I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of your fearless publication of the Truth, both secular and sacred. I have especially enjoyed the religious features of your paper—Pastor Russell's sermons, and other items which you have from time to time published.

Wishing you a prosperous New Year and venturing the hope that you will continue in your firm stand for righteousness, I am,

Yours truly,
MAE J. RAU.

OBEYING GOD RATHER THAN MEN

Acts 4.—February 6.

The Courage of God's Servants—St. Peter the Spokesman Before the Sanhedrin—Taught In the School of Jesus—Wonderful Results—When to Obey Men and When to Disobey.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."—1 Corinthians 16:13.

ST. PETER and St. John, arrested for preaching Christ as the Healer of the lame man in the Temple, were called before the Jewish High Court—the Sanhedrin, composed of seventy learned Jews. When we remember that the Apostles were illiterate fishermen, unaccustomed to public speaking and to contact with the great and the learned, we may well be amazed at their courage and at the straight-forward presentation of the Gospel given by St. Peter. It astonished the Sanhedrin, too. They wished to arraign the Apostles, not for healing the lame man, but rather for preaching Jesus.

However, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, St. Peter wisely drew attention to the fact that they were on trial really for healing the sick. Again he disowned any power ou the part of himself and his companions. Admitting that they were merely ordinary men, he credited the miracle wholly to Jesus. What a lesson for all who represent the Lord as His ambassadors!

How courageous indeed were the Apostle's words! He was not only preaching that Jesus was the real Messiah, whom the Jews had long expected, but he was declaring that the Sanhedrin had murdered Him. It was the truth, and necessarily uttered. To have evaded the point would have shown fear: and the Apostles would have failed to make a proper impression on the Sanhedrin and the auditors. How much St. Peter crowded into a few words, according to this record! He identified Jesus the Nazarene, whom they had crucified, as the One whom God had manifestly approved in the raising of Him from the dead, and as the Messiah.

Before the Sanhedrin.

The Sanhedrin Perplexed.

St. Peter quoted from David's prophecy (Psalm 118:22), saying, "This is the Stone which was set at nought of you builders, but which is become the Head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under Heaven given amongst men whereby we must be saved." If there was a force and a sting in these words to his hearers it was because they were seriously in the wrong. How fortunate it would have been for them if they had been humble-hearted, like those who heard St. Peter on Pentecost! But, alas! education, honor of men, high station, often put the possessors of these advantages at a disadvantage. Pride, self-conceit, hinder many from receiving the simple Message of the Gospel.

Perceiving the boldness of St. Peter and St. John, and noting that they were ignorant and unlearned men, the Sanhedrin marveled, and "took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." They knew of His power with the people through the Spirit of God and of His straight-forward presentation of the Truth. They recognized these men as of the same character—as filled with Jesus' Spirit. To this day this is true of His followers. All of the Lord's people should cultivate such a spirit as to be copies of Jesus and of the faithful Apostles.

The Sanhedrin were perplexed as they perceived that the disciples had really turned the tables upon them and charged them publicly with being the murderers of the Son of God, the Messiah. They could say nothing. So they put forth the Apostles from their midst, that they might discuss the case privately. They could not deny the miracle, and they were afraid lest talk of this kind about Jesus and about themselves as being His murderers should spread amongst the people. They thought best to let the disciples go, charging them, threatening them, not to preach any more in the name of Jesus.

The Apostle's Witness.

Courage In Preaching the Gospel.

Then was shown the marvelous courage of the Apostles. They replied, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

The Bible directs Jesus' followers to be subject to the powers that be; but Christians are to recognize that there is a still higher Law and a still higher Ruler, and are to be subject to the worldly powers only in the absence of a contrary admonition from God. Through Jesus God had commanded the disciples to preach the Gospel Message of the efficacy of the death of Jesus for the cancellation of sins and of His future return to set up His Kingdom to release mankind from the bondage of sin and death. It was therefore their duty to preach this Message.

"How did Christmas go off at your place?"

"As usual. Christmas eve we wrapt all the presents we gave, and Christmas day we rapped all the presents we received."—Life.

APPRECIATIONS.

Delaware, O., Jan. 23.

Every once in a while I cannot refrain from saying a word for the Labor Tribune. The article on "Reformers" by N. E. Nelson alone is worth much more than the price of the paper. While I can get our Pastor's sermons in other papers, I get various other good in the Tribune that I do not get elsewhere.

Now just a few words, please, to Mr. Albert Dripps whose letter appears on the eighth page of January 6th Tribune. This letter makes you appear to bear the character of an illustrious predecessor written up in the article above mentioned, and in the same issue: Calvin, who was "domineering and accusative," and whose intolerance has been denounced by his own followers.

The two newspapers are different and each fills its place, 1 Pet. 4:10. You know our teaching forbids evil surmising; and the three you gave, I know are untrue and should not be repeated. "Live and let live."

Let us not step on another's head so that we may rise the higher, and more especially on a babe in Christ. "Woe be to that man by whom the offense cometh," "better for him that a millstone," etc., Matt. 18:6,7.

I write this in the spirit of Christian love.

Your sister in the blessed hope,
ALICE C. COLLUM.

Modesto, Col., Jan. 22.

I am renewing my subscription for the Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society of Brooklyn, N. Y., and take advantage of this occasion to thank you for your good, clean way of managing an up-to-date labor paper.

I must say to you that it has been all of forty years since the Tribune first entered our home. Of course I was but a small boy then and my father subscribed for and read the paper chiefly on account of the labor news that it contained. But my interests in its columns are the good, sound theological reasonings of Pastor Russell, and the many other similar contributions, such as Hiram and Manda, also the essays of Bro. N. E. Nelson.

May our God richly reward you in your eagerness to serve His people.

Sincerely yours,
J. G. KENNEDY.

Tullahoma, Tenn., Jan. 12.

From some cause I failed to receive issue of January 6 and dislike to miss a single copy because of its many good features. The National Labor Tribune is the first secular paper of which I have knowledge that gave prominent and favorable space to Pastor Russell's writings and I have taken it for many years because of this fact. Have just renewed again through Watch Tower office. I am sixty years old but the knowledge of "present Truth" and the Lord's providence has so favored me that I read all the good things in the Tribune without the use of glasses; but I am pleased to see the wider columns, large type and leaded lines now used in publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, and am sure the special feature will be greatly appreciated by a large number of your readers whose eyesight is becoming dim.

Always pleased to see so many letters from the friends in "our paper." 2 Thess. 2:16,17.

With all good wishes and prayers for the Lord's blessings upon you abundantly and always (Philemon 20:21.)

Sincerely yours,
C. H. MAYNARD.

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 29.

I have renewed my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower.

I appreciate the hermons and other religious features of your paper. I also admire the fearless, unprejudiced spirit manifested by the editor. He stands like a wall of adamant against the cowardly insults of self important bigots.

Be not discouraged, our noble, brave Mr. Editor, there will always be plenty fair minded subscribers to stand with you in your honest endeavor to give each and every one a "square deal."

The good old Tribune is true and tried; cannot be improved upon, and evidently stands beyond just criticism.

Very respectfully,
MRS. M. V. GENTRY.

Kansas City, Kan., Jan. 28.

We have renewed our subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, and wish to thank you for having sent our paper for so long after the time for its expiration. It is a welcome visitor at our home every week. We like the print very much; it is so easy to read.

We appreciate the religious features of the paper, especially Pastor Russell's sermons.

Wishing the greatest success to the Tribune, and to all who are connected with it, we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
MR. and MRS. A. H. HUYCK.

the Rev. Thomas Witherow, Professor of Church History in Magee College, Londonderry, writes in "The History of the Reformation," Bible Class Primer, pages 82, 83, as follows: "Whether owing to these means of counteraction, or that the movement had simply spent its force, with the year 1580 the Reformation reached its close. During the sixty years of its existence (1520-1580- it exercised intense influence over Europe. It gained to its side the majority in North Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, England, Scotland and Holland. It was checked however, and won but a minority in Switzerland, France and Hungary. In Belgium, Italy and Spain it was extinguished in blood. Its direct influence was not felt anywhere outside Northern and Western Europe; the Greek Church remained untouched. By 1580 the movement was at an end; the religious fervor of the first Reformers had then cooled. The great leaders had gone down to the grave. Their followers had divided into parties—Lutherans, Presbyterians and Anglicans and had begun to strive with each other. As they grew weak by division, the members of the Romish Church became more united among themselves, and more active in their work. The abuses, which had made for them so many enemies, now withdrew out of sight. Political arrangements arranged a wall of separation between Protestant and Catholic countries. Men were no longer open to persuasion on religion. Each man had taken his side, and refused to change. The children of each new generation inherited the convictions and antipathies of their parents. Parties crystallized each around its own principle, and refused to melt again under any ordinary solvent.. Since 1580, individual changes have been frequent, and new nations, not then in existence, have come into being, more especially in America: but, leaving out of sight the conquests of modern missions in Madagascar and the southern seas, Protestantism, since the sixteenth century, has not been adopted as the faith of any people who were previously in subjection to the Pope . . . The countries which were Protestant in 1580 are Protestant still."

Cost of Living Goes Up Faster Than Wages

British Labor Gets All-Round Increase but Necessities Mount Higher.

LONDON, Jaunary 26. 1916.

The picture of the condition of the working classes in war time presented in the annual review of employment, wages, prices, and disputes by the Director of the Department of Labor Statistics is, on the whole, a very cheerful one. It is true that the review, which is just published in the Board of Trade Labor Gazette, records a continuous increase in food prices, and shows that at the end of December last year the housewife had to spend $7.25 to buy food which in peace time cost her only $5. But this is only one of several factors in the situation.

While prices were rising the percentage of unemployment, already low in January last, continued to fall throout the year, almost without interruption, until the lowest figure on record (0.6 per cent) was reached in November and December. At the same time wages have been rising substantially, owing to war bonuses and special advances; very many more women and girls have been employed; and there was a considerable falling-off both in the number and the length of labor disputes.

A year ago retail prices of food were about 18 per cent above the normal prices of July, 1914, the month before the war. On the first of the present month the corresponding increase was 45 per cent. The months during which the greatest increases occurred were January (chiefly bread and flour), May (meat), and September (tea and sugar duties.)

The percentages quoted relate to the price of food only, and not to the general cost of living. The articles included in the calculation are beef and mutton (British and imported), bacon, fish, flour, bread, tea, sugar, milk, butter, cheese, margarine, eggs, and potatoes. There was also a substantial increase in the prices of boots and clothing, particularly in the second half of the year.

The demand for labor was unprecedented. The insufficiency of workpeople became more and more pronounced as the year advanced, and was very acute at its close, owing to the active recruiting campaign in the autumn and early winter. A few industries, including the building trades and some branches of the clothing trades, were relatively quiet; though even in these there was very little unemployment. In the large majority of trades the great difficulty was scarcity of labor, which was met to some extent by the working of overtime. The dearth would have been even more severely felt, but for the transfer of workpeople from one industry to another, the "dilution" of skilled by semi-skilled and unskilled labor, and by the greater employment of women and girls. "Speaking generally," the report states, "the growing shortage of male labor can only be met by a very much larger influx of women into industry than has yet taken place."

Early in the year 1915 the increased cost of living led to a demand for higher wages, and in February a sharp upward movement began, largely in the form of war bonuses. The industries primarily affected were chiefly those directly concerned with the manufacture of munitions or the transport of troops and supplies (engineering and shipbuilding, railway service, dock labor, and carting); but the movement spread to nearly all the important industries, and by the end of the year the aggregate increase far exceeded all previous records. The general level of wages was raised by transfers of labor to munition and other factories specially concerned with war requirements.

In the industries for which statistics are available 3,165,000 workpeople were reported as having received war bonuses or increased rates of wages, amounting in all to over $3,015,000 a week, an average of about 92 cents a head. The mining, metal, engineering, shipbuilding and textile trades account for nearly three-fourths of the total number of workpeople affected. In addition, it is estimated that more than 1,500,000 workers in industries for which full particulars are not known received advances of about $1,375,000 a week.

From the above facts it will be seen that even put at its best aspect the rise in wages last year was not equal to more than a dollar per week per cent whilst food prices have neutralized this and to all intents and purposes knocked another dollar a week off the average working man's money. Against this, however, of course is to be set the working man's increased income through working extra hours,

Horrors of Peace Reflected In Reports.

Army of Innocents Slaughtered and Maimed Annually in U. S. Industries.

From George P. West.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Two hundred and fifty thousand men, women and children are killed each year in the United States and 4,700,000 are wounded because our statesmen remain silent in the fact of the daily atrocities wrought in times of "peace" by our system of economic and industrial exploitation.

Such is the toll each year in the United States of poverty and its offspring, preventable disease. The figures are altra-conservative, being but half the total number of deaths and illnesses, which, according to the highest medical authority, could be prevented by stamping out poverty or merely by appropriating a third the cost of one battleship for the public health.

They do not include the 100,000 American babies killed by poverty each year before they reach their first birthday. These and the quarter million older persons die annually as victime of a system by which the few are protected by government in the ownership and arbitrary control of the land, natural resources and machinery that should be a source of life and well-being to all.

No President or ex-President lifts his voice against the ceaseless slaughter wrought by "peace" in America. Yet of babies alone, the toll is one thousand times greater each year than that of the Lusitania torpedoing.

STATESMEN IGNORE ISSUE.

Instead of attacking the injustice and dishonor and cruelty of exploitation at home, or appropriating money with which the death-toll could be cut in half, our statesmen propose to spend hundreds of millions to defend principles and ideals that have been openly and repeatedly violated here at home without protest, and that are flouted and crucified by men who pose as our leading citizens.

Nor can anything else be expected until the victims, the workers and producers, awake, organize, and match their power against that of those who now exploit them unchecked.

The Committee on Industrial Relations has used figures at the head of this column which have been carefully computed from United States Census reports by competent officials who aided the committee. Surgeon-General Rupert Blue of the United States Public Health Service is authority for the statement that fifty per cent of deaths from preventable disease can be prevented.

The figures help to explain why those who see the struggle to conquer the world for humanity and justice as the only real struggle refuse to let the issue be clouded by wrangling between diplomats over points of honor that are raised only when the exploiting classes of two nations come into conflict, and that are ignored when these classes are committing artrocities on the workers of the same country.

The committee in the present bulletin will present evidence showing that poverty is the direct cause of a peace toll of misery, suffering and death in this country surpassing that suffered by the armed forces of any belligerent country in Europe.

Governmental neglect is the second cause, and the facts about it will be disclosed in a second bulletin. But in the money now piling up in New York banks to the credit of men who are preparing an imperialistic campaign of world expoitation were distributed in higher wages, cheap credits, and lower rents, there would be no need for governmental action.

WHAT GORGAS SAYS.

Major General William C. Gorgas is the man who cleaned up Panama and made possible the digging of the Canal. He is the highest medical officer of the United States army, and a scientist of world reputation. He said:

"The preventable mortality in this country is greater than the mortality caused by the European War. Science knows that the chief cause of disease is poverty; that disease can never be eliminated so long as people are forced to live poorly and close together."

Here are the figures compiled in cooperation with government experts and endorsed by them, showing how poverty kills.

In Brookline, Massachusetts, live the well-to-do, and the rich of Boston. Babies die in Brookline at the rate of 76 per thousand. In South Bethlehem, where live the steel workers, whose

LABOR'S GRAFT BURDENS TOO HEAVY TO BEAR

Mayor Armstrong Denounced, but Able to Reveal the Secrets of a Ten Thousand Dollar Hold-Up.

Union labor as now exemplified by the alleged advocates of labor in the Pittsburgh district are degenerating into an aggregation of political bargainers and a coterie whose baneful influences have done more to destroy the principles of organized labor than anything that has occurred within the memory of the Tribune.

Why is it that at the last meeting of the Allied Trades Council not a hundred delegates voted for the officers at the annual election? Why is it, the question is asked, that in the greatest industrial city in the world only a handful of delegates can be mustered to join in an election that should be of such vital importance? What has become of the boasted strength of "organized labor"? Within a radius of 30 miles of this city at least a million men are employed and yet the "union" has been so weakened through the vile practices perpetrated in the name of labor that those who extoll the principles have become the laughing stock to the multitudes who toil for a livelihood.

No arguments of importance can be advanced against the principles of trades unionism, but the very mention of the "union" or the "organization" has become an object of scorn, the vilest ridicule and the worst contempt. For the consciencious exponent; the real and true representative a Gibraltar has lifted itself in his path and the impediments have become so colossal that even the stout heart of a Garibaldi would utterly collapse were the task of labor's redemption assigned to him.

Not in the annals of unionism has organized labor been under the control of such reckless bands or irresponsible "representatives" at the present time and the pity is that the innocent are the sufferers while the guilty are assuming an air of resentment; loudly expressing their pretended indignation and vociferously proclaiming their "innocence" before the real charges have been made.

On last Monday night a mouthing mountebank under the pretense of protest viciously assailed Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, for his refusal to violate his obligations as the chief executive of the city, and permit a band of thugs to override the police department and threaten the safety of the people.

The Mayor has been exceptionally generous in permitting blackmailers to operate in the city under the cloke of the "union" and another amazing feature is that the manufacturers and the employers in general have so patiently submitted to the painful ordeal of being sandbagged and bludgeoned as long as they have.

The manufacturers and business men of the city need have no fear of shocking the Mayor's sensibilities; there need be no reluctance in telephoning the Mayor or paying him a personal visit in which his attention may be called to the infamous practices now in vogue. The Mayor is perfectly familiar with the profligates in the labor movement and his familiarity with the operations of the skilled labor grafter will undoubtedly surpass the most sanguine expectation of any who may choose to place before him their experiences.

The Mayor has been a close observer and if he so wishes he can relate a circumstance with a thrill that would surpass even Othello's matchless tale to Desdemona. Almost within the shadow of his office there lurks ample proof of a clean-up which encompassed a cool $10,000 plucked from the manufacturers by "representatives" of the "union." The swag was dragged off and later divided. There was no bullion about it, but brand new, crisp $1,000 bills—ten of them; and some of these later on exhibition in one of the safe deposit vaults within an easy distance of the present location of the Mayor's office, who sits now in veneration and awe when visited by an oligarchy who vauntingly boast of their divine right to control the destinies of labor in the Pittsburgh district.

The Mayor is not blind either to a graft escapade of a party made up of more than one soul who accompanied with $500 as the first installment of their allotment left for Atlantic City or thereabouts and after enjoying the balmy sea breezes for a day or two withdrew to the Girard National Bank, in the City of Brotherly Love and there the gaunt spectre of infidelity stalked out with another $1,200. Who asks was it graft? Was it blackmail? Labor or its "representatives" may apply any cognomen, but there is no doubt about the treachery; the perfidity of which can only be compared with the clique that now has labor by the throat and the toiler upon his knees begging with the same pathetic plea that the slave besought his master for mercy in the blackest days of slavery.

What has become of labor's strength? It is not manifested in "organizations." The representative leaders have too high a regard for the principles which they advocate to permit themselves to be contaminated by association with an element sentoriously proclaiming the "benefits" of the "union" when the "benefits" accrued are thrust into their own pockets. There are local unions who have business agents of whom it is said no effort is made to secure members or induce others than those employed by the city to join. The reason is given by the "business" agent himself that if others were admitted and the strength of his "organization" increased he would lose his graft as a business agent. Another may be elected and the former's usefulness ended. There are other "representative" gentlemen who have for reasons better known to themselves shifted their cards from one local to another until at last the only local available into which such "representatives" could jimmy themselves was one in which the English language was not spoken and neither being able to understand the other the said "representative" may practice his perfidy with an air of bravado that is fitting only the knave who is sacrificing the honest toiler to the highest bidder.

There are business men galore who do not hesitate to tell how they have been intimidated and threatened; how they are gouged and blackmailed by an aggregation alleging to be working in the interest of labor and representing the "union." Only during the week a representative of one of the largest firms in the city told the story of how the manager had been importuned for a "donation" to aid labor. The firm was about to "donate" $100 when some one suggested the advisability first of investigating. Upon investigation it was found no such organization existed.

The blackmail propositions that have been introduced and put forth in the name of labor are appaling and the vicious assaults made upon the business interests of this city in the name of labor have become such tremendous burdens that merchants, manufacturers, bankers, and business men in general are resenting them and look upon the work as that of an organized gang of the most prenicious and nefarious type.

Under the pretense of controlling thousands of workmen in the mills, factories and shops a special band has been selling and bargaining all labor and it is said preparations are now under way to confer with Chairman Sam Jamison of the Republican County Committee on the one side and Ex-Mayor Magee, whom it is said will lead the Brumbaugh faction, on the other for the sale and transfer of every employe in Allegheny county. This auction, compared by past campaigns should bring all the way from $1,500 to $3,500.

This knock-down-and-drag-out sale of the citizen voter does not in any way include the "program" privileges to hold the candidates up for from $50 to $100 each as the minimum, and there is no limit to the minimum.

The sale includes the "endorsement" by labor of every candidate no matter what his principles, so far as his platform is concerned he may vote any way he wishes. If he wants the seal of labor placed upon his "credentials" he may have this at the price of an extra $500 for a common legislature and for congressman $1,000. If the latter is in new crisp bills the amount looks better and the mob can whet its chops with much deeper affection for the candidate.

The real truth is that the "endorsement" of union labor has no longer any effect upon the voting masses and the sooner the political leaders begin to realize the truth of this the beter it will be for both the interest of labor and the public in general.

That has been clearly demonstrated in every campaign for the last ten years and no more clearly was it proven than in the last campaign when Bob McGrath, president of Iron City Trades Councils with the backing of Mayor Armstrong, the entire city and county administration and the influence of Ex-Mayor Magee and his friends. McGrath's defeat, too, was more overwhelming when it was known that Register of Wills, Willian Connor, was ill during the greater part of the campaign and unable to carry on his contest as he otherwise would have, had illness not interfered with his canvas.

Mention the numerical "union" labor to any man of sense in the city or whisper it to the real honest conservative leader and for the answer mark the grin of contempt that sweeps over the face. No one realizes this better than Mayor Armstrong and the Mayor's cabinet consists of a few who know the labor game from Alpha to Omega, so none of them are deceived by its alleged strength when wielded by the mob that pretends to carry it in the hollow of the hand and pass it over to the faction that produces the largest amount of money.

Manufacturers, bankers, merchants and politicians are sick of the "union" grafter and blackmailer. They no longer fear him; his day is done but these parasites are still sucking the life-blood from those who have scruples and are sincere: To the politician the "endorsement" by the "union" of a candidate for appointment to office is an impediment as it means only the sentiments of a clique who have already collected their share of the spoils in real money and labor's "endorsement" has no influence.

It is common knowledge that nothing signalizes defeat more definitely than the "endorsement of "union" labor and candidates look upon it with horror, but this does not discourage the parasite. He lands upon the back of his victim and the pest sticks until driven off by a pittance or a "donation."

Are the employers of labor going to recognize this aggregation or are they going to resist the encroachments of these brigands; are men of intelligence going to permit themselves to be clubbed into submission by a good-for-nothing clique of rowdies? The time is past for trifling; the day is gone for the slugger and the welfare of the labor movement depends as much upon the attitude of the employer as it does upon the honest leader to rid itself of the extortioner and the parasites that is living upon the unsuspecting toiler whose days labor is his capital while the grafting business agent builds his palatial home and rides to his office and along the boulevard in his latest model automobile.

STATE FIGHT OPENS FOR G. O. P. LEADERSHIP

Harmony Shattered in Naming Delegates-at-Large from Allegheny County.

While the plums won by the victors in the county and municipal elections held in Pennsylvania last fall are still hanging on the trees the call to arms has been sounded for another fight.

Political triple alliances and quadruple ententes in evidence during the last campaign are doomed to disruption. Generals and privates who fought together last November will be in opposite camps when the battle lines are drawn within the next few days.

The prize to be fought for is the Republican leadership of Pennsylvania. The contenders for this honor are Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh and the Vare Brothers of Philadelphia on the one hand and Senator Boies Penrose on the other.

At times it seemed as if Peace would triumph. But the ark of Harmony was wrecked on the political reefs of Allegheny county politics. The Penrose followers demanded the slating of E. V. Babcock and D. L. Gillespie, millionaire lumber operators of Pittsburgh, as delegates-at-large to the Republican National convention at Chicago.

Messrs. Babcock and Gillespie are strong supporters of Senator Penrose and have been heavy financial contributors in recent political campaigns. Coroner Samuel C. Jamison, leader of the Penrose forces in Allegheny county, undoubtedly is responsible for the senator's determination to make a fight over the slating of these two men. Jamison would as soon fight as eat—and besides, a surrender now would be fatal to the Penrose cause.

The Brumbaugh-Vare campaign in Allegheny county will be in the hands of Public Service Commissioner William A. Magee, David B. Johns, president of the Board of Assessment and Tax Revision and possibly J. Denny O'Neil.

With Coroner Jamison will be aligned Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, Senator Charles H. Kline and Max Leslie.

Just where County Commissioners A. C. Gumbert and Frank Harris will land in the fight is as yet problematical, although on the National delegate, treasurer, auditor general and committeemen fight they probably will be found in the Brumbaugh ranks.

E. D. Friebertshauser, county treasurer; William R. Bailey, clerk of courts and John D. Graham, recorder of deeds undoubtedly will line up with the Penrose-Jamison forces. Sheriff George W. Richards will in all probability use his influence for the governor while John P. Moore, controller, is an unknown quantity.

S. J. Grenet, Republican leader on the North Side, and county delinquent tax collector and a lieutenant of William A. Magee, at the present time is bitter against Governor Brumbaugh, but there is a possibility that he may go along at the last moment.

The fight undoubtedly will be a bitter one. Governor Brumbaugh's attitude on local option has made him many powerful enemies, who, however, can be induced to aid in furthering his political ambitions provided a guarantee is given that no local option bill will be passed during the next legislative session. And as pointed out in last week's issue of the National Labor Tribune, it seems as if Mr. Brumbaugh was not exactly sincere in his attempt to enact such legislation during his term of office.

START 8-HOUR CAMPAIGN.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—The A. F. of L. metal trades department will open its campaign for eight hours in Atlantic coast ship yards Saturday, February 12, when President O'Connell, of the department, will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting of ship workers to be held at the Parkway building auditorium, this city.

The campaign was agreed to at the last convention of the department and indorsed by the A. F. of L. convention. Organizers of the A. F. of L. and the various metal unions will assist in the agitation.

R. R. MANAGERS COMBINE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—It is stated that officials of leading railroads of this country are considering plans to organize a general conference of railway managers to negotiate with representatives of the brotherhoods of conductors, engineers, firemen and trainmen, whose members are now voting on an eight-hour day. If this proposed plan is successful it will be the first time that the railroads have united to this extent.

INTERPRET WAGE RATE LAW.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Because of a decision by the corporation counsel, city authorities have rejected the bid of a printing firm in Cooperstown, this state, to do the city printing. Trade unionists were sustained in their position that the eight hour and prevailing rate of wages features of the law under which the contract was let were not complied with. A court decision and an opinion by the state attorney general held that the prevailing rate of wages in the law meant the rate obtaining in the locality where the work is to be used.

Copper Miners Win Long Strike.

Assistance of Arizona Governor Aids Men in Fight for Higher Wages.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The Arizona copper strikers have won their fight.

With copper at the highest price for nine years and Governor George W. P. Hunt refusing them the use of armed guards, gunmen and strike breakers, the copper magnates of New York, Boston and Arizona at last gave up their attempt to starve 5,000 miners and their families into submission.

The strikers returned to work on Monday, January 31, under an agreement by which the companies agree to pay higher wages and to meet once a month with grievance committees selected by the men.

The victory marks a triumph for labor of the greatest importance, demonstrating as it does that labor can win its battles for industrial democracy when the government does its duty and protects the workers against hired thugs and professional strike breakers.

Mediators Davies and Myers of the United States Department of Labor deserve much of the credit for making the mine owners see the light. For months the latter refused to make any concession to redress grievances which the government's investigation had proved to be real and serious. They insisted that the strikers first go back to work. But with copper at 26 cents and with organized labor all over the country rallying to the miners' support, the mine owners' desire for big profits gradually overcame their opposition to giving their employees a voice in determining the conditions of employment.

Substantial wage increases were granted. Laborers are to be paid $2.50 a day instead of $1.62, and miners will receive, at the present price of copper, $3.41 a day, in accordance with a sliding scale. Carpenters will be paid $5 per day, machinists and boilermakers $5.31.

The settlement followed widespread publication of the facts of the strike by the Committe on Industrial Relations, including publication of articles in the New York Call and in the New Republic, a weekly journal, which brought the arbitrary conduct of the companies home to their New York directors, including William Church Osborn and Cleveland H. Dodge, of Phelps, Dodge & Co.

RURAL CREDIT URGED.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 9.—Support for rural credits legislation now pending in congress was asked of the state board of agriculture by Representative Moss, of Indiana, who declared that the farmer should have the advantage of funding his debt and paying it along lines similar to building and loan payments and endowment life insurance payments. He said the federal reserve banking system will not help agriculture "to the full measure of its possibilities" unless "supplemental legislation" is provided.

DON'T WEAKEN SEAMEN'S LAW.

WASHINGTON Feb. 9.—Acting under instructions of the last convention, A. F. of L. officials have addressed a letter to all affiliated bodies requesting that they urge their respective senators and representatives to oppose any weakening of the seamen's law.

The San Francisco convention declared that "the freedom of the seamen and the safety of the traveling public must at all times take precedence over private profit," and that "the A. F. of L. stands unalterably opposed to the repeal of the seamen's law or any attempt to impair the safety of travel at sea or renew the bonds under which seamen have been compelled to labor."

COMPENSATION LAW UPHELD.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 9.—Judge Oldfield, of the district court, has upheld the constitutionality of the compensation law, passed last year. A workman employed on the state capitol brought suit against the contractors and alleged that the compensation law deprived him of a right to trial by jury and was therefore in conflict with the constitution of the United States and of Oklahoma. The decision will be appealed to the state supreme court. A large number of similar suits are pending in various courts throughout the state.

PATTERN MAKERS RAISE WAGES

ELIABETH, N. J., Feb. 9.—Organized pattern makers employed by the Singer Sewing Machine company have raised wages as the result of a strike.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

TRIBULATION'S DESIGNED EFFECT

GOD'S PEOPLE CANNOT BE PREPARED FOR THE KINGDOM APART FROM ITS MINISTRY.

Subject of the Kingdom Very Prominent in Scripture—Ransom and Kingdom Its wo Most Prominent Doctrines — Most Momentous Period of World's History Now Present — Men's Hearts Alienated From God—Time of Trouble Necessary for Awakening Mankind to Their Need — Church's Tribulation of Different Nature and Purpose.

NEW YORK, CITY, February 6.—Pastor Russell gave a characteristic discourse here tonight at the New York City Temple, West 63rd street and Broadway. His text was, "We emust through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." (Acts 14:22.) He said in part.

God gave the kingdom of earth originally to Father Adam, and put everything in subjection to him. But Adam lost his dominion through sin. Then God imposed upon him the death penalty, which was shared through heredity by all his posterity. Jehovah God, foreknowng man's fall from his holy state, had provided beforehand for his recovery. In due time, more than four thousand years after the pronouncement of the death sentence, Jesus came to earth to give a Ransom-price whereby man might be restored to Divine favor and have an opportunity to gain life eternal. Our Lord's death was the turning-point of the world's history.—1 Corinthians 15:21, 22.

Abraham's natural seed, the Jews, were expecting all that God had promised in respect to His favors and the Messianic Kingdom. But there was another feature of God's Plan which they did not see. This was the selection of a Church to be Abraham's Spiritual Seed, through whom all the families of the earth were to be blessed. Today we are entering upon the seventh thousand years since man's creation and fall—man's great Sabbatic Year. The Church is almost completed. The time for the setting up of the Kingdom has come.

Ever since man lost his kingdom its restoration has been more or less vaguely expected. At the time of the fall God declared that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. All the blessings implied in this statement looked forward to the Messanic Kingdom, through which man's first dominion was to be restored. Now this Kirgdom is just at hand. Therefore we are living today in the most important period of the world's history. As the poet has said:

"We are living; we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time.
In an Age on ages telling;
To be living is sublime."

These words seem almost prophetic of the glorious time to come, and these glories are about to burst upon the world. But the world will enter into that Kingdom through much tribulation. Mankind are not ready to appreciate their needs, their impotency. They have been thinking that they could do almost anything. Leading minds have thought that they could heal the world, could properly govern and bless it. But now it is gradually dawning upon the people that these hopes and plans are abortive. Now we see their schemes going to pieces. The theories and projects of those Christian people who a short time ago assured us that soon they would convert the world are being scattered like chaff before the wind.

THE TIME OF TROUBLE NECESSARY.

These nations which have claimed to be Christian, to be Christ's Kingdom—"Christendom"—are demonstrating that they have not understood the real Kingdom at all. Instead of being Christ's Kingdom of blessing and peace, they have proven to be kingdoms of blood-shed, kingdoms of this world. God will bring in His Kingdom through great tribulation, as foretold by the Prophet Daniel and the Lord Jesus Christ. (Daniel 12:1; Matthew 24:21.) This tribulation has already begun. We can hardly imagine anything worse, but present distresses are only "the beginning of sorrows." Darker and darker will grow the times until men's hearts shall utterly fail them. All their cherished hopes and plans will be overthrown by the mighty whirlwind of trouble. Then earth's rightful King will take control and bring order out of confusion. Upon the ruins of human institutions, plans and shattered hopes men shall see arise a glorious new arrangement which shall be "the desire of all nations."

Men's hearts are already failing them through fear of the things which they see coming upon the earth. (Luke 21:25-28.) This is because they are entering into the coming Kingdom through much tribulation. God cannot introduce His Kingdom through peace and blessing. Men have no ears to hear His Word. They are too busy looking after their own projects and affairs, too busy making money. They care not for God, do not appreciate Him. Consequently they require a catastrophe to awaken them. The coming great tribulation will do this most thoroughly. The ears that now hear only the jingle of money will then open to hear something much more important. Men will begin to cry unto the Lord, as upon the Sea of Galilee the disciples cried unto Jesus. Then He arose and rebuked the wind and the waves; and immediately there was a great calm.—Matthew 8:23-27; Psalm 46.

THE REAL THOUGHT OF THE TEXT.

An examination of our context reveals the fact that the Apostle is referring, not to the trouble upon the world, but to that upon the Church. Living at the beginning of the Gospel Age, he was telling the Church of the tribulations necessary to fit them for the positions in the Kingdom to which God has called them. So surely as we are God's children we shall have tribulation. At first our painful experiences are not seen to be a blessing; but after a while we come to see that adversity drives us nearer to God and gradually develops strength of character.

The Church will not share the world's tribulation. Those who are called and chosen and faithful will be accounted worthy to escape those things coming upon the world. (Luke 21:36.) The tribulation of the Church will be different from that of the world. Our Lord Jesus suffered tribulation. That of the Church will be similar to His. Messiah's entrance into the Kingdom is different from the way in which the world will enter. Jesus enters as King; and the Church is invited to share with Him His Kingdom, as joint-heirs, under His Headship. The world will enter into the Kingdom as subjects of the King.

GOD'S HARP OF MANY STRINGS.

We are beginning to see reasons for every feature of the Divine Plan. The Church is called to wonderful glory and honor. In Revelation 14:1-3, we read of a song which no one could learn to sing except the hundred and forty-four thousand who will, with their Lord and Head, constitute the Church in glory. This song is a Message. We who have learned are singing it in all the affairs of our lives. The world does not understand this song; neither does the Church nominal, nor do the babes in Christ. A Christian must get beyond the infantile state before he can sing this new song.

Not all Christians have the ability to sing this song. Some can sing it more appreciatively than can others. The whole Divine Testimony, whether communicated by the Law, the Prophets, our Lord, or His Apostles, is in harmony; and this fact is the proof of their Divine inspiration. The Scripture of the Old and New Testament constitute what the Lord Himself calls "the Harp of God." When turned by the Holy Spirit dwelling in our hearts, and swept by the fingers of devoted searchers after Divine Truth that Harp yields the most entrancing melodies that ever fell on mortal ears.

Once some of us harped about civic righteousness, prohibition, female suffrage, etc. But now we have something far grander. We have the most important subject in all the world. We are harping about the Divine Plan of Salvation. We have the Message of God, the Glad Tidings which yet shall be to all people. We are ambassadors for the Lord. He has accepted us in Christ, and has authorized us to tell His Message to all who will hear—to tell them that God will receive into His favor again those who come to Him through the Savior, through faith in the precious blood of Christ.

But when we come to discuss some of the deep things of God, we sing, as it were, a new song. It is not really new, however; for it was sung in the days of the Apostles. But it has been so long forgotten that it is practically new today. All of the people of God are privileged to learn this song. Some learn it more quickly than others. It is "the song of Moses and the Lamb."—Revelation 15:3, 4.

When we come to see how great is God's Plan, formed before the foundation of the world—that Jesus should be the Lamb of God, that would take away the sin of the world; that in due time God would select a Bride for His Son; that afterwards He would establish the glorious Messianic Kingdom for a thousand years, in order that every member of Adam's race might have an opportunity to hear of God's love in Christ and be saved; and that eventually all the wilfully wicked would be destroyed—we are indeed ready to say, "How wonderful are Thy works, O Lord! Who shall not come and worship Thee."

PREPARATION FOR FUTURE EXALTATION.

It is to this class who can sing "the song of Moses and the Lamb," those who have given their hearts to the Lord, who have been accepted by the Father, and who have become the children of God through spirit-begetting—it is to this class that our text applies. How reasonable is the thought that we should enter the Kingdom through much tribulation! If the Master needed tribulation in order to be perfected as a Son, to demonstrate His love and loyalty to the Father's will, how could we expect to be treated differently? How otherwise could the Heavenly Father recognize us as His children?

Perhaps we once wondered why the Lord permitted such trials and tribulations to come upon the righteous, while the wicked often had a comparatively easy time. Now we see why this is. God has invited these righteous ones to become kings and priests, to reign over the earth during the next Age; and in order to qualify for this great work this class must reach a certain condition of mind and heart, a certain development of character. Unless they learn their lessons they will not be prepared for their future high station. Every one exalted to reign in the Kingdom of God will be qualified for his place; otherwise he will not be there. No one will be appointed through favoritism or partizanship. Each individual must thoroughly demonstrate his fitness.

No trial can overtake us that is not subject to the Lord's control. He will make all things work together for good to those who love Him. If we would be of the Church of glory, we must become like our Lord, who loved righteousness and hated iniquity. We must be thoroughly honest. We cannot do as do others, for the reason that we are following a different course. We have entered into a Covenant with God, not only to love God with all our soul and to keep the Golden Rule, but to do more. In order to be merely just we are bound to love God and keep the Golden Rule. Jesus did all this and more. He loved His neighbor far beyond what He would have His neighbor do for Him. His love led Him to die for others. We are privileged to do likewise.

We must live up to the Golden Rule. Above all things we should learn to appreciate and practice the Golden Rule; for it is a fundamental principle in God's requirements. The Heavenly Father must have the first place in our hearts. God must be first. We must intend to love our neighbors as ourselves, although we may not always be able to do so. While we may not be able to do all that we would, yet the longing to do so must ever be in our hearts. And it is this honest will that brings us into conflict, necessarily, with those of a contrary will.

Thus we see whence this tribulation comes to the Lord's people. In the case of Jesus, His name was cast out as evil, because He was true, because He was honest, because He would not join with the scribes and Pharisees, because He was wholly loyal to the Lord. And "the disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. If they have called the Master of the House Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of His Household?"—Matthew 10:24-26.

STONES FOR THE SPIRITUAL TEMPLE.

Throughout the Gospel Age God's people have been prepared for the Kingdom "through much trbulation." St. Peter speaks of them as "living stones," for the great spiritual Temple. Of that glorious Structure Jesus is the Chief Corner Stone. He has already been chiseled, polished and taken His position. The last members of the Church are now being chiseled and polished for whatever place they shall occupy in His glorious Temple. For more than eighteen hundred years the work of preparing the "living stones" has been in progress. Their tribulations have been preparing them for their position in the Temple structure.

But if under the Lord's chisel or hammer any one should fail in obedience, in submission, in loyalty, in learning his lesson, he might become unfit for the place to which he had been invited, and thus become what St. Paul calls "a castaway." (1 Corinthians 9:27.) He might serve some other purpose in the future, but he would not be fit for the place for which he was originally intended.

We should submit ourselves fully to God. We are to be "His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." (Ephesians 2:10.) It is God who is working in us both to will and to do. When first we gave our hearts to Him, He was working in us to will. After the spirit-begetting that followed our consecration to Him, our minds began to expand. We began to grow in grace and in knowledge. Then we began to see and appreciate our privilege of serving the Lord. Thus God's grace worked in us to do.

God does not accept works as a ground of justification, however, we are justified because of our faith in the Ransom-price provided by our Lord Jesus. Until we became children of God we had neither opportunity nor ability to do any work that God would accept. Now that we are related to Him as children, He is working in us. But we have hardly begun our good works as yet. They are to be carried forward throughout the Millenial Age, and on into the eternal future.

OUR FATHER'S TENDER CARE.

But now we are not able to do much. Our main work now is to show God by our endeavors what we would like to do. We may make heroic efforts; we may do our very best in the Lord's service; but after all there is little that we can do, and that little is done very imperfectly. Our work is acceptable to God because of the honest, earnest, loving effort which He sees; for it represents our heart's sincere desire to do His will. When we first come to God, we have not learned to do things in a wise way; and we are often like a child carrying a pail of water and spilling more than he carries home. God lets us have these experiences, that we may learn wisdom by our mistakes. Meantime, He accepts the will that prompts our act, imperfect though it be.

We are not, therefore, to become discouraged because of our mistakes and imperfections. As we seek to serve our Heavenly Father, He is very tender and merciful to us. Let us take everything to Him in prayer, and persevere in the good way. Let us cultivate in our hearts a strong love for everything that is right, that is noble, that is Godlike. We are to love righteousness and hate iniquity—injustice. This rule should apply to all the affairs of life, both great and small. We should always take our stand for what is right.

Then let us have our minds so thoroughly established in righteousness that when the Lord shall give us a perfect body, we may be ready, may be found worthy of a share in the glorification of the overcoming Church. But let us remember that we shall not get the necessary qualifications by miracles, but by trials, difficulties, tribulation. (Romans 5:3-5.) For it is written, "We must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of God."

My subscription expires this week for the Tribune, also the one you are sending to Mrs. Bena Ralls, of Perry, Mo. I am sorry I can not renew them at this time, but I haven't the money. May do so later on. I am very much pleased with the large clear type in which the sermons are printed—so easy and pleasant for any one to read.

While I took the Tribune principally for the sermons and other religious literature, I have enjoyed reading many other interesting articles published. Brother Nelson's essays are fine and much appreciated. I hope you may have success with your paper and be able to continue giving the sermons to those who do enjoy them and are so hungry for them every week.

May the dear Lord's rich blessings be yours and 1916 will prove to be for you a prosperous, happy year.

Respectfully,
MRS. M. L. MOORE.

THE BRITISH REFORMERS.

Essay IV.

THE BIBLE IS THE TORCH OF CIVILIZATION.

One thing demonstrated by the history of the reformers and subsequent developments as a result of their efforts, and that beyond a shadow of a doubt, is the slogan of Pastor Russell that "The Bible is the Torch of Civilization"—("It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching")—for our modern civil life traces back through the American political reformers by way of Roger Williams to Luther's principle (resurrected from St. Paul) of "the just shall live by faith," which was the first to break the compact life of the Dark Ages. The doctrine of Indulgence made life corporate through common interest—it held the layety and clergy as a unit. But being justified by faith made moral conduct an individual affair and progress is in exact ratio to individual thought and conduct.

As further indicating the truthfulness of Pastor Russell's claim that "The Bible is the torch of civilization" we state that the Bible study following Reformation inspired Gustave Adolphus, king of Sweden, to outline an ideal commonwealth based upon the principles of the Golden Rule of Justice as taught by Christ, to be established upon the shores of America, which has been discovered by Columbus just before the Reformation started. The cruel and tempestuous society produced by the God of wrath of the creeds of the Dark Ages, the sorrows and devastations of the religious wars, kindled in his heart the idea to plant a colony as the beginning of a general asylum for the homeless and persecuted people, and had intended to preserve the same by his royal protection and care. But he was slain on the battle fields of Germany for the cause of the Reformation. His ideas of starting a colony and state established upon the principle guaranteeing religious liberty was carried out by a member of his cabinet, his prime minister and successor in his administration, Axel Oxenstiern, and Peter Minuit, a German nobleman who had previously established a Dutch colony on the Hudson. The colony was established upon the Delaware near the present site of Philadelphia; this Swedish settlement was subsequently conquered by Dutch settlers and later by the English, and the plans of these noble men shattered. It remained for Roger Williams and William Penn, influenced by the teachings of the Bible, to establish permanent colonies where liberty of conscience was respected.

The Bible had been in dead language during the Dark Ages and the Priesthood was the only authority in matter of faith. Wycliffe, the English reformer of the fourteenth century, was the first to translate the Bible into the living language of the people and insisted upon its teachings as the authority for religious faith and practice above that of the clergy. Huss later advocated the same principle in Bohemia. But the art of printing was not known in their day so the poor people had no access to it on account of the expense envolved in supplying duplicate copies; besides few could read. The Bible was studied by the wealthy and educated who taught the common people. Not until the printing press was invented did the common people have access to God's word. Luther translated it into German and had it printed, Calvin did as much for France, as also did Wishart for Scotland. Tyndale decided to have it printed in the English language and place it into the hands of the people of England and have them study it direct. To the claim of the church authorities that they had given the Bible to the people since the days of Wycliffe and that the church alone could explain it, Tyndale responded: "Do you know who taught the eagle to find their prey? That same God teaches His hungry children to find their Father in His Word. Far from having given us the Scriptures, it is you who burn those who teach them; and if you could you would burn the Scriptures themselves."

Experience taught Tyndale the necessity of placing the Bible in the hands of the common pleople. Wherever he preached the principles of the gospel his enemies followed perverting and misrepresenting his teachings. How was the people to know who was right? Says Tyndale: "While I am sowing in one place, the enemy ravages the field I have just left. I cannot be everyhere. Oh! if Christians possessed the Holy Scriptures in their own tongue, they could of themselves withstand these sophists. Without the Bible it is impossible to establish the laity in the truth. Christians must read the New Testament in their mother-tongue. One holdeth this doctrine, another that. Now each of these authors contradicts the other. How can we distinguish him who says right from him who says wrong? How? Verily, by God's Word."

Tyndale resolved to give the printed Bible to the laity. Wycliffe's translation was faulty and contained many errors, Tyndale was to complete the work of Wycliffe in giving the Bible to his countrymen. Driven from his home by persecution he went from one city to another with his enemies on his heels. All England seemed against him. He went to Germany and found friends at the city of Worms, where, a short time before Luther defended the gospel. He prosecuted his work here without hindrance. Three thousand copies of the New Testament were soon finished and another addition followed in the same year. They were smuggled into England in various ways and circulated throughout the country. The bishops of Durham bought up many of the Bibles to keep them from falling into the hands of the people. This only helped matters along, for Tyndale needed the money to purchase material for a new and better edition.

From the circumstances connected with the life of Tyndale and his labors the real cause that gives place to the persecution from those entrenched in error is because he taught the people. The clergy had already given the people the Bible but claimed the right to interpret it. Why was Jesus persecuted by the Scribes, Pharisees and Sadducees? Because He taught the people! The Apostles were persecuted for the same reason. The record is that "They were grieved that they taught the people." Tyndale's case is precisely the same, as also was Luther's and that of all reformers that followed, down to and including Pastor Russell.

Tyndale was betrayed into the hands of his enemies and suffered imprisonment. He finally witnessed for his faith by a martyr's death. But he supplied the material for others to carry on the fight. Latimer, Ridley, Cranmer and others followed—all men of learning who taught the people. They all met with the same treatment. Latimer exclaimed to his fellow-martyr as the flames were about to silence their forces: "Be of good comfort, we shall this day light such a candle in England as, I trust by God's grace shall never be put out." Wycliffe said as much to an ecclesiastical tribunal in and seven days a week over long periods together.

The position of organized labor here with regard to the Government's proposed Compulsory Military Service bill is still largely antagonistic owing clearly to the fear that lying behind the present military measure there may be one by and by embodying industrial conscription. On the ground that the Government's proposals on the question of military service are of such a character as to undermine the principles upon which the trade union and labor movement has been built up, the executive of the National Union of Railwaymen have decided:

That any such proposal involving the confiscation of the lives of men and leaving the material resources of the nation in the hands of the privileged class cannot be termed national service, and should therefore be opposed by the united forces of labor.

That the number of eligible unattested single men does not appear sufficiently large materially to affect the issue of the war, even if the whole of them were enlisted, and we are therefore compelled to believe that the advocates of compulsion are actuated by other motives than those of securing victory for the Allies.

That unless the Government are prepared as a preliminary step immediately to confiscate the wealth of all national assets, we are prepared by every means in our power to resist the confiscation of men whose only wealth is their labor power, as we believe that if such a principle as that now proposed by Government is once adopted it will mean the loss of those liberties which are essential to effective industrial organization and action, and will mean the permanent enslavement of our class

The National Executive Council of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, representing 33,000 railwaymen, meeting at Leeds on January 13th, carried a resolution expressing uncompromising opposition to any system of compulsory military service as the greatest menace to organized labor, and because under prevailing conditions it is not practicable to apply any such measure with equity. A further resolution was carried calling on the Government to conscript all wealth beyond a reasonable margin for the maintenance of life.

Meetings up and down the country are taking place and on the whole it must be said that anti-compulsion votes are general. Lancashire miners are divided upon the question. The South Wales' miners seem to be in strong opposition to the bill, as also do the Scottish men. The Yorkshire miners' association, which has 120,000 members and has lost 632 members in the war already, is also against the government measure. All these bodies stand for a firm prosecution of the war, but without the application of compulsory military service. The Miners' Federation of Great Britain at a special congress held in London on January 13th took a vote which showed 653,000 against the bill, 38,000 for it and 25,000 neutral. At the same time it must be remembered that there are said to be more than 250,000 miners in the army. Furthermore, preceding the above conference it appears that the Nottinghamshire district was the only one in which a vote on the subject was taken before the delegates journed down to London for the above-mentioned congress and the Nottinghamshire miners plumped in favor of the bill.

Bailie T. McKerrell, one of the Scottish miners' leaders and who attended the above congress, said: "There is no doubt that our decision here represents the votes of the lodge meetings; whether it represents the opinion of the lodge members is quite another matter."

Then we have Alexander Wilkie, a Labor Member of Parliament and well-known trade union leader, who has sent a strong reply to the labor representative committee in his constituency in answer to their resolution of disapproval of the action of the Labor Members of Parliament who voted for the Military Service bill. He says he is a whole-hearted supporter of the government in the crisis. The men who were against compulsion wanted him to vote as they directed. He reminds the committe that he is not a delegate, but a representative, and a trustee for the country as well as the constituency. He has no intention of narrowing his patriotism to a class, nor will he give the whole of his services to a faction. People who had done nothing for recruiting were now crying out against the mildest form of compulsion ever invented. Had they helped in recruiting the necessity for the bill might have been averted.

There your correspondent must leave the question. On the face of it the trade unions appear to be dead against compulsory military service, but underneath this apparent unanimity there seems to be a vast number of currents working. In the meantime of course the government can only take account of the things it sees and what it does see is that labor is against conscription. Furthermore, the above mentioned miners' congress with its enormous vote against the bill was even more, to a certain degree, indecisive owing to the fact that after this unqualified hostility to the measure had been declared another conference was arranged for to consider further action should the measure become law.

Clyde (Scotland) seamen engaged in coasting trade declined to sign articles of a new agreement to become operative at the New Year unless they were conceded an advance of $2.50 weekly. A conference lasting over six hours was held in the Central Station Hotel, Glasgow, on January 14th, and eventually the shipowners conceded an increase of $1.25 wekly, all other conditions to remain as at present. The officials of the unions affected undertook not to support in any way any appeal for a further advance. The concession brings the minimum wage for seamen on coasting vessels up to $13.75.

Belleville, Ill., an. 28.

I canot refrain from writing and telling you what a grand paper you are publishing, especially the religious pages. The new style in which you are printing Pastor Russell's sermons and Bro. Nelson's articles are the best ever.

I also want to thank you for the copy of Whitaker's Almanac that I ordered from you. It surely is up to date and tells everything you want to know up to and including 1915. Again thanking you for publishing such a grand paper, and may you continue in the good work, until the sounding of the last bell, I remain yours in Truth first, last and all the time.

JAMES TAYLOR.

Durant, Okla., Feb. 3.

I am today renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower.

I know it is past due, but about the time my subscription expired, there appeared a letter in the Tribune which caused me to think of not renewing, though I have been a subscriber for years and am greatly attached to the paper.

The letter referred to was an attack upon another paper or rather its editor. It was no trouble to understand who was meant, and as I am a reader of the paper in the Northwest, I have every reason to know that the editor has no such ambitions, and if he did express such sentiments it would seal his doom, as far as the support of the Truth people is concerned.

I have never seen anything published in that paper that shows such bitterness as the letter in question. I hope you will publish this, and if the man is a Christian, let him reflect: Whose spirit is manifest in his letter? If he is an honest, upright man of the world, let him ask himself if it is honorable or just to make such charges with no better authority than "I am told."

In any event he can never heal the wounds his cruel accusations have caused, not only to the object of his attack, but to many readers of the Tribune who know the charges are without foundation.

I know it would have been unfair to turn down an old friend like the Tribune for the first and only bad thing when so many good things are published every week, and I hope to be able to support the Tribune as long as it maintains its high standard of excellence.

With best wishes for your success during the coming year.

I am sincerely,
MRS. S. S. MADDOX.

The Dalles, Ore., Feb. 3.

We are renewing our subscription through the Watch Tower office. Have been a subscriber for about ten years. We greatly enjoy your paper having been attracted by the publishing of Pastor Russell's sermons, the Sunday School lessons and letters of the friends, all of which we greatly appreciate.

While we have been taking your paper and enjoying these good things, we have never before written you, yet we have felt very grateful to you. May the Lord richly bless you for your labors. We also enjoy the other features of your paper. Your bold stand in exposing the fakes and fakirs. Truly this is a day of bringing to light the hidden things of darkness, also the labor questions. The article of Secretary Wilson in a recent issue in which he suggested putting the idle land to a state of cultivation is well worthy of note. While not a great many may have noticed much in this article yet we should not become discouraged for only a few, comparatively, see enough in our Heavenly Father's great work to speak of it to others. We are glad that you do and are passing it on. Little do the great majority realize that this earth is God's gift to man. Psalm 115-116. Some seem to try to get it all-controlling large holdings producing nothing, which if put in use, would support many who are now unemployed. Few realize the greatness of this wonderful gift. God has given it to man for a home. In it all our needs, food, drink, clothing and fuel are supplied. Man has been longing for this home and the whole creation has been groaning. (Rom. 8:22), but their groaning will change to joy. (Ps. 30:5.) When the glorious Millennial morning will have come, then man will have a home never to be destroyed. Ecc. 1:4. No wonder our forefather's when they saw this glorious day recorded these encouraging words:

"Lift up your heads, desponding pilgrims;
Give to the winds your needless fears;
He who hath died on Calvary's mountain,
Soon is to reign a thousand years.
A thousand years! Earth's coming glory!
Prophets foresaw in time of old."

We hear a great deal about the high cost of living. Put man back to old Mother Earth and let her yield her increase. By so doing, we will have more food, more clothing. This will require more machinery which will give more labor. Our poor houses will soon begin to disappear and eventually man will long enjoy the work of his hands. Isa. 65:22.

We are glad to read in Psa. 67 that the earth will yield her increase. We are glad also to see people awakening to their needs and to note the many lines of reform work which are but signs of a better day to come.

Wishing you continued success.

Yours sincerely,
MR. and MRS. B. L. KENYON.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. Who will start the ball rolling?

Humility the Great Lesson For All. The Only Begotten an Illustration. How He Was Rich—How He Became Poor—Why He Was Exalted and How—Church Walks In His Steps.

"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might become rich."—2 Cor. 8:9.

THE Epistle to the Philippians has been styled an epistle of joy—so richly did the Apostle's heart respond to the faithfulness of the brethren at Philippi. He would have them know that he appreciated their love, and that such love should abound toward all. His joy would be filled full in proportion as he could realize that the brethren had the mind of Christ. He exhorted, therefore, that they remember the conditions on which such character could be developed.

Nothing should be done through strife or vain-glory. All their conduct should be marked by lowliness, humility and willingness to discern the good qualities of others—noting wherein others were superior to themselves. They should be ever on the alert to appreciate true quality and character wherever found—looking for noble qualities in others, and generously hoping that these existed even when not discerned, considering the interests of the Lord's cause, and ignoring self-will and pride. They should not look merely at their own interests, but also upon those of others—the rights of others, their ability. This, the Apostle assures us, is a mark of the Holy Spirit.

Meek and Lowly.

This mind, this disposition, was fully exemplified in Jesus, declares St. Paul. In His prehuman condition, when in a form of God, a spirit being, Jesus was humble. He did not meditate a usurpation of Divine authority to exalt Himself, as did Satan. He had no thought of robbing the Divine glory and honor by putting Himself upon an equality with God the Father. On the contrary, He had the same spirit then as afterwards, when He said, "Not My will, but Thine, be done"; and again, "My Father is greater than all."—Luke 22:42; John 10:29; 14:28.

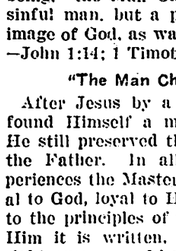
The Master always had this disposition of reverence for the Father and of full confidence in Him. Hence, when the time came for the Father to send a Savior into the world, first to redeem it and later on to become its King and Deliverer, the proposal to render this great service to God and to men was proffered to the Logos—"the Only Begotten of the Father"—who promptly accepted it. This involved a great humiliation—a leaving of the dignity of the chiefest place on the spirit plane to become a human being, "the Man Christ Jesus"—not a sinful man, but a perfect one, in the image of God, as was Adam originally. —John 1:14; 1 Timothy 2:5; Heb. 7:26.

"The Man Christ Jesus."

After Jesus by a change of nature found Himself a man amongst men, He still preserved the same loyalty to the Father. In all His earthly experiences the Master was faithful, loyal to God, loyal to His Covenant, loyal to the principles of righteousness. Of Him it is written, "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." (Psalm 45:7.) The oil of gladness represented our Lord's holy joy which sustained Him during this period when He made Himself of no reputation and became poor indeed—finally losing even His life—all in loyalty to the Father's will and the Program marked out in the Bible.

His final cry on Calvary was, "It is finished!" All that the Father had given Him to do in the way of sacrifice had been accomplished. Then it was the Father's turn to act, to fulfil His good promises to His faithful Son.

The Apostle tells us of this, saying, "Him hath God highly exalted, and given a name which is above every name"—a title, a distinction, a place, above all others. He was received into glory; and all the angels of God worshiped Him whom the Father had thus exalted to His own right hand, giving Him, in addition to what He had resigned, glory and immortality—the Divine nature.



Every Knee Shall Bow.

But still more glory is yet to come to the great Redeemer. Those who crucified Him, yea, all mankind, for whom He tasted death, are yet to be made aware of His great sacrifice on their behalf and of the high exaltation which came to Him as a result. He is to be the world's King of Glory, and is to reign for a thousand years. As Verse 10 declares, eventually every knee shall bow and every tongue acknowledge Him. All others not willing thus to recognize and obey are to be destroyed from amongst the people as "natural brute beasts." (2 Peter 2:12; Jude 10; Acts 3:23.) All this will be directly to the Father's glory; for the entire Plan of Salvation is of the Father and through the Son.—1 Corinthians 8:6.

other words: "With whom, think you, are you contending? With an old man, on the brink of the grave? No! with truth,—truth which is stronger than you, and will overcome you." The remarks of these men regarded as a prophecy came true in founding the American republic upon the principles of the Golden Rule; all the elimentary principles of liberty which the Americans call their own—both civil and religious—had their birth and development in Great Britain.

THE EXODUS FROM EGYPT TO CANAAN.

Since the reformers fell asleep the Bible has been a veritableMoses that has led millions from the Egyptian bondage of Europe to the Canaan of America. As God demonstrated His power by hardening the heart of Phaaoh by His goodness so that he oppressed Israel all the more, so the spirit of a modern Moses in the person of Luther gave place to the taskmaster spirit of Knox and Calvin during the seventeenth century. The state religion of England was almost as cruel and relentless in stamping out all attempts at Bible study as was Papacy formerly. While not going to the extremes of physical tortures of Papacy, hundreds were cast into prison who refused to conform to the rituals of the established church Banishment was meted out to those who dared the reigning powers—shipload after shipload of heretics, principally Puritans, were deported from England. This persecution finally led the liberty loving of Europe to brave the perils of the sea and of a pioneer life on the shores of America, and laid the foundation of a great Republic that was to reflect upon Europe: "Liberty enlightening the world."

The age that followed the stormy doctrinal winds of the Reformation was, in contradistinction, destitute of reform in doctrine of any consequence but centered more on ceremony—the burning question of the age were the forms of worship that prevailed inherited from Papacy. This ceremony the State Church of England attempted to enforce upon all of the factions of what is known as the Anglican Church. As to the causes leading up to the persecution that resulted in the exodus to America we leave for the pen of E. G. White to relate. We here present ten paragraphs from this writer:—

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—In a report to the Consumers' League, Mrs. Frederick Nathan, president, stated that 74 per cent of the flowers made in the United States are made in this city, under conditions that should force the abolition of all tenement manufacture. Whole families were found working long hours under unsanitary conditions. Babies as young as 2½ years were found working. One had learned to strip the gauze from leaves which had been packed on it. Four children in one family, the oldest 10 and the youngest 4, worked from 6 in the morning till 8 at night, and a young girl of 15, a semi-invalid, putting stems on berries at 1 cent a gross, could only make 15 cents a day when her little sister helped.

CITIZENS OF THE VALLEY TURN AGAINST STRIKERS

Local Union No. 85 Withdraws Support and Sentiment is Turned in Favor of Street Railway Company.

The strike against the Allegheny Valley Street Railway Company is one of the worst outrages that has been perpetrated against a public service corporation in many years and one that is not only jeopardizing the lives of thousands of people, but practically paralyzing the business interests as well as the comforts and conveniences of over one hundred thousand people.

This strike has been continued since last July and the only thing involved is the replacing of an employee who violated the rules and is unfit in the estimation of the company to be continued any longer in the service of the company.

That the company had sufficient reasons to remove the employee is the general opinion of the public, but the removal it is claimed afforded an excuse for other demands and these in a measure have been used to cover up the real issue which brought about the contention when the company sought to enforce the highest discipline in the hope of insuring the public the greatest amount of safety.

However, after nearly eight months of the most bitter conflict the management of the railway company is determined to hold fast to its original purpose and the better citizens it is said are actually endorsing the stand taken by the company. They declare there are no grounds for the continuation of the strike and the number actually involved is less than six men. Furthermore, Pittsburgh Local No. 85, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, have repudiated the strikers and have withdrawn their support. At a previous meeting it was decided to contribute $12.50 a day to the support of the jitney service inaugurated by the Tarentum Local, No. 528.

The refusal to contribute any longer to the support of the strike was decided at a regular meeting of Local No. 85, and this action was almost unanimous. This vote was recently taken but not before notices had been sent to the Pittsburgh car men by P. J. Quart, president, and J. J. Thorpe, business agent. By an overwhelming vote the men decided to discontinue the contribution and this is taken as fully vindicating the position of the railway company and a repudiation of the demands of a very few men who have been responsible for the death of at least a half dozen citizens and the maiming and crippling of 50 more.

This strike small as it is and unimportant as the question involved has cost the business men and citizens of the Allegheny valley towns adjacent to Tarentum, as well as the latter, hundreds of thousands of dollars and the vandalism committed upon the property of the railways company is regarded as outrageous. All this has been committed under the pretense that labor's rights have been in the balance while in reality the whole trouble was centered around the determination of the company to enforce obedience to the rules.

The men in the mills and factories whose sentiments have always been favorable to organized labor, have been keenly disappointed and express themselves has deeply grieved over the reign of terror brought about in the progressive towns affected through this contention which has resulted in so much wreck and ruin to innocent parties as well as the company that has been a victim of irresponsible men.

It is claimed that had the trouble occurred in the city the protection which would have been secured through the police department would have been sufficient to have ended the struggle in a short time, but the inability to furnish the necessary police protection resulted in a real reign of anarchy where law was disregarded and the property of the citizen was constantly in jeopardy. Even law-abiding citizens trembled lest their property should become the object of destruction and men and women lived in constant fear of offending a few who carried on their vandalism in open defiance of the law.

That the men in the mills and factories as well as in the stores have become disgusted is most certain and the merchants, bankers and business men in general have lost all faith in the cause. The railway company has won the struggle through the violent course persued by a very few who sought to browbeat the corporation into recognition of what would eventually mean a repitition of the controversy.

The president of the Tarentum local where the trouble originated early saw his blunder and he returned to work and had the rest followed his course the struggle would have ended with a well-earned victory for the men; but one man demanded that the company be humiliated and insisted that unreasonable terms be exacted with the result that the struggle has continued for nearly eight months with victory in the hands of the railways company.

Everybody now realizes the injustice of the demands and the riduculous attitude of the men and this has removed the fear of being molested.

By the position taken the company has established confidence and the public is patronizing the service. Every day the hostile feeling against the company is growing less and the traveling public is crowding the cars. There is ample protection offered and the company assures a safe ride.

When the strike started the car windows were smashed and cars were badly wrecked, but this intense feeling has been eliminated and

British Labor Party Holds Convention

Over Two Million Trades Unionists Represented by Delegates.

Thomas Reeve, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, February 2.

Today the fifteenth annual convention of the Labor Party opens at Bristol. In preparation for this the annual report of the party, a 96-page pamphlet, has been published crammed with interesting figures, financial and otherwise. This report gives the total membership of the party as 2,093,365 as against 1,607,897 at the corresponding date in 1914. The Labor Party was established in the year 1900 and was formed by an association of 41 trade unions with a membership of 353,070. Added to these were socialist societies with a membership of 22,861. Fifteen years after, at the present date, we find the number of trade unions affiliated with the Labor Party increased to 111 with a total membership of 2,053,735. The socialist societies affilliated have dwindled to two and these have a total membership of 32,838. In the intervening years, therefore, the trade union constituent of the Labor Party has increased 550 per cent in membership whilst the socialist constituent has increased about 50 per cent. Of the two socialist societies the bigger one is the Independent Labor Party, usually referred to as the I. L. P., which claims a membership of 30,000, whilst the other is the Fabian Society, a middle-class socialist organization, which has just 2,838 members. Finally, there are affiliated with the Labor Party 170 trades councils and small local labor parties. The membership of these is an undetermined figure and is not taken into account in the Labor Party's statistics. They are all local concerns which label themselves labor and have the right to send a delegate to the labor convention upon satisfying the organizers that they have genuine labor interests and can pay an affiliation fee of either $3.75 or $7.50.

There are some curiosities of representation at this convention which opens today. For example, the I. L. P. with 30,000 members has 25 delegates who include Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden, F. W. Jowett, W. C. Anderson, who are all Labor Members of Parliament, and clever women like Margaret Bondfield, Mary Macarthur and Katherine Bruce-Glasier. Then we have the Amalgamated Society of Engineers with 140,000 members, that is nearly five times the membership of the I. L. P., only sending 12 delegates. The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners with 40,000 members or 10,000 more than the I. L. P. only sends seven delegates. So I might quote any number of other contrasts which seem to suggest that the socialist societies have claimed and secured whatever is the fullest possible extent to which they are entitled to representation, whilst the numerically and financially stronger trade unions do not send the full quota of delegates to which they are entitled.

Turning to the financial situation of the Labor Party the year closed with over $75,000 in hand, the largest balance in hand yet reported by the party. At the end of 1914 the balance in hand was only $42,960. Almost the whole of the income of the party is secured from affiliation fees which aggregated $56,605 last year.

It must be understood that the Labor Party is a political organization and is, in fact, the outward and visible sign of the political aspirations of organized labor plus the above-mentioned couple of socialist societies. The other two aggregations of British labor are the annual Trades Union Congress, with its permanent Parliamentary Committee, and the General Federation of Trade Unions both of which are purely industrial and only remotely touch politics. The Labor Party is concerned very largely with maintaining and supporting those members of Parliament who label themselves labor members and who form the Parliamentary Labor Party. The members of this party are in the main now associated with the Government under the Coalition Agreement for the duration of the war. There is no practical opposition of any kind in the House of Commons nowadays. The Coalition Government was formed from all parties to make for political smoothness in wartime. There are of course a few members of the House who have since made themselves into a small opposition drawn together by a diversity of interests. A certain number of Liberals, Conservatives, and Labor members are opposed to the Military Compulsion Bill and have formed an antagonistic party of about three dozen members.

CHILD LABOR BILL PASSED

House Records Big Vote in Favor of Measure.

BILL NOW GOES TO THE SENATE

Will Stop Interstate Transportation of Child Labor Products — Long Fight of Trade Unions Agaainst This Evil Proving Successful.

WASHINGTONN, Feb. 16. — By a vote of 337 to 46 the house passed the Keating-Owen child labor bill, and this measure now goes to the senate.

The act debars from interstate commerce the shipment of products made in whole or in part by children under 14 years in workshops and factories, and under 16 years in mines and quarries.

Practically all opposition came from representatives of southern textile sections. Their arguments were mainly on two points—unconstitutionality and interference with the individual. Congressman Aiken of South Carolina presented the latter sentiment as follows:

"I canot lose sight of the fact that any interference with the right of a parent to put his child to work at such age as he may deem wise, if that labor is necessary for the support of the family, is in a measure subversive of the individual rights of the citizen. We want no federal agents going through our mills and mill villages telling our people when their children shall go to work and when they shall not, and telling our men and women how many hours they may work per day and how many not. And why apply the provisions of a federal act to children of mill operatives? Why not the children of lawyers, farmers, merchants or other professions or callings? I can readily conceive if employes in manufacturing plants feeling righteous indignation at this effort of the federal government to supervise their private affairs."

This line if reasoning had little effect on the members of the house. The claim that the act was unconstitutional was answered in this manner by Congressman Garland, a member of the labor group:

"I have listened to the discussions of this question as to the constitutionality of this bill. We find that there are a number of men of eminence in the law have been quoted as saying this bill is unconstitutional. I find there is another large number who say it is not unconstitutional. I am not a lawyer. As there seems to be a division of opinion as to its constitutionality, then, if we are going to err, let us err on the side of humanity. Let us pass the bill. And if some court declares it unconstitutional, let it do so, but let us not stand here in an attitude of fear as to what the court will do and refuse to do the thing that ought to be done."

BURNETT IMMIGRATION RESTRICTION BILL REPORTED FAVORABLY.

Victims of Political and Religious Persecution Will Not Be Barred.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—Last Monday the house committee on immigration reported favorably the Burnett immigration bill, in which is included the illiteracy test.

The bill is substantially the same as was passed by the last congress and vetoed by President Wilson, but in this instance the committee is more explicit in recommendations regarding the admission of those who seek to evade persecution because of religious or political beliefs.

The committee reports that the following be exempted from the operation of the illiteracy test:

"All aliens who shall prove to the satisfaction of the proper immigration officer or of the secretary of labor that they are seeking admission to the United States to avoid religious persecution in the country of their last permanent residence, whether such persecution be evidenced by overt acts or by laws of governmental regulations that discriminate against the alien or the race to which he belongs because of his religious faith.

"Nothing in this act shall exclude, if otherwise admissible, persons convicted, or who admit the commission, or who teach or advocate the commission, of an offense purely political."

These exemptions clearly indicate that there is no intention on the part of those who favor American living standards to have this country abandon its historic mission of being a haven for political and religious refugees. Under the proposed bill the political revolutionist, or he who is oppressed because of spiritual beliefs, is admitted, regardless of the illiteracy test.

In their campaign for continued dividends and cheap labor, steamship companies and industrial combines have been aided by thousands of sincere citizens who honestly believed a restriction bill would close America to those seeking freedom. Because of circumstances, these citizens found themselves unwilling allies of trust barons, who will now lose this powerful support as the purposes of restrictionists is better understood.

In urging the house to adopt the bill, Chairman Burnett of the committee, called attention to the "great labor and farmers' organizations of the country," the legislatures of Ohio, Virginia, Tennessee, Vermont and of many other states, together with other organizations that favor immigration restriction.

He stated that many of the ablest men of the country believe that after the European war millions of the poorest and most illiterate will come to this country. The best will stay at home to rehabilitate their stricken countries, and the worst will flock to our land and beat down the price of labor and erect the lowest standard of living which decent men can conceive. Mr. Burnett made this comment on conditions that are now known to exist in East Youngstown, Ohio:

"Is it right that American laborers and their families should be forced to live amid such revolting environments and such debasing conditions Yet that is the result of pouring in the millions of illiterates from Europe to beat down the price of the toil of the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his face. The illiteracy test is restrictive as well as selective and in normal times will keep out more than 200,000 of just such as brought about those conditions at Youngstown."

"The committee has labored earnestly in its efforts to keep out the most undesirable of those coming to our shores and at the same time encourage the immigration of those who come to make their homes with us, to promote the normal and material prosperity of our country and to become permanent citizens of our great government."

State to Open Employment Agency

Samuel H. Thompson to Manage Pittsburgh Office. Will Secure Jobs Without Charge

The opening of the new Pittsburgh branch of the Bureau of Employment of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry sounds the death knell of the score or more of unscrupulous employment agencies that for many years have been taking the last dollar from men and women seeking work—and then failing to deliver the job.

The office will be ready for business within the next few days, but in the meantime, Superintendent Samuel H. Thompson, of Wilkinsburg, has been busy collecting evidence against fraudulent employment agencies operating in Pittsburgh.

It is expected, however, that when the new branch is fully established many of these crooked agencies will be forced to suspend business. The state will make no charge either to the employer desiring labor or to the person obtaining work for its services. Everything will be free and every person seeking employment will be dealt with squarely.

Some time this week over 20,000 letters will be sent out to employers of labor in Western Pennsylvania officially notifying them of the establishment of the branch office at Pittsburgh. They will be invited to cooperate with the state to make the undertaking a success. And there is not the least doubt but that every corporation head will be glad to avail himself of the opportunity presented by the state to obtain help quickly and in a business-like manner.

Mr. Thompson who is in charge of the office has already received word from several corporations that they will, in the future, use his office whenever they need help.

And while the office is not in shape to do business as yet, every day a score or more applications are filed by men seeking employment. These will all be taken care of just as soon as possible.

Mr. Thompson's election as superintendent of the local office was made by Governor Brumbaugh from a long list of applicants and is an ideal one. Previously Mr. Thompson was engaged in railroad right of way work. He is a prominent figure in politics in the Forty-fourth State Senatorial district.

FEDERAL BREWERY PROBE MAY FORCE HARMONY

Grand Jury Investigation May Leave Politicians Without Cash for Battle.

"If there is anything that will force harmony in Pennsylvania state politics at this time it is the contemplated Federal grand jury investigation into brewery contributions."

The above is the view held by many local politicians, who while expecting a state-wide clash are hoping against hope that the fight will be side-tracked. A battle at this time means a battle all along the line, with the exception of the United States Senatorship vacancy. This will go to Knox, all factions having agreed upon the former cabinet member.

But no fight can be conducted without cash and with the brewers, who are the big contributors, under fire and threatened with prosecution as a result of their past generosity the situation is very much involved. It is not likely that the officials of the brewing corporations will take any chances of being caught red-handed in the act of giving financial aid to any politician or group of politicians. And with this source of revenue in jeapordy the much heralded fight begins to evaporate. Of course some support can be expected from business corporations, but even they are not at all enthusiastic over factional fights in the G. O. P.

But unless someone is bluffing there will be a fight. The Brumbaugh-Vare-Magee interests have told the Penrose outfit what to expect. And there is not even the faintest tone of harmony in the declaration. On the other hand the Penrose followers will not stand for a slate of delegates-at-large to the national convention that does not bear the names of E. V. Babcock and D. L. Gillespie.

The smoke that clouds the entire situation cannot cover the blaze much longer and by next week there will be either harmony or war. The time is getting short, but a scant three months remaining before the primary elections.

RAILROAD EMPLOYES REPLY TO MANAGERS

CLEVELAND, Feb. 16.—The four railroad brotherhoods have made their first official statement in answer to the publicity given out by the railroads for the purpose of winning public opinion.

In answer to the managers' claim that the men are not sincere in their demand for a shorter workday, but only desirous of securing wage increases, the brotherhood's officials reply:

"If the companies desire to test the sincerity of the men, let them prove their belief in what they say and establish the eight-hour-day so that the men do not have to make a minute of overtime. The shhorter workday is the only proposition on which the men are voting."

The managers claim that roads in the hands of receivers have not cut wages. The employes now answer that this fact should not be placed to the credit of the companies themselves but rather to the courts that have denied the right of the railway companies to reduce wages on railroads in the hands of receivers.

In answer to the claim that an eight-hour day is impossible, it is shown that there are seven roads in the southeastern and one in the western territory that pay overtime on 11-miles per hour basis. Six roads in the southeastern and two in the western territory pay overtime on a 12-miles per hour basis. Eight in the southeastern and five in the western territory, pay overtime on a 12½-miles per hour speed basis.

"There is only one road in the United States, of which we have knowledge," says the railroaders, "that works more than the 10-hour workday, namely, the Monongahela."

TO STUDY UNEMPLOYMENT

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Mayor Mitchel has appointed President Holland of the state federation of labor, and A. F. of L. Organizer Frayne, members of a permanent committee on unemployment, to consist of 20 members. The suggestion was made by members of the mayor's committee of unemployment, appointed in 1914, when the out-of-work question was a serious problem in this city.

Brown's Mill, this city, is on full double turn.

NAME THE CHURCHES

In exonerating itself from the implied insinuations that it was among the brewing corporations alleged to be guilty of "holding out" on Uncle Sam, the Independent Brewing Company has issued an open letter to its stockholders explaining matters.

This letter was published in all of the Pittsburgh daily newspapers, for the purpose of reasurring the stockholders of this corporation as to the proceedings now taking place before the United States District Court.

It is "explained" that it had been the custom of the officers of the Independent Brewing Company to make certain donations each year on which no corporation income tax was paid.

At the head of the list of recipients of charitable contributions from the Independent Brewing Company are churches. Think of it! This brewing concern in an effort to justify its action in neglecting to pay taxes on all its income attempts to square itself with the public by saying that because it did not believe it should be compelled to do so where the money went to churches, other institutions, etc.

We trust that the present investigation will bring to light the numerous beneficiaries of this and other brewing companies, especially the churches.

This statement is an affront to the church in general and should be resented. The churches themselves should make this an issue, and compel the brewing companies to name its religious beneficiaries.

AM I SERVING GOD OR THE ADVERSARY?

NO ROOM FOR NEUTRALITY HERE — WE MUST SERVE ONE OR THE OTHER.

An Important Thought For All to Consider — Whom Are the Professedly Christian Nations Serving? — Surely Not the Lord God — Service of Self is Service of Satan — He Seeks to Subjugate the Human Will — To No One But God Should the Will Be Rielded — Yielding the Will to Him Insures Our Highest Welfare and Happiness.

CHARLESTON, S. C., February 13.—Pastor Russell delivered a very impressive discourse here today, taking for his text Romans 6:16: "His servants ye are to whom ye obey." The pastor said in part:

If the words of our text were rightly appreciated, they would make a deep impression upon the whole civilized world. Our Lord instructs us that there are only two Masters—God and the Adversary. We are serving either the right or the wrong. As we look over the world, we see nations engaged in deadly strife. Whom are these millions serving? Whom do they profess to serve? They have been accustomed to speak and to think of themselves as Christian nations. But we doubt whether any intelligent person would make such a claim today.

The Scriptures clearly point out that there are no Christian nations; but that God is preparing a new nation, the members of which will constitute the rulers of the world when Messiah sets up His Kingdom. When this new nation comes into power, all other nations will be out of business. We accept the Bible declaration that these are the kingdoms of this world, and that they are under the domination of "the Prince of this world," Satan. And they are manifesting what is their true condition. The Apostle tells what are the fruits of the Spirit of Christ—gentleness, meekness, long-suffering, patience, godliness, brotherly-kindness, love. He tells us also of the opposite spirit—the Satanic spirit—anger, strife, bitterness, hatred, envy, murder. (Galatians 5:19-23; Colossians 3:5-8.) Judging the nations according to this Scriptural standard, we can draw only one conclusion.

Doubtless there are true saints of God in all these warring nations, but the nations themselves are surely far from Christian. They profess to be serving Christ, yet by their work they deny Him. "His servants ye are to whom ye render service." These nations have been giving money and sending missionaries to teach the heathen nations how to be Christians, how to do right. What impression must the present spectacle in Europe make upon these heathen people? Surely some grievous mistake has been made in calling these nations Christians. They are each serving purely selfish interests. The object of each is solely its own advancement. It is a great shame to see these nations bickering as to how much territory they have gained or must gain, when they have sent millions of men to slaughter and are laying waste homes and lands, as well as breaking unnumbered human hearts.

GOD'S KINGDOM TO DISPLACE THESE.

So far as can be discerned, principle seems to have been lost sight of; the main issue seems to be, "What can we do? How can we further our interests as a world power? How can we become a greater nation?" Although we are not qualified to judge hearts, nevertheless it seems that there has been great hypocrisy—men and nations pretending to be what they are not.

His servants ye are to whom ye render service." Edivently the service of many, both in America and elsewhere, has been selfish. Wherever we may go throughout Christendom, we see church steeples rising on every hand. One would naturally think, "How happy these people must be! How they must love the Lord and one another!" But, alas! how often we find many things that are contrary to the spirit of Christ!

The Word of God has foretold all this, however; and despite the present gloomy outlook, we are assured in this Word that the glorious Kingdom of Righteousness under God's dear Son will soon displace these kingdoms of this world, whose lease of power has now expired. But this will not be until the Church of Christ shall have passed from these present conditions of strife, selfishness and dishonesty and shall have been glorified with their great Head. Then a new force will take control in the earth. Every evil thing will be brought under restraint. All the people will be enlightened, and enabled to come to a full knowledge of God and righteousness. Gradually the world will be uplifted and blessed; for they will have learned the bitter lesson of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, as manifested in the fruitage of selfishness

Apparently many things are taught and practiced under the name of Christianity that are not really Christian at all. Many people profess to believe what they do not actually believe. Whom are they serving? They cannot be serving the Lord; for the Lord does not desire dishonesty in His service. Apparently many join the church for purely selfish reasons. When people join a denomination whose teachings they do not believe, it would seem as though they did so for some personal advantage, as though some earthly interest is being served. People seem ready to profess almost anything if thereby they can make a better living or get along more prosperously. We are not judging the heart, nor do we wish to condemn any individual; but surely the majority know not the first principles of the matter of being a Christian.

We ask ourselves, To whom are this majority rendering service? Evidently they are serving Self. Nearly everybody is bowing down to himself, seeking his own pleasure and profit. Although there are noble exceptions, yet this seems to be the rule. Of all the various forms of idolatry, the meanest and worst is self-worship, the doing of everything just for self. Mankind do not seem to realize that whoever is actuated by selfishness is rendering effective service to Satan and his empire.

WHAT IS IT TO BE A CHRISTIAN.

As a counterfeit always implies the genuine, so counterfeit Christians imply the existence of genuine Christians. The genuine Christian, the loyal Christian, serves the Lord only; for this is the meaning of his contract, his consecration vow. Jesus said, "If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." This means the giving of self to the Lord. The Master lays a deep foundation. Giving ourselves away, renouncing our own will, is the hardest thing one can do. But whoever would enter the School of Christ must do this very thing.

To give ourselves to anyone except the Lord would be most unwise, most dangerous. Satan and his evil associates, the demons, seek to gain control of the human will. They seek to have people present their bodies to spiritism and occultism, that they may engrants us His blessing. It would be impossible for a true child of God to tell what Divine grace has done for him. What shall we render unto the Lord for all His benefits to us? Surely, as the Palmist says, "I will take the cup of salvation (the cup which the Father pours) and will call upon the name of the Lord; I will pay you my vows unto the Most High."—Psalm 116:12-14.

snare their victims and make slaves of these poor unfortunates, by taking away their will and substituting the will of another, as in hypnotism, etc. The will should be subjected to no one but God—not even to husband or wife or dearest friend. We may properly enough submit our course to another, but the will should never be submitted. To the Lord alone we may safely entrust our will. Given over to Him, it is made strong for the right, and our best interests are conserved.

To those who desire to follow in the path of righteousness, the Lord says, "Give Me thine heart." This means, Submit your will to Me. But merely to submit, saying, "I do not care to have it so, although I will be obedient," will not do. This will not bring us into the Lord's family. The Lord will have no half-hearted service. We must give all or nothing. We must give up our will absolutely, must have no contrary will of our own. We must be all the Lord's.

Should some one say, "This is carrying the matter very far," we reply, Yes; it is carrying the thought to the limit. This is exactly what Jesus did. He said to the Father, "Not My will, but Thine, be done." On another occasion He said, "I came not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me." He would have no other will but the will of the Father; and He set us an example, that we should follow His steps. To do so is to be a Christian.

The Apostle speaks of seeing from the Divine standpoint; of looking at things as God looks at them. So after we have given our hearts to the Lord, after we have been accepted in Christ and after God has given us His Holy Spirit, we learn in the School of Christ to see things from God's viewpoint. Having given up our own wills to Him, we desire to think as He thinks, to view matters as He views them, and to do as He would have us do.

A COMMON, BUT INCORRECT, THOUGHT.

God has His own way of choosing, and He accepts only certain ones; no one can enter His family except upon those definite terms which He Himself has made. This does not mean, however, that He will harm those who are not chosen; or that He will say to any one, "If you do not become My son, I will send you to the Devil, to be roasted and tormented to all eternity." Our God would not do this. Whoever would thus act would be a devil. Our God loves all, and has arranged a Plan of Salvation for all who will accept His terms during the Messianic Kingdom.

The way of life now open is a difficult one. "Strait (cramped, difficult of entrance) is the gate, and narrow is the way, that leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it." (Matthew 7:14.) It is very evident that the great majority of mankind do not understand the matter at all. "Eyes have they, but they see not; ears have they, but they hear not, neither do they understand" the Word of the Lord. The words of our Savior seem not to penetrate, even when they are read. How thankful should those be whose eyes of understanding have been opened to see the terms laid down by the Lord!

Comparatively few people have a correct view of consecration. On one occasion a young minister came to us, wishing to co-operate in some way in our work. We said to him, "Have you made a full consecration of yourself to the Lord?" "Oh, yes, yes!" was his response. Then he began to speak of his talents, his oratorical ability, etc. We saw that he had considerable pride and very lofty ideas of how great a preacher he was to be; and we wished to make sure that he understood what consecration means.

So we said, "You know that all the true followers of Christ must have the same attitude that the Apostle Paul had. He declared that he counted all things but loss and dross that he might win Christ. The Bible presents the matter in just that way. Unless we make a thorough work of our consecration, we shall not win the prize of our High Calling. This making a thorough work of the matter means that we shall be thus loyal to the Lord and thus much in opposition to the Devil."

The young theologian began to get his eyes of understanding open a little. He said, "I was not thinking of going into it as deeply as that." We answered, "Brother, it is a matter of going in deeply or not at all. There are not different stages of entrance. There is but the one Door—our Lord Jesus Christ; and consecration is connected with the entering through that door. The Lord will not change His terms to please you or me. We must either enter as He invites us to go, or else remain outside. Full consecration is the only way into the Body of Christ." Then we pointed out to him what great talents St. Paul had and how he counted them as nothing in comparison to attaining a membership in Christ's Body, the Church. But all this was a newt hought to him.

"WHAT SHALL I RENDER UNTO THE LORD?"

When we begin to see the matter from the right viewpoint, we see that at best we have very little to give to the Lord. When we begin to realize what He has offered us in exchange for all that we have, we really feel ashamed to offer our all to Him; for it is very, very small. He has offered us glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with Christ in His Throne. (Romans 2:7; 8:17; 2 Timothy 2:12.) And what have we to give Him in return! So far as being of real benefit to Him, our all is really worthless. We are the ones who receive the benefit. We are the recipients of marvelous favor, amazing grace. It is if we were to offer to a man of immense wealth, a few broken chairs, a cracked stove and a ragged carpet in return for being made his heir.

God desires to have our heart, our will, our affection; and He graciously condescends to accept these along with our poor imperfect talents and to use them in His service, in the blessings of others. When we give Him our will, we give Him our all; for it includes our talents, our pocketbook, our influence, our time—everything that we possess. Then He places all these in our hands to be used for Him; and we, as His stewards, are to render to Him an account of how we use these things. All that we now do is to be done to the glory of God. We are to consider His will as to what we shall wear, what we shall eat, how we shall spend our time, where we shall go, etc. As His servants, we are to seek His will, His glory, in everything.

WHOSE SERVANT AM I?

What service have you rendered today, yesterday, last week; last month? We cannot do much; and when we have done our very best, we are still unprofitable servants, as the Master told us; that is, we are not able to bring any real gain to our Lord. (Luke 17:10.) But He lovingly and graciously accepts our best endeavors, and

Let us who have taken these vows upon us to be wholly the Lord's be very careful, as the days go by, that the words of our mouth and all the conduct of life, even the very thoughts of our minds, shall be such, and such alone, as will bring glory to God—making these mortal bodies faithfully serve our Master.

As we give this subject prayerful consideration, we see more and more how close girdling this whole matter is. It enters into every detail of life. Our God is watching to see whose servants we really are. He scrutinizes us, not unkindly but lovingly, to see whether we have the filial spirit of a true son—the spirit of Christ. In His faithfulness He tests us that it may be demonstrated whether we are wholly loyal in thought, word and action, or whether at heart we are self-seeking He does not expect perfection in the flesh; for He knoweth our feeble frame. But He expects us to do our best; and the merit of our dear Redeemer will cover what we are unable to perform.

The Lord our God is giving each one of His children the opportunity to prove to Him, to our Lord Jesus and to the angels how sincere we are, how thorough is our consecration, and how desirous we are to do the Divine will. He gives us opportunity to "lay down our life for the brethren," and "to good unto all men, especially unto the Household of Faith." The Lord is taking notice of all these things; and "a book of remembrance" is being "written before Him for them that fear the Lord, and that think upon His name. And they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that Day when I make up My jewels; and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not.—Malachi 3:16-18.

THE BRITISH REFORMERS.

Essay IV.

Copyright 1916 by N. E. Nelson.

"The English reformers, while renouncing the doctrines of Romanism, had retained many of its forms. Thus though the authority and the creed of Rome were rejected, not a few of her customs and ceremonies were incorporated into the worship of the Church of England. It was claimed that these things were not matters of conscience; that though they were not commanded in Scripture, and hence were non-essential, yet not being forbidden, they were not instrinsically evil. Their observance tended to narrow the gulf which separated the reformed churches from Rome, and it was urged that they would promote the acceptance of the Protestant faith by Romanists.

"To the conservative and compromising, these arguments seemed conclusive, but there was another class that did not so judge. The fact that these customs tended to bridge the chasm between Rome and the Reformation, was in their view a conclusive argument against retaining them. They looked upon them as badges of the slavery from which they had been delivered, and to which they had no disposition to return. They reasoned that God has in his Word established the regulations governing his worship, and that men are not at liberty to add to these or to detract from them. The very beginning of the great apostasy was in seeking to supplement the authority of God by that of the Church. Rome began by enjoining what God had not forbidden, and she ended by forbidding what he had explicitly enjoined.

"Many earnestly desired to return to the purity and simplicity which characterized the primitive church. They regarded many of the established customs of the English church as monuments of idolatry, and they could not in conscience unite in her worship. But the church, being supported by the civil authority, would permit no dissent from her forms. Atendance upon her service was required by law, and unauthorized assemblies for religious worship were prohibited, under penalty of imprisonment, exile and death.

"At the opening of the seventeenth century the monarch who had just ascended the throne of England declared his determination to make the Puritans 'conform, or harry them out of the land, or else worse.' Hunted, persecuted, and imprisoned, they could discern in the future no promise of better days, and many yielded to the conviction that for such as would serve God according to the dictates of their conscience, 'England had ceased forever to be a habitable spot.' Some at last determined to seek refuge in Holland. Difficulties, losses, and imprisonment were encountered. Their purposes were thwarted, and they were betrayed into the hands of their enemies. But steadfast perseverance finally conquered, and they found shelter on the friendly shores of the Dutch Republic.

"In their flight they had left their houses, their goods, and their means of livelihood. They were strangers in a strange land, among a people of different language and customs. They were forced to resort to new and untried occupations to earn their bread. Middle-aged men, who had spent their lives in tilling the soil, had now to learn mechanical trades. But they cheerfully accepted the situation, and lost no time in idle or repining. Though often pinched with poverty, they thanked God for the blessings which were still granted them, and found their joy in unmolested spiritual communion. 'They knew they were pilgrims, and looked not much on those things, but lifted up their eyes to Heaven, their dearest country, and quieted their spirits.'

"In the midst of exile and hardship, their love and faith waxed strong. They trusted the Lord's promises, and he did not fail them in time of need. His angels were by their side, to encourage and support them. And when God's hand seemed pointing them across the sea, to a land where they might found for themselves a State, and leave to their children the precious heritage of religious liberty, they went forward, without shrinking, in the path of Providence.

"God had permitted trials to come upon his people to prepare them for the accomplishment of his gracious purpose toward them. The church had been brought low, that she might be exalted. God was about to display his power in her behalf, to give to the world another evidence that he will not forsake those who trust in him. He had overruled events to cause the wrath of Satan and the plots of evil men to advance his glory, and to bring his people to a place of security. Persecution and exile were opening the way to freedom.

"When first constrained to separate from the English church, the Puritans had joined themselves together by a solemn covenant, as the Lord's free people, 'to walk in all his ways, made known or to be made known to them.' Here was the true spirit of reform, the vital principle of Protestantism. It was with this purpose that the Pilgrims departed from Holland to find a home in the New World. John Robinson, their pastor, who was providentially prevented from accompanying them, in his farewell address to the exiles said:

"'Brethren, we are now erelong to part asunder, and the Lord knoweth whether I shall live ever to see your faces more; but whether the Lord hath appointed that or not, I charge you before God and His blessed angels to follow me no farther than I have followed Christ. If God should reveal anything to you by any other instrument of his, be as ready to receive it as you ever were to receive any truth by my ministry; for I am very confident that the Lord hath more truth and light yet to break forth out of his Holy Word. For my part, I cannot sufficiently bewail the condition of the reformed churches, who are come to a period in religion, and will go no farther than the instruments of their reformation. The Lutherans cannot be drawn to go any farther than what Luther saw, and the Calvanists, you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things. This is a misery much to be lamented; for though they were burning and shining lights in their time, yet they penetrated not into the whole counsel of God, but were they now living, would be as willing to embrace further light as that which they first received.

"'Remember your church covenant, in which you have agreed to walk in all the ways of the Lord, made known or to be made known unto you. Remember your promise and covenant with God and with one another, to receive whatever light and truth shall be made known to you from his written Word. But, withal, take heed, I beseech you, what you receive as truth. Examine it, consider it, compare it with other scriptures of truth before you receive it; for it is not possible that the Christian world should come so lately out of such thick antichristian darkness, and that perfection of knowledge should break forth at once.'"

Supplementing these general and sentimental remarks of White we supply more specific data. It has been variously estimated that from 22,000 to 50,000 Puritan emigrants sailed from English and Dutch ports in 20 years, 1620-40. Persecution in their native countries fanned the noble qualities into a fire that impelled them to form the exodus. The reason that compelled their departure determined their quality they were all men of vigorous consciences, who loved their fatherland much, but religion more, not driven from home by mercantile necessities or ambitions, but solely by their determination to be free to worship God. They were as Milton said, "faithful and freeborn Englishmen and good Christians constrained to forsake their dearest home, their friends, and kindred, whom nothing but the wide ocean and the savage deserts of America could hide and shelter from the fury of the Bishops." Men so moved as to act could hardly be commonplace; and so among them we find characters strong and marked with equal reputed ability to rule and to obey, as Bradford and Brewster, Windslow and Stanish, Wintkoop and Dr. Samuel Fuller, and men so inflexible in their love of liberty and faith in man as Roger Williams and young Harry Vane, and others.

Columbus had spied out the land for these God-fearing people just before the Reformation started in Luther's day. The first man to brave the perils of the sea of this exodus were Elder Brewster and Deacon Carver, both influenced by the teachings of Henry Jacob, an Oxford graduate, who advocated the principles of Independency as against Episcopacy and Presbytery. They sailed in 1620 with a little company from Delfthaven, landed in the midst of a severe and stormy winter on the North American coast, there layed the foundation of the "New England States," with all they were to be and create. They were to the Puritans what Columbus and his party was to Europe in general.

But as Israel wandered for 40 years in the Wilderness of Sin before entering Cannan, so the Puritans did not immediately secure their liberty of conscience guaranteed by a State founded upon the proper principles.

P., is to be chairman of the convention opening today at Bristol. He is married to Mary Macarthur, a well-known Women's Trade Union leader. He is a very fine speaker with a wealth of information at his fingers' ends, but a downright opponent of military compulsion. I should hesitate to place him, however, among the peace cranks. Rather is he one of those who fears the specter of industrial conscription. The Government has, however, given what appear to be pretty straight and genuine guarantees that this is not the case. But any man can be pardoned if he mistrusts politicians and their science.

In the Parliamentary section of the report of the Labor Party it is stated that "at no other time in the history of trade unionism in this country have the trade unions been taken so much into the confidence of the Government and of those responsible for the carrying on of affairs. This is no doubt due to some extent to the extraordinary conditions prevailing, but it is also partly due to the presense of trade union representatives in the Government; and while the unions by the Munitions of War Acts have relinquished for the time being many of the liberties and rights that have taken a generation to build up, on the other hand, they have come forward and occupied a place in the affairs of the country which will do much to consolidate and strengthen them in the future."

The report touches on the Military Service Bill without comment.

I have to welcome the appearance of the first official "Labor Year Book" ever issued in this country. It is published under the auspices of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress; the executive committee of the Labor Party; and the Fabian Research Department. It is priced at 25 cents and the office of publication is 1 Victoria street, London, S. W. In the past in this country there have been labor annuals and Socialist year books, but they never secured sufficient circulation to ensure constant and extensive publication. The present volume is bound in paper, runs to 704 pages, and is the most comprehensive thing of its kind ever issued.

By way of a kind of introduction there are two articles preceding the year book proper. They are, "Why a Labor Year Book?" by George Bernard Shaw and "Labor After the War," by the Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, Labor Member of Parliament and President of the Board of Education.

Part I. of the Year book is devoted to a 77-page resume of British labor and the war. It covers such things as the labor political view of the outbreak of the war, unemployment, with remarkably interesting and striking tables, the relief of distress, the Workers' National War Emergency Committee, the rise in prices, the Committee on Production in War-time, labor and recruiting, women and the war, child labor and the factory acts, national labor newspapers during the war, etc.

Then in part II. we have every phase of the industrial labor movement covering all the facts and figures about trade unions, strikes and lock-outs, changes in rates of wages and hours of labor, trade boards, industrial fatigue, accidents and diseases, women in industry. This part runs to over two hundred pages.

Part III. deals with the political labor movements—historical, statistical and argumentative. It covers eighty pages. Part IV. is devoted to the co-operative movement, a great feature of industrial life in the North of England. Part V. concerns itself with the international working class movement starting with an article by Emile Vandervelde, the famous Belgian Socialist and patriot who writes on the "internation." Then follow articles on the old international, the modern international, the International Socialist Bureau, congresses, international federations and trade unionism abroad, confines itself solely to Socialist journals and only gives for the whole of North America the New York "Call." This list, owing to its scantiness and one-sidedness, is one of the few defects in an otherwise interesting compilation.

Part VI. is devoted to Imperial and national Government information and figures covering practically everything from a list of the members of the House of Commons to the latest British income tax law. Part VII. deals with local Government in Great Britain with details of all its services from the running of municipal slaughter houses to the local licensing of theatres. Part VIII. deals with social insurance and thus covers the newest British legislation for industrial accidents, sickness, unemployment, old age, etc. In conclusion there is an 18-column index with about 1,300 references to enable the reader to find rapidly in the book any information he wants.

INCOME BREAKS RECORD.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—"An extraordinary story of prosperity," is the term used by the New York World in commenting on the last financial report of the United States Steel Corporation, which has recently announced a 10 per cent wage increase to its low wage, long-hour workers.

It is shown that the trust's net earnings for the past quarter were $51,232,788, or $5,729,080 larger than for any previous quarter last year; dividends resumed on the common stock at the former annual rate of 5 per cent; a surplus of $23,300,692 above all charges and dividends; $105,000,000 cash in bank.

WAGES FIRST CONSIDERATION.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Feb. 16.—The Evening Blade editor expresses this opinion on welfare work:

"Welfare work has its place—an important place if only it breeds in employers an interest in their employes—but the employer who attempts to use welfare work as a substitute for living wages throws his money away. Sooner or later, he has a strike on his hands and he is lucky if it is not more of a reign of terror than a walkout. The Youngstown outbreak reinforces the lessons of the Calumet strike."

Appreciations.

Beaumont, Tex., Feb. 11.

My subscription expired Jan. 13, 1916 and desiring to thank you for continuing to send it on so long after my subscription had expired and more especially for your fearless manner of presenting to the public Pastor Russell's sermons and other scriptural helps. Trusting you will continue to give us these helpful sermons for we know your reward is sure. To prove my appreciation of your favors you wil find enclosed order for renewal for another year.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. LETITIA E. LIGON.

Portland, re., Feb. 11.

Although my subscription to your excelent paper expired last fall I note I am still in receipt of same. I find on investigating my address label that it has been set forward one year. Evidently my thanks are long since overdue to your good selves or to some good provider in our "Present Trpth."

Please, therefore, gentlemen, accept from me, for yourselves and this other dear friend unknown to me, my heartfelt thanks for the renewal and I trust to be entirely able to carry the burden myself next fall, and possibly assist someone else, as I have been assisted.

Yours very sincerely,
NORMAN M. LEWTON.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 11.

Have renewd my subscription through A. H. Moore, our newspaper representative.

I want to thank you for the prompt delivery of the paper always.

I am interested in the labor items but especially appreciate the religious featrues.

I like the new style of typing of Pastor Russell's sermons; it is so comfortable to the eye.

N. E. Nelson's continued article dealing on the Reformation and Reformers is surely very interesting and makes us appreciate Pastor Russell's sphere—His words are with authority.

It rejoices my heart to read the many letters of appreciation. Let's not keep our alabaster boxes hidden away in some dark corner but let's open them up, so the sweet perfume of love and helpfulness, may orighten and cheer up some lonely, discouraged pilgrim and mayhaps urge our editor to renewed effort and zeal. How much easier to keep plodding away when we know somebody cares and appreciates.

As the poet has said:
We are living we are dwelling
In an age on ages telling,
Hark! the rumbling in the nations,
Hark! What soumeth, 'tis creation.

Scoffer scorning, Heaven beholding,
See prophetic truth unfolding,
Oh, let all the soul within you,
Strike! let every nerve and sinew.

In a grand and awful time
To be living is sublime.
Iron crumbling with the clay,
Groaning for a better day.

Thou hast but an hour to fight!
Watch! and keep the garments white,
For the Truth's sake go abroad,
Tell on ages—tell for God.
With Christian love,
MRS. C. MYERS.

Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 9.

I have been wanting to write you for some time as my subscription is overdue. It looked as though I would not be able to renew again.

I enjoy the paper very much. We were one of the would-be victims of the medicine fakes at the time you were exposing them. The Lord will surely bless you. I wish to have the Tribune sent to a friend of mine.

Sincerely,
WM. WINK.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 9.

I believe my subscription expires soon so I wish to renew same for another year. I greatly appreciate your paper for the religious features of same. As long as Pastor Russell's sermons appear in your columns I want your paper, in fact could not do without it. It is a pleasure to read the good message in such large clear type.

Yours with much appreciation,
MRS. J. JONES WILSON.

Ottawa, Kan., Feb. 10.

I see my subscription will soon expire. I do not like to miss a single copy. I am so glad you continue to publish and herald the blessed Truth which is so dear and soul-satisfying to our hungering hearts. The blessed book says: Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled, and the Labor Tribune is one of the channels though which we are being filled. I know of no other food so wholesome and appetizing as that which is supplied by our dear Pastor Russell—and as long as you continue to publish the sermons so long will I continue to support you in the grand work.

I for one would feel as though I had lost a dear friend should I order my subscription to be stopped.

Possibly if the friend from Princeton N. J., would have tuned his heart to the instrument (the Bible) and its melody instead of the player, Russell, he would have found another year's subscription to your valuable paper only too short, but he has not learned the true key word as yet. We must have our key word in proper tune or we cannot catch the message and we must see to it that we keep in proper tune if we would receive the message God sends us through whoever it may be, but we know who is the servant and love him and his blessed message because our hearts are in tune with our Heavenly Father. I think the last sermon is worth the price of the paper for a whole year.

So glad the Albert Dripps never materialized and hope he never will write any more such letters, and possibly it was a great boost for both papers. May God richly bless you and your work of spreading the blessed Truth.

Yours in bond of Christian love and wishing you a very prosperous year.
MRS. ANNA BEARMAN.

CHRISTIAN COMMUNISM

Acts 4:32—5:16—February 20.

Christ's Sympathetic, Loving Spirit Illustrated In the Church—Love "Seeketh Not Her Own" Interests Only. Communism Tried—Why it Failed.

"Love one another from the heart fervently.—1 Peter 1:22.

THE Record tells us that the number of believers was more than five thousand in a little while. The spirit of love began to burn in their hearts—thankfulness to God, appreciation of His favor, a desire to serve Him and sympathy and love for the brotherhood. Some were poorer than others; and, controlled by the spirit of love, they felt that they would wish all the poorer brethren to have just as good as themselves. First they gave privately one to another, as they realized the needs. Then the matter went further, and they organized a little community. Many of the wealthier sold their possessions, and turned in the money to the Lord's treasury, desiring that a certain amount be supplied to themselves and all other members of the community—share and share alike.

Private Giving.

This manifested a very beautiful spirit, and under perfect conditions would have been the wise and proper course. As it was, however, the community proved a failure. Apparently the Lord permitted that test and failure to show us that no such community amongst His people is possible at the present time. As soon as Messiah's Kingdom is established, the community principle will prosper wonderfully. But it is impracticable now, as it was in the days of the Apostles.

This lesson introduces us to Barnabas, a godly man and wise, a mighty power in the Church. His proper name was Joses; and he must have been a very fine character when the Apostles named him Barnabas—implying that he had a beautiful spirit, and in his daily life was a "son of consolation" to all with whom he had contact. Barnabas had a property or estate. This he sold, and brought the proceeds to the Apostles' feet. He was not an Apostle; for of them there were only twelve, and at this time only eleven, because of the loss of Judas. St. Paul, the twelfth Apostle, the Lord's chosen vessel, had not yet had his eyes opened to the truth of the Gospel.

Ananias and his wife Sapphira also sold their property, and kept back a portion of the price, bringing the remainder to the Apostles as though it were the entire sum. Indeed, in conspiring between themselves, they had agreed to declare that the money which they turned in to the treasury was all that they had received from the property. Our lesson tells how St. Peter treated the matter, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. He pointed out to Ananias that the property was his own, that he was neither compelled nor urged to donate it to this community, that it was his own voluntary gift, and that he had lied to God, not merely to the community. Hearing these words, Ananias fell dead—smitten of the Lord. A little later, his wife Sapphira suffered similarly.

Why Repentance Was Not Preached.

We query, Why did not St. Peter point out to Ananias and Sapphira wherein they had erred, urge them to repentance, and join with them in prayer rather than pronounce upon them the death penalty?

Our thought is that these two culprits were not really God's children—that they had never received the begetting of the Holy Spirit; and that the Lord took this opportunity to give the Church a great lesson—to remind them that they were dealing, not with flesh and blood, but with Jehovah God. From this viewpoint, it was worth while to sacrifice these two persons under Divine judgment with a view to teaching the Church how displeasing in God's sight is hypocrisy—especially in respect to religious things.

If these two were spirit-begotten, their destruction would be the Second Death; and we would have no Scriptural ground for expecting them to have any resurrection or future consideration from the Lord. But if they were merely children of this world, not fully appreciative of spiritual things, their future interests are not destroyed. They still belong to the great world of mankind, for whom Christ died, and who have not yet received in full the blessings of reconciliation with God through the Lord Jesus. Such glorious favor may be expected for the world in general during the Millennium, when "all the families of the earth shall be blessed," and brought to a knowledge of the Truth and to an opportunity of accepting unto salvation.

St. Peter and Ananias.

Our charitable thought for Ananias and Sapphira is that, not having received the Holy Spirit, they but imperfectly appreciated what they were doing; that they have not sinned unto death; and that in the resurrection time they will have opportunity to show their loyalty or disloyalty to God.

Montgomery, N. Y., Feb. 3.

I have not been of late receiving my Tribune. So I do not know if my subscription has expired or not. But I have so far received a copy of each issue from a friend for I feel very much lossed without it. It affords me great pleasure to assure you of my deep appreciation for each and every department of your most excellent paper. But of its most appreciated part is Pastor Russell's religious columns as they appear weekly.

You indeed are doing a grand work for I realize it isn't only cheering for me to read those comforting words that we have a Heavenly Father which shows favor and much love and compassion toward his children here below, but may I feel sure to say after reading them it causes their hearts to turn to worship willingly him who done so much for them.

Trusting you will continue publishing the sermons. With best wishes.

Yours turly,
MISS EVA L. FREED.

Here is a little item that if you see fit to publish may help some of the friends to form a more correct opinion of the author than they have held.

A noted clergyman's statments regarding the prophecies of the Scriptures.

Henry Drummond (on pages 34-35) of his book "The Greatest Thing in the World" says, "This book is full of prophecies. One by one they have "failed;" that is, having been fulfilled, their work is finished; they have nothing more to do now in the world except to feed a devout man's faith."

intermingled with the Puritans were many that came for "the fishes and loaves," and, like Israel in their wanderings who longed for "the flesh pots of Egypt," the Puritans began to assume authority over those who came for purely mercantile purposes. So in 1631 the general court of the Massachusetts colony resolved, "that no man shall be admitted to the freedom of this body politic, but such as are members of some of the churches within the limits of the same." In other words Church and State, citizenship in the one and membership in the other, thus became identical. It was about 40 years from the landing of Brewster to the founding of Rhode Island by Roger Williams and the founding of Pennsylvania by William Penn, where liberty of conscience was first established by law. The evil results of this resolution of 1631 by the Massachusetts Bay Colony, by men who meant to preserve the polity they established, we point out in the story of Roger Williams.

The modern wife placed two plates with knives, forks, spoons, and tumblers on the dining room table, and took two paper napkins from a drawer, laying one beside each plate.

Then she lighted the gas-stove, opened a can of soup and placed it in cans of vegetables and a can of salmon and heated these. She cut six slices of baker's bread and quartered a baker's pie, placing everything on the table together with butter, salt, pepper and a pitcher of cold water.

IRON CITY TRADES COUNCIL MAKES BIG CUT IN WAGES

Men Employed on Work for Unions Said to Be Receiving Less Than Half That Paid by Others.

Trouble is brewing and a cyclone is expected to turn Iron City Trades Council topsy-turvy, before the question of the council itself, employing cheap labor on its "official program" is settled.

The labor "skates" have caused building contractors all kinds of trouble and large contractors hesitate to take any work else the gods of "union" shall be displeased and vengeance shall be wrecked upon the unfortunate contractor whose estimates have been accepted. But the tide is turning and "union" labor is now to be assailed for employing solicitors on the "official program" at what is alleged starvation wages and a commission so low that even the publishers of papers hesitate to believe the truth of the rumors now being circulated.

The claim is made that solicitors are being paid only 20 per cent commission for their work and a small commission is added when the cash is brought in, but the employers it is said only permit collections where they cannot help it. Some labor papers are paying solicitors 50 per cent for similar work and if the work is done at 35 per cent the price is extra low, but the "Union" has smashed all precedent and has managed to slash the commissions until the wages have been reduced to below the minimum and then some.

It is the opinion that the lowest possible commissions never reach 20 per cent, but the work on the "program" which is endorsed by Iron City Trades Council is said to have reached a new low level so low that legitimate labor papers would hesitate to offer a solicitor such a paltry sum.

Iron City Trades Council is said to stand for a minimum wage, but this minimum is so low that others refuse to be governed by such and the minimum on the "program" is being denounced as outrageous.

The building trades council have held up work of contractors under the pretense of demanding higher wages, but there are rumors abroad that do not exactly harmonize when the strike was called and later adjusted on the William Pitt hotel building. Be this as it may it is contended no standard can be maintained if the central body refuses to lift the standard up. If the central body submits to cheapening labor by employing men on its own work what right has the union to interfere with legitimate contractors or employers.

It is estimated that the "program" on which work of soliciting is now under way with the consent of the central labor body will net approximately $25,000. Of this it is believed nearly $3,000 will be in "donations" from employers of labor who are ashamed to have themselves recognized or who are enemies of labor and the men engaged on the work are to receive less than half of what the best labor papers are paying. This is cause for complaint and this feeling of dissatisfaction is resolving itself into a genuine tornado that threatens to sweep everything before it in the very near future.

Why this "program" is permitted is not hard for some to fathom and no wonder labor is being condemned on every hand and it dare not attempt to fight for the rights of its members lest some audacious culprit might step from behind an obscured curtain with unpleasant facts. A feeling that some diabolical castrophe is about to occur seems to fill the very atmosphere and men high up in the labor movement are momentarily expecting some indescribable something to break like a thunder clap through a clear sky. The labor movement, the impression prevails, is in the hands of a small clique whose monumental nerve has impressed some with the belief they were in absolute control, but the consciencious union man is being aroused and something is going to happen.

If the approaching "program" is to compare in any way with that of last years "work of art," the quicker the whole thing is called off the better it will be for the labor movement.

Out of 68 pages which carries over 3,000 inches of advertising less than 30 inches was devoted to the program of events and the entire matter devoted to labor does not exceed 200 inches. The "committee" presumably so much ashamed of its work that no signatures are attached to its expressions of thanks. Of all the foul deeds committed in the name of labor this "program," a copy of which is here, is the limit. The saloon keeper seems to have been a special mark and it is claimed that the latter was inveigled into advertising on the strength of a letter from a labor leader "high" in the councils of labor. The victim probably through fear consented to advertising.

The shame is that honest men toiling in the shops who have no knowledge of what is going on are made the goats.

These men are held to represent the army back of a scheme from which they derive so little if any benefit and the crime of soliciting from the enemy of labor surpasses even the atrosities of the criminal corporations who have been the object of so much of labor's scorn and vituberation.

The non-union employer contributes to the "union" and he is given a clean bill of health. He is regarded as the immaculate; accepted to reign with the whiter than snow; all because he contributes a pittance to an element who in their own estimation, Atlas like, carry around on their shoulders the toiling millions.

This element has made the "union" a huge joke and the sooner labor gets together and rids itself of this destructive hook-worm the better it will be. The inevitable is not far off and delay means disaster; that "union" labor is regarded as a fake there is no doubt and the fakers who have been thriving off it have exceeded any of the most daring and corrupt predecessors within the last two decades.

Little wonder the manufacturer has lost faith and the whole labor movement in the Pittsburgh district is nothing more than a mere shell; the shell being supported by a few legitimate leaders who are not found among the aggregation of mis-representatives. The first struggle and the movement will crash as the inside is corruption, and then the awful smell.

Reputable employers of labor are repudiating the fakirs and refusing to be held up; they abhor hypocracy and the honest and conservative leaders are not hesitating in expressing their disapproval and particularly of the methods being used to intimidate business men through a "program" or anything that may be used as a subterfuge to induce men to contribute to a cause when in reality labor derives so little benefit and the dastardly trick is looked upon as nothing more than a design to outwit honest men.

British Labor Party Takes Action.

Passes Series of Momentous Resolutions in Convention

Thomas Reeve, Staff Correspondent.

London, Feb. 11, 1916.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Labor Party has run its course since your correspondent last wrote and a number of very interesting votes were taken. As was pointed out last week the Labor Party conference is not to be confused with the annual Trade Union Congress although somewhere about two million trade unionists send delegates to it. It is concerned in the main with the political side of organized labor. The first important resolution discussed begged the conference to assist the Government as far as possible to a successful prosecution of the war. This was carried by 1,502,000 votes to 602,000 and thus by a majority of 900,000. The second resolution was as follows:

That this conference being convinced that the issues involved in the present European war are of transcendant importance to the democracies of this and all other countries, hereby records its entire approval of the action of the Parliamentary Labor Party in co-operating with the other political parties in the national recruiting campaigns.

No fewer than 1,847,000 votes were cast for this and only 205,000 against it being thus carried by a majority of 1,641,000.

On the second day of the convention a long discussion took place on the question of military compulsion and the delegates recorded their protest against the adoption of conscription in any form. The votes cast against accepting conscription were 1,796,000 whilst those in favor of accepting conscription were 219,000. Coming down to a discussion of the particular measure just passing through Parliament the delegates also declared their opposition to the Military Service (No. 2) Bill by 1,716,000 votes against 360,000; but the second part of the resolution—"in the event of it (the bill) becoming law the conference decides to agitate for its repeal"—was negatived by 659,000 votes to 614,000.

From these figures it will be seen that a very large majority of the delegates representing about a thousand organized trade unionists were opposed to conscription whilst a smaller number were opposed to the pacific conscription measure. On the question of repealing this measure, if passed by the law, the verdict went the other wa. To account for the smallness of this last vote it must be remembered that a very large body of delegates altogether abstained from voting on the "Shall we work for repeal" resolution.

The Labor Party Conference came to three important decisions on the third day of the convention. It confirmed the Executive's act in allowing representatives of the party to enter the Coalition Government on its formation, and also approved of the three Labor Ministers retaining the offices they now hold. Finally, it rejected a resolution which condemned secret alliances and which declared that no territory should be transferred from one Government to another without the consent of the people, and that, as part of the peace settlement, Great Britain should propose a reduction of armaments by all the belligerant powers.

In the following table, for the sake of completeness, I give the chief resolutions of the Conference during

WHY CHILD LABOR BILL IS OPPOSED IN SOUTH

GREENVILLE, S. C., Feb. 23.—According to the Home Circle, published in this city, here are the reasons why southern cotton mill owners oppose the Keating-Owen child labor bill, which is intended to exclue from interstate commerce child labor products:

"First—When childreu are excluded from the mills, they have to go to school, be educated and enlightened.

"Second—Ignorance is what pleases the cotton mill authorities.

"Third—Education means light, knowledge, power, emancipation and freedom.

"Fourth—The cotton manufacturers have been made vastly rich by working children at half wages, doing grown folks' work.

"Fifth—When this bill was passed, they well knew they would ave to pay the grown folks enough to support the children anyhow. If they don't, the farms are inviting them.

"Sixth—As long as they can keep the workers in ignorance, they can cheat and rob them and control them more.

"Seventh—When the textile workers are better educated, they can get better employment, therefore better wages—a decent living.

"The above are some facts and reasons why this bill is opposed by the money powers.

"Didn't the mill owners circulate and beg their employes to sign petitions, asking for this bill not to be passed, because it would seriously interfere with the factory business?"

OPPOSE MERGER OF BOARDS.

BOSTON, Feb. 23.—Trade unionists in this state are opposing the proposed merger of the industrial accidents board, minimum wage commission, board of conciliation and arbitration and board of labor and industries, as advocated by Governor McCall in his inaugural address. The workers insist that the work of these boards is not identical, and that each has a wide scope to develop efficiency. At a recent conference of delegates representing central bodies, the following resolution was adopted:

"We are unalterably opposed to any action by the legislature that will change the identity or in any way consolidate or merge the duties now incumbent upon the industrial accidents board, the minimum wage commission, board of conciliation and arbitration and board of labor and industries, it being our opinion, that each board or commission has ample work to perform in its own especial field without taking on the work of any other board or commission."

VALUE OF COMPENSATION LAW.

BEAVER FALLS, PA., Feb. 23.—The value of compesation legislation was shown in this city in the case of a workman who had the tip of his finger cut off. As injuries of this character are common, the employe signed an insurance company release for $1. Later the wound became serious and the employe could not work. State compensation officials ruled that the release was illegal and ordered that the employe be given medical treatment and half pay unitl he is able to return to work.

HUGE DIVIDENDS DECLARED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23. — The Winchester Repeating Arms company has declared a dividend of 465 per cent, and the Atlas Powder company a dividend of 35.80 per cent.

The report of the former concern shows net earnings of $4,652,094 on a capital of $1,000.000. The Atlas Powder company shows net income of $1,671,762 in 1915. compared with $474,150 in 1914.

Of the Winchester company's total business for the year, $11,500,000 represented domestic orders and $8,500,000 foreign, chiefly European delivery. The gross increase was one-third in excess of the preceding year. The stock, par value $100, recently sold as high as $3,000 a share.

Rainey Tariff Bill Must Be Amended

Commission Should Be Made Non-Partisan to Work Effectively.

With the administration at Washington on record in favor of a permanent Tariff Commission, there no longer seems any doubt that the fight made by organized labor has been won. There still is work to do, however, to make the victory complete. The administration bill, introduced by Congressman Rainey of Illinois, must be amended in some important particular, if the wishes of the wage-workers are to be met.

Labor's demand has been that the tariff be taken out of partisan politics on the ground that it is purely an economic question. The creation of an evenly balanced Tariff Commission offered the best way through which political influence might be neutralized and scientific accuracy substituted for political expediency in the preparation of tariff schedules.

The bill introduced by Congressman Rainey, known as H. R. 10,585 is not calculated to take the tariff out of politics. It provides for a Commission of five persons, not more than three of whom shall belong to the same political party. Such a Commission would be partisan and its personal subject to change with each change in the political complexion of Congress. In this way the tariff would be kept alive as a political issue.

If political influence is to be neutralized, the Tariff Commission should be composed of six persons, no more than three of whom shall belong to the same political party. Such a Commission would be bi-partisan, but as it would be evenly balanced there would be no need for changing its personnel as one party or the other might gain the ascendency. It would be permanent and tend to give that stability to tariff enactments so much needed by the business and industrial interests of the country. It is important that the Rainey Bill be amended in this important particular.

In another respect the Rainey Bill does not meet the wishes of organized labor. It makes no provision for the recognition of labor or agriculture on the Tariff Commission and those interested must be considered. In administration circles it has been hinted that such recognition would constitute class legislation. Such an argument carries little weight. We have a Department of Agriculture, a Department of Labor, a Department of Commerce the heads of which are members of the President's cabinet. That does not give us a class government. There is no good reason why labor, agriculture, manufactures and commerce should not all be represented dircetly on a Tariff Commission, for the subject is one in which all have a direct interest.

Organized labor has interested itself in the campaign for a Tariff Commission largely for two reasons; first, that the tariff might, so far as possible be removed from the field of partisan politics; and secondly, that the interests of labor might be safe-guarded by having a direct representative on the Tariff Commission. In neightr of these respects does the Rainey Bill fill the requirements.

The Rainey Bill is, of course, subject to amendments. This is the time for labor to make known its wishes in the matter. The labor unions should adopt resolutions urging the amendments suggested and forwarded copies to Congressman Rainey and to Senator Kern. The leaders in Congress are looking for light on the subject. Make your wishes in the matter known and do it at once.

If you require further information on the subject send a post card to H. H. Gross, President Tariff Commision League, First National Bank Building, Chicago.

AID FOR STATE INDUSTRIAL TRAINING FAVORED BY NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The proposed law providing for national aid to vocational education has been reported favorably by committees of the senate and the house. This legislation contains the elements of the Dolliver bill, introduced in 1908 by Senator Dolliver at the request of the American Federation of Labor.

While differences yet exist as to the administration and other details of the proposed law, it is agreed that federal grants should be made to states that develop industrial training of children.

In its report to the house, the committee on education explains the purposes of this legislation.

"The American people have hardly begun the work of providing for the practical education of millions of our wage earners," it says. "In this whole country there are fewer trade schools than are to be found in the now unfortunate little German kingdon of Bavaria, with a population not much greater than that of New York city.

"If we assume that a system of vocational training, pursued through years of the past, would have increased the wage earning capacity of each of these to the extent of 10 cents a day, this would have made an increase of wages for the group of $2,500,000 a day, or $70,000,000 a year, with all that this would mean to the wealth and life of the nation.

"Only trained intelligence can conserve our mines, our forests and our water powers; only trained intelligence can restore to our depleted land its old fertility; only trained intelligence can make it possible for us to maintain our higher standard of living for workers, and yet successfully compete with the workshops in lands where lower standards prevail.

"Only half of the children who enter the city elementary schools of the country only remain to the final elementary grades, and only one in ten reaches the final year of high school. On the average, 10 per cent of the children have left school at the age of 13; 40 per cent have left by the time they are 14; 70 per cent by the time they are 15, and 85 per cent by the time they are 16 years of age. On the average the schools carry their pupils as far as the fifth grade, but in some cities great numbers leave below that grade."

On January 20, 1914, President Wilson approved a law creating a commision on natural aid to vocational education. On the commission is two trade unionists. President Agnes Nestor of the International Glove Workers' Union and Charles Winslow, a member of the Sawsmiths' Union. The commision has investigated this question and many of its findings and recommendations are embodied in the legislation now pending.

Brown's Mill, this city, is on full double turn.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

FIGURATIVE BEHEADING OF THE CHRIST COMPANY.

HOW THIS DECAPITATION LEADS TO DIVINE GLORY AND BLESSING.

Revelation a Book of Marvelous Symbolisms—Pictures Truths and Facts Covering Entire Gospel and Millennial Ages—History of True and Apostate Church, Crushing of Truth, Its Gradual and Final Rise, Complete and Violent Overthrow of Evil, Reign of ....the Christ, and World's Final Testing, All Foretold—Wonderful Call of the Church and Their Ultimate Glory.

ATLANTA, GA., Feb. 20.—Pastor Russell was here today and delivered a discourse of great power and interest. We give a condensed report of his address. His text was from Revelation 20:4: "And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the Word of God. * * * And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

The Pastor referred to Revelation as a beautiful, symbolic Book picturing very much truth. He said that the chapter from which his text was taken contained in itself several pictures in few words covering the entire Millennial Age. Satan's binding at the beginning of the Age is first shown; then the judgment of those who are sitting upon the thrones of earth, which judgment has now begun; then the exaltation of the true Church to reign with Christ. The governments of the world, while capable perhaps of giving some blessings, are not satisfactory and must soon give place to the new Government under God's dear Son, which will bring blessings to all the families of the earth.

A brief mention is made respecting what shall occur at the close of the thousand years of Christ's Reign. After men have been made perfect, they must be tested, while Satan shall be "loosed for a little season," prior to his destruction. Then going back to the beginning of the Millennium, the Revelator depicts the Great White Throne, before which all the world, the living and the dead, are to be brought for judgment, for trial, during that thousand years. They shall receive the wonderful opportunities of the glorious Kingdom of Christ.

"HOW THESE SOULS ARE BEHEADED."

But the Pastor's subject related to a part of Verse 4. He declared that here, as elsewhere in Scripture, the word soul signifies person. Through erroneous doctrines this word has come to have attached to it a wrong meaning, as being something that people POSSESS rather than something that they ARE. St. John, the Revelator, was given a vision of the persons who would be beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the Word of God. He was given a foreview of what would be their portion—first of suffering, then of glory and reward. Their reward would be to live and reign with Christ. These were a special class, who had been beheaded for a certain reason. The word "beheaded" here is symbolic. All the true Church were to be beheaded. We know that Christ and the majority of the Apostles were not literally beheaded. And but few of Jesus' followers have been beheaded literally.

The Bible shows, said the speaker, that God has appointed that those who come into Christ shall renounce their own headship, their own will, and receive instead the will of Him whom God has chosen to be their Head—Jesus Christ. They are to be members of Christ's Body. "God hath given Him (Jesus) to be the Head over the Church, which is His Body." (Colossions 1:18; Ephesians 1:22,23; 1 Corinthians 12:27.) Jesus is the great Mediator for the world. During this Gospel Age, God has been preparing a Church class, who are to be the members of the Body of this Mediator and to be associated with Him in His great future work for mankind. The first members of this Body were the Apostles. These freely gave up their lives in the Cause of Christ. They gave up their wills, submitting themselves to the will of God—they were beheaded.

Down through this present Age members have been added to Christ, first from the Jews, then from the Gentiles—from every nation, kindred and tongue. The only way that any one can become a member of this anointed body of Christ is to present himself a sacrifice to God, first trusting in the sacrificial merit of Jesus. He is our great Substitute, who has redeemed us from the death penalty resting upon Adam's race. Accepting Him thus, and presenting ourselves to God through Christ, His merit is imputed to us and we are accepted as joint-sacrificers with Jesus, who then becomes our Head. We are thus beheaded. Our own will is dead. So all during this Age there has been a little company of people who have taken a course different from that of the apostate systems. These become sons of God. They are dead with Jesus as human beings, and are begotten to a new, a spiritual nature.—Colossians 3:3.

WHAT THIS BEHEADING SIGNIFIES.

The Pastor emphasized the importance that all those who make a consecration of themselves to God understand clearly that they are thus renouncing all the hopes and ambitions of the world, for the far grander and Heavenly hopes now held out to those who become disciples of Christ, who deny themselves to take up their cross and follow Him. The question for each one who has made this choice is, Am I faithfully following in the footsteps of Jesus? Jesus gave up His will wholly to the Father. He said, "I came not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me." We are to follow His example, to walk in His steps. We are to lay down our lives for the brethren, as He laid down His life.

The losing of our heads, our wills, does not mean that we actually have no will, but that our wills are fully submitted to God's will. Whatever we see to be contrary to His will for us is to be wholly relinquished. We may be sure, said the Pastor, that our Savior when on earth, being a perfect man, had a will, a strong will; but that will was entirely submitted to the will of His Heavenly Father. "Not My will, but Thine, be done," was His expression. "The cup which My Father hath poured for Me, shall I not drink it?" He said.

Because our Lord Jesus fully gave up His will to God and was obedient even unto the ignominious death of the cross, the Father highly exalted Him, giving His a name "far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named." (Ephesians 1:20-23.) And we, His Church, if faithful to our Heavenly Calling, are to be exalted with Him, and under Him as our Head. The Bible presents a beautiful picture: God, the Father of all; our Lord Jesus Christ next to the Father; the Church, the Body, or Bride, of Christ, next; then the lower spiritual orders of being; lastly, will be the restored world, when God's great Plan is complete. How wonderful it seems! said the Pastor. How much more wonderful than anything we could possibly have conceived of ourselves! What a great and good God we have!

GOD'S CHARACTER, LONG TRADUCED, NOW UNDERSTOOD.

The speaker then dwelt upon the great misconception of God's character which have for so many centuries beclouded men's minds. Those nations calling themselves Christian have made God out as worse even than heathen nations represent their gods. While we declared, "God is Love," we pictured Him in our creeds as the veriest Demon—taking pleasur in carrying out a Program which would mean an eternity of torture to thousands of millions of our race. But while we were long blinded by the Adversary to thus think of our gracious God, we have great cause for thankfulness that through Divine blessing our eyes are now opening more and more widely, and we can see something of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of God's Love.

When we see how the Father has exalted our Savior for His faithfulness, we who are following in Jesus' footsteps have sure grounds for faith that God will also exalt us with Him. Otherwise we might be inclined to say, "Oh, it is too wonderful! The thought that we have been invited to be sons of God and to share the Divine nature with Jesus seems too marvelous for belief." But when we see how the the Father fulfilled His promises to our Lord and Head, and realize that we have been called to share His glory and Throne as His Bride, surely we can believe. Jesus verifies the Father's promise to us, saying, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His Throne."—Revelation 3:21.

DOOR TO HIGH CALLING STILL OPEN.

The Pastor stated that he believes there is still opportunity for some to gain this "High Calling." He believes the "door" to this great favor is not yet closed. There is a little time remaining. If any could gain the whole world and yet lose this great prize, they would be losing much—oh, so much! Nothing that earth can offer can compare with it. All the wealth of a multi-millionaire would be as nothing. Many millionaires have great trouble and sorrow.

When we give up our wills to the Lord this is not all. We are then to take up our cross and follow Jesus. We are to carry out our consecration vows. Our time, our influence, our money, our property, our ALL, now belong to God. The Lord does not mislead us into thinking that fulfilling our consecration is something easy. It does not mean merely going to Church. It means living as Christ lived. It means walking the way of the cross even unto death. The world will consider such a course very foolish. They will say "Don't do it! Have some pleasure in life. Don't give up your will to anybody!" This would be sound advice if our will were to be given up to any other than God Himself. The Adversary would like to make us think that giving our will to God is a most foolish thing, and then he will endeavor to entrap us so that we are completely in bondage to his will, which is a wholly evil will.

CONTRAST OF SATAN'S SNARES AND GOD'S GUIDANCE.

Satan also seeks to ensnase and destroy the individual will through Hypnotism, Mesmerism, etc. It is a dangerous thing. Were it not that God has implanted a strong will in mankind, we cannot doubt that Satan and his evil angels would long ago have led the entire world into complete captivity to sin. He puts light for darkness and darkness for light. We are to be on guard against the machinations of these evil spirits through Spiritism. All these are methods by which the Adversary seeks to seize and capture the will. When our will is given to the Lord, however, it means the turning of it in a direction that will bring our own highest blessing and welfare. Our will is not captured, but guided and strengthened in the right way. We have found by experience how unsatisfactory has been the result of trying to guide ourselves, of following our own will, without the leading of the Lord. Our very best endeavors, unaided by Divine grace, are very defective and the results disappointing. How glad we are, then, to have the Lord take charge of us and guide our wills and our efforts! We know that thus we are safe.

If any one, said the speaker, is afraid to trust the Lord for fear that He will require something that would be harmful, he had better hold on to himself until he comes to see how fully he can trust the Almighty God with safety. If He were the God we once supposed Him to be, we might well be afraid to place ourselves in His hands. But since we have learned of His love for us; of His wonderful provision for us notwithstanding our fallen condition, of His provision of Restitution for the world, and of the High Callnig for the Church, we can well exclaim: "Oh, this is the very personification of Justice and Love!" We rejoice in this great, loving God, and are so glad to give ourselves to Him and call Him our Father.

PASTORAL COMMENTS ON HYMN OF CONSECRATION.

The Pastor gave a beautiful, running comment on a popular hymn of consecration, by Frances Ridley Havergal: "Take my life and let it be, Lord, acceptable to Thee." Yes, he said, we are acceptable to God through Christ. Thus only can we come. We give Him our whole life. "Take my hands, and let them move at the impulse of Thy love." Yes, but our hands are imperfect, and it is only through Jesus that our work is acceptable to God, that our hands may glorify Him. "Take my feet, and let them be swift on errands, Lord, for Thee." Yes, we wish Him to use our feet in His dear service. Gladly will we hasten on errands of love for Him. "Take my voice, and let it bring honor always to my King." Yes, we wish Him to take our voice. But our words are very imperfect. Our brain and our tongue are faulty. But the Father says, "I will cover you with the merit of Jesus. He was perfect, and I will credit His perfection to you. Your voice may have sometimes been used to slander another; the togue has great power for evil as well as good. But now you have submitted that voice, that tongue, to Me, I will make it a power for good."

"Take my lips and let them be moved with messages from Thee." Yes, dear brethren, that is the thought. Let the blessed Message of salvation and grace overflow our lips to God's praise and to the blessing of others. "Take my silver and my gold; nothing, Lord, would I withhold." The Lord answers, Yes, dear child, I will take this which you give to Me. I do not need your gold and silver; for "all the silver and the gold are Mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." But I will receive it as a mark of your love, as an indication of your devotion to Me.

"Take my moments and my days; let them flow in ceaseless praise." We often fear that our moments may not always praise the Lord as they ought, and our days are not always just what we would like them to be. But our Lord lovingly answers our troubled hearts and says, "I know even better than you do how imperfect you are in word and deed. But through Christ I receive you and accept your imperfect works and endeavors. He will make up for our unavoidable deficiencies." So we take courage and strive that our days and hours and moments may indeed bring glory to our King who so loves us and whom we so love. His arrangement for us in Christ is so wonderful.

"Take my will and make it Thine." Ah, yes! that is the very first thing to be done. "It shall be no longer mine." We wish our will to be the Lord's and His alone. If we have any self-will God cannot use us. "Take my heart, it is Thine own." Yes, we have consecrated our heart with all its impulses and affections to the Lord. "Thus in me Thyself enthrone." Our heart shall be His royal throne forevermore.

"Take my love, my God; I pour
At Thy feet its treasure-store.
Take myself—I wish to be Ever, only, all for Thee!"

This is indeed our sentiment. The doing of all this is a life-work. While our consecration was the work of a moment, yet the fulfilling of it is the work of our entire lives. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." So while in one sense our beheading, our decapitation, is an instantaneous matter, yet we must contnue to keep ourselves beheaded even unto death. Then we shall live and reign with Christ a thousand years, and be His associates in all His glory and honor forevermore. Glory, honor, immortality! Wonderful, wonderful! If such a prize does not appeal to our hearts, what would? When we see the loyalty and courage manifested by the soldiers of the warring nations across the sea, how they are willing to go down to the valley of death for their kings, not knowing even what they are fighting for, how loyal should we be to our Heavenly King—we who have hopes so glorious held out to us, who have a King so infinitely worthy of our zeal and loyalty? Our King does not say, "Go." He says, "Come." Gladly will we be beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the Word of God.

ROGER WILLIAMS.

Among the many that sought the friendly shores of America seeking for the liberty of worshiping God according to the dictates of their own conscience was a young Welshman of Baptist persuasion by the name of Roger Williams. Little is known of this young clergyman's early life—not even the place of his birth in Wales is known. He soon made the discovery that liberty to express his thought on the question of religion was not granted by the colonists when they conflicted with those of the generally accepted ones. The burning words of John Robinson in parting with the Puritans were evidently forgotten or not heeded. Williams soon got the colonists on his heels when he advocated his tenets of religious toleration; he was driven out into the cold and bitter winter weather for his troubles of trying to assist others to an appreciation of his ideas and almost perished in the wild forests. The Pilgrim Fathers were becoming as opinionated as the smug bishops were that caused their exile from Europe.

The source or this retrogression in religious toleration lies in the fact that the Church exercised the power of punishing heretics by being linked with the state, and this leads the corrupt and ambitious into the church for purely selfish purposes, thirst for power and preferment. The history of Europe was beginning to repeat itself on the shores of America. The Massachusetts Bay Colony soon developed into a theocracy and began to punish heretics. Mary Dyer and two others were summarily executed and the famous Anne Hutchinson was expelled and sought refuge in Rhode Island where she was welcomed by Rev. Roger Williams, the first man to lift up his voice for free speech in America.

All the colonies were presided over by a "minister" who was also teacher, doctor, lawyer and magistrate. The "General Court" was a meeting of the "ministers" of the various colonies and all things civic and religious were regulated by them. They elected their own governor. Anyone who criticised their regulations was first regarded with suspicion and later cautioned, and they saw to it that only resolutions that were signed by the governor, were framed by them. This was the law. In other words Church and state were one. It was a miniature Heirarchy or government by priests. They compelled church attendance, punished Sabbath breakers and other religious offenses, and forced their religion upon the Indians.

Roger Williams pointed out the evils resulting from this system and advocated a separation of church and state. He held that it was not proper to require a wicked person to swear or pray which were both forms of worship; and that the power of the civil magistrate extends only to the violent conduct, property, and outward state of man, not to their souls or conscience. He insisted upon a separation of politics and religion in the colonies—placing the financial burden of the Magistracy upon the whole community who had a voice in the election, and in religion—the laborer was worthy of his hire only from those who hire him. Pastor Russell's system of abolishing the paid ministry entirely and dividing the work amongst the many Elders elected by the congregation, educated on the "Seminary Extension" plan, which permitted them to stay at their earthly vocation, did not occur to Williams.

The clergy recognized that this doctrine would not only deprive them of their power, but curb their influence amongst the people, having no means of expelling the undesirables. This lesson was taught them by the "peace disturber" Anne Hutchinson, whose work amongst the laymen of Massachusetts Bay Colony led to schisms and a general disrespect of the clerics. Williams came near suffering the fate of Mary Dyer. He was expelled from one colony after another and was threatened with being deported back to England. He finally conceived the idea of founding a colony at Providence. He went back to England and the British Government recognized his tenets to the extent of granting him a charter for the state of Rhode Island. This state founded upon the principles he advocated, became the asylum for the heretics of all the colonies and the oppressed of Europe. His doctrine spread amongst the colonies just as did Luther's from Wittenberg, and were practically the same principles that were later incorporated into the Declaration of Independence.

Williams founded the city of Providence in 1636 and secured a charter for this state—Rhode Island—in 1643. Two years after the founding of the city of Providence, Gustavus Adolphus' colony of Swedes sailed up the Delaware (1638) and landed near the present site of Philadelphia. This colony was of Lutheran persuasion and was founded on somewat the same principles advocated by Williams and was under the supervision of Axel Oxenstiern and Peter Minuit, but did not survive—they were subsequently subjugated by the Dutch and later by the English settlers. William Penn, the Quaker, joined the Swede and Dutch settlers and founded the city of Philadelphia and the state of Pennsylvania in 1681-2. Penn re-established practically the same laws in his Quaker city as was previously established by the Lutherans. Whether Penn framed the constitution of Pennsylvania from the regime of Gustavus Adolphus, or whether he formulated it himself, it is not known His peace treaties with the Indians were also preceded by similar treaties by the Swedes, and Williams similarly treated the Indians with respect and consideration—he bought land from them instead of taking it by force. Penn's regime differed from that of Williams in that the constitution of the state of Pennsylvania prohibited the Atheist and Infidel from holding positions in the civil government. But in Philadelphia, as in Providence, the city was governed along the lines of the significance of its name—"brotherly love"— or strictly Puritan principles, where all could preach and practice their convictions in unmolested peace. Atheistic influence from France kept Penn's discriminations against those who held positions of public trust from getting into the Declaration of Independence.

About the time Williams was busy in the colonies, England was in a state of fermentation. Charles I, and the notorious Archbishop Laud were dealing out their "justice" to those that took exception to their authority. People were being lashed at the whipping post, their ears cut off and noses slit, in the public squares by this pious gent. Their diabolical acts only served to make matters worse and forced matters to a crisis before the time was ripe. Oliver Cromwell was developed in the turmoil. He was a Puritan and took up the cause of the Dissenters against the Episcopalians. He became the leading spirit in Parliament and his influence led to the civil war in which he proved himself to be a veritable Garibaldi and Napoleon.

It was the Royalty and Episcopalians against Parliament and Presbyterians and Dissenters. The people won the struggle and the Royalty were ousted and the net result was that, instead of the Episcopalians being suppressed, it was placed on the same footing as Presbyterianism. Toleration for every faith was manifest and persecution ceased. But this was premature and the Royalty were reinstated after Cromwell's death, and a reign of terror and confusion followed under Charles II. It was the same experience that France underwent during the age of Napoleon. The prison ships lying in the Thames were put in commission again, dumping the heretics upon the friendly shores of America. This circumstance assisted the cause of Williams and his ideal state of Rhode Islaand and contributed

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 14.

The Mystery is a new creation in Christ, "Christ in you the hope of glory"—Col. 1:27. We in Him and He in us—John, 15:4-5, 2 Cor. 5:17. "This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the Church"—Eph. 5:22-32. At the beginning of the sounding of the voice of the seventh angel (messenger) "The Mystery (Church) of God" shall be finished—Rev. 10:7.

CHRIST, THE HEAD AND THE CHURCH, HIS BODY.

This new creation is one new creature composed of many members, Jesus the head, and the Church His body—Col. 1:18-24. Eph. 1:22-23. As the body is one and hath many members so also is Christ—1 Cor. 12:12. We are members in particular of His (Christ) body—1 Cor. 12-27. Jesus the head, cannot say to the feet, or other members of His body, He has no need of them—1 Cor. 12:12-27. As the head, feet, hand and all members of our natural bodies are one body, so also is Christ—1 Cor. 6:15. Rom. 12:4-5. John 2:21. The Church which is Christ's body will be one in Him (Christ) as He (Christ) is one in God—John 17:21-23; also John 17:11. Notice the expression in Rom. 8:23. "The redemption of our (plural) body (singular). This refers to the Church which is the body of Christ. One body of many members. "Jesus answered and said unto them, destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up." "But He spake of the temple of His body."—John 2:19-21. This refers to the Church body as well as Jesus' body, for "know ye not that ye are the temple of the living God (1 Cor. 3:16,17), that ye are the body of Christ (Col. 1:24), are not all one body? (Rom. 12:45. Christ said to Paul, "Why persecutest thou me?" Acts 9:4,5. Who was Paul persecuting? Christ was in glory, but He said Paul was persecuting Him. It was His body, for as one member suffer, all suffer—1 Cor. 12:26.

WHEAT AND BREAD—GRAPES AND WINE.

Again the Church is represented as wheat, many grains are gathered, ground into flour, and baked into one loaf, many therefore become one bread, or body. Therefore Paul says, we being many are one bread.—1 Cor. 10:16,17; Matt. 13:38.

Many grapes (the fruit of the Vine. I am the vine and ye are the branches and must bear fruit) are squeezed into one cup of wine. So are we many made one with Him. One in heart, mind and purpose to do the Father's will. "The cup (cup of suffering) which my Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it"—John 18:11. We must drink His cup. Drink ye all of it.—Matt. 20:22,23; 26:27.

The process the wheat goes through to make bread, and the grape to make wine, represents the suffering we must pass through in the change of nature, filling up the suffering which Christ left off—Phil. 3:10, 1 Pet. 4:13. Suffer misrepresentation, ignominy, shame, contempt, etc. for righteousness sake. If we suffer with Him, we will reign with Him—2 Tim. 2:12. Suffer His sacrificial death, not as siners, but as holy and living sacrifice—Rom. 12:1. Made holy and acceptable through faith in Christ our righteousness.

BAPTISED INTO CHRIST.

Baptism of water is the symbol or shadow of the real baptism, symbolizing death to our will, burial and resurrection. Jesus had no sins to wash away. His baptism had another special meaning, which Paul explains as symbolizing His full consecration of His life to God as a sacrifice, even unto death—Heb. 10:5-9. It symbolized His immersion unto death—yielding His life to the service of God. At the close of His ministry over three years after His baptism in water, He said, "I have a baptism to be baptised with, and how am I straitened till it be accomplished."—Luke 12:50. The next day, on the cross, He cried, "It is finished." His baptim into death which began at Jordan, was there completed at Calvary.

The followers of Jesus must copy Him.—Mark 10:39. They are baptised into His death, and thus into His body, the Church. Rom. 6:3. "By one spirit are we (the church) all baptized into one body. 1 Cor. 12:13-27. "For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ"— 1 Cor. 3:27. There is one body (of which Jesus is the head), aand one spirit (love) even as ye are called in one hope of your calling (to be partakers of the divine nature); one Lord, one faith, (that is acceptable to God), one baptism (into Christ, into His death symbolized by water), One God and Father of all"—Eph. 4: 4-17. Those who are faithful members of His sacrificial body unto death, will become glorified members of His exalted body in His resurrection.—Rom. 6:5.

THE NEW MAN.

Gentiles are to be fellow heirs of the same body—Eph. 2:15. Christ broke down the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile, "for to make in Himself of twain one new man—Eph. 2: 14, 15. Notice here that in twain, out of Jews and Gentiles, one new man is to be created in Christ. We are to grow up "unto perfect man, etc." Notice that the word "we" is plural, while the word "man" is singular—Eph. 4:13. The Son of man spoken of in John 5:27, who shall bring all out of their graves is the same mentioned above. Jesus is the Head and the Church His Body is this Son of Man or Son of God who is to execute judgment—John 5:22. Read from John 5:22 to 29, (damnation in 29th verse is from Greek word kris's, which is properly translated would be judgment—resurection by judgment. See Young's Concordance and Emphatic Diaglott). God "hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained"—Acts 17:31. "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?"—1 Cor. 6:2. The above scriptures teach that Christ is to judge the world the son of man is to judge the world and the Church (the saints) are to judge the world. Here are three different statements. Now who is to judge the world? Don't overlook the Mystery. All three are one. God is creating a new creation through Christ out of men. Jesus, the head, made flesh, a man (John 1:14; Phil. 2:7,8; Heb. 2:6-10), and the Church His body are flesh, men, out of which He is creating the Son of Man, a glorious, spiritual divine being composed of Jesus the head, and the church (144,000 of Rev. 14) His body, who is to be the express image of the Father's person (nature) Heb. 1:3. These 144,000 body members of Christ are now during this Gospel age, being selected or elected, to be associated with Christ, their head, as one great Judge, Priest, Prophet and King. Not one in person, but one in heart, mind and purpose as prayed by our Lord in John 14:20; 17:11, 21, 22, 23.

VINE AND BRANCHES.

" I am the vine and ye are the branches,"—John 15. Christ Jesus is the vine and His church are the branches. All one vine, the church in Him as the branch is in the vine and He in the church as the sap (holy spirit) of the vine is in the branches. These who are in the vine and the vine in them have the same spirit of love, a love that thinketh no evil, much less speaketh evil, a love that returneth good for evil, a love that will proclaim truth and expose error no matter how popular; a love that will be obedient under any and all circumstances; a love that does not slander or do injury to anyone's good name or person. He that hath not this spirit of Christ is none of His, is not abiding in the vine, and therefore, the vine sap (love) is not abiding in Him—Rom. 8:9. He that abides in the vine and the vine in him will bear much fruit (love) will bring forth all the fruits of the spirit, joy, peace, long-suffering patience, gentleness, goodness, faith, etc.—Gal. 5:22,23. Those who as branches abide in the true vine with His spirit, will be hated without a cause and be misrepresented and persecuted by the world, as was also the vine. John 15:18-25; Matt. 16:21; 20:18; 21:15; 45:56; 26th chapt.; 27:1-4; 62:66; 28:11-15; 10:25; John 15:20; 1 Tim. 4:10; 2 Tim. 2:2. As the charge of blasphemy was made by a whited sepulchre class against the vine for claiming to be the Son of God, so also will the charge of blasphemy be made by a whited sepulchre class against the branches for claiming to be the sons of God—Gal. 4::5-7; Phil. 2:15; 1 John 3-1; Rom. 8:14-19. "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God," to receive their blessings promised through this seed. "Ourselves also (church) which have the first fruits of the spirit, (the world gets the after fruits), even we ourselves groan within ourselves waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our (plural) body (singular), the church."—Rom. 8:18-26.

Those of the true vine (church) will suffer persecution from the religious world on account of envy, because they are of the false vine (church). Rev. 14:18,19. The true vine (vine of heaven) is Christ, with its individual members (John 15:4-7), while the false vine (vine of the earth), is Catholicism with its sectarian branches. The true vine (church) is called the Mystery of God. (Col. 2:2; Rev. 10:7). The false vine, (church) is called the Mystery of Iniquity. (2 Thes. 2 chapt.) The true vine (church) is spoken of as a true woman (2 Cor. 11:2; Rev. 14:4; Matt. 25:1; Rev. 9:1; 22:17), the fause vine (church) is spoken of as a false woman (Rev. 17:1 to 11 and 18). The true vine (church) is also referred to as a city. (Rev. Chapt. 21). the false vine (church) is also referred to as a city. Rev. 17:18 aand 5 Rev. 16:19, and 18th chapter.

MAN AND WIFE—BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM.

The Lord in the wise and foolish virgin parable pictures the Church in its embryo stage as virgins (Matt. 25), and the Apostle Paul pictures them as espoused virgins, espoused unto Christ (2 Cor. 11:2), who will become His bride. (Rev. 21:9; 22:17). She as His bride with Him, in twain, become one. This picture shows the separateness in person, but oneness in heart, mind and purpose. As the bride takes the bridegroom's name, also will the Church take her Lord's name and be called Christ. — Acts 15:14.

PROMISE MADE TO THE SEED OF ABRAHAM.

Now to Abraham and his seed were tthe promises made. He saith not, as to seeds as many, but as of one. And to thy seed which is Christ—Gal. 3:16. Who is the seed of Abraham? See Gal. 3:29. "If ye (the church) be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise". The above text states that the seed is one and not many, and that Christ is that seed. How can this be? How can many be one? Don't overlook the Mystery. Christ the vine and ye the branches. All one vine. Christ the head and the Church His body. All one body—1 Cor. 12:12-27. Christ the bridegroom, and the Church His bride in twain one. So also are many one seed. What is the promise made to Abraham of which Christ and His church are heirs?. All families of the earth are to be blessed by them and not eternally damned in eternal torment—Gal. 3:8; Gen. 12:3; 18:18; 22:18; 26:4; Acts 3:25. It is to Abraham's children in the spirit of faith, and not in the flesh that the promises are made—Gal. 3:7; Rom. 9:6-8; Gal. 4:28.

These children of Abraham by faith are God's sons (Rom. 8:14), for whom the whole groaning creation are waiting. "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now waiting for the manifestation (complete) of the Sons (Jesus and the Church) of God." Rom. 8:22,19. Waiting for their promised blessings—Gal. 3:8.

ELECTION.

The Gospel age is the age of election, and God is electing or selecting (Matt. 24:31; Rom. 8:33; 9:11; 11:5; 1 Thes. 1:4; 2 Pet. 1:10) a little flock (Luke 12:32) composed of one hundred and forty four thousand (Rev. 14:1-5) peculiar people (1 Pet. 2:9), picked out from among the Jews and Gentiles (Acts 15:14). After which Jesus the head and this little flock of peculiar people, the promised seed, His body, which constituted the Christ, will return and fulfill God's promise to bless all families of the earth according to the promise made to Abraham, Gal. 3:8; Gen. 12:3. All familes of the earth are the residue (balance) of men mentioned in Acts 15:16-19.

THE HIGH CALLING.

"It is not of him that runneth, nor of him that willeth but of God who calls, etc." (Rom. 9:9-25), for "no man come to me except the Father—draw him." John 6:44. "Many are called, but few are chosen"—Matt. 22:14: "For ye see your calling brethren,, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called, etc. 1 Cor. 1:26-31. Would not this bar out a great many leaders in our ecclesiastical, social, and political bodies? If you want to find our noble, great, and wise today, go in the nominal church. God says He hasn't called many of them. What are we called to? To be members of the one body (Eph. 4:4), the inheritance in the saints (Eph. 1:8-11) to become associated judges with Christ to judge the world (1 Cor. 6:2), and bless all families of the earth. Gal. 3:8, 29. Called to run for the great promises which Paul calls the prize (Phil. 3:14), the crown of life, which is the topmost life called immortality—Rev. 2:10. Therefore seek immortality (Rom. 2:7) and put it on (1 Cor. 15:53,54), for it is something to be gained. Also see 1 Cor. 1:26; 2 Thes. 1:11; Heb. 3:1; 2 Pet. 1:10. While during this Gospel Age no man comes except the Father draw him, after this drawing age of election, Christ (head and body) will draw all men unto him, which will be the free grace age when the bride (Christ's church) will say "come and who-so-ever will let them come, etc." —Rev. 22:17; Acts. 15:14-18. God is now drawing only a few, but Christ says, "If I (Jesus the head and the Church His body are one) be lifted up (out of death to the divine, immortal life (John 5:26) I (Jesus and Church) will draw all men unto me—John 12:32. Also see Eph. 5:22-32, about the great Mystery concerning Christ and the Church.

ANOTHER PICTURE

Christ and His church is to rule and reign over the earth for a thousand years—Rev. 20:1-6. Who will be the subjects they will reign over? ANSWER—all families of the earth are to hear the voice of the Son of Man (Jesus and the Church) and come forth from their graves (John 5:25-28) and receive the blessings promised to Abraham, that the seed (Jesus and the Church) should do (Gal. 3:29), according to the promise—Gal. 3:8; Gen. 12:3; Acts 3:25. This will be the "restitution of all things)Acts 3:19-21), when the residue of men shall be blessed (Acts 15:13-18), and all Israel be saved—Rom. 11:26.

SHEEP PICTURE.

My sheep (the church) hear my voice and follow me (John 10:4), but other sheep (the world) I have which are not of this (church) fold, them must I also bring—John 10:16. This other flock of sheep are to be raised from the broad road of destruction (Matt. 7:13), the grave (John 5:25-28) and be placed upon the highway of holiness (Isa. 35th chapt.), and be ruled and reigned over by the first flock, the church, for a thousand years (Rev. 20:1-6) fufilling God's promise to Abraham to bless all the families of the earth through or by his seed, the church, the first flock—Rev. 21:1-6. "For the upright (sheep, church) shall have dominion over them (other sheep) in the (resurrection) morning." Psa. 49:14.

COMMUNION.

"We (the church) are made partakers of Christ"—Heb. 3:14. We partake of His flesh and blood. Except we eat of His flesh and drink of His blood, we have no life in us—John 6:53. Christ is the word which is the bread from Heaven. When we eat and assimilate food, it goes to furnish us flesh and blood, and therefore becomes part of us; so also when we eat the bread from heaven, which is the word (John 1:1) and "thy word is truth" (John 17:17), and assimilate it by appropriating the precious promises of God contained therein to ourselves, it becomes a part of us—Rev. 10:9. Flesh represents humanity and blood represents life; i. e. flesh and blood represents human life. We partake of his human life by faith in his redemption and restoration merits.. It is in this sense that our flesh and bone becomes a fleshly member of the fleshly body of our Lord—Eph. 5:30. Becoming one bread (1 Cor. 10:17) with Him, as the bread from heaven; the heavenly manna for the giving of life to the world in the last (1,000 year) day. John 6:32-65. This reckoned eternal human life which our Lord actually had, is imputed to us, and is for the purpose of offering it as members of His body, to be sacrificed by Him. We as underpriest (new creatures) co-operate with Him as our High Priest in permitting ourselves (old creatures) to be sacrificed unto death with all our human rights as a member of His body.

I am renewing my subscription to the dear old Tribune sending same through Watch Tower office. I thank you indeed for continuing the paper so long after my subscription expired, for we never want to miss a copy. If we are still in the flesh and still permitted to spread the truth teaching of God's word in this way another year, I shall hope to be prompt if His will I so much appreciate the nice form in which you print the sermon—grand sermons. The Sunday School lessons are so helpful too. May the Lord prosper the Tribune in its good work.

Sincerely,
W. F. McLENDON.

In what is referred to as the Pittsburgh District there are 250,000 men employed in the mills, the factories and the shops.

In the coal mines there are employed another 50,000 men.

One of the greatest problems to solve is that of meeting the requirements of this vast army of 300,000 toilers.

KAUFMANN & BAER CO. ARE EQUAL TO THIS EMERGENCY.

They have spent a life time mastering this difficult task, and how well they have succeeded is shown in their remarkable success achieved by sheer merit—by their goods and the astonishing low prices at which they offer them.

The only way to appreciate what this great house is doing in the way of meeting the wants of everyone is for the men in the mills, the shops, the factories and the mines to visit the store and see for themselves the wonderful bargains within the reach of all.

Let this be the People's Motto:

British Labor Party Takes Action

the three days and the majorities by which they were passed:

Resolutions	Passed by majority of
Supporting the Government in the prosecution of the war	900,000
Approving Labour's co-operation in the recruiting campaign	1,641,000
Protesting against conscription	1,577,000
Opposing Compulsion Bill	1,356,000
Refusing to agitate for the repeal of the Act	35,000
Confirming Executiv's decision to allow Labor to enter Coalition Ministry	1,405,000
Approving of Labor Ministers' retaining office	1,127,000
Refusing to declare against secret alliances and in favor of reduction of armaments, as part of the peace settlement, by all Powers	357,000

The conference, though more sharply divided throughout its course than any Labor conference has been before, has shown some toleration in its domestic arrangements, and it is a sign of the permanent unity of the party that with Arthur Henderson (pro-war) as secretary Ramsay Macdonald (propeace) despite competition, is retained as treasurer. J. R. Clynes who by a single speech has greatly enhanced his reputation not merely as a debater but as one of the statesmen of the Labor Party, heads the poll in the ballot for the Executive, and G. J. Wardle, Labor Member of Parliament and editor of the Railway Review, who also made one of the speeches that will be remembered, comes third.

The rejection as a member of the Executive of John Hodge (pro-war), the acting chairman of the Paliamentary Labor Party, is due, not in any degree to his attitude at the conference— Mr. Hodge happens to have been with the majority every time—but to the view that the miners take of party discipline in a matter which concerns themselves. Mr. Hodge is a member of the Socialist Nationalist Defence Committee, and the Committee was chiefly repsonsible for the successful independent Pariamentary candidate of J. B. Stanton at Merthyr. That vacant parliamentary seat was caused by the death of Keir Hardie, a strong pro-peace labor man. An official pro-peace labor candidate was put up in the person of an important South Wales miners' leader named Winstone who was, however, defeated by the unofficial pro-war labor candidate, Staton. Mr. Hodge explained that his connection with the Committee is purely nominal, and he was especially blameless in its action at Merthyr. But the Miners' Federation, who had nominated Winstone as the official labor candidate, have all the esprit de corps of an officers' mess in these matters, and they have insisted on full satisfaction.

According to further details of what is being done in regard to the dilution of labor by the introduction of women in munitions factories, it seems that the dilution campaign, upon which the country fell back as the only means of ensuring the unlimited output of material necessary for the army, was seriously threatened by the prejudices of some employers and by the suspicion entertained by some skilled workers as to the motives of their employers. Mutual distrust and aversion was the legacy handed down from bitter industrial conflicts between masters and men in the past, and it was scarcely to be anticipated that the men would placidly accept the prospect of being outnumbered by ten women to one in their own workshops. This was by no means the only problem that faced the officials of the Ministry of Munitions. Hundreds of really capable and enterprising engineers showed masterly inertia in the face the revolutionary activities of the Government's emissaries. That scores of machines were lying idle for the lack of labor while the army and navy starved for machine guns and shells was no argument potent enough to induce some of these men to get about the reorganisation of their shops in order to admit women. That there was not enough skilled hands to go round, one would have though, was only too tragically evident. There was indeed to this day machines standing unemployed, for I have seen fifty of them in a shop within the London area idle, because the millwrights cannot be found to put them up for the women to work them.

Not all the employers were so conservative, however. A few far-seeing men jumped in boldly; they treated their men with tact and complete confidence and won them over; the shops were overhauled and the machines adapted, the women were introduced to the men as colleagues, and their experiences have been a complete and glorious vindication.

Generally working men are now prepared to accept the coming of women but it is clear that unless the question of wages is carefully looked into there may be an aftermath when the war is over of wage competition which can only tend to the detriment of the trade union men who are now helping the country by giving way on some of their most cherished ideals.

DEFENDS STATE MILITIA.

CASTLE ROCK, COL., Feb. 23.—The Colorado militia and its conduct during the strike of mine workers in the southern part of this state found a champion in the person of ex-Governor Ammons at the trial of four former strikers.

The ex-state executive condemned everyone who charged the militia with improper conduct. The federal government, a committe appointed by the congress to investigate the strike and the commission on industrial relations were all wrong, according to the witness.

largely toward turning the colonies against England and leading to the Declaration of Independence and the Revolutionary War.

Franklin, Jefferson and Paine were longheaded enough to block the tactice of ecclesiastics, of having heretics punished by concocting charges of treason—as did the Jews who arraned Jesus before Pilate with the charge of claiming to be King of the Jews. These statemen stipulated that treason did not consist in what a man said or wrote, but in what he did. This guaranteed free speech and press. All efforts of the clerics to fetter the liberties of the people must now be through influencing legislature—the only avenue accessible that gives them any legal power.

The tactics of the Protestant clergy changes with the times, just as did the Catholic Priesthood from age to age. The latest form of religious intolerance was manifested in the formation of the Evangelistic Alliance in 1846, which labeled the articles of faith which were to be considered "Orthodox"—all others being "hetorodox." They have changed the form of persecution from physical torture to slander, ostracism, misrepresentation of the teachings of those in advance of them and this is principally the tide which Wesley in England and Miller and others in America had to strive against. The life of Wesley proves that modern civilization is only a thin veneer—it has not changed the clergy, much less the rank and file.

In the past the reformers triumphed by dying for the principles for which they lived—they seal the truth they taught with their own blood. Thus ithas been, beginning with the stoning of St. Steven, all the way down the centuries of time. Their lives were either sacrificed on the altar of liberty, or were in constant danger, and now the more subtle forms of persecution are applied, of slander in perverting the circumstances and incidents of life and their utterances. In this the faithful are living out the words of their Master that if they would be faithful to His teachings they would follow in His foot-steps, who died an ignominious death between thieves at the instigation of those who were nominally His brethren—like Abel the first martyr who was slain by his brother Cain! In view of the fact that the path that all reformers have trod, of any cast, in science and politics as well as religion, are marked with bleeding feet, it would be unreasonable to expect that the last of God's standard bearers —Pastor Russell—would be immune.

From a physical point of view Russell has fared well to date—whatever surprises are in store from smug and self-satisfied clergymen engaged in propping tottering institutions, we leave to time. Beecher had remarked that no more fitting finale could be imagined than that which occurred to the great statesman, Lincoln.

Perhaps the venerable divine from Long Island will yet figure in a drama that will attract the disinterested public, that always sympathizes with the under dog, and exclaim in the words of Pilate "Behold the Man."

The only avenue left open for legal power for dogmatic clerics is to influence legislation, and indications are that they are getting the habit following "Billy" Sunday campaigns against "booze." They are entering politics and social reform and influencing statesmen against the liquor traffic. Satan appears as an angel of Light. In this they are encouraged by the captains of industry — the managers of gigantic business enterprises and the clergy are fraternizing majestically. Man moves in a mysterious way, his blunders to perform. Who knows but what the dogmatics may use this only avenue—of influencing statesmen under some pretext—to silence the last of the subjects of our sketch?—since every other means have been employed without success? This is a bad omen and indicates, which way the wind is blowing—that the principles of Roger Williams which produced the civility and courtesy of our day, the embodiment of which is the Golden Rule of doing unto others as you would be done by, are in danger of infringement by those that are guardians of religious liberty—the statesmen. "We are not ignorant of his devices."

THE GOOD RESULTS OF PERSECUTION

Acts 5:12—6:6—February 27.

Methods Used of God—Divine Approval of the Gospel—Opposition by Sadducees and Chief Priests—Multitudes Believed In Jerusalem—Church Communism Began to Fail.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."—Galatians 6:2.

THE manifestations of love and sympathy amongst the early Christians had a salutary effect in backing up the Apostles' teachings. The principle is as true today as it was then. The world are apt to read the Gospel influence in the lives of professors before they give heed or venture to believe it.

Alas, that we can see so many evidences of the fulfilment of St. Paul's words respecting our day!—that at this time many would have a form of godliness without its power, and be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." (2 Timothy 3:1-5.) The difficulty seems to be that Sectarianism has lost the essence of the Gospel Message which Jesus and the Apostles taught. That loss has made room for various substitutes favored by the great Adversary; but they are not the Gospel, and do not have the proper power upon the hearts and lives of those who even desire to do right. The Gospel Message which Jesus and the Apostles taught was expressed in our Lord's prayer, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is in Heaven."

God's Angel Delivered Them.

Opposition of Selfishness.

Today's Study shows how the living of the true, simple life of faith, trust, obedience and love had its effect—how many were added to the Church, including "a great multitude of priests." It shows us, too, how angered were the Sadducees and the official class at that time. They were grieved that the people were taught; for the teachings of the followers of Jesus were so contrary to what they had taught and what they had hoped for. Not believing the Prophets, they had been using religion largely as a cloak—"a form of godliness." Their real hopes were along the lines of Gentile hopes—of becoming more intimately associated with the Roman Empire and thus obtaining special favor.

These religionists feared lest the teaching of Messiah as the coming King of the world would reach the ears of the Roman rulers, and bring upon the Jews ridicule and disfavor, and perhaps take from them some of their liberties and crush all their aspirations respecting the future. Their opposition to the Gospel was, therefore, a selfish one. They had the Apostles arrested and put into prison. But the Lord sent His angel and delivered them; and with good courage they appeared again the next day in the Temple, preaching as before.

Again the Apostles were arrested, brought before the officials, and commanded to preach no more in Jesus' name. The point of resentment is noted in the words, "Ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrines [teachings], and are liable to bring this man's blood upon us." That is to say, It looks as though you might really convince the people that we have committed a great crime in putting to death that fanatical leader of yours, called Jesus.

We see this same principle illustrated at the Reformation, when God's time had come to bring back the Bible to the people after it had been turned aside for twelve hundred and sixty years. When the Bishops began to claim that they also were apostles, and when, using this Apostolic authority, they gave the people the Nicene Creed in A. D. 325, an end was put to all Bible study; for the people were taught that this creed, and other subsequent creeds, contained all that was proper to be believed, and that whoever believed anything else would be doomed to eternal torture.

Tyndale Translating.

When, under Divine guidance, Wiclif and Tyndale brought the New Testament to the attention of the people in the English language, it marked the start of return to an individual faith and a new beginning of Bible study. It has required the centuries since to help us out of the gross darkness of those twelve hundred years when we were without the Bible and poisoned by the various creeds. No wonder it is still difficult for us to use our common sense in Bible study!

Communism a Failure.

Recurring to our lesson, we note some of the difficulties of Communism. Favoritism was claimed in the distribution of the necessities. Realizing that they could not undertake to manage a community along earthly lines, the Apostles concluded that they should, as the Master had directed, give themselves entirely to the Gospel work. They appointed seven Deacons to attend to the charities; but evidently these arrangements also by and by failed, and we hear no more of the early Communism. The experience taught us the impossibility of such a practise under our imperfect conditions.

APPRECIATIONS.

Terrel, Tex., Feb. 9.

I am sorry but I will have to ask you to stop sending the good paper to me as I am unable to pay for it. I sure do enjoy reading that grand old paper, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and other religious pieces. With much success to you and your grand paper.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 18.

I am truly thankful to our dear Heavenly Father, the Giver of every good and perfect gift, the Father of lights, in whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning, for His kindness to me. Through His kindness and goodness I have been able to renew my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower office. I have much pleasure in doing so, as I value your paper very much for the clear type in which you print Pastor Russell's sermons and the other good religious features. I was indeed glad to see love for a brother shown in regards to the letter of Alfred Dripps—Love suffereth long and is kind—May God bless you in spreading the Truth.

Sincerely yours,
H. H. MOORE.

York, Pa., Feb. 17.

I have today renewed my subscription to the National Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, Brooklyn, N. Y., so please continue sending me the paper for another year.

I class the Tribune as one of the leading papers of the country, and greatly enjoy reading it, especially the sermons by Pastor Russell and the other religious features.

May God richly bless you for the way you are publishing the "glad tidings."

Wishing you continued success, I am yours for Truth and righteousness.
W. H. BOECKEL.

Suffolk, Va., Feb. 17.

As my subscription expires on the 16th inst., I am renewing through the Watch Bible & Tract Society, and am very pleased to renew my subscription, for more reasons than one which I mention as follows. 1. Your long service in the Truth in the way of publishing Pastor Russell's weekly discourses, deserves the recognition and patronage of all the Truth People who can afford to subscribe. 2. I was specially pleased to note the kindly and unselfish tone of your communication to the Editor of the St. Paul Enterprise and your frank disavowal and disapproval of the Dripps' letter which slipped by you and thus found its way into your columns. 3 The manner in which you are now setting up the sermons deserves commendation.

It causes me regret to read so many letters from various friends asking that the paper be discontinued because of financial inability to pay for it. It is not for me to judge, but I wonder when reading such letters, if the friends who write them, might not by practicing a little more self-denial, find themselves able to put one more dollar into the Harvest work, by renewing their subscription to the Tribune.

With deep appreciation of your services, I remain,
Yours very sincerely,
W. W. MURRAY, M. D.

Columbus, O., Feb. 16.

I see by the label on the "Tribune" that my subscription expired Dec. 30, 1915. I am renewing through the "Watch Tower." I wish to say I appreciate the good work of the "Tribune." Keep right on Mr. Editor doing your best and thousands of hearts will be made happier and dull lives brightened because of the Message you are sending out.

With appreciation,
C. B. SHULL.

Will you please stop the paper as I don't feel able financially to take it. Some kind friend sent it to me for a year for which I appreciate it very much and thank you for sending it.

WHAT THE YOUNGSTOWN MILLS ARE DOING.

At the works of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, the management anonunces that eight of the sixteen sheet mills will be in commission next week. A scarcity of semi-finished steel that goes into sheets is responsible for the backward operations in this particular department. However, the entire smelting capacity of the big plant is consumed in finished products, the demand for bar tubing and wire products exceeding the supply.

All of the steel works in the Mahoning Valley are operating next week to capacity production, just the same as the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company. At the works of the Republic Iron & Steel company the management finds difficulty in filling orders.

MINERS TO MEET OPERATORS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Next Monday represetatives of the anthracite coal operators and the United Mine Workers' union will meet in this city to consider the 20 per cent wage demand of miners. The workers are asking for a two-years' agreement and the operators' publicty bureau is spending thousands of dollars to reach the public with their poverty plea. Despite this campaign the officials of the miners are confident of success, as their organization stands unitedly behind them.

INVESTIGATE CANNERIES.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., Feb. 23.—A wage board appointed by the state industrial welfare commission to investigate canneries in this state has reported a schedule of wage rates agreed to. It is stated that "If the hourly earnings should not equal the amount to be determined by the industrial welfare commission, as equalizing the necessary cost of living, these piece rates will have to be raised again next season."

Some trade unionists are suggesting that if the 20,000 women cannery employes in this state were organized they could appoint their own representatives and set a wage scale that would meet living conditions without experimenting an entire season.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

ESTABLISHED 1872—No. 14. PITTSBURGH, PA., THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1916. FIVE CENTS A COPY.

New York Public Library 476 Fifth Ave.

VALLEY RAILWAY COMPANY SUFFER GREAT IN JUSTICE

Under the Pretense of Fighting for Union Labor Men Violate Their Agreement and Commit Great Wrong

The National Labor Tribune has been assailed for pointing to the dangers that haunt the path of organized labor in the Allegheny Valley but no one can blind the real issue by villifying the oldest labor paper in America or assailing its motives.

The crimes of vandalism and dastardly cowardice are not to be placed at the door of the conservative labor leader nor are the deaths of six innocent persons and the injuries to a half hundred more to be lightly passed over by mockery in the presence of sorrowing members of the families and friends. Furthermore, whole communities are being prostrated through business depression all brought about through unjust. unreasonable, irrational, and senseless demands.

For forty-four years the Tribune has been fighting the battle of labor and a glance over its files, which are open to the public, will conclusively prove its worth, its honesty of purpose, its integrity, its fearlessness; and its national and international reputation is beyond question.

Why this attack upon the Tribune and this questioning of its standing in labor or industrial circles?

For nearly half a century labor organizations throughout all sections of the United States have found a champion in the Tribune and almost thirty years ago the toilers of this nation erected to the memory of Thomas A. Armstrong, the founder of the Tribune, that magnificent life size monument that has weathered the storms in the main park on the North Side of Pittsburgh for more than a quarter of a century.

A glance at the official list of Trades Union Official Journals for the month of February and issued by the American Federation of Labor will find the Tribune among the accredited papers and, what is more, the Tribune is in weekly communication with the American Federation of Labor at Washington, D. C. Never in all the history of trades unionism has the American Federation of Labor or its principal champion, Sampel Gompers, stood for the deliberate and wilful destruction of an agreement before that agreement had expired.

Why any argument on the matter at issue? There can be no equivocation, the facts are at hand. The question at stake is entirely too important to be brushed aside slightingly. Let any honest, consciencious and sincere person desiring the truth involved in this dispute observe carefully the facts herewith presented and there can be but little doubt as to the final and ultimate conclusion.

In February, 1914, a working agreement was drafted and, after being submitted and carefully gone over by both the Officials of the Allegheny Valley Street Railway Company and the employees, was posted and under that instrument the men returned to work. This instrument governed until December 21, 1914.

In 1915 a similar working agreement for one year was entered into and each employee signed the agreement.

From the agreement which was published in the Valley Daily News, August 26, 1915, the following extract is reproduced:

> "No man shall be allowed to drink spirituous, or malt liquors, or wines, or beers, while on duty, nor on the company's premises, nor when in uniform nor at any time so close to the reporting time for duty that the effect of his drinking could in any way be detected upon him; nor to be dishonest, under penalty of discharge; no man shall violate the company's rules and regulations and the men shall do all in their power to discourage drinking, impoliteness, incivility and disloyalty and shall in every way promote the company's discipline and its best efforts to accommodate the public with reasonable profit to itself.
> No man shall be discharged except for cause and only after due hearing by the Division Superintendent.
> In case any employee notified of discharge should feel that he had been unjustly discharged, he shall have the right to appeal to the General Manager of the Company, and shall have the right to bring his witnesses along with him.
> No deductions shall be made from the pay of any employee for time lost by reason of having been suspended or discharged who shall have been found after investigation not guilty of the charges for which punishment was prescribed."

From the time of the signing of the first agreement which also contained the above clause up to the time the strike was inaugurated (some eighteen [18] months) eight (8) men had been dismissed from the employment of the company.

The reasons for the dismissal of the men given by the company were published in the "Valley Daily News" September 1, 1915, from which we reproduce the following:

> "Failure after warning to flag railroad crossings; failure to ring up fares; drinking on duty; drunkenness, discourtesy, insubordination and disorderly conduct on duty; being involved in public scandal. Only two of these men took advantage of their right under the contract to appeal their cases to the General Manager and one of these, after careful repeated hearings, was refused reinstatement on account of the evidence which clearly convicted him. The other, after hearing the evidence against him restated in detail, conceded the points and voluntarily withdrew his claim for reinstatement.
> On account of its duty to the public no fair minded person will blame the company for insisting upon sobriety, honesty, efficiency and carefulness in its working force and car men."

So far as we know little or no argument has been advanced to show that the company was not justified in making these discharges. In public transportation discipline and carefulness must be maintained and leading labor leaders have always so insisted. Not only union men but non-union men were discharged and it appears the percentage of non-union men was the larger. This speaks well for the union men on the one side and the fairness of the company on the other, and after much contention and later dissention a strike was eventually declared against the Allegheny Valley Street Railway Company.

This action on the part of the members of the union who voted for a strike was in direct violation of the agreement which did not expire until 1916.

The number of men involved and the situation may thus be given:—

The total number of employees on the line were.....	48
The total number of employees belongng to the union....	38
Number of employees not belonging to the union	10
Of the 38 members of the union two were absent from the meeting at which the strike was voted.
Number of union employees voting against the strike....	8

Fully realizing the insufficiency of the original grievance to present to the public in order to win sympathy, an additional grievance was sought and the leaders put forth a demand for full recognition of the union. This was contrary to the agreement which was an "Open Shop" agreement.

As soon as the strike was started the few idle and mad-minded of the community seized the pretext to indulge their natural propensity for crime and lawlessness and the good name and business prospects of the valley were viciously threatened.

Committees were formed of reputable men and conferences were held with the officials of the railway company and with the strikers, and the grievances were very carefully gone over. We believe no report was made by any of these committees finding that men had been unjustly discharged.

The officials stated there would be in the future as there has been in the past, no discrimination against any man who was or should become a member of the union.

There never was during the present strike any question of wages involved nor have the men asked any advance, nor has any attempt been made to reduce the men so far as wages or time are concerned. Last fall the prospects of increased business were such that the company voluntarily made a general increase in wages and now such men as return to work will receive more than when the strike was inaugurated.

Each committee that has called upon the company was accorded a full hearing and after a conference left with full knowledge of why the men, over whom the alleged differences occurred, were left off. The questions at issue have dwindled until there is but little left and the last conference between the company and its employees leaves the situation thus:

> The men have agreed to return to work, eliminating their original demands but insisting on the discharge of every man now employed on the cars.
> The Company contends it cannot consent to this demand for several reasons:
> First—If all now on strike were to return there would then not be enough men to operate the lines.
> Second—There is no justice in discharging men who have been faithfully performing their duty.
> Third—There is no reason for discharging men who are already members of Local Division 528.
> Fourth—The increased traffic on the line which has been impaired somewhat through delay in adjusting the differences will necessitate a considerable increase in the present rolling stock to meet the demands of the traveling public and this will enable the company to increase the number of employees to many more than there were when the trouble originated.

THE POSITION OF THE COMPANY.

> First—The Company published ample notices for the men to return to work with their former seniority and pay.
> Second—When they did not return it was necessary to fill the list and the company then published a statement that it would be glad to receive applications from the old men who desired to return to work and reinstate as many of them as possible, at their old rates of pay.
> Third—No discrimination will be exercised against any employee who desires to return to work.

The financial loss to the merchants in the Valley towns is inestimable and the property holders are suffering tremendously through a refusal on the part of manufacturing enterprises seeking sites to locate plants where labor disputes are threatened. Had there been some legitimate grievance over which to measure swords the public would have quickly awakened to an injustice, but the flimsy, vague, frivolous and frail pretense has like a snowflake on the river faded away and there can be but one ending and that culminating in disaster for the men if they fail to appreciate the importance of a speedy settlement.

Much is being made over the apparent success of the Jitney but this ephemeral, like a soap bubble in the sunlight, a thing of beauty as the sun prisms it, but alas, a gentle zephyr and all is gone, thus fate awaits the jitney and its owner. The history of the jitney is failure wherever tried and the inevitable cannot be evaded.

The jitney runs smooth when things are new but constant use and unreasonable demands upon the vehicle increases operating expenses and as time goes by the people for convenience must eventually patronize the street car with the ultimate result that traffic for the jitney will fade away and both jitney and owner will suddenly disappear. There can be no alternative to this as fate has decreed and the precipice lies not far beyond.

The problem then to solve in the present contention and the plan of campaign is what course is proper to pursue and the one most essential to the success of organized labor, preserving of course every honorable advantage. Today the nations are applauding the commanders who refuse to sacrifice their men; the valiant officer is he who in the face of grave danger retreats and the soldier of today agrees it requires more courage to retreat and avoid unnecessary sacrifice than to rush headlong into battle and lose all. Thus the men of Local No. 528 should again open negotiations if such can be done with a view of bringing about a speedy adjustment.

If there are those who are interfering with a prompt and speedy settlement and they have the principles of union labor at heart they should be patriotic enough to withdraw and permit the men to return to work, but selfishness has ruined many a noble cause and the danger is that trades unionism may here meet its Waterloo as far as the Valley is concerned. This depends very largely upon the actions of two or three men and the question is, Are these men mentally large enough to realize the seriousness of the struggle and the jeopardy in which organized labor in Western Pennsylvania is placed? If there are any members of the union standing in the way of a speedy settlement then the hope is expressed that they step aside, sink their individual, selfish interests for the sake of a cause in which every labor organization in the Valley is vitally interested and the unions at large are closely observing.

> It has been charged by irresponsible parties that the article which appeared in the last issue of the Tribune had been inspired by the officers of the Allegheny Valley Street Railway Company, but such charges are baseless and absolutely false. The writer of the article in question has never met any officer of the company nor was there a single line or fact furnished by any employee of the railway company.
> It can be positively stated that not a single officer or employee of the railways company ever saw or knew anything of the article until it appeared in print. The Tribune has ample sources for securing its own facts and it has high salaried practical newspaper men who know the real value of news, and are capable of writing the articles with sufficient force to arouse the public when published.

ROADS' REVENUES INCREASE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The poverty plea of railroads in their opposition to an eight-hour day for transportation service employes is not sustained by the interstate commerce commission, which reports that:

"In December, 1915, the net revenue from railroad operations on railroads in the United States, was $43,650,024 more than in December, 1914, the net revenue in December, 1915, being $103,484,047, as against $59,834,023 in December, 1914.

NUMEROUS CONTESTANTS IN RACE FOR PRIZES

Much Interest Aroused by Announcement of Tribune's Subscription Plan.

LIST OF PRIZES ON PAGES 4 AND 5

Everyone Wins and No One Loses in Big $3,100 Prize Contest.

The announcement in last week's issue of the National Labor Tribune of its big $3,100 prize contest has aroused active interest among readers far beyond our fondest expectations. All this week the contest manager has been busy listing names of contestants and receiving new subscriptions to this publication.

Next week it is expected we will be in position to announce the names of all who have entered the lists together with their standing in the contest.

The greatest inducement to our readers to participate in this undertaking is the fact that no one loses. Everyone gets something, so long as he or she sticks to the finish.

For the person receiving the highest number of votes is the fine eight-cylinder, $1,200 Regal touring car. For the persons turning in subscriptions in numbers not sufficient to win a prize is a cash payment based upon the subscriptions obtained.

Attention is now called to the fact that the person turning in the first two subscriptions receives a credit of 25,000 votes for each subscription. This gives the contestant a flying start and will mean much when the race gets near the end.

But nine weeks remain until the close of the contest when the numerous valuable prizes will be awarded. Two automobiles, now on exhibition at the salesrooms of the Regal Automobile Company, Penn avenue, East End, Pittsburgh, will be turned over to the persons turning in the highest number of votes.

You can obtain one of these machines, just as easy as the next person. Send in your name as a contestant and our contest manager will write you telling you how to systematize your nine week's campaign so that you will obtain the highest results.

If you fail to win one of these automobiles you may be fortunate enough to capture the Grand Piano or the Victor Victrola. Then there are other prizes of sufficient value to warrant your taking part in this undertaking.

But remember, whether you win a prize or no, you get paid for your services. Everybody wins and nobody loses.

Lose no time getting into the contest. Send in your name today and then get busy among your friends.

Prosperity is spreading over the land and there are but few persons who cannot spare two dollars, the price of one year's subscription to the National Labor Tribune.

Remember, there is a reason why you read this paper and that reason may apply to your friend.

Turn to pages 4 and 5 and read all about the $3,100 Price Contest.

British Labor Situation Calm.

English Trade Unions Will Not Further Oppose Military Service Bill.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—A complete survey of the labor position in the United Kingdom at the time of mailing this letter shows a condition of things much better than perhaps would be gathered from looking at scattered items of news. For one thing the trouble over the Military Service bill which was threatened in certain noisy quarters has not matured. The Bill is in operation and unmarried men up to the age of 30 who have not already enlisted in the army will by March 2nd be regarded automatically as enlisted and will be called upon to take service or give reasons for desiring not to. I myself doubt whether there will be any large number of working class young men to still come forward. The working classes have responded to a stupendous extent to earlier enlistment appeals and where there are any men still eligible it will be found that they are to an overwhelming extent engaged in indispensable industries without which the war could not be continued. The individual who will be affected by the new Military Service Bill will in the great majority of cases be the middle class young man. James O'Grady, a well-known Labor Member of Parliament tells me that in his own constituency of Leeds he has good authority for saying that there are something like 6,000 middle class young men not yet included under any enlistment scheme. If this proportion holds good throughout the country we get somewhere about 200,000 middle class young men apparently eligible for miltary service who have not yet come forward.

This view is still further borne out by the fact that the various societies that have been formed to combat compulsion are practically all societies of middle class people with only a minority of working class supporters. It can be said without fear of contradiction that of England's three classes, the aristocracy, the middle class, and the working class, the first and the last of these have responded enormously both for military and industrial service; if there is any falling away it is in the middle class, although again it must be remembered here that a great majority are also putting every effort forward. It would, of course, not be surprising if the British working man had been backward in coming forward. He is subjected to an amount of carping and stupid criticism that is enough to sicken him. In sublime ignorance of obvious and immense facts newspapers, middle class speakers, preachers and politicians and others have charged the working man from time to time with cowardice, laziness, drunkenness, thriftlessness and half a dozen other vices. The fact that he has been earning high wages because of his tremendous efforts and through his working overtime on Sundays has been a great annoyance to many of his critics who never in their whole lives themselves did an honest day's work. These poor ill-informed praters live in the past; they are quite out of touch with modern conditions in industry and commerce, altogether apart from the special conditions that the war has evoked. They still think of the working man in terms of Medieval serfdom. They are perhaps annoyed also by a dim perception of the fact that this war with its terrible bloodshed and suffering may yet have an extraordinary effect upon indutrial progress. For the first time in this country since the fourteenth century supplies of labor have been insufficient for the demand for labor.

Readers of history will remember that after the time of the plague, usually called the "black death," which raged in the fourteenth century, so many peasants and workers were wiped out that those who remained were able to command prices for their services far above anything that had ever before been known. Various laws were then passed such as the Statute of Laborers whereby wages were limited. At the present time we have the Government urging upon trade unions not to move for further higher wages. These government suggestions have not the powers of laws, but still the analogy is curious.

Labor has settled down now to accept the Compulsion Act whilst the skilled workers have also accepted the dilution of labor schemes whereby all kinds of conservative trades have been opened out to new-comers, male and female, without the latter having to pass through the old difficult ap-

ALLENTOWN PA., February 27.—Pastor Russell was here today. He delivered a very forceful address, calculated to awaken serious thought and make a shaking of the dry bones of Christendom. He spoke from the text: "And thou hast tried them which say they are Apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars." (Revelation 2:2.) The Pastor said:,

There is just one class in the world today and for centuries past who have been claiming to be Apostles, and who are not Apostles, according to our text. The Bible shows us unmistakably that God never designed that there should be more than twelve Apostles of the Lamb. Let us refresh your memory on this point: Our Lord Jesus, in response to a question by the Apostle Peter, said to The Twelve, "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the Regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of His glory, shall also sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." (Matthew 19:28.) There were to be only twelve Apostolic thrones—no more. Again, in Revelation 12:1, we have a picture given of the Church. She is shown as a woman clothed with the sun [the Gospel], having the moon [the Jewish Law, which supports the Church but is not the source of her light] under her feet, and having on her head a crown of twelve stars [her Divinely appointed and inspired teachers]." We see that there were only twelve of these stars authorized by God, St. Paul taking the place of Judas.

I remind you of another picture of this matter given by our Lord Jesus to John the Revelator, who was one of The Twelve. In Revelation 21:9-27 the glorified Church is shown—see also verses 2-5. The Church is here pictured as coming down out of Heaven to begin her great work for the blessing of the world of mankind. Now note particularly that this glorified Church is shown as having twelve foundations and in these foundations the names of the Twelve Apostles of the Lamb. (Verse 14.) There were never any more purposed by the Lord. So we see, dear brethren, that it is through some very serious blunder that our Roman Catholic friends have Bishops claiming to be Apostolic Bishops. And it is by a similar blunder that our Church of England friends claim that that they have Apostolic Bishops. It is the same with our Greek Catholic friends.

GOD'S WORD MUST BE SPOKEN FAITHFULLY.

Jesus says that those who make claims of being Apostles when they are not are lying. You and I are not to follow what the customs of the past centuries have taught us, but what the Lord Jesus Himself says. He is the authority. We have a certain amount of sympathy for these gentlemen who have dropped into certain positions and who have been taught for centuries that they were Apostles just the same as the original Twelve appointed by our Lord, having the same inspiration and speaking with the same authority. We have sympathy for them in that they are sadly deluded, but this will not hinder any of us, I trust, from remembering what Jesus said and taking the right viewpoint. "Thou hast tried them which say they are Apostles, and are not and hast found them liars." We are not saying anything uncharitable, dear friends; for we are to speak the Lord's Word. "He that hath a dream [an imagination], let him tell a dream; but he that hath My Word, let him speak My Word faithfully." (Jeremiah 23:28.) If we hold back for fear of man, then we would be sharing in the sin and wrong.

It may be asked, "What is the difference whether they call themselves Apostolic Bishops or not?" I answer, There is much difference. While at the present time these men have discarded the great claims once made, or at least do not attempt to speak with the authority of former days, because mankind are becoming more enlightened and their claims would appear more and more absurd, yet they still claim that they are the only ones who have the right to give authority to any to preach. They claim that if they do not ordain a man to preach, he has no right to speak in the name of the Lord at all. They claim this right because they are "Apostolic Bishops." They are, however, not pressing this claim before the world and before the Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans and others so loudly as formerly. These others inquire: "Why do you stand aloof from us?" and they do not quite like to tell fully their reasons. They hesitate to say to them, "We are the Church, we are the Apostles, and you have no right to preach unless we ordain you; you are not God's servants." They do not like to state this, and hence they are in a somewhat vacillating condition today.

We remember that about four years ago the Bishops of the Church of England, the Episcopal Church, held a meeting in Detroit, and there they passed resolutions that they would be willing to fraternize with other denominations provided they were orthodox, which meant, provided they were in harmony with the teachings of Episcopalians. Anybody else would be unorthodox, and that would mean that they would refuse to recognize them in any way—they would have no right to preach.

HOW THE PEOPLE BECAME DEPENDENT ON THE CLERGY.

These claims of Apostolic Succession in the past got the Church into a great deal of trouble and confusion from which we have not yet recovered. The great mass of Christian people are still bewildered. Beginning some time before the year 325 A. D., this doctrine had been growing. The bishops were beginning to "lord it over God's heritage," as the Apostle Peter says (1 Peter 5:3), and to manifest the sentiment, "We are higher than you—you are only the common people; we are of a different class altogether." This lording came in very gradually, as such things generally do, and was associated later with the declaration that the people were the "laity," and that the Church was composed of the "clergy"—the priests, Bishops, Arch-Bishops, Cardinals, and the Pope. All had the general thought that these were Apostles and had the varying degrees of authority from the Lord.

We are to remember that until a few centuries ago copies of the Bible were very scarce, and a Bible was worth really a fortune, because they had to be printed out by pen by scholars, and these were few. They had to be printed upon fine vellum parchment, as there were then no printing presses or paper. These things were later inventions. One copy of the manuscripts of Scripture, carefully done by hand, would cost from $500 to $1,000, because it would require a long time to write out the entire Bible under such circumstances. Hence few had Bibles; and there were very few who could read at that time. In those days education was only for the wealthy and favored class, and even in the British Parliament some could not write their names, and a bill was passed permitting any member of the House of Lords who could not sign his name to make an X instead. Under such conditions the people were very dependent upon the Church Bishops. When these began to claim that they were Apostolic Bishops, from that time on instead of reading the Scriptures to the people they gave them to understand that they were the proper ones to read and interpret the Scriptures, that they had received this authority from the Lord.

Jesus said to the Twelve Apostles that whatsoever they should bind on earth should be bound in Heaven, and that whatsoever they should loose on earth should be loosed in Heaven. Their writings were especially supervised by the Lord and their doctrinal utterances inspired. So you see that these inspired writings of the Apostles in their various Epistles are as authoritative as were the words of Jesus. (Romans 16:25-27; 2 Corinthians 12:7; Galatians 1:11,12.) The Apostle Paul assures us that "the Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good Work." Hence we need no further doctrinal utterances and no more writings than the Scriptures supply, and we have no need of any more Apostles than the original Twelve—St. Paul taking Judas' place. Since the advent of printing and since the close of the 1,260 symbolic days—1,260 years—of Papal persecution, Bibles have been printed in immense quantities and scattered far and wide by the Bible Societies, and education has become general. Today Bibles are everywhere and are very cheap, so that all can read.

ORIGIN OF THE NICENE CREED.

Let us go back to the year 325 A. D. By that time the Church bishops were claiming that they were Apostolic Bishops, with Apostolic authority. They were the living Apostles, whose teachings were the voice of God. But these Apostles did not agree among themselves as did the early Apostles, the real Apostles; for when we read the writings of the Apostles appointed by our Lord we find that they all agree. But by the year 325 A. D., a positive position was taken as to belief. Emperor Constantine of Rome called for a council of Bishops to be held in the city of Nice, or Nicea, in Bithynia, Asia Minor. The emperor was apparently a very wise man according to worldly standards, and he had said to himself: "My pagan supporters are gradually slipping from me, and the Christian religion seems to be coming to the front. I think I can make a good stroke of policy by joining in with the Christians."

The emperor did not become a real Christian; for he was never baptized to his dying day. He professed Christianity for policy's sake. While we cannot judge his heart and say that he had no motive of sincerity whatever, still the policy idea was surely there, as evidenced all through the matter. In this year 325 A. D., he sent out a call everywhere to all the Bishops of the churches to come to the city of Nicea for a general convention. He offered to pay all expenses. So about 384 Bishops—far from the entire number—came together, and a conference was held. This was the first of what was called an Ecumenical Council of the Church, aside from the one held at Jerusalem by the Apostles of Jesus themselves. This was claimed to be another meeting of Apostles, and the emperor, not knowing but what they were fully authorized, made the following proposition to them:

You all claim to be Apostles, but you have different theories, and there are dissentions among you. Evidently there is something wrong. I will suggest what will set you all straight: I propose that at this Council you set forth your views, what you consider the proper, orthodox doctrines. Agree among you as to what these are. Then hereafter whatever shall be taught by any that differs from these agreeed upon doctrines shall be heterodox-heresy. Further, I propose to join myself to you, to unite with your Church. I want your support and you need my support. When you get my support, the pagan peoples will flock into your Church by hordes—they will be anxious to get in. I will back up your doctrines and all heretics will have a hard time in the Roman Empire. You make the Creed and declare what is Orthodoxy, and then leave its enforcement to me. I will attend to the heretics in the present life, and you can tell them of their eternal roastings throughout the future.

Thus the Nicene Creed was formulated, the first of the great creeds, and it was made by these self-appointed "Apostolic Bishops." So between the emperor and the Bishops a heavy hand was laid upon the people. The Bishops had a strong grasp upon them. Being uneducated the Church leaders had them largely at their mercy. These Bishops had assured the emperor that they had full authority from God to decide as to what were the teachings of Scripture, and the emperor took their word for it. That was the end of Bible study, you see; there was no more use for the Bible. It was all interpreted for them. They were to follow the Nicene Creed. It was not necessary for them to study for themselves the writings of Moses and the Prophets, or what the Jewish Apostles of Jesus said. They had Apostles inspired of God right with them, and these could teach them all they needed to know.

BIBLE RESTORED AFTER 1,200 YEARS.

From that time on for twelve hundred years the Bible was an unknown Book to the people. During those twelve hundred years there were, I think, seventeen Councils held, and many of these produced creeds having different variations, all with much of nonsense for people to be worried with. And all this was done by those deceived men who thought they were Apostles and were not. It is all this stuff that has given the so-called Christian world so much trouble.

At the close of this period, in the year 1526 A. D., Professor Tyndale, a scholarly Christian man, not fully in accord with the Bishops because he was too Scriptural, but tolerated because of his learning and good Christian character, translated the Greek New Testament into English, that the people might know what were the teachings of Jesus and His Apostles. He felt that there had been too much teachings of men. By that time printing presses and paper had been invented. Professor Tyndale was compelled to go to Germany to get his translation printed, after some difficulty succeeding in having it done in the city of Worms. This step was made necessary because of the adverse influence of the English Bishops. The testaments were then imported to London. They were placed in the shops for sale. The matter became noised abroad, and the people were anxious to get them. They desired to know just what was taught by Christ and the Apostles. It was proposed that Bible classes be started and educated men employed to read them to the people.

What did the Bishops then do? They heard about the movement, and being worldly-wise men, they knew what the effect would be if the people learned of the real teachings of the Bible. Their own power and influence would soon be gone. The people would be asking, "Where did you Bishops get your authority to make creeds and to call yourselves Apostles? We find nothing of that kind in the Bible." So the Bishops shrewdly determined to nip this matter in the bud. Accordingly they bought up the entire edition and burned the books in front of St. Paul's Cathedral in London. The spot is marked to this day. It is a matter of history. And these were Protestant Bishops of the Church of England? Moreover, this faithful servant of the Lord, Professor William Tyndale, was later apprehended and imprisoned near Brussels, and after a protracted trial for hearsy, was strangled and his body burned at the stake. How terrible are the blinding influences of Satan!

For forty years after the burning of the New Testament in London the people kept complaining and wondering why the Bishops took the Bible from them. Finally the Bishops concluded that perhaps they were going too far and that policy demanded that they let the people have the Bible. So they got out a special edition, which they called "The Bishops' Bible." They put them into the shops and told the people that they might buy them. They assured them that it was the Bishops who were giving them the Bible. However, they solemnly warned the people of the great risk they were incurring in reading the Bible for themselves, and impressed upon them the necessity of giving it no other interpretation than that had been given by the Bishops, because they were sure of going to eternal torment if they did not prove loyal to the creeds.

This warning had its designed effect. Everybody was on the alert to keep in line with the creed. The Catholic Bishops soon were practically forced to do as the Protestant Bishops had done, and they issued the Douay Version of the Bible, prepared at the clerical university of Douay, France. They gave this to their Catholic flocks, accompanying it with the same warnings as the Protestant Bishops had given to their people. Thus the influence of the Bible was for a long time largely nullified and the people were kept in superstitious fear and under the influence of the Church authorities

But the Bible could not be fully put down, and in time the entire Scriptures were translated into the various tongues of the people, and as education after the beginning of the nineteenth century began to be much more general, and Bible Societies sprang into existence, the people began to read for themselves as never before, and superstition has been gradually breaking down, and people are daring to think for themselves. Some are still fettered by superstition, but the number is gradually lessening, and the shackles breaking. It is the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church that all of their own people are to go to Purgatory after death to be tortured awhile. No Catholic expects to go at death to Heaven. He must first have certain experiences in Purgatory to fit him for Heaven. To be a heretic, from the Catholic standpoint, is to commit the worst of crimes, and not to believe the creed and their priests is hearsy. Heretics are bound, not for Purgatory, but for eternal torture. So a devout Catholic has great fears of being a heretic. Thus we find but comparatively few Catholics even today who dare to read the Bible.

DRUNK WITH THE WINE OF BABYLON.

How much trouble all this nonsense and false teaching has caused! Instead of reading the Bible in the light of the creeds, we should read the creeds in the light of the Bible. Then their absurdity is at once apparent. They have been a sore bondage upon God's people. But all this will be overruled for good. It will teach mankind a never-to-be-forgotten lesson. The Bible foretold it all. The Apostle Paul declared that "many would depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons." (1 Timothy 4:1-3; Acts 20:29, 30.) It is upon these seducing spirits that we

The fact that the principle of toleration is established by law and that the former crime of Treason is no longer possible from what a man says, is no guarantee that the experience of the past cannot be duplicated. Even the charge of treason against Christ by the Jews was not sufficient to influence Pilate to carry out the murderous designs of the religious leaders of the Jews. Christ had committed Himself by admitting that He was King of the Jews and Pilate could not appreciate what Christ meant or what He taught, he enquires, "What is Truth?" But the spirit of the contestants he could clearly appreciate and his act of washing his hands in the presence of the people indicated that he had nothing in this affair. The circumstances under which Pilate was caught on this occasion is what forced him to permit this crime of all crimes, for he had not sufficient soldiers at hand to cope with the surging mass of humanity. "Often in our civil commotions," said Pilate, "have I witnessed the furious animosity of the multitude, but nothing could be compared to what I witnessed in the present instance. It might have been truly said that on this occasion all the phantoms of the infernal regions had assembled at Jerusalem." He had sent for reinforcements which arrided too late. "It has been decreed by the fates that the great iniquity should be accomplished, that for the purpose of averting the deed of yesterday, troops should arrive today." There is a rational way for accounting for the malicious spirit of religious fanatics, but not for the peculiar circumstances that permits matters to culminate as they do except to attribute it to Providence.

Since the closing scenes of the Jewish polity was a picture of the closing of this Gospel Age in which the subject of our sketch is to figure, we can well imagine how he can be caught in a peculiar circumstance that will permit what the great American people would never tolerate if they were in a position to prevent. How the Evangelistic Alliance could be instrumental in such matters as this we first state that the churches entering this union have agreed on the Error and are divided on the Truth. History has taught the culminating effects of Error, but to indicate how this error can pervert the Heart and Head of its adherents—blind them to the practical phase of Christianity, just as did the Papal maxim, "the ends will justify the means" in the past, we here present a short and concise statement from a Protestant Episcopal Bishop, Rt. Rev. Charles D. Williams:

It is an appalling thought that the Church should have had a part in the crime of Calvary, and yet it did, and that the chief part. It is really the villain of the plot.

What was the sin of the Church that crucified Christ? Or, to put it another way, what are the characteristics of a perverted religion? They are chiefly two:

1. The Ecclesiastical mind.
2. The Ecclesiastical conscience.

The ecclesiastical mind is a closed mind—and there is nothing it resents so much as being pried open to receive a new idea. Its settled rule of judgment, its accepted test of truth, is "What is new is never true and what is true is never new." Philip Gilbert Hammerton has aptly compared the conventional process of religious instruction and training to the process of etching on glass. The mind of the pupil is first covered with an impervious coat of pious prejudice. The pattern of the desired creed is then carefully traced with the stylus of authority; and then only is the mind exposed to the sand-blast of reality and the acid test of experience, which cut along the exposed lines only and the desired creed is indelibly engraved upon the mind.

The other characteristic of a perverted religion is the ecclesiastical conscience. It is strikingly illustrated by one Good Friday scene. A procession is sweeping through the streets of Jerusalem, bound for the Governor's Palace. Who compose this procession? They are the religious leaders of the people, the prominent divines, the chief ecclesiastics, the dignitaries and prelates of the Church, and the Sanhedrin, the chief religious legislative body of the nation. It is as if you rolled into one the Presbyterian General Assembly, the Methodist General Conference, the Episcopal General Convention, the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, and the House of Lords, with the whole Bench of Bishops.

What is the business they have in mind? They are intent on committing the greatest crime in history—a crime at which the whole world has shuddered ever since. They would crucify the Son of God. But at Pilate's threshold they stop. Why? Ah, they have stumbled across a statute with a penalty, a canon of the Church with a sanction. And these people have great respect for penalties and sanctions, if they have little for truth and righteousness. If they should enter a heathen house that Passover morning, they would become ceremonially defiled and unfit to partake of the sacrament. They would lose their reputation for strict churchmanship. They are indefinitely scrupulous and utterly unprincipled, entirely sincere and yet completely untruthful and unrighteous, pious and perverted.

The "ecclesiastical conscience" holds the precept so near the eye that it hides the principle; it substitutes petty thumb-nail rules for the fundametnal law of righteousness instead of a means thereto. It puts technical priests and properties in the place of character. It makes churchmanship do for religion and "churchianity" for "Christianity."

And the ecclesiastical conscience is not confined to the Church. The lawyer who makes a legality his test instead of justice; the merchant who is satisfied simply to conform to the code of his trade, whose excuse for any dishonesty is, "They all do it"; the "genteman" or "lady" who puts good form and manners in the place of sincerity and kindliness of heart, and politeness in place of courtesy—all are alike animated by the ecclesiastical conscience.

It was this ecclesiastical mind and this ecclesiastical conscience which crucified Jesus Christ.

lay the blame—Satan and his fallen angels. We are not claiming that our Catholic and Episcopalian friends have really intended to perpetrate a fraud. But with the Apostle Paul we claim that they were deceived by the great Adversary and his hosts of evil spirits.

We are beginning to see that a God of Love would never arrange any such Plan for His creatures as is claimed by the creeds. Our loving Creator has been painted blacker than the blackest devil imaginable. "Oh, that is too strong!" says one. No it is not, my brother. If you will take a pencil and paper and sit down and deliberately write out a description of the worst devil your imagination can picture—paint him as black as possible—then compare your picture with what the creeds have made out our God to be, what they have declared He has done and is doing and will continue to do through all eternity, you will find that your description is less black than our great Creator is painted.

We have been in the habit, especially we Protestants, of quoting the text, "God is Love," and also, "Like as a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him," and, "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger and plenteous in mercy," and kindred passages of Scripture; we have hung these upon our walls. But, brethren, there must have come sober thoughts when you have asked yourselves, "How can God be a God of Love, and how can He be like a father that pities his children, and how can He be plenteous in mercy, and at the same time make a Plan before the world was created for the eternal torture of the vast majority of His human creatures, brought into the world without any violation of their own, and placed under conditions that made it almost impossible for the majority to do right and to live Christian lives, many of them untaught in the ways of righteousness? We cannot help reasoning, you know.

Now, what does the Bible say about all this? The Lord Jesus declares, in His message through the Apostle John in the book of Revelation (Rev. 17:1-6), that we have all been drunk with the wine of Babylon, the drink mixed by the Apostate Woman, the Mother of Harlots. He says that this Woman has held in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filthiness of her fornication, and that she made all the nations drunk with wine of her false doctrines and blasphemies. Now we see where these horrible doctrines came from. The nations are still drunk today. Very few know how to reason straight on religious matters even yet. People can reason sensibly on any other subject than religion. We have been something like a man having the delirium tremens, who sees snakes and lizards around his coat collar. In our bewildered, intoxicated condition we have seen visions of flames and of devils with ails and pitchforks, of poor humanity writing in these flames, and the devils taking delight in prodding them and seeing how much they could add to their tortures. Some have come to have a somewhat more refined idea of Hell. They declare that the torture will be eternal, but it will be mental rather than physical, that it will consist of agonies of terror and remorse, which they say will be as bad or worse than physical tortures. And these are the kinds of imaginations we have labored under in our blindness and intoxication.

WITH GREATER LIGHT CAME FURTHER SATANIC DEVICES.

Thank God that some of us are sobering up! and we believe the majority of intelligent people are beginning to think a little more rationally. A couple of centuries ago one's life would have been seriously jeopardized if he had dared to hint at the truth on this subject. Let us rejoice that today one dares to think and to express the truth on this vital matter. This is an evidence of much progress. Luther, Knox, Calvin, Wesley and other reformers saw some light, and they were noble men, Christian men, true children of God, living up to their light. But, brethren, they did not have all the light. We could not expect that at one or two bounds men could get out of all the darkness of more than twelve centuries and into the full blaze of light and Truth, could we? They all had on creed spectacles. They would smash one set and get another.

But we praise God for the light they did bring in. We surely are thankful for one doctrine that Brother Martin Luther gave us, or that God gave us through him—the doctrine of justification by faith, instead of justification by penances and Masses, etc. The Bible says, "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." "The just shall live by faith." God does not say that we should wear hair jackets to torture ourselves nor anything else of that kind, to do penance. All those things came from people who meant well but who did not have the Bible, and who thus got far away from its spirit.

So we praise God for the Reformers; and I believe that whether we are Catholics or Protestants we will agree that the world has had a great liberation from some of the stupidities and darkness and from the fog that was once so dense. But there is plenty to learn yet; for we have not yet come into the full light of the perfect day. Respecting the Reformation, through the angel Gabriel in His Message to the Prophet Daniel, the Lord speaks thus: "Now when they (the true Church) shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help; but many shall cleave to them with flatteries." (Daniel 11:31-35.) What did these Reformers do? Well, they also made a mistake. I think again it was the Adversary and not themselves. They were mislead by the flatteries of kings and princes who offered them their backing in return for their support of their kingdoms.

The Apostle Paul tells us that Satan is always trying to be a leader, and that he poses as an angel of light, and that his apostles also do the same. The Lutherans and Calvinists and the others each made their creed, and so to speak they fenced themselves off and put down their stake, and said, "Here we stand; we will live and die by this creed." And they got no further, they were fastened right there. Each one said, "There is only one Church, and we are it." We think that is just what the Adversary desired; for each sect persecuted the others. They had gotten this suggestion from the centuries behind them. So the Catholics persecuted the Protestants and the Protestants persecuted the Catholics, and the different sects of Protestanism persecuted each other. This fact is familiar to all who have studied history. They thought that if God was going to send these people to Hell to roast them forever, why should they not be faithful servants of God and help His work along?

But public sentiment gradually changed. The people became more educated and the human mind thus was more exercised, and Church Bishops found it less popular to chase people over the mountains, and hinder them from holding meetings, etc. Ever since about 1846 we have been in the place where all Christian denominations who are considered orthodox fellowship one another, except the great denominations of Roman and Greek Catholicism and the Church of England. They are still loth to recognize the other churches, or any church except themselves, because the others did not get their ordinations from them. But the others have now become so influential that they do not need to care much. They have a sort of general creed among them that all subscribe to. All must believe in eternal torment and in the inherent immortality of the soul and in the Trinity.

These are all cardinal errors brought down from the paganism of the Dark Ages. None of these doctrines are taught in the Bible at all. Not a word of it. We would be glad to help these people out of the darkness, but it is not possible with the majority as yet. Why? Because each creed has set a stake and there is a sentiment among them: "Don't be turn-coats. Your father and mother were Methodists, or Baptists, or Presbyterians, or Lutherans, and you should be true to the religion of your fathers." This is a narrow, sectarian spirit. Did God ever authorize any of these sects? No! No! Then all these different denominations are without the slightest authority from God or the Book of God. Is not that true? It is true. Would anybody dispute it? No, for it is incontrovertible. Please read 1 Corinthians 1:10-13. What does God tell us is the right way? It is that the Church of Christ should be united—not federated, each still holding to their own creed, but united, in the one faith once delivered to the saints.

MODERN HYPOCRISY AND LUKEWARMNESS.

The Lord tells us in His Word that "the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." He tells us that we are to walk in the light, and that we are not to become entangled in any yoke of bondage. (Galatians 5:1). We have neglected the Word of God. We have gotten into bondage and sectarianism. What is the condition today? The condition is a very sad and sorrowful one. We would prefer not to say what we feel that we must say, because it seems like a very severe arraignment. And yet, when you think it over carefully, you will be convinced that professed Christian people in general are living in unrecognized hypocrisy. You ask them if they believe the creed of their Church, and the answer will be, "Oh, no, I don't believe that! None of our—well, I don't believe it!" No, of course he doesn't. "But," some may say, "when a great lot of people are doing the same thing, it doesn't seem so bad." We answer that if one person professes a falsehood and sails under false colors it is bad. If two do it, it is twice as bad. If a thousand do so, it is a thousand times as bad. If millions do it, it is millions of times as bad. The more there are who are hypocritical the worse it is. Is not that logical? Of course it is. So if any one tells you he is a Presbyterian, and believes his creed, you may be sure that he has not read it. And so with the others.

We had a little discussion in the newspapers about 8 or 10 years ago, and the reporters of the papers visited the ministers of the different churches and asked them if they believed their creed. The great majority said, "No, we don't believe the creed; we never read it." But in taking the vow of allegiance to their denomination they profess to believe the creed. What then do these ministers mean? So we see the same condition in both pulpit and pew. All persecution has ceased in these denominations, they are entertained by scholarly dissertations, fine oratory and flowery essays that lull the people to soft repose and a general condition of apathy and lukewarmness exists.—Revelations 3:14-18.

Dear brethren, this is a terrible state to be in. Those who are awake, whose eyes are open to present conditions, believe that we are now down at the very close of the present Gospel Age. This great war in Europe is the beginning of Armageddon. Right along after this war is coming the great "Earthquake" mentioned in Revelation—a mighty Revolution—so mighty an earthquake as has never been since man has been upon the earth, overthrowing all these kingdoms of the world. In Europe they call themselves kingdoms of God, and represent that they have authority from God. Each kingdom thinks God is on their side and against their foes, the other Kingdoms of God (?). None of them have any authority from God whatever. We see the conditions fast ripening that will demolish in a maelstrom of ruin and chaos all these kingdoms and governments of the world, and then, just beyond that, the fire of Anarchy, which will utterly destroy present civilization. And beyond that what? Oh, thank God! the "still, small voice" of the Lord Himself, speaking peace through Emmanuel—the Kingdom of God's dear Son, the Kingdom which every true saint of God is to have a share! "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne."—Revelation 3:21.

THE PRESENT OUTLOOK.

Now, this is what we are expecting. We do not know just how soon it will be. It may be months, it may be a year. But we see that it is very near. We cannot think that the present conditions n Europe will last very much longer without revolution breaking out. I will be much astonished if some of the countries do not enter into revolution within a year. These nations are impoverishing themselves. Great Britain has already contracted a debt of thirteen billions of dollars and her minister of finance has told her that nine billions more will be required to keep the war running another year. That will make twenty-two billions. What does that mean? It means that at 5 per cent interest, one billion one hundred million of dollars would have to be raised every year just to pay the interest alone. Do you think the British people can afford to raise that amount every year? Not at all. Do you think they will do it? No. I believe these bonds will all be repudiated, and not in Great Britain alone, but the same is true of France and of Russia. Their children for generations to come could not pay off these debts. They are madly attempting to embargo future generations. Yet all of these countries are saying, "We will not give in. We must conquer!" Well, we will see! I stake my opinion on the Bible. All these nations will become more and more weakened, revolution everywhere will follow and they will be crumbled into dust. Every one of them will pass away. Not a kingdom will be left in all Europe.

Then what will come? Anarchy, naturally enough. And all this because the rich and the poor will say, "Never mind the law!" just as the nations are now saying, in the same anarchistic spirit, "Never mind international law!" Every one of these nations have violated international law. If violation of law is anarchy, then we already have anarchy among the nations. Is this a Christian war? Of course, they all claim that they are fighting for the good of the human race, for the advancement of progress and civilization. But they are fighting each to maintain their commerce on the sea, and they are willing to barter the lives of hundreds of thousands, yes, millions of men, if they can preserve their financial standing and increase it and have plenty of business for the future. That is their attitude.

Until this war began it was thought proper to sell even an enemy bread, just as the Bible says, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink." But the latest form of Christian (?) doctrine is, "Starve him! Let us take every advantage possible!" Not even by parcel post or in any way can any food get into Germany. All this is the spirit of anarchy. And it will spread from nations to individuals. The Bible describes what is coming: "Every man's hand shall be against his brother. There shall be no peace to him that goeth out nor to him that cometh in."—Zachariah 8:10; 14:13; Isaiah 9:19; 19:2; Ezekiel 38:21-23.

MAN'S EXTREMITY GOD'S OPPORTUNITY.

Ominous as are present conditions, the true children of God can with peace and confidence look up and lift up our heads, since we know that however terrible may be the oncoming troubles God has provided that through this doorway—Armageddon—Messiah's Kingdom is to be ushered in—the Kingdom of God's dear Son. It will mean deliverance, first to the Church of Christ, then to the world. The Bible intimates very clearly that just at the height of anarchy, when men get to the place where everything is going by the board, then will be the opportune moment for Messiah to intervene. Man's extremity will be God's opportunity.

In the 107th Psalm, verses 25-31, there is a picture given representing a great storm at sea when men are tossed about and in a terrible condition, and their souls melt within them. "Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and He bringeth them out of their distresses; He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still." Then there is another similar picture. Our Lord Jesus stilled the waves upon the Sea of Galilee when the storm was raging and threatening to engulf the ship and all therein. The disciples cried to the Master in their distress, and He arose and rebuked the wind and the waves, and said, "Peace! be still!" and immediately the billows were quiet and the winds ceased, and all was calm. We believe this is a picture of how the Kingdom of Christ will be inaugurated. The Lord will wait until the world is frenzied with fear and despair. They will come to see then that unless the Lord helps them all is lost, everything will go to destruction. Then they will cry unto Him as did the disciples of old, when they said, "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?"

The nations will not then pray to the Lord as they are praying now, each taking it for granted that He is on their side—not as the Germans now pray, saying, "God is with us. Lord, give us the victory over the Russians and French and British!" and not as the Russians, British and French are praying, "Lord, bless our armies, and give us the victory over the Germans; help us to crush them!" No, no! It will then be a prayer of real distress. They will not be boasting then, they will have become humble. "For the lofty locks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day (the Day now begun.)" (Isaiah 2:10-12, 17-22.) But the Lord will permit present civilization to go into destruction because He has something far better for the world. He will not put a patch upon the old garment. He will have an altogether new arrangement. There will be a "new heavens," a new ecclesiastical arrangement, the Church in glory, and a "new earth," a new social and political Order, under the control of the Heavenly Kingdom then to take the reigns of government.

When we see that it is through the portals of this great Time of Trouble, a trouble such as never was since there was a nation, that the wonderful blessings of Messiah's Kingdom are to come, then we can have confidence in God and rest of heart even while we see the clouds gathering blacker and blacker. We can rejoice, not at the pain and sorrow and trouble, but because we know that as soon as the entire Church is glorified with her Lord the Kingdom will be fully set up in power, which is to bless and deliver all the families of the earth and bring to mankind the full, clear knowledge of the true character of God, and to scatter all the ignorance and blindness, to raise men up from their fallen condition of sin, sorrow and death, up into the light of blessedness of sons of God—whosoever will, when clear light and opportunity are given.

So our hearts are calm and restful in the Lord, despite present conditions and what is soon to come. It will be a brief, dark night just before the glorious Morning. It will be the wound of the kind but skillful Surgeon, who wounds to heal. The malady affecting mankind requires thorough and drastic treatment. Then, in view of these things, let us point men, not so much to the troubles now accumulating and just ahead, but rather to the great blessings beyond. Let us point them to the Lord Jesus Christ, in whom alone there will be safety and rest and strength in this Time of Trouble. The great plowshare of sorrow must do its necessary work to prepare mankind for the New Age with its uplifting blessings under the Kingdom of Christ.

ing directly under the authority of Jesus Christ, living in immediate dependence on Him, and responsible to Him alone for its beliefs and acts as a Christian society. Its ideals stands distinguished, on the one hand, from Episcopacy by having no gradations or ministerial or clerical orders, or persons above the individual congregation invested with administrative or judicial authority, and, on the other hand, from Presbyty oy having no gradation of courts or representative bodies possessed of legislative and judicial functions. These distinctions imply others. Epicopacy and Presbytery are essentially organized and incorporated systems, building all societies they comprehend into a political unity, but Independency is essentially voluntary and individualizing, satisfied with a spiritual unity, refusing to permit its various societies to be built into a political organism,, lest it should do violence to the rights of conscience, or prevent or even supersede the duty of the exercise by the individual of his own judgment in matters of religion. Episcopacy and Presbytery regards the collective organization as the church, but Independency the individual congregation, investing it with attributes and prerogatives the other systems reserved for the organized whole. Its members possess equal rights, and are bound by equal obligations. They constitute a state whose citizens are all enfranchised, and are so because citizenship is limited to the qualified, who, having sought it voluntarily, voluntarily retain it. Independency may be said to affirm its ecclesiastical in order that it may realize its religious principle, that religion is purely a matter of conscience, not to be created, extended or reformed by any political mechanism or agencies, but by moral means, through men who seek to have it believed and embodied by men for reasons that commend themselves to the conscience, free and unconstrained. It thus holds that the best service the state can render to religion is to leave it free to live and act according to its own nature, in obedience to its own laws, prompted by its own spirit and judgment."

England, during the seventeenth century, was practically at a standstill from the standpoint of producing a distinctive Theology. But from another angle she produced a democratic church government, the product of Calvin's Legalistic Christianity—Independency. The story of the development of Independency as presented above is a long and tedious effort where several were burnt at the stake just as was Tyndale and others under the Papacy before them. Robert Browne is given the credit of being the originator of the idea that was tossed to and fro in the minds of those that followed, Thacker and Coppin, John Greenwood and Henry Barrowe, John Robinson and Henry Jacob. Francis Johnson was the first Pastor of the Independent Church. The issue was finally developed into a complete system by Harry Vane, Henry Burton, John Goodwin and finally above all John Milton, who was to "old" England what Williams was to "new" England; Milton in England framed a church without a Pope and Williams gives us a state without a King in America.

The first of these men mentioned, Robert Browne, anticipated some of the most modern views as to the relation of civil authority to Religion and the Church. We hear him say, "The Kingdom of God was not to be begun by whole parishes, but rather of the worthiest, be they ever so few" . . . "A company or number of Christians or believers, who, by a willing covenant made with their God, are under the government of God and Christ, and kepe his laws in one holie communion." This, it will be recognized, is but another form of Evangelical Christianity, the doctrinal principles of which were formulated by Arminius in Holland—Conditional Election; in other words, man's will was to be respected and persuasion, instead of coercion, was to be employed in evangelizing.

Calvinistic Christianity produced the cruelty that was resorted to, to protect the legalistic features of the Anglican Church. And had it not been for "the New England way" the struggle would have been prolonged. Bishop Laud recognized the fact that Independecy in the Colonies must be suppressed if Anglican policy was to exist in "old" England. Laud's idea was to preserve the unity of the faith and church, and thought that Independecy was equivalent to anarchy. He says, "from whence, as from the bowels of the Trojan horse, so many incendiaries might break out to inflame the nation." So he proceeds to supress this independent spirit of the Colonies by purposing to send them a Bishop "for their better government, and back them with some force to compel, if he were not otherwise able to persuade, obedience." But Laud had misjudged the calibre of those who had emigrated to America; had they been of the type that the literature of Voltaire and Rousseau produced in the French Revolution, he woud have been correct in his statements. In evidence of this and as indicating the quality of the men that launched this democratic government safely in England as a worthy rival to Episcopacy and Presbytery, we present the following

MORNING RESOLVE.

I will, this day, try to live a simple, sincere and serene life; repelling promptly every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity and self-seeking, cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity, and the habit of holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, careful in conversation, diligent in appointment, service, fidelity to every trust, and a child like trust in God. I will not murmur nor complain.

British Labor Situation Calm

prenticeships and other grades. Labor has also given its blessing to the economy campaign. Generally the Government is learning that if it treats the trade unionists worker as tactfully and carefully as it treats every other section of society it will not find him wanting. More than that, the Government will find the trade unionist the bulwark and the backbone of the country.

Labor organizations with an eye to the future are already considering industrial conditions as they will be after the war, and in some cases have confronted the Government departments with certain industrial problems consequent on demobilisation. Assurances have been given that, as far as possible, the machinery of the Labor Exchanges will be utilized for the distribution of men who desire to return to their old occupations, whilst local advisory committees, and possibly County Associations representative of employers and labor men will be set up to advise the Central Authority on the many questions which will arise, including the adaptability of certain classes of men for work other than that which they left on enlistment, and which is no longer available to them.

It is not at all improbable that when the Ministry of Munitions is no longer required its place will be taken by a Ministry of Labor. It is not at all unlikely that should the market be flooded with unskilled labor the first step to be taken to relieve the situation will be to start the arterial roads scheme for Greater London.

A scheme for closer unity among the organizations forming the Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation has now been approved by the majority of these societies. The scheme does not include amalgamation, but its object is to federate the unions so closely that they will act as one body in all matters of wages and conditions. Amongst the societies whose members have already accepted the scheme by an overwhelming majority are the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the United Patternmakers Society, the Electrical Trades Union, and the Gasworkers and General Laborers Society. The final result of the vote amongst the Boilermakers, the Friendly Society of Ironfounders, and the Shipwright and Ship Constructors Association has not yet been received by the secretary of the federation, but it is anticipated that the figures will show strong approval of the new movement.

Two curious strikes may be recorded here. In one case several thousand men and women employed at the Dunlop Rubber Company's works at Birmingham stopped work under the impression that the rubber tires they were making were finding their way into the hands of the Germans by way of Denmark. They did not leave the premises but stood by their machines. The works' superintendent was in London. He was telephoned for and returned to Birmingham by the next train and met the men. He assured them that the firm had absolute control of everyone of the rubber tires which they sent to Denmark and took the greatest care that nothing of theirs should reach the hands of the enemy. Upon being thoroughly reassured the men and women restarted their machines.

The other dispute was in the biggest hat making firm in Denton, Lancashire, a firm employing 1,800 people and which has already sent about 600 men to the war whilst 300 more have enlisted and are waiting to be called up as their groups are posted. The men have agreed that if any man can show that his family will suffer, those left behind will see that there is no privation in his home. A single young man, aged twenty-five, attested, and, when his group was called up, he apealed to the local exemption tribunal to be placed in latter class on the ground that his three brothers had joined the colors and that he had domestic responsibilities. He succeeded in his appeal, but immediately the other 299 attested men heard of this they sent a deputation to the head of the hat firm and threatened to strike if this young man's appeal were allowed to stand good. It took Mr. Wilson and W. Thorpe, the secretary of the Hatters' Union, two hours to conciliate the men, who refused to return to work until the firm agreed that no more appeals should be made.

After unavailing efforts had been made to settle the big labor dispute at Copenhagen, Denmark, the empoyers on February 7th announced that a lock-out would begin on February 16th and would comprise the cement factories, ironworks, shipyards, Carl Lund's metal factories, and various building trades. If carried out this will be the largest stoppage of work on record in Denmark. About 80,000 men would be on strike or locked out. Later the Government arbitrator succeeded in postponing the beginning of the lock-out to February 23.

INDIVIDUAL ILLNESS A COMMUNITY MENACE.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 26.—Even though expenditures for sanitation and preventitive medicine generally may seem to be heavy, they are well worth while, in the opinion of Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, state commissioner of health.

Illness of the individual means a tax on the community, he says, and proceeds with the argument that to prevent illness and the poverty which leads to people becoming ill in body and mind is a vital duty of the community.

"Individual illness places a tax upon the entire community," he continues. "The prolonged sickness of wage earners is apt to result in poverty for themselves and their families. Indigency and crime itself are often lurking in the trail of disease.

"National efficiency must rest upon the sound foundation of health. The reduction of sickness and death from preventable disease should be the first step in our preparation for self-defense. Lord Beaconsfield said, "The public health is the foundation on which reposes the happiness of the people, and the power of a country, The care of the public health is the first duty of a statesman."

"In some states in the Union there has been an increasing percentage of dependents as they have become more thickly populated. In addition to the enormous losses from death due to preventable disease when health laws are not enforced, there is a tremendous annual expenditure necessitated by this growing number of those who are unable to bear their part in the world's work.

"The insane, the feeble-minded, the consumptive and the pauper are a heavy burden upon the taxpayer.

"Provisions and expenditures which will aid in the reduction of those things which sap the vitality of the nation will aid in preventing the increased taxation for the support of the growing army of the unfit."

EXAMINATIONS A FARCE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—Have ship owners abandoned their attempt to repeal the seamen's law on the theory that they can weaken the act and defeat its purposes with the aid of United States steamboat inspectors?

Trade unionists are making this point since the publication of affidavits by E. A. Erickson and Paul Scharrenberg, secretary of the state federation of labor, both of whom attended an examination for able seamen on the steamship China, conducted by officials of the steamboat inspection service in this city.

Scharrenberg makes oath that four Chinamen are listed as "able seamen," but none of whom were able to meet the language test. Erickson makes oath that the following "pigeon English" dialogue between an inspector and a Chinaman is a sample of the answers and questions "given by said 10 or 11 Chinese":

Q. What do you first lower boat?
A. No sabe.
Q. Dont you take cover off first?
A. Ye, ye, cover.
Q. What you do next?
A. No sabe.
Q. Don't you put plug in?
A. Ye, ye, plug.
Q. Who go first in boat?
A. Sailor.
Q. Does not women go first?
A. Ye, ye, women.
Q. Who else go with the women?
A. Sailor.
Q. Does not children go next?
A. Ye, ye, children.

These Chinamen were all given certificates as able seamen and competent to lower boats in any emergency.

BOOM IN SHIPBUILDING.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Reports to the federal bureau of navigation show that many American shipyards, crowded with work as never before in their history, are refusing all contracts calling for new types of vessels and confining construction to those of types for which construction plans have already been drawn. The amount of tonnage under construction in American years has doubled within the last year. It has increased nearly 50 per cent since the first of December, and yards are so filled with orders that many have work that will keep them steadily employed well into 1917. Thirty-nine ships have been completed since last July. The bureau reports that the tendency is toward large vessels. Of the 230 ships reported building, 16 are of more than 10,000 tons and 33 of between 7,000 and 10,000. Department officials are investigating the claim that structural steel may be used in vessel construction. If it proves successful, it is declared vessel building will not only be cheapened, but an immense advantage will be given to American yards because structural steel is produced in such large quantities in the United States.

RIGHT OF PETITION UPHELD IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Congressman Sisson of Mississippi received no support in his attack on postal employes petitioning members of the house to better their conditions. The house was discussing the postal appropriation bill at the time and the southern lawmaker condemned the activity of the postal workers who were charged with attempting to "swamp the treasury" and "protecting inefficiency and insubordination." In reply one congressman asked:

"Is it any more of a crime for a man to write a letter to a member of congress asking him to vote for something for his benefit than it is for the member of congress to write a letter to his constituents asking them to continue him in office at $7,500 a year?"

A number of congressmen defended the right of postal employes to petition and showed the Mississippi representative that congress, in 1912, annulled the anti-gag rule, thereby restoring to the men in the postal service their right as citizens— direct petition.

These employes were "gagged" in 1902 by an executive order issued by President Roosevelt. After continued protests against this arbitrary ruling, post o ce clerks formed the National Federation of Post Office Clerks and affiliated to the American Federation of Labor. In the sixty-first congress the Lloyd-La Follette bill was passed which nullified the "gag" order.

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR

Acts 6:9, 10—8:2—March 5.

Faithful St. Stephen—His Eloquence and Zeal For God and Truth Stirred His Enemies—They Hated Him For the Qualities They Should Have Admired.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Revelation 2:10.

STRICTLY speaking, our Lord Jesus was the first Christian martyr; but the first of His followers to endure death because of loyalty in preaching the Gospel of Jesus was St. Stephen, one of the seven elected Deacons. Seemingly he was a man of great power and a lover of the Truth, highly estimated because of his purity of character and life.

History says that at that time there were four hundred and sixty synagogues in Jerusalem. It is supposed that St. Stephen had formerly been attached to one of these, and had gone thither to urge upon his associates the Message that Jesus was the Messiah. It has been assumed, with apparently good reason, that Saul of Tarsus attended the same synagogue, and was one of the disputants over whom St. Stephen, by the Lord's grace, seemed to have an advantage in these debates. Thus bitter feeling was aroused.

St. Stephen's Defense.

To the Jewish rulers this Message respecting Jesus as the Messiah and a Jewish responsibility for His death and respecting God's favor in raising Him from the dead was a gross error, which was likely to arouse a popular spirit of resentment against themselves as rulers and to be subversive of all law and government in Palestine. Indeed, these Christians claimed that because of this rejection of Jesus the Jewish nation had been rejected from God's favor, and that dire calamities were coming.

St. Stephen's second battle was the one which preceded his death. The Sanhedrin, angry with him, suborned witnesses—bribed men to make complaint, charging him with having blasphemed, with having declared Moses and the Law obsolete, with declaring that the Temple was no longer God's Temple. These witnesses had put together certain isolated sayings of St. Stephen which, thus patched up, made the truth appear false, blasphemous.

St. Stephen's Defense.

After these paid witnesses had given their testimony, charging blasphemy—the penalty for which was stoning—the Sanhedrin, with a show of fairness, permitted St. Stephen to reply. This he did in a masterly way, by taking up the thread of Jewish history, showing his implicit faith in God's promises to Abraham. In orderly manner he brought the thought of his hearers down to the time of Moses and the giving of the Law, and reminded them that Moses had said that in due time God would raise up a greater Prophet than he. (Deuteronomy 18:18, 19.) This greater Prophet, he allowed them to infer, was Jesus; and since Moses had particularly referred to Jesus thus as greater, it could not be disloyalty to Moses to accept that greater Prophet. Thus one feature of the charge was overthrown.

As for the Temple, he reminded his hearers that God first established the Tabernacle in the wilderness, and later had provided the Temple in its stead. It was no disrespect to the Tabernacle for them to believe in Solomon's Temple. God had now provided that a still higher Temple should take the place of the building made with hands. The higher Temple was spiritual, to be composed of God's people, who as living stones would be builded together as a habitation of God through the Spirit. As it was not blasphemy to accept Solomon's Temple as instead of Moses' Tabernacle, neither should it be considered blasphemous to accept this higher, spiritual Temple, of which Jesus is the Foundation, as instead of the typical Temple of wood and stone.

So convincing were St. Stephen's words that his hearers realized that their cause was coming out second best. It is assumed that Saul of Tarsus was a member of that Sanhedrin. Their only hope now was that they could fasten upon something that St. Stephen said as being blasphemous and rush him to death. The moment came. St. Stephen, preaching Christ and the blessings yet to come through Him, was radiant in face. Looking toward Heaven, he exclaimed, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." This was the signal for the Sanhedrin to raise a cry of blasphemy and to rush upon God's messenger.

Forgive my Murderers.

We may be sure that a mob was ready to follow the Sanhedrin's suggestion. Pushing Jesus' minister outside of their gates, the crowd threw their clothing at the feet of the young man, Saul of Tarsus, who thus became their authority for the stoning; and they stoned Stephen to death. This was his climax of victory—faithfulness unto death.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Owing to the length of Pastor Russell's sermon this week the article by Bro. A. B. Dabney, of Lynchburg, Va., is crowded out. It will appear in next week's issue.

APPRECIATIONS.

Warren, Pa., Feb. 16.

As considerable time has elapsed since your paper first came into our home, we feel privileged as well as capable, to testify in behalf of the Faithfulness of its editor in continuing publishing the "Truth Features" (Pastor Russell's Sermons, Sunday School lesson, letters from interested, etc.) which in all cover one and one-half pages and which makes the paper most valuable. And now the large type and the new arrangement of larger columns only assure us of the editor's best effortts for our good.

And now as another year of service has opened before us, we feel sure the Lord wishes us to ever remember our share in the Harvest Work and as it has been for the past forty years to "Herald wide the Gospel Message" and we've not been told to discontinue the same, we suggest our thought, i. e. that we put the Tribune into the "Hands of the Groaning Creation" thus fulfilling our "Vows" unto the Lord.

Might we express our thought in regard to the "Place" of the Tribune and Enterprise? Then we would express it thus: The Tribune acceptable unto all (including associated Bible students and world of mankind) while the Enterprise appears to be only the "Interested." As a rule few will be burdened with too much Truth—strong meat. As to ourselves we have all things necessary that pertain unto life and Godliness (2 Pet. 1:3.). Therefore as the Tribune reaches many unconsecrated homes let us keep up our end which would be keeping enough subscribers for continuation of said features—that the "Good Tidings might be preached unto the meek, that it might bind up the broken hearted," etc.

Now may the repeating of our appreciation of your paper cause you to know our gratitude and add to future success.

Yours in the service of our King,
BRO. L. E. LAURENCE,
and Family.

LABOR LAW APPLIES TO ALL.

BOSTON, MASS., Feb. 23—The supreme court's decision in the case of Madden vs. Whitall factory company is a most important ruling, as it is held that the compensation law of Massachusetts is not intended to take into acount the previous physical condition of applicants for benefits under the act.

Honora Madden was employed at the Whitall carpet factory, Worcester. While pulling a carpet she injured herself and the state industrial accident board awarded her $225.55. The company, through a casualty concern, disputed this order on the ground that the woman had heart trouble.

In denying the company's claim, the court said there is nothing in the law about protection being confined solely to healthy employes, and that the previous condition of health is of no consequence in determining the amount of relief to be afforded.

In answer to the company's claim that grave economic consequence of far-reaching effect may follow from the act as thus construed, the court said:

"The considerations are of great public moment. But these factors relate to legislative questions and the arguments founded on them are distinctly legislative arguments. They may be entitled to attention and deliberation at the hands of the legislative department of government. In the present form they cannot have decisive significance, even if it were plain that the enumerated consequences were inevitable. The function of the judical department is simply to determine whether an act is within the power vested by the constitution in the legislative, and then to enforce it acording to its true meaning in cases as they arise."

OPPOSE CHILD LABOR BILL.

WASHINGTIN, Feb. 26.—The Georgia Manufacturers' association has presented a protest against the Keating-Owen child labor bill to the United States senate. The southern employers declare this legistlation is "revolutionary in character," and will eventually result in "the obliteration of state jurisdiction over local enterprises."

While it is agreed that anti-child labor agitation in the south is slow, they insist that it is "steady," and that the matter should be settled by the various states without federal intervention. The Keating-Owen bill prohibits the products of child labor under 14 in interstate commerce. The bill has passed the house.

COUNCIL MAY BEGIN SOME "EXPERT" WORK

Puzzle--Find the Pouchy Pelican Who Has the City Fathers Hypnotized.

The report which George A. Levy, chief of efficiency standards furnished councils wherein he misrepresented Fred. L. Roberts, who is the Mayor's Secretary, has been causing considerable annoyance to Levy owing to the embarrising position in which he has placed himself.

Levy, it is claimed, knew full well that Roberts was not indulging in a telephone at the expense of the city as Levy had gone over this matter with Roberts before said Levy made the report and no legitimate excuse can be furnished for this false statement and wilful misrepresentation.

In order to set himself right Mr. Roberts sent a communication to Council in which he denies the malicious attack made upon him by Levy. He says that in a recent report to Council Mr. Levy erroneously said that he (Mr. Roberts) had a telephone in his house for which the city paid during 1915, although Council passed a year ago an ordinance forbidding the installation of free telephones at the homes of any city officials or city employees who receive more than $2,000. Mr. Roberts is in that class. With the Roberts communication was one of Henry W. Angloch, superintendent of the Bureau of Electricity, certifying that the city does not pay for Mr. Roberts' telephone and that he himself went over this matter with Mr. Levy and that Mr. Levy knew full well that he was paying for his own telephone.

What reasons Levy had for this infamous trick of placing Roberts in a false light cannot be explained, and if the apparent apology is to be accepted that Levy did not furnish the schedule in which Roberts' name was included why pay an "expert" for work done by another employee. Levy knew Roberts was paying for the telephone used by him in his home and yet Levy as an "expert" submitted or was responsible for a schedule presented to Council which contained what Levy knew to be false information.

Does Mr. Levy regard Councils as a joke? is the question now being asked.

Councils pay Levy a salary of $3,000 a year.

Councils furnish Levy with a clerk at a salary of $1,800 a year.

Councils furnish Levy with a stenographer at a salary of $960 a year.

Councils furnish Levy with offices which compared with the floor space for offices, the office rent is equal to $1,200.

With a tremendous outlay of $133.85 a week, Council is unable to secure through its "expert" efficiency department, a true report. The report Levy admits does not contain the true facts. Is this the much boasted "Business" Council? Does the Business Council wonder why the citizen taxpayers are "hollering" murder under the burden of taxation. The monumental sum of $6,960.00 a year squandered on an "efficiency bureau which according to its own "expert" is inefficient.

There seems to have been no occasion at all for the vicious and defamatory assault upon Mr. Roberts and the reflection upon the integrity of an innocent employee only demonstrates more clearly the worthlessness and the incompetency of the Bureau. That it is a sinicure and nothing more is apparent and if Council has any regard for the small home holder and the rent payer who is groaning beneath the burden of taxation and higher rents it should at once elliminate the office and put an end to at least one useless expenditure.

Roberts a suave, modest, unassuming young man, ever ready to furnish any information desired and exceptionally willing to respond to any inquiry made by callers not familiar with the details of the Mayor's office. Though young in appearance his familiarity with past political history makes him a real encyclopedia of political information and he is probably more familiar with inside secrets of the state organization when Quay was wageing his famous conflicts against the Hog Combine and subsequent events than many another connected with the city.

During the famous battles when Quay was in his zenith Roberts was secretary to Hon. Walter Lyon, then Lieutenant Governor of the state, the Governor being Daniel H. Hastings who allied himself against Quay. Roberts was in touch with the situation and through him many important communications passed between Senator Quay and his lieutenants. Roberts remembers well the details of the famous "Mutual and Political Agreement." Those who know him most familiarly regard him as absolutely truthful and one who has never violated confidence. A splendid secretary because he observes exceptionally well Quay's laconic telegram to his one-time candidate "Beaver, don't talk." Newspaper men from all parts of the state know Roberts and his kind and genial disposition has won for him among them a host of friends.

He was secretary to Hon. E. M. Bigelow and continued in the office of the Director of the Department of Public Works becoming secretary to Director Armstrong after the latter's appointment to that office. After the election of Director Armstrong to Mayor, Roberts was transferred to the present position, that of Secretary to the Mayor, and he has proven himself fully capable of meeting every requirement.

The question at issue is what prompted Levy to fasten a stigma upon Roberts and if it were fathered through malice is it not Council's "business" to investigate the "expert" before the report is finally dispensed with. What are the taxpayers getting for the $6,960 that is being ruthlessly wasted upon the "expert."

If this is "efficiency" pray inform the public what in the opinion of the "Business" Council is inefficiency. If a false and malicious report is "expert" investigation will the "Business" Council tell the taxpayers what kind of reports have the head of the various departments been furnishing.

A school boy will do better than an "expert" because its a hundred to one the report will be true though it should lack the mahonany finish which the "Business" Council is not getting at even the extortionate expense of $6,960.00

If the "Efficiency" Bureau has nothing else to do than to attack innocent employees without remotest cause it is suggested that the "Business" Councils require the "expert" to immediately begin work in furnishing Councils with information that will lead to the identity of a certain city employee whom it is alleged is guilty of the following charges:

(1)—Furnish Council with the name of the City Employee who held-up the Hon. Stephen J. Porter, during his candidacy for Mayor for $1,000.

(2)—Furnish Council, with the information why a city employee being unable to extort from Hon. Steven J. Porter, $1,000.00 reduced the sum to $700.00.

(3)—Furnish Council with information that will lead to the knowledge of a city employee who collected subscriptions from employees of the city for a publication which has not appeared up to the present time.

(4)—Furnish Council with information that will lead to the knowledge of a city employee who collected from a frail young girl in the employ of the city $10.00 per week for room rent under the promise that the wages of said frail young girl would be increased.

The efficiency of the Efficiency Bureau may be tested by the ability of the "expert," at an expense to the taxpayers of $6,960.00, to secure full and complete evidence as above suggested.

The problem for Councils to solve is whether an employee can use his office in a "business" way to extort from a candidate such sums of money as said employee may have determined in his mind his influence in said city office is worth.

Further, after the perusal of said evidence Council may determine whether a city employee may collect subscriptions for a publication which never existed and if the collections of such sums of money and a misappropriation of the same is not a breach of trust and thereby lays said employee liable to a charge of embezzlement. Fully realizing the import of the charge as well as a refusal of employees to press them Council may take such action, should the facts justify, to avoid a repetition of the same.

Council should immediately insist upon the Efficiency Bureau investigating the alleged excessive charge for room rent paid by an employee of the city and whether the money was collected under a promise to secure an increase in wages or not.

Will Council not have the Efficiency "Expert" tell them who is the possessor of that sublime and stately figure that steathily steals in anywhere between 9 o'clock and noon. Quickly stripping off a garment and hat, slipping both behind a door or some obstacle, rolling up shirt sleeves as though preparing for a great killing, thrusting a pen behind the ear, and Colossus like straddling the most conspicuous spot in the building. In the haze of a perfecto this political potentate is haunted with the vision of the Mayor and Council sneaking under his huge legs, and peeping about to find themselves dishonorable graves.

Mark this marvel promonade throughout the offices, a remarkable pageant within himself, dreaming of his power as a prodigy who would make Nero green with envy.

As he passes by the Mayor and Council he soloquizes: What is in the name of Armstrong, Garland, Kerr, Dillinger, English, Herren—sound them, mine becomes the mouth as well; weigh them, mine is as heavy; conjure with them, mine will start a spirit as soon as theirs. In the name of all the gods at once upon what meat doth this bunch feed that they have grown so great. Through some indescribable and invisible force Council feels the import and immediately an office is created, and the peerless one begged to accept it. With Herculean strength they swing the sledge and the salary is sent sky high.

Who cares for the taxpayers when there is avoirdupois, beauty and incompetency all concentrated into one majestic whole. The people can certainly agree that in the history of the city this creation is unparalled, unrivalled, inimitable, unsurpassed and unmatched for pride, pomposity and incomparable gall and instead of a giant intellect the belief is prevalent the city through the acute instrumentality and piercing judgment of city fathers have nothing save a political pouchy pelican.

What hypnotic spell has fallen upon the "Business" Council is yet a mystery, but if its methods of creating sinecures the like of which is displayed in the efficiency "expert," are to continue the grave danger is the people may be awakened to a genuine realization the sooner that body is destroyed the better it will be for Promoting Pittsburgh's Progress.

YOUNGSTOWN MILL NEWS.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 8.—Operations at the local steel mills will be on the same scale next week as during the past six days. At the works of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company all of the departments excepting the sheet mills are operating to maximum capacity. Following a program in force for some weeks, only 50 per cent of the sheet mills are in commission.

The Carnegie Steel company, Youngstown Iron & Steel company, Republic Iron & Steel company, Brier Hill Steel company, and other steel manufacturing concerns of lesser degree, will operate to maximum capacity next week, as they have been doing in the past. The high prices of steel and the exceedingly big demand, is going to help dividends particularly the earnings on the common stock. Prices are going up continually, and as a well known steel man put it a day or two ago, there must be a limit some where, but it seems to be away off yet.

HATTERS' RELIEF FUND.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Up to and including Wednesday, March 1. A. F. of L. Secretary Frank Morrison has received $81,578.12 for the benefit of Danbury hatters. This money represents the pay of one hour's labor on January 27 by the unionists contributing.

Miners Win Big Advance in Wages.

District No. 5 Will Now Hold Convention in Pittsburgh

The adjustment of the scale of the United Mine Workers of America in New York Monday clears the deck for one of the most enthusiastic district conventions that has occurred in many years.

The Pittsburgh district convention will begin its session March 20, at the Labor Temple, and the indications are that delegates will be present from every mine in the district while the total enrollment of miners will approximate 50,000.

The miners are very jubilant over the success they have achieved in reaching a settlement without the necessity of a strike. The basis of the run-of-mine system is 50 cents and this indicates an advance for mining between 15 and 20 per cent.

In the present adjustment International President John P. White becomes the hero and District President Van Bitner is credited with reaching a settlement for which the miners have been battling for 30 years. When leaving the city the Pittsburgh operators were confident they would succeed in avoiding a run-of-mine basis but the representative of the Tribune cautioned ever confidence as the district officers had made up their minds to go the limit and stand pat. That they were serious is conclusively proven by the scale adjustment that has been settled upon.

The basis equalizes the rate in the competitive fields and places Pennsylvania on a par with Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia and other states. The miners lost their demand for an eight hour day from "bank to bank" sacrificing this item in their demands for other concessions. They also yielded their demand for weekly pay days and an idle day every other Saturday. The latter of course, was to be worked out by lengthening the hours in the work days, or cutting out half holidays on Saturday where they exist.

The operators feel perfectly satisfied over the settlement and the question at issue is the ability of the miners to enforce the scale provisions in each state in a competitive field, thus giving no operator an undue advantage over the other.

Pittsburgh operators have suffered considerable through the low wages paid in West Virginia and this unequal advantage interfered materially with a speedy settlement.

If the miners can keep all the operators paying the rate the operators included in the agreement will meet the new scale provisions without complaint.

The success of the miner over all other trades to secure an advance is their ability to equalize the cost of production. By all operators agreeing to pay an equal rate for mining the markets are controlled and thus the miner is able to secure a reasonable price for his product and hence he reciprocates.

MANY WORKERS HURT.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 8.—Injuries were sustained by 13,027 workers in Pennsylvania industrial plants during the first 16 days of February, an average of almost 1,000 on every working day. Several times during that period more than 1,000 men were injured on a single day. The highest daily record of injured workmen was 1,190. During the first 16 days of February 92 workers were killed.

This number does not include 27 fatalities in one mine catastrophe in western Pennsylvania and several other fatalities. Accident reports, received at the bureau of statistics during February showed a marked increase over January. During the month of January 13,465 workers were injured, including 129 killed.

LOW DEATH RATE IN MINES.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Of the 750,000 men employed in coal mining last year, 2,264 were killed, the lowest death rate in the past 16 years, according to bureau of mines figures, just made public. The number of men killed is actually the lowest in the last eight years, despite the increasing number of men employed. The number of tons of coal produced for each miner killed is the largest in the history of the coal mining industry in this country.

LIVING THE TRUE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

BIBLE ADDRESSED TO THE LORD'S PEOPLE ONLY, NOT TO THE WORLD.

Consecration Necessary to Understand the Bible—"Redeeming the Time"—Difficulties in the Way—Prove All Things by the Word—How to Study the Bible—Tests of Loyalty—"Because the Days Are Evil"—The Christian's Proper Adorning—Faithfulness to Our Stewardship.

NEW YORK CITY, March 5.—Pastor Russell delivered a very pointed, practical address this evening, at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd street, near Broadway, from the text: "See, then, that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil." (Ephesians 5:15, 16.) He said in part:

This text, like all the injunctions of the Scriptures, is addressed to the Church of God, not to the world; for the Lord is not dealing with the world at present. It is an important thing to recognize this fact. Many, losing sight of it, are in confusion when they come to the study of the Bible. In His Word the Lord is not telling the world what they should do, but is telling His servants what steps they should take from the time they become His people. Many think of the Bible as being addressed to the entire world, and then are surprised that the world cannot understand it. But we who know that our Lord said to His disciples, "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven," are not surprised that before any can understand God's Word they must take the step of full consecration to Him.

It is to Christians, then, that the Lord gives this message of our text. God's children should walk circumspectly, wisely, carefully, redeeming the time. Our time is redeemed, brought back, by making some sacrifice, that we may have that time to use profitably. There are certain natural claims upon our time. We need time to eat and sleep, to earn and prepare our food. Besides this, there are other calls. Our families have some demands upon us, whether Christians or not. Husbands have some proper demands upon wives, and wives upon husbands; children upon parents, and parents upon children. Our neighbors have some proper call upon us in the way of helpfulness.

MANY SEDUCTIVE ALLUREMENTS TODAY

Then, beyond all our obligations, the world now has many things to allure and attract, to please eye and ear. There are newspapers and periodicals, moving pictures and fairs, art galleries, concerts, and what not. Any one who has brains may have his time filled to the full in these multitudinous ways. The Lord's children find that their entire time might be taken up by earthly interest, if they would permit it.

But God has called us to be New Creatures. He has put into our minds new plans, new interests, and into our lives new work, new obligations. The earthly ambitions have died since we received the new ambitions, since we have found that the Lord has invited us to become joint-heirs with His Son Jesus in the glories of the Kingdom. We say to ourselves, "All those earthly things are transitory, and never were worth very much at best. The riches which God has promised are everlasting and of infinite value." So we wish to have our minds set upon these things.

God invites us to Himself through the promises of the Bible; and these promises work in us to will and to do His good pleasure. In selecting His Church the Lord is not using force. We are not cattle to be driven, but sheep to be led. The Heavenly Shepherd calls His sheep; and they follow Him. "They know His voice"; but "they know not the voice of strangers." The Good Shepherd's voice sounds forth from the Bible; and if anybody says of some voice, "This is the voice of the Lord," we are to make sure by going to the Bible and proving or disproving the claim. We might get some serious error even from a friend. We must in every case, as Christians, prove all things by the Word, and hold fast that which is good.

As we endeavor to meditate upon the things God has promised us, we find that we have very little time for that purpose. One may begin the day by thinking, "I will do thus and so." But difficulties and interruptions come pressing in, and fill the day. What shall be done? The Apostle says, Redeem the time—buy it back. Curtail some of the other things, that you may have some time to use in the cultivation of your own character, in the study of the Scriptures.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE

Presumably as Bible students we have all had experiences in reading the Scriptures without helps. We have read chapter after chapter, and often it did us little good. But we find that there is a different way to study the Bible, by which we may enjoy the Scriptures and be profited. We find that we have needed a kind of outline or plan for study. We now see the outline—from Creation down to the Deluge one great period; from the Deluge to the First Coming of Christ another period; from the First Coming of Christ to His Second Coming another period; then the Millennial Age; and lastly the ages of glory to follow. This helps to straighten matters out.

When we read, we should ask ourselves, "With what does this part of the Scriptures deal?" The Bible is full of problems to solve, like an arithmetic. We do not merely read through an arithmetic; if we did we would learn little. We are to study the Bible according to dispensations, and according to what God outlines as His great Plan of the Ages. Nobody can comprehend the Divine Plan of the Ages (Ephesians 3:11, Diaglott) without studying it. This Plan of God is all outlined in the Bible. We must examine each Scripture in relation to its context. So we need considerable time to understand properly the Word of God.

MILK FOR BABES, MEATS FOR ADULTS

The older we grow as Christians, the more time we find is necessary for these spiritual things. Natural food is to make one strong, bright, intelligent, quick, as a natural man; and spiritual food is to make the New Creature intelligent, quick, well established, apt to teach, able to "rightly divide the Word of Truth." As we mature we need stronger food. It was sufficient that we had milk to start with. But milk will not suffice for adults.

While we are growing to appreciate more the Word of God, the whole world is becoming filled with attractions. But as we see the Day of Christ drawing on, yea, that it is even now upon us, we as God's children must be more and more attentive to our Heavenly Calling. Why did not the Lord arrange things some other way, that we might have more time? He wishes to see whether we appreciate the spiritual things or not. Whoever is not hungry for spiritual food, has no desire to go to the spiritual table, is not using his talents along spiritual lines. We should give a good share of our time to the study of the Truth as it is in Jesus. We should have a hunger for righteousness, for Bible Truth. The Lord is testing us. He knows that whoever is really hungry and thirsty for righteousness will redeem the time. And the zeal with which we redeem the time and devote it to the spiritual things is one of the evidences we give of our real Christian character.

TESTS OF OUR LOYALTY TO GOD

If you take time for a picture show, but do not take time for the study of God's Word, this is abundant proof that you do not love Him supremely. You say that you are hungry for the Word of Truth. How much time do you spend with the newspaper? How much time do you spend with the Bible? There is no use in trying to deceive the Lord. "God is not mocked." He knows all about what we are doing. He will not be deceived in respect to our character.

We know that as Christians we have two natures to deal with. We have the old nature—reckoned dead—which has its ordinary appetites and desires, the same as other people. We like certain kinds of food. We have a variety of natural tastes, all of which are clamoring for recognition. We desire to investigate machinery, to look into investments, to think about the triumphs of mankind, to study the sciences, etc. These are all right enough in their place. God does not say that it is wrong to have a desire to know; but He is putting things in such a way as to give us tests as to whether we are the more appreciative of these things or of the Heavenly things.

Whoever spends his consecrated time in reading history, novels, etc., or in attending places of amusement, is not spending it in building up the New Creature. Each human being has his natural individual desires; but the New Creature is to put these natural cravings down. The New Creature is as yet only in the mind. He figuratively puts down his foot and says, "God has promised me His grace to rule this body. Backed up by His help, I can succeed. I agreed to sacrifice these earthly interests, and it SHALL BE DONE! I am determined to live on the spiritual plane; therefore I must grow; I must get stronger every day." If we let ourselves drift, the flesh will take possession of everything; and we shall die of spiritual starvation.

The Apostle Paul wrote to certain of the Church in his day, implying that some were still babes. He says, "When for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of this doctrine of Christ, and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat." (Hebrews 5:12-14.) What a sad condition for New Creatures in Christ!

We must not think that we are to do something for somebody else first, neglecting our own spiritual development. As New Creatures we must build up ourselves first. Then we may do all that we can to assist others, "doing good unto all men as we have opportunity, especially to the Household of Faith." This is the speaker's personal contract with the Lord; and thus it is with the whole family of God. We are building up ourselves and one another. The faithful members of Christ's Body are growing, everywhere; and soon, we believe, this spiritual family of God will be completed beyond the veil.

REDEEMING THE MOMENTS

Many of the Lord's people do not see the force of the Apostolic injunction that they should redeem the time; and therefore they are living at a disadvantage. They do not notice the many minutes they waste in the twenty-four hours. Let us then as consecrated children of God see that we do not squander time. Let us see what we can lop off, how we can get the minutes under our control. If one can get sixty of them redeemed, he will have an hour. By pinching and economizing here and there one may very easily save this hour for the service of the Lord or for Bible study.

"Because the days are evil," says St. Paul. His thought is, "Realizing that our days, as they are passing, are unfavorable to us as New Creatures." This is particularly true of our own day. With all the enlightenment of today there are many blessings of an earthly kind coming in, preparatory to the New Age. The nearer we get to the establishment of God's Kingdom, the greater is the pressure on every side from the world.

As we see that the Day of Christ is right upon us, this should be all the more an incentive to draw us together as children of God. (Hebrews 10:25.) We shall have special need of the helmet of salvation, the shield of faith, and all the Christian's armor. (Ephesians 6:12-18.) We have come down to the time when there is trouble all about us. It is the fire of the "great Day of the Lord." This fire "Shall try every man's work." Some who have built their faith structure on traditions of men will find that they have built with wood, hay and stubble. Others have built their faith with gold, silver and precious stones, God's revelations. All who have builded with combustible material will find that their structure will be consumed. Only those structures will stand that have been built with God's Truth.—1 Corinthians 3:11-15.

MORTIFY THE NATURAL CRAVINGS

If we wish to make our "calling and election sure," we shall have special assistance, but we shall have trials to correspond. People today have many more trials than our grandfathers had. On Sundays they had little else to do but attend worship. They had much quiet in which to think about God and the Bible. We do not find it so. But God has so provided that His people of today have abundant supplies of grace to carry them through if they will make use of the helps which He has furnished and will eliminate the unnecessary things. But in order to make use of God's provisions we must deny ourselves these things that the flesh is craving. As the Apostle says, "Mortify your members which are upon the earth." —Colossians 3:5-10.

There is a beauty about the Lord's Plan. He deals with us like this: "You have said that you have given your life to Me. I told you that you must redeem the time, which you have consecrated to Me. Now demonstrate your ingenuity in the matter, your earnestness and your spirit to sacrifice your earthly interests." If you have thought that in your consecration your earthly interests are to be just as well taken care of as before, then either you do not understand the matter, or else you are not living up to your covenant. Give less attention to bodily comforts. Give more time for spiritual food, to service for the Lord, the Truth and the brethren. This is God's arrangement for us as New Creatures. We are happy to learn His will. He is not expecting anything unreasonable of us. But He does expect us to be careful of our time, of our conduct, of how we live our profession.

We know that God loves all His children, and desires to see them beautiful. Then why does the Apostle advise the Lord's people not to adorn themselves with "gold or pearls or costly array"? (1 Timothy 2:9, 10.) In the present time there are various reasons why God would advise us not to wear jewelry and expensive clothing.

In the first place, in our present fallen condition of mind, when we put gold or diamonds upon our fingers and in our ears, in the bosoms of our shirts, etc., it indicates a certain amount of pride, a factor that would not be advantageous to us. We are naturally, like the rest of mankind, more or less susceptible to pride, although we have nothing of which to be proud. Moreover, it might have a bad effect upon others. Some might see a Christian elegantly appareled and say, "Look how that lady or that gentleman is decked out! And that ring must have cost $200, or $500!" Then they feel envious—"What right has he, or, What right has she, to have these things when I cannot have them?" Is it not better that Christians who have money should not wear such things and thus excite the cupidity and envy of those who cannot afford them?

There are a great many people in the world who have a very hard time to make a living, and never get enough to have the reasonable comforts of life. Why should a child of God put on diamonds or rich clothing to show himself or herself off as a picture, while many others lack food or clothing or medicine? Rather than wear such things, would he not prefer to give its value to somebody who needs it or to carry the Truth to others? Certainly this would be the mind of the Lord?

There is a further reason. As Christians we stand more or less as reflections of God. We profess to have renounced the pride and vanity of the flesh and to have set our affections on Heavenly things, and to be putting on the spiritual adornments. We must, therefore, not follow our natural mind in this matter, but the mind of God, that we may show forth His praise" who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light."

Essay IV.

"The polity commended by an illustrious example. They were no longer as in the days of John Robinson or Henry Jacob, the apologists of an unpopular and strange theory, hitherto unrealized save as a scale and under conditions that made it ridiculous, charged with all evils that could be proved logically certain to follow from it. On the contrary, they had now behind them the church-state beyond the ocean and they could proudly tell of how men of English blood, who had fled from Anglican oppression, had tried Independency and had prevailed. It showed that independence did not mean isolation, that churches that refused to be organized into a political unity still constituted a Christian Brotherhood, that societies that were so jealous of their freedom and rights as to deny to every external authority, judicial and legislative functions could yet seek and follow fraternal advice, and meet in common council and take advice and be advised. They did not desire all views to be tolerated, but only the views of good men, men of pious, tender consciences, not those of infidels or blasphemers. But the most advanced section courageously advocated absolute toleration, denied that so long as a man was a peaceable citizen the magistrate had any right to interfer with his conscience or conscientious beliefs. To this section belonged Harry Vane, Henry Burton, John Goodwin, ablest and most restless of controversialists in that controversial age; Roger Williams, now a Baptist, but still an Independent, home from America bringing with him the M.S. of a great book on this very subject; finally, above all, John Milton. These were the advance guard, and theirs were the section that made Independency so immense a political power in the England of the Commonwealth."

During the reign of Oliver Cromwell the Independents became a political power in England. The Presbyterians were instrumental in re-instating Royalty and the Independents were deprived of their common rights as citizens. They then contended for the mere privilege of existence and in this state they helped to quicken and deepen the religious consciousness and life of the English people. Their preachers, too, have not been without innuence, although they originaliy had no theological concept to hold them steady to one purpose. John Milton, their leading spirit during the England of the Commonwealth, was of no recognized school. John Goodwin was an Arminian. The rest were of the Calvinitsic cast, but not rigid.

The Independent denomination is today known as the Congregational Church—they changed the name to better convey the idea of their polity. It is strange that the Calvinistic Christianity survives in a modified form in this favorable system of government for the Arminian theology. This is the "bed" that our distinguished Brooklyn divine, Pastor Russell, got his "first impressions" of religion and serves as Sunday School teacher. He, finding this "bed" too short to stretch in, and the theological blanket not sufficient to cover himself, vacates and revives the Independency of its founders by establishing an "Independent" congregation in Allegheny (N. S., Pittsburgh) Pa., the "Bible House" congregation, and recognized his call to the office of Pastor through the congregation and traveled to preach to others that extended an invitation. He insisted upon this principle aplying to those who challenge him to debate—he refused to recognize any proposal from an individual that has not a congregation to back his principle of theology.

DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES IN CHURCH GOVERNMENT.

Independency was the forerunner of Methodism in England. The democracy of the Independent Church changed the Calvinistic theology to which they still clung experience gives place to but one thing at a time. Fatalism has been also considerably modified and individual responsibility is now admitted by Presbyterian Calvinists as taught by Knox, an authority in the Presbyterian Church. But in England there still remained adherents to the original Calvinistic school and we find Whitefield taking issue with Wesley when he adopted the Armenian view of Election. Wesley transformed Conditional Election into Free Grace by adding thoughts that run dangerously close to future Probation. Wesley and Whitefield split on this question and when cut adrift from the influence of his former colleagues we see the strange spectacle of Wesley going against the principles of Independency by proclaiming himself a Bishop vested with the power of appointing others—all against the vain protests of his brothers and Whitefield. Here still lingered the respect for the special class—the clergy—as apart from the laity and he who gave us Free Grace revived the idea of Apostolic Succession in a modified form—just as did Williams who gave us religious toleration but later doubted the validity of his baptism by a layman, was baptised over again by an ordained clergyman while on one of his trips to England.

But circumstances may have justified Wesley's conduct as well as the germ of truth at the bottom of the error of Apostolic Succession for the real Divine Right of Bishops (Overseers) is not a legal or traditional ordination, but, like the annointing oil that was poured on the Jewish High Priest, Aaron, and ran down over his garments to the hem, which was a type of the Holy Spirit poured upon the church at Pentecost, has been conveyed through it's human channels and has constituted the real ordination—not an ecclesiastical ratification by a body of men that are destitute of the Truth and the Spirit of the Master. The next channel of the Truth and the Holy Spirit, our story has proven usually comes from an expected quarter outside of established institutionalism.

Pastor Russell, the last channel of Truth, and who has the proper qualifications of ordination ratified by the London and Brooklyn Tabernacle congregations, has the Democratic and Republic features of the Independency and Methodism embraced in two distinct phases of his propaganda, (1) Wesley's appointment system exists in the Pilgrim Department, a staff of able public expounders of the theology and represent the cause of the International Bible Students' Association, and (2) the principle of Independence is incorporated into the Associated Bible Students, which elect their own Elders and Deacons. It does not follow that those who are elected to teach in these classes, or the Pastors appointed, are the final authority in matters of faith, as in the systems of the past, but they hold forth the inspired writings of the Old and New veloped in Primitive Christians by having the special miraculous "gifts" divided amongst the various members of the church and held them together. A similar circumstance exists in the Russell propaganda in that the business institution, The Watch Tower, Bible and Tract Society, controls the teachings and speakers that serve the Associated Bible Students. But the principle of Independency is pre-eminent here. We cite from the paraon earth—the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, a counterfeit of the Messanic Kingdom, that all this parliamentary machinery is embraced in the Russell propaganda, No! The underlying principle of Methodism is the idea that the church is to "conquer the world for Jesus" and the basic principle of the I. B. S. A. church government is that the church is to make herself ready for the future work of ruling the world after Christ's second advent. Hence the simplicity of the govenment of primitive Christianity seems quite inadequate for the purpose of ruling the world and it is not sufficient for that purpose. But the liberty and freedom accorded in the simplicity of the primitive church government, adopted by the A. B. S., is just the proper environments that let the principals govern themselves preparatory to the final oganization in the invisible Messianic Kingdom to be established on earth. Nor are we to be understood that present-day Episcopacy was formulated by Wesley, for he embraced the principle taught by Browne, "the kingdom of God was not to begin by parishes, but rather of the worthiest, be they ever so few," in establishing classes throughout England; and since his "followers" have lost many of his teachings and the spirit of their founder, and since the system was based upon the wrong principle, of converting the world, it has developed into an engine of oppression.

The Spirit of Dependency was de- Testaments as the source of their doctrines and practice.

Another very interesting and important distinctive and also peculiar thing about this combination of Democratic and Republican church government, the experience of the past, of punishing heretics and excommunication for other reasons are not vested in either of these two representative bodies, but is reserved entirely with the CONGREGATION! When an Elder goes wrong he is subject to "recall" by losing out in the election and should he, or any other member of the congregation, be offended by the teachings or actions of a fellow member, a prescribed course of action outlined by the Master Himself (Matt. 18:15) in which the offended selects primarily his own judges and should the question finally come before the Church (not its representatives) we have the only ecclesiastical council that bears any resemblance to those that were a source of error and suffering in the part. Excommunication here does not mean a final judgment upon the principal but is at liberty to go where he pleases in other classes. "Let him be to thee (the offended party) as a heathen and a publican." Excommunication is never for heresy, for those who take exceptions to the teachings of the majority invariably leave of their own accord.

We are not implying, in view of the marvelous system of government of the Methodist Episcopal church, approaching the greatest organization graph just presented on Dependency: "Episcopacy and Presbytery regards the collective organization as the church, but Independency the individual congregation, investing it with attributes and prerogatives the other systems reserve for the organized whole. Its membes possess equal rights, and are bound by equal obligations. They constitute (not) a state (but church) whose citizens (members) are still enfranchised, and are so because citizens (members) are limited to the qualified (consecrated), who have sought it voluntarily, voluntarily retain it." The will of the individual church of the A. B. S. is respected by the I. B. S. A. and will not send their traveling Evangelists and Pastors without the customary annual request voiced by the majority in the usual paliamentary way.

Pastor Russell defines the "church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven" to consist of all truly consecrated Christians, begotten of the Holy Spirit, regardless of what eathly denomination to which they are affiliated. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." It is an individual vital union with Christ. "If thou hath faith have it to thyself and to God." He invites the individual to

THE "MYSTERY OF GOD" AS SEEN TAUGHT IN THE SCRIPTURES BY A BIBLE STUDENT.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 14.

In exchange for our humanity, which is sacrificed as a member of His flesnly body, God begets us to spiritual nature in order that we might become spiritual born, for the purpose of becoming spiritual members of our risen Lord's glorious spiritual body in the first resurrection. Therefore, let us come boldly before the throne of grace and participate in His body, through faith in His merit covering our imperfections, and making us acceptable to the Father as a sacrificial member of Christ's fleshly body, and participate in His blood which represents life by pouring our fleshly human life into a sacrificial death with Him. Baptized into Christ's sacrificial fleshly body (Gal. 3:27), which was offered at Pentecost as a sacrifice unto death, thereby making us (the church) who are baptized into Him, baptised into His (dying body) death Rom. 6:3-6) and raised with Him in His resurrection as a member of His glorious spiritual body. "Except ye eat his flesh and drink His blood, ye have no life in you." Jno. 6:53-60. In this way we share with our Lord in the Sin Atonement sacrifice. Those who partake of the communion unworthily eateth and drinketh condemnation (not damnation) to themselves, not discerning the Mystery, the Lord's body —1 Cor. 11:29.

ANTITYPICAL ATONEMENT DAY

During the Jewish Age, God accepted typical sacrifices of bulls and goats which would not take away sin (Heb. 10:4), but during this Gospel Age God is accepting Jesus (the bullock) and each of us members of His body (the goat) as sacrifices, which will take away sin. This Gospel Age is the great antitypical atonement day, with Christ the High Priest (Heb. 10:1-23), and Jesus humanity and the Church the sacrifices. Therefore present your body a holy and living sacrifice—Rom. 12:1. As all members constitute the one body, it is typified by the one ram, and is looked upon and accepted by the Father as one sacrifice, counted in with Christ—Lev. 8:18-22.

From this we can see the great antitypical atonement day (Gospel Age) is nearly 2000 years long, with Christ the head and the Church His body as one in the flesh, a human sacrifice upon the sacrificial altar as one sacrifice, being sacrificed for the sins of the world. In exchange for their human lives (as members of His body), they are given spiritual, immortal lives as members of His spiritual body, who will become the world's great High Priest, Prophet and King. Thus it is that "Christ is still in the flesh in the person of His body members."

OUR HIGH PRIEST.

The patterns of old which were shadows of better things to come, (Heb. 8:5), had its tabernacle, high priest and sacrifices; but the blood of bulls and goats sacrificed in earthly tabernacles by human high priests did not take away sin, (Heb. 10:1-4) but merely typified Christ Jesus our high priest (Heb. 3:1.) who has entered into the heavenly tabernacle, not made with hands, to appear in the presence of God for us, to offer us as a sacrifice, "nor yet that he should offer himself often" yearly as of old, but Christ was once offered for the sins of the world—Heb. 9:24-28. Don't overlook the mystery that Jesus the head and the Church His body are one (1 Cor. 12:12,27; John 17:9-23), and is accepted by God as one sacrifice in two parts, first Jesus which was typified by the bullock, which was for himself, (the Church His body, and His household of faith), and then His Church (body) typified by the goat, which was for the sins of all the people—Lev. 16:3-33. This He did not do yearly as of old, but he did it once (Heb. 7:27 and 9:25-28), in that he offered first himself as the head (typified by the bullock) at Jordan, which was accepted and finished at Calvary, and then His body, the church (typified by the goat, Lev. 8 and 9), of many members at Pentecost, which is not yet finished but will be shortly. For every High Priest is taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins"—Heb. 5:1. "Wherefore it is necessary that this man have somewhat also to offer"—Heb. 8:3-6. "Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith sacrifice an offering (bulls and goats) thou wouldst not, but a body (primarily Jesus the head; secondarily the Church members of His body—See Watch Tower 1912, pages 45 and 46, also 1915, last paragraph, first column page 295) hast thou prepared for me" to sacrifice (Heb. 10:5) "by the which will we (as members of His Body) are sanctified (set aside for sacrifice) through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all"—Heb. 10:10. "For by one offering (Christ the new creature offered in one offering, his own humanity as the head and the Churches humanity as the other members of His body—see Tabernacle Shadows, pages 80 and 81—he hath perfected forever them (the church, His body members) that are sanctified (Heb. 10:14; 7:27); and made them through his merit perfect, pure, holy and acceptable sacrifices to God. Obediah 21, Psa. 28. Therefore "I beseech you brethren by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service"—Rom. 12:1. Christ as our advocate keeps us through His merit, spotless, holy and acceptable to the Father, while he as our high priest works in us to will and to do the Father's good pleasure, which is to sacrifice. We work out the Father's will by keeping ourselves upon the sacrificial altar, sacrificing all human rights (not sins, for we have passed from under condemnation through him, and we are not sinners but pure and holy sacrifices), and human life, in obedience to the will of the Father; thereby made perfect spiritual beings through the sufferings of our human beings unto death, as was our head and forerunner—Heb. 2:10; 5:8,9. Thus it is that Christ is still in the flesh in the person of His body members, the Church, and as one with Him, are sharing with Him in His sacrificial sufferings, and will be counted in with Him in the atonement for the sins of the world.

ACCEPTABLE TIME AND DAY OF SALVATION.

The Phophet refers to Jesus in Isa. 49:8, and Paul quotes same and applies it to the church in 2 Cor.6:2, Christ the head's acceptable time and day of salvation was during His three and a half years' ministry and resurrection, while His body's (church) acceptable time and day of salvation is during the Gospel Age and resurrection. They are being accepted as sacrifices even unto death, and for their faithfulness, they are saved out of death in the first resurrection—Heb. 5:7.. See Diaglott. After they are lifted up out of death they will draw all men unto them, and will then begin the regeneration of the lost race (the world) in fulfillment of God's promise that all the families of the earth are to receive blessings through this spiritual seed of Abraham—Rom. 9:7,8. Isaac typed the body (church) as well as Jesus the head in one picture (Gal. 4:28; 3:29), while Rebekah as the bride of Isaac typed the church as the bride of Christ in another picture. One showing the oneness in sacrifice, with the other showing the typified by Isaac will become the everlasting Father of the human race who lost life in Adam by giving life to the dead race in the second resurrection (Rom. 5:12-20; 1 Cor. 15:22); the church, typified by Rebekah, will mother the human race in bringing them up to perfection. Read Gen. 24:60.

REASONS CHRISTIANS SUFFER PERSECUTION.

"For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men and especially of those that believe—1 Tim. 4:10. Not two chances, but two salvations. A salvation for the other sheep not of this special fold (John 10:16) which constitutes the all men of 1 Tim. 4:10, and the residue of men in Acts 15:13-18, and a special salvation for the elect bride of Christ. He is propitiation (satisfaction) not only for our (the church's) sins, but also for the sins of all the world, 1 John 2:2. We suffer reproach because we do not teach the doctrine of damnattion, the bad tidings of great misery the majority that go the broad road of destruction —Matt. 7:13. We suffer because we do preach the "gospel preached before unto Abraham saying, in thee shall all nations be blessed"—Gal. 3:8. Gospel means good news, and we suffer because we preach this gospel of salvattion, glad tidings, which shall be unto all people. A special salvation for our (the church's) sins, for which he is a propitiation now (1 John 2:2) and not only for our (church's) sins, but also the sins of the residue class of Acts 15:13-18, which is the whole world—1 John 2:2. Christians suffer persection because they are the branches of the true vine, read 15th chapter of John.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The only way of salvation is through faith in Christ—Acts 4:12; Rom. 14:23; 1 John 5:16. Those who attempt to climb up another way, or those who try to save others through their consciences, or any other way than by faith in Christ are thieves and robbers (John 10:1); robbing Christ of the means of their salvation. WHAT BECOMES OF THE HEATHENS— THE BABES—THE IDIOTS? Bible students teach a special salvation on during this Gospel Age of election for those who are called, chosen and faithful. These chosen ones with Christ will be the next age (which will be an age of free grace), bring all, including the heathen, babes, and idiots, out of their graves (John 5:25-28), and bring them to a full knowledge of truth (1 Tim. 2:4), and whosoever will to eternal salvation. Rev. 22:17.

Explain how Christ was holy, harmless and separate from sinners was made perfect through suffering? Heb. 2:10; 5:8,9. ANSWER—Jesus the head made perfect in divine nature through the sufferings of His human nature unto death. And again His body (the church) who were once children of wrath (sinners) even as others (Eph. 2:3) are one in Him with reckoned perfection by imputation of His merit now and are to be made actually perfect in Him thereafter—2 Pett. 1:4; John 17:21-23.

For what purpose did God give us Apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, etc; Was it for the converting of the world? No, it was for the perfection of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. Eph. 4:11,12. It is the completed body of Christ, the Bride, that will convert the world, bring all to a full knowledge of the Lord (1 Tim. 2:3,4), and grant eternal salvation to who-so-ever will (Rev. 22:17), which is yet future; for we have no bride until the marriage takes place.

SUMMARY.

The above pictures of God's new creation by election, such as the head and body, the new man, the wheat, the seed, the grapes, the vine, the bride, the sheep, the communion, the high priest are all different pictures of the same thing showing the oneness of Jesus the head and the church, His body, the Christ or the Messiah, which is called the Mystery of God, Jesus the head and the church His body constitute the CHRIST, or ANNOINTED. Jesus the head and the church HIS body constitute the MESSIAH, heir of God, and joint heir with Christ in nature, name, title and all. This mystery will be finished when the church is complete and will remain a secret no longer, which is now at hand. Rev. 10:7. The word Messiah in Hebrew is the same as Christ in Greek, and Anointed in English, and we (the church) are God's Anointed, Christ, Messiah, for we are anointed with the same anointing as was our Lord and Head Jesus. We are all baptised into one body by one spirit (Eph. 4:4; 1 John 2:27), and these who are baptised into Christ have put on Christ—Gal. 3:27.

MYSTERY OF THE GOSPEL.

After the MYSTERY OF GOD is finished (Rev. 10:7), by the completion of the above mentioned Messiah, composed of Jesus the head and 144,000 members of His body (Rev. 14:1-5), the MYSTERY OF THE GOSPEL will be manifested by the blessing (not tormenting) of all the non-elect families of the earth. The Mystery of God is the special salvation of the elect church, while the Mystery of the Gospel is the common salvation of all as recorded in 1 Tim. 4:10 and Jude 3. Not eternal salvation, but a salvation from the Adamic condemnation of death which passed upon all. Rom. 5:12,18. All shall be saved from this death through the redemption work of our Lord, and shall be brought to a full knowledge of the truth (1 Tim. 2:4), and eternal salvation to who-so-ever will be obedient to the great deliverer. Those who will not be obedient will be cut off in the second death (Rev. 20:14), which is eternal destruction (2 Pet. 2:12), typified by the lake of fire. Rev. 20: 10,14. The Apostle tells us that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain waiting the (finishing) manifestation of the sons (Mystery) of God. Then shall the Gospel Mystery be manifest through the conversion of the world, both dead and living. Gospel means GOOD NEWS, and it was the Gospel message pronounced by the angels at the birth of our Lord when they proclaimed "Glad tidings of great joy which shall be (in the future) unto all people." The Scripture foreseeing this preached before this same "gospel unto Abraham, saying in thee shall all nations be blessed." Gal. 3:8. These blessings to all the people are to come through the promised seed of Abraham (Gen. 22:18), which is Christ Jesus (Gal. 3:16), and His church (Gal. 3:29). Jesus the head and the church His body (the great Messiah) are the few who during this Gospel Age walk the narrow way of self sacrifice (Matt. 7:14)) and to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom (Luke 12:32). These are the "peculiar people" (1 Pet. 2:9), which "Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name (church as a bride takes the bridegrooms name, Christ) and to this agree the words of the prophet; as it is written, after this (after gathering out of the church of the first born, the Christ, the Messiah, in the first resurrection), I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build up again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up, that the residue (all the remainder of mankind, Emphatic Diaglott) of men might seek after the Lord, and all the gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord. Acts 15:14-18. From this can be seen that the world's blessings are yet to come, and are to come through the church after its completion; for "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain, waiting for the manifestation of these Sons (church) of God." Rom. 8:14-23. And all Israel shall be saved. Rom. 12:25,26. This is what the Apostle calls "the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:21. This is the resurrection of both the just and the unjust. Acts 24:15. The just (church) by judgment under the special salvation now (John 9:39), and the world by judgment (John 12:47), under the common salvation of all men hereafter (1 Tim. 4:10; Jude 3), for God hath appointed a day in the future in which to judge the world by that man whom He hath ordained. Acts 17:31. "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" 1 Cor. 6:2.

These blessings are to come through judgments, trials, for the elect are elected to be associated judges with Christ, to sit with Him upon the throne for a thousand years, as Priest and King, as the great Messiah, judging the world in righteousness, (Rev. 20:4,6), wiping away all tears, destroying sorrow, pain, death (Rev. 21:3-5), and all the works of Satan (1 John 3:8), and ultimately Satan himself. Heb. 2:14. All in the graves shall come forth (John 5:25-28), and all enemies of the human race shall be destroyed, the last enemy being death. 1 Cor. 15:25,26. When this is accomplished, then shall go forth the saying, "O, death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory?" 1 Cor. 15:55. The Kingdom that Christ and the Church will take is the one that Satan has usurped; one with a spiritual and earthly phase. Just as Satan is invisible ruling in the minds and hearts of the people over a natural, literal, earth kingdom. So also will Christ and the Church, as the great Messiah, be invisible to the natural eye, ruling over the same kingdom, working righteousness in the hearts and minds of the people; punishing and purging them for wrong doing and blessing them for right doing, undoing all that Satan has done. This will be the purgatorial age of blessings. O glorious Hope of the world.

THE MYSTERY OF GOD SHOWN IN COMPARISON.

The Two Adams—1 Cor. 1:45.

The first Adam was natural, the second Adam is spiritual, 1 Cor. 15:45. The first Adam did not exist while his body was dust, etc., but after he was created a human being. The second Adam did not exist while Jesus' body was on the earth etc. (human), but after he was created a spirit being; at his resurrection He became the second Adam and is now the second Adam. The first Adam was created in the possession of the human race with a right to life. The second Adam (which is the Lord from heaven) was created in possession of the human race (by the ransom) with a right to life. The first Adam was powerless to generate the human race which was in his possession without a helpmate. The second Adam is powerless to regenerate the human race now in his possession by the ransom without a helpmate. HE IS POWERLESS BECAUSE IT IS CONTRARY TO THE FATHER'S WILL, AND HE AND THE FATHER BEING ONE CANNOT DENY THEMSELVES. 2 Tim. 2:13. The first Adam was given a helpmate, and she received her life and nature from Adam of God. The second Adam is to receive a helpmate, and she is to receive her life and nature from Christ of God.

The first Adam while asleep had a rig taken from his side from which his helpmate was created, in twain one, and God called their (plural) name Adam—Gen. 5:2.

The second Adam was put asleep in death by having blood and water taken from His side from which His helpmate is being created, in twain one, and God calls their race (plural) Christ—Gal. 3:16,29; 1 Cor. 12:12-27.

"Except ye eat of the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in your"—John 6:53. We eat His flesh in the sense of appropriating to ourselves perfection through faith in His merit to cover our imperfections which makes us reckonedly perfect, purer, and holy flesh of His flesh, and bone of His bone. (Eph. 5:30), acceptable to God as a sacrifice—Rom. 12:1. We drink His cup by sacrificing our reckoned perfect flesh with our restitution rights even unto death with our Lord. If we suffer with Him the sacrificial death in the flesh, we will be born a member of a spiritual woman (composed of 144,000 members—Rev. 14:1-5; 19:7-9; 22:17) and as His bride, in twain, become one with Him—John 17:21-23. Adam and Eve who being in twain one jointly owned the race, and each was dependent upon the other for its generation. Christ and the Church who being in twain one, will jointly own the race, and each will be dependent upon the other for its regeneration. The head cannot say to the body, I have no need of thee—1 Cor. 12:21-24.

Adam's helpmate was part of him taken from him and shared with him his glory, before the fall, and his sufferings, sorrow and death, after the fall. Christ's helpmate is part of Him, taken out of Him and shares with Him His sacrificial, sin-atoning death now, and will share with Him inamortality, glory and honor hereafter.

Adam transferred the life of the human race to Eve who shared with him in generating the race into sin and death. Christ will transfer the ransomed life rights to His bride, who will share with Him regenerating them out of sin and death.

As the people's life rights were lost by the disobedience of one man, and shared in by his wife in generating them in sin and death, even so shall the lost life rights be restored by the obedience of the one man and shared in by his wife in regenerating them out of sin and death—Rom. 5:18. Eve in twain, as one, shared with Adam in every particular, except that Adam, with the life of all both Eve and the race, was first created. The church in twain, as one will share with Christ in every particular, except that Christ with the ransom for all, both the church and the race, is first created.

While Adam held the life of the race in his power, he could not produce it without the co-operation of his helpmate, nor could his helpmate have produced the race without the co-operation of Adam in supplying the life. While Christ holds the life of the dead race by the ransom, he cannot reproduce or regenerate it without the co-operation of his helpmate, nor can His helpmate reproduce the dead race without the co-operation of Christ in supplying the ransom—Anti-Lutron. 1 Cor. 12:21-24. Therefore the regeneration blessings of the new covenant are yet future, waiting for the creation of the bride, who is being created as was our Lord through His sacrificial death, a death not for her own sins, for she being members of God's holy one, has no sins, but for the sins of others, the people; thereby making her (the bride) a sharer with Him (Jesus) in the sin sacrifice—1 John 3:9.

We are now living in the time of the beginning of the blowing of the seventh trumpet, and the Mystery, the Church, is being finished (Rev. 10:7), the bride hath almost made herself ready.

Ater awhile the blessings will go to the world in the regeneration according to the promise made to Abraham, that through his seed (Christ the head and the Church His body, or Christ the Bridegroom, and the Church, His bride) all families of the earth are to be blessed.

Consider the great privilege, dear readers, and let us endeavor to manifest our appreciation with a burning zeal that will utterly consume us as sacrificial flesly members of the fleshly body of our Lord on this side of the veil, and be counted worthy of becoming glorified spiritual members of the glorified body of our Lord on the other side of the veil.

URGE VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 26.—In a plea for vocational education. President Heiskell of the board of education, said:

"The highest function of the public schools of the future, the imparting of vocational education to American children, will be the grandest achivement of human effort in all the history of the world. Univercities and colleges already make lawyers, doctors, chemists, trained nurese, civil, mechanical and electrical engineers and other professional men and women, whose vocations call for years of training and large expenditures of money by the student. The great mass of public school pupils cannot hope to attend the university. If they acquire skill of hand and eye, it must be in the public schools. A majority of the public school pupils stop school at an early age, in order to help support the family. They enter the ranks of the common laborers and there remain all their days. To reduce the number of common laborers in the United States to a minimum is the greatest problem before the American people, and the highest and grandest function of the public schools."

We appreciate the Tribune because of Pastor Russell's sermons.

May the Lord bless you in your efforts for the Truth.

Very respectfully,
MRS. F. F. RANDOLPH.

Prayer for 1916.

"Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder
To the faults of those about me:
Let me praise a little more;
Let me be, when I am weary,
Just a little bit more cheery—
Let me serve a little better,
Those that I am striving for.

Let me be a little braver,
When temptation bids me waver.
Let me strive a little harder
To be all that I should be;
Let me be a little meeker
With the brother who is weaker,
Let me think more of my neighbor
And a little less of me.

Let me be a little sweeter—
Make my life a bit completer,
By doing what I should do
Every minute of the day.
Let me toil without complaining,
Not a humble task disdaining,
Let me face the summons calmly
When deth beckons me away."

The Partition of Poland

was one of the greatest tragedies in History. It was accomplished by the three monarchies, Russia, Austria and Prussia, represented in this illustration by the three crowned eagles. Poland is shown by the fallen soldier, the flag of his country trailing in the dust. The Goddess of Liberty is defending the soldier, trying to beat back the crowned powers. The burning fire brands, the battered walls, the broken cannon, the burning cities in the distance, all serve to illustrate this event. This illustration from Ridpath's History is only one of 2,000 in the complete work and illustrates but one event of all the thousands in the world-famed publication.

RIDPATH'S History of the World

All the causes of the present conflict—Austria's defeat by Napoleon on a hundred battlefields, France's defeat by Germany under the Iron Chancellor Bismarck, Russia's loss of the Dardanelles, closing her outlet to the sea, England's opposition to the growing military and naval power of Germany, all these and hundreds of other causes may be clearly discerned and understood by reading this great History.

Six Thousand Years of History

Ridpath takes you back to the dawn of history long before the Pyramids of Egypt were built down through the romantic troubled times of Chaldea's grandeur and Assyria's magnificence; of Babylonia's wealth and luxury; of Greek and Roman splendor; of Mohammedan culture and refinement; of French elegance and British power, to the dawn of yesterday. He covers every race, every nation, every time and holds you spellbound by its wonderful eloquence.

RIDPATH'S GRAPHIC STYLE

Ridpath's style is clear and simple, yet glows with the fervency of the orator. He puts life in the dry bones of the past. When he writes, the departed great are as real as your own neighbors. The great events of history pass before you in a series of living pictures. The great names of history—Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Bismarck, Washington—are names no longer: they are men, moving, breathing, pulsating with life and high purpose. Ridpath's is praised by all for its wealth of learning, for its brilliant style, for its fascination as a story: for its educative value to old and young. COUNCIL TO COMPLAIN TO P. S. COMMISSION

Instructs Adviser to Get Ready to Contest Gas and Electric Light Rates.

Pressed by the repeated urgings of Councilman G. A. Dillinger, the Pittsburgh city council at last seems to have arrived at a point where some definite action may be expected in the case of the city against the Philadelphia Company and its affiliated corporations.

At the last meeting of this body a resolution was passed ordering C. Elmer Brown, council's traction expert, to take up the question of forcing a reduction of gas and electric light and power rates in the Pittsburgh district.

It is Dr. Dillinger's idea that the Public Service Commission of this state should be asked to:

(1) Dissolve the public utilities trust now controlling all the public service corporations operating in the Pittsburgh district.

(2) Make the Philadelphia Gas Company, the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Duquesne Light Company separate corporate units, each company standing on its own feet

(3) After such a dissolution is ordered to fix gas, electric light and power rates on an equitable basis.

(4) Squeeze the water out of the capitalization of the Pittsburgh Railways Company so that it will not be necessary to charge extortionate gas and electric light rates in order to meet the deficits of the traction subsidiary.

In order to put through such a program it will be necessary for certain members of our city council to stiffen up their back-bones and meet the situation courageously.

Council can expect little or no sympathy from the daily newspapers of this city—although if the truth were known every newspaper proprietor in the city of Pittsburgh with one exception, would be deeply in sympathy with such a move.

If the newspapers should get too enthusiastic over such a movement against the Philadelphia company, this corporation can, through the Pittsburgh Railways Company effectually dampen such ardor.

At the present time the traction trust distributes free of charge all the daily newspapers published in the city of Pittsburgh. Its street cars carry the bundles of newspapers to every section of the city and outlying towns.

Under recent court rulings based on existing legislation, the traction company cannot be forced to carry these newspapers against its will, so that should a newspaper proprietor become "unduly offensive" this courtesy is withdrawn and the paper in question suffers severe loss.

The next session of the Pennsylvania legislature should see to it that a bill is passed making it compulsory upon the traction company to carry any and all papers without discrimination.

And so in the face of such a situation it is going to take a good deal of courage to fight this matter through to a successful conclusion. Not only does it require courage of the highest order but the members of our city council who stick to their guns will be jeapordizing their chances of re-election, because the traction trust never forgives, and men like Dillinger are considered "too dangerous" to be allowed a seat in the city council of Pittsburgh.

There are some men in our city council who, judged by their actions in the past, will show the yellow feather when the storm breaks. These men think more of political manouevering so as to insure their chances of re-election than they do of the people's interests.

And the pity of it is that such public officials seem to be able to blind the public as to their true worth when election time rolls around.

But the councilman who welches in the impending fight is going to be branded in his true colors by the National Labor Tribune.

Next year there will be another councilmanic election. What course of action certain councilmen pursue in the present matter may have something to do with their chances of re-election.

We will wait and see.

Appreciations.

Weston, Oregon, March 2.

I am enolosing herewith a copy of a paper named "The Fool Killer" as it contains an article concerning the teachings and writings of Pastor Russell; and I most respectfully petition you to re-publish that article in the columns of "The Good Old Tribune." With all of the opposition, gross slander and malicious attacks brought against Pastor Russell, by so many high-collared D.D.'s, evolutionists, higher critics, Antis, etc., it is truly refreshing and pleasing to one's heart and mind, to find that a man of the world, an editor of such a sarcastic paper as the Fool killer is (and of course knows nothing at all of the divine plan of God for the human family); and yet, in a moment of sober reflection and honest principle, he voluntarily sounds the alarm, and in the plainest of words calls the attention of every thoughtful reader to the existing fact that Pastor Russell's prediction of more than 30 years ago concerning what would happen to the world in 1914, has proved absolutely correct and promptly "on time" and that "The rest of the pastor's prediction is most likely to prove equally reliable concerning "the wind-up."

I thought so well of his testimony in behalf of Pastor Russell that I have caused it to be reprinted in both daily and weekly and semi-weekly newspapers around here. And now I ask you to also re-publish it, as I feel sure that every true and loyal friend of present Truth will be enthused, and like myself, they will greatly rejoice in such a tribute (from such quarters) being bestowed upon our dearly beloved Pastor.

Will the creed-preachers please copy the same spirit? Surely, we have already entered upon the initial program of the Millennial Age, and henceforth its blessed portals will swing open wider and wider unto the glorious reign of Him, Whose right is to rule the world in righteousness. All hail to Christ—our most precious King of kings, and Lord of lords. Amen.

Please accept my sincerest compliment and earnest thanks, for the splendid form and pleasing manner in which you are now presenting your readers with the sermons of Pastor Russell. That double column form is highly appreciated, and again I thank you.

Yours in His sweet name and service,

RASMUS F. JOHNSON.

"WHAT THINK YE OF RUSSELL?"

"Now wouldn't it beat thunder and red lightning if our old friend, Pastor Russell, should turn out to be a true prophet? It may be a bitter pill for us to swallow, but we have to admit that he either knows something or is a mighty good guesser.

For more than thirty years Russell has been predicting that all existing governments were doomed to fall, and that the year 1914 would mark the beginning of the end. Take particular notice of that date. It is a positive fact that in a book which he wrote, printed and copyrighted over thirty yeas ago Russell mentions over and over the date 1914 as the time when something big would begin to happen.

"Well, we DO know that SOMETHING started right kerdab on the date that Russell said something would start, and none of us are smart enough yet to prove that it won't wind up just as he says it will. It don't require any stretch of the imagination to see how the nations of the East, by going on in their present mad course, can totally destroy each other. And if this country follows Wilson and Roosevelt and their gang of war jingoes, we will be drawn into it and go just like the rest.

"And so if Pastor Russell don't turn out to be a true prophet it certainly won't be the fault of the military leaders of the world and their following of war jingoes who are all out whooping it up for the great International Suicide Club of the World."

TWO BANDS OF GOD'S HEROES

Hebrews 11:1—12:2—March 12.

Faith Heroes of the Jewish Age—Faith Heroes of the Gospel Age—The House of Servants—The House of Sons. Earthly Promises—Heavenly Promises—Resurrection to Perfect Human Nature—Resurrection to Divine Nature—The Christian Race Course.

"Let us with patience run the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith."—Hebrews 12:2.

THE Bible puts faith before works, because no works can be acceptable to God unless inspired by faith. (Hebrews 11:6.) The Bible brings to our attention two distinct classes of Faith Heroes, both pleasing to God and both to be highly rewarded by Him. One of these classes preceded Jesus' day; the other follows His day. The first class are therefore known as the Ancient Worthies; the latter class, with Jesus as their Head, are styled the Sons of God. This distinction or division of God's servants, although clearly marked in the Scriptures, has been overlooked by the Lord's people until recent years.

No matter how faithful or loyal Enoch, Abraham, David, Jeremiah, etc., were, they could not be recognized by God as members of the House of Sons, because they lived before Jesus tasted death for every man. Adam was recognized as a son of God. (Luke 3:38.) From the time that sin entered the world through Adam's disobedience, God recognized none of the human family as His sons. "All were sinners," until Jesus came and died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring us back to God and open to us the door of sonship.

Showing Earthly Rewards.

In Hebrews 3:5, 6 the distinction is clearly marked between the noble brethren before the Cross, the last of whom was John the Baptist, and the noble brethren since the Cross, the first of whom were the Apostles. That John the Baptist was the last of the Ancient Worthies is attested by the Master.—Luke 7:28.

Two Sets of Promises.

St. Paul makes this distinction between the Ancient Worthies and the Christian Worthies in today's lesson. After naming many of the prominent ones of the past, he declares that they were pleasing to God, noble, praiseworthy, because of their faith. Then he calls attention to the fact that they never received the promises which God made to them. Prior to Jesus' day God did not promise Heavenly things. The promises to the Ancient Worthies were all earthly; as that made to Abraham in Genesis 13:14-17.

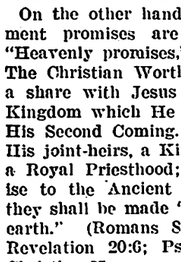
St. Stephen calls attention to the fact that this promise to Abraham is still unfulfilled. He declares that Abraham never received enough of that land promised him to set his foot upon. On this promise he predicates the resurrection of Abraham, that in God's due time he may inherit the land and that his faithful posterity will inherit it after him.—Acts 7:5.

On the other hand, the New Testament promises are only spiritual—"Heavenly promises," "things above." The Christian Worthies are promised a share with Jesus in the Heavenly Kingdom which He is to establish at His Second Coming. They are to be His joint-heirs, a Kingdom of Priests, a Royal Priesthood; while the promise to the Ancient Worthies is that they shall be made "princes in all the earth." (Romans 8:17; 1 Peter 2:9; Revelation 20:6; Psalm 45:16.) The Christian Heroes are to have a change from human nature to Divine, the beginning of this change being the Holy Spirit begetting in the present time, and its completion being that of the resurrection. (1 Corinthians 15:42-44.) But the Ancient Worthies, not receiving the begetting of the Holy Spirit to a new nature, will have a different resurrection—to human perfection.

In Verses 39 and 40 St. Paul contrasts these two classes of Faith Heroes.

The Christian Race-Course.

In the two closing verses of today's Study the Apostle addresses the Church. He would have us consider the Ancient Worthies—what they endured, how faithful and loyal they were. He would have us consider them as though they were a cloud of witnesses watching us, to whom has been given this still greater privilege of becoming sons of God on the Divine plane.—John 1:12; 2 Peter 1:4.



Showing Heavenly Rewards.

He pictures before us a great race-course, in which we are runners. He pictures Jesus as the Leader gone before, as the One through whom we have entered the race and who has promised us grace sufficient. He pictures Jesus' loyalty and the Father's faithfulness in highly rewarding Jesus, seating Him at the right hand of the Majesty on High. Then he urges us to run perseveringly and patiently; for only such as attain the character-likeness of their Leader in this narrow way may hope to share His glory.—Romans 8:29.

APPRECIATIONS.

Rinard, Ill., Feb. 23.

I see that my subscription to your beloved paper is out. I am very much pleased with the noble and fearless stand you have taken for a number of years in holding the present Truth of God's word by publishing Pastor Russell's sermons and other items of interest to all who are striving to live above the downward tendency of our time, but owing to reasons known to myself I am constrained to ask you to dicontinue my subscription at least for the present. I do not find any fault with your paper whatever. I truly hope your subscription list may continue to increase and you may be greatly rewarded for the service you have rendered and are rendering to the public by publishing so good a paper as the Tribune.

Yours in the love and service of Truth.

J. F. SHEHORN.

The Dallas, Ore., Feb. 23.

I am sending you renewal to N. L. Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society and we wish to thank you for your kindness in continuing our paper so long after our subscription had expired.

We consider it a great privilege to have your valued paper visit our home each week on account Pastor Russell's sermons and other religious features.

We do not understand any ones' state of mind who would think the paper contained "too much Russell."

Hoping you will continue the good work.

Sincerely yours,
MR. and MRS. FRED BRACE.

Pomona, Kan., Feb. 23.

Your paper is dearer than ever before as I glance through its pages today, for I have just received a look behind the curtains, so to speak, and beheld the noble man who edits it. Through the kindness of a friend an issue of the St. Paul Enterprise came to me today in which your letter of apology to its editor was printed and I wish to thank you and tell you how very grateful I am that I am taking a paper published by such an honorable man.

It was written of David, that he was a man after God's own heart. Not that he always did things right and pleasing in God's sight, but because he was always sorry and repented and sought to make amends when perceived that he had done wrong. So you in this act have manifested a spirit well pleasing to the Lord. And although you may never fully appreciate the beautiful truths you have so nobly published and defended, at this time, yet we know in that "New Day" so near at hand, your labors will prove not to have been in vain, for it is written, "Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me." Truly just reward awaits such a noble character.

May the dear Lord bless and prosper you and your paper is my prayer.

Yours in the Master's service.
ELIZABETH B. JONES.

Be sure and read the article on Page Seven.

Beloit, O., March 3.

I have today renewed my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower office. We enjoy the paper very much, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and other religious features.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. H. L. HESSER.

Victoria, B. C., March 3.

Will you kindly take my name off your subscription list to the National Labor Tribune. I am sorry but these hard times compel me. I shall miss it as Pastor Russell's sermons are written in such a nice type.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. S. CUTLER.

use whatever means are supplied, by the collective and individual organizations he countenances as herein stated, to this end. All of which are only temporary organizations, like the scaffolding by which the house is built, affiliation with these is only probationary and leads to membership in the "Church Triumphant" or Spiritual Seed of Abraham through which God will "bless all the families of the Earth" according to His unconditional Oath-bound Covenant with Abraham. In short, complete organization of church is not while in the flesh, but for the church in glory, when it shall be exalted to its place of ruling the world as the "New Heavens" and will succeed the present counterfeit "Heavens" or ecclesiastical ruling powers.

We note more of the details of Wesley's republican arrangement and its correspondency with the I. B. S. A. propaganda, in our short stop at the home of John Wesley.

"CHEAP LIVING" CRY OPPOSED BY EDITOR.

BILLINGS, Mont. March 8.—Editor Buck of the Yellowstone Labor News believes workers should pay more attention to higher wages and less to the many "cheap living" movements abroad in the land. He says:

"About every so often we read about some one who has solved the problem of 'cheap living' and every capitalist paper in the country gives the 'cheap living' fanatic oodles of space in which to set forth, in much detail his recipe for cheap living.

"There is an object in this 'cheap living' agitation.

"The cheaper the workers can be induced to live the cheaper they will be compelled to work.

"The wages of the workers are, as a general rule, regulated by the cost of what is actually necessary to furnish the three things necessary to life i. e., food, clothing and shelter.

"If the worker will consent to get along with less food, less clothing and less shelter, thus making it possible for him to live on less wages, he will soon find that the employers have taken advantage of his consent to the lower standard and they will compel him to accept a lower wage.

"The only exception to this rule is in the case of the organized workers. Through their collective strength they are able to demand a higher wage and as a consequence enjoy a better standard of living.

"The workers should disregard entirely all attempts to foist on them the 'cheap living' idea, and devote their attention to the question of how to solve the problem, not of how to live cheap but how to live well."

LABOR NATIONAL TRIBUNE

ESTABLISHED 1872—No. 16 | PITTSBURGH, PA., THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1916 | FIVE CENTS A COPY.

New York Public Library 476 Fifth Ave.

IF YOU CARE FOR AN AUTOMOBILE, WIN ONE FREE IN BIG CONTEST

$3,100 in Magnificent Prizes to Be Distributed Free by the National Labor Tribune on May 6th--Costs Nothing to Get Your Share--Big Special Offer of 25,000 Votes Just Announced To-day Makes Way to Win Easy.

"Worth while working for."

This seems to be the universal sentiment of the candidates in the National Labor Tribune's big $3,100.00 Automobile and Prize Contest. The magnificent prize list has attracted many new candidates and the number of workers has been greatly increased since last week. Be sure to look over the list as published below and see whether your name or the name of your friend appears thereon. If not, clip out the nomination blank and send it in at once so that you will not miss getting your share of the splendid awards ranging from an Eight Cylinder Touring Car Automobile down to $400 Piano, Victrola, diamonds, etc. It costs absolutely nothing to enter the contest and become a candidate. All you need to do is to clip the blank and send or bring to the contest Manager at the National Labor Tribune today.

BIG SPECIAL OFFER.

In this contest like the larger contests of life "The early bird gets the worm." Each delay is dangerous. In order to encourage the candidates to "Warm up" right now, early in the game, when the votes come easiest, the Contest Manager makes the following special offer on subscriptions: With each club of three subscriptions for one year or over which is turned in to this office a bonus ballot for 25,000 extra votes will be given These will be in addition to the regular votes on each subscription. The offer is unlimited and each candidate may turn in just as many of these three year clubs as he or she can secure. This means that each and every candidate is going to have an unprecedented opportunity to "clean up" thousands of extra votes by a little strenuous effort at subscription getting while this offer is in force. Think of it. With club of three yearly subscriptions turned in NOW you will receive more than the total amount of regular votes which you would ordinarily receive for six yearly subscriptions. Thus your work counts for more than twice the usual amount. Get Busy and pull on your fighting shoes at once. "Faint heart never won fair lady" and the National Labor Tribune won't extend another such opportunity as this for years. The closing date of this great offer will be Thursday evening, March 30th. It will not be repeated, and there will never again be an offer where you can secure so many votes for your subscriptions as NOW.

The Contest Manager happened into the office of a big business man the other day and caught him reading over the announcement of the contest. "That's some Opportunity," he said, "Nobody but a blind fool can fail to see it." But with this new special offer in force the opportunity for gain is so evident that we believe even a blind man would have his eyes opened. Don't be caught napping. There is the old saying "Opportunity knocks once at every man's door." Grasp it while you may. Don't wait for it to break in the door and pull you out of bed. Get into line and start making up your first club at once. A young fortune is at your door if you only have the courage and the enthusiasm to act. Remember that all of those who enter and take an active part in the campaign, no one can lose. Everyone wins a prize or receives a cash salary for their efforts. The field for securing votes is limited only by your own energy. The Labor Tribune has a national circulation and is joyously welcomed in homes all over the land. No matter where you live, your opportunity to profit is the same. Don't hesitate. Don't procrastinate. Fill out that free nomination blank. ACT AT ONCE.

COUNCIL'S BIG JOB TO SEEK PAY-ROLL PADDERS

How a City Employe Plunders the People and is Rebuked by the City Operator.

The extraordinary task in store for the Bureau of Efficiency Standards, what ever that is, seems to stagger council and the indications are that some one of the members of that august body will present a resolution demanding an investigation of the charges that are on the lips of nearly every one who frequents tthe municipal offices.

The taxpayers' money to the exhorbitant extent of $6,960 is being spent on the Bureau of Efficiency Standards and the ability of that bureau to investigate the allegations being made will be taxed to the limit.

The Bureau will find in the list being prepared charges that are desperately near extortion, perjury, collecting money under false pretense and embezzlement and the evidence can be secured without additional costs as soon as the bureau can clear its decks for action.

In additions to the charges already published the following may be considered:

1. Give Council specific reasons why the salaries of employees of the city in the Department of Accounts under H. S. Breitenstein and Department of Costs under M. E. Moffet were increased $1,750.
2. Give Council full and sufficient reasons why salaries were increased and what additional qualifications and extra labor were involved, if any, to stealthily slip these outrageous increases over in the new budget:
   M. Conick Increased from $1,800 to $2,040.
   J. C. Slippy Increased from $1,800 to $2,040.
   A. Munroe Perkins Increased from $1,800 to $2,040.
   J. E. Petgan Increased from $1,800 to $2,040.
   C. E. Shepard Increased from $1,800 to $2,040.
   A. E. Werth Increased from $2.000 to $2,520.
   It is generally agreed by those familiar with municipal affairs that these salaries are exhorbitant and a part of the task of the Bureau of Efficiency is to show why Conick should be receiving such a tremendous salary for the small service he renders.
   Again, give council full and sufficient reasons why A. E. Werth should receive an increase of $520 when there are thousands who are far his superior willing to do the work for $1,500 and the same can be said of all those above enumerated.
3. Give Council full and sufficient reasons why City Clerk Martin refused to swear to a pay-roll or a portion thereof, of a city employee for the month of February, 1916.
4. Furnish Council with information that is essential to show the ridiculous absurdity, and perjury of an employee, who, under oath during mandamus proceedings testified that he had been a student of municipal affairs for 26 years when seven years of which had been spent as a whisky salesman, 2 years in a bucket-shop and as many years more a "publisher."
5. Furnish Council with the name of a "publisher" who testified under oath he was not a "publisher" and had no connection with a publication nor would he have any connection with a certain publication and had inserted in the Nixon Theatre program an advertisement of a publication which reads:

IT'S AUDIENCES ARE THE PEOPLE WHO THINK!

PITTSBURGH'S CIVIC AND MUNICIPAL PAPER
OUT FRIDAYS

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE $2.00
A YEAR

OFFICE: ——

6. Furnish council with information as to the amount of subscription money collected from employees for said alleged publication which has never appeared.
   IN ORDER THAT "IT'S AUDIENCES" WHO "ARE THE PEOPLE WHO THINK" MAY NOT THINK THEY HAVE BEEN ROBBED COUNCILS should at once authorize the Bureau of Efficiency Standards to furnish the police department with a copy of the advertisement and the names of the victims and Council should urgently insist on the prosecution of the person or persons collecting money under false pretense.
7. Furnish Council with information showing what part a city employee had in securing questions that were used in an examination that was held recently to fill a vacancy in the Controller's office.
8. Furnish Council with the name of an employee who was called away to Philadelphia October 1914, to attend the funeral of a mother-in-law and collected expenses for said trip from the City.
9. Furnish Coucil with the name of a city employee who carried on the following conversation with one of the city's most respectable female employees, while on duty:
   "Hello! Is this the City operator?
   "Yes."
   "Well, this is —— the chief of the —— Division of the Civil —— Commission. My wife is out of the city and knowing that you must be lonesome I am coming up to entertain you for a while."
   Council may learn from said employee how he felt after the severe rebuke administered for his presumption.
10. Furnish Council with the name of the publisher who extracted from Hon. Wm. Coleman, Congressman, residing at McKeesport, $500 after said publisher had sworn under oath he had no connection with a certain publication.
11. Furnish Council with the name of an employee who promised to line up with Council against Mayor Armstrong providing Council would create an office for him and after promising Council to line up sent an emissary to Mayor Armstrong with information that if the Mayor would create an office he would betray his confidence to Council and stand by the Mayor. Also furnish said Council with what the Mayor said when he repudiated the modern Judas.

The time has arrived when the Business Council can no longer submit to the infamous practices now going on, and unless some action is taken the taxpayers will undoubtedly look upon the present body of business and professional men making up the present Council as no better morally or intellectually than the old regime when the two branches were in vogue and plunder, franchise grabbing, jugglery and jobbing was the order of the day.

Why pay $6,940 for a Bureau of Efficiency Standards if it has no saving power or economical value. Efficiency at a cost approximating $150 per week to trifle with Council is beyond endurance and the absurdity is that conspiracy seems to have existed to increase the salaries rather than reduce them. A political nonentity getting an advance of $500 and a remarkable collection of fit subjects for the morgue receiving increases in salary is inexplicable when Council is to get nothing in return.

Under the old plan when both branches of Council passed ordinances increasing salaries they had live ones on the pay roll and men who could land their district, even if the taxpayers were plundered to foot the bill but the present generation of municipal statesmen actually gather together an aggregation of political fossils the equal of which cannot be compared with even the world's fossil hunters.

The farce is more interesting when an employee can go about the building promising increases in salary and strangely manifesting an influence over Council that men holding responsible offices actually crawl beneath the tables, or hide under chairs when the municipal terror, the political, rouchy pelican visits the various offices and thrusts his repulsive presence in places where he, in his own miserable opinion, can make himself the peer of those whose shoe strings he is unfit to tie.

The time is at hand in the opinion of all self respecting citizens that an end must be put to the childish actions of Pittsburgh's business and professional men and Council should get down to business. The charges enumerated above are sufficient reasons that an investigation should be made to protect the citizens as well as unfortunate women and girls and the hope is expressed that the necessary action be taken without delay.

LIGHT ON MINIMUM WAGE.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 15.—Trade unionists in this state will have an opportunity to inform legislators of their position on minimum wage laws if a resolution proposed by Assemblyman Ryan is adopted. The lawmaker favors the appointment of a joint commission consisting of five senators and five assemblymen to investigate the question.

LIGHT COMPANY FORCED TO CUT RATES 25 PER CENT

Power Company in Philadelphia Surrenders--Pittsburgh Council Should Take Similar Action.

Philadelphia, with its ancient select and common councils is regarded by Pittsburghers as the home of political corruption.

Pittsburgh, the lily-white, with its near commission form of government proudly pleads "Not guilty" when such insinuations are made against her good name.

Yet Philadelphia with all of its political scandals has done something which the council of the city of Pittsburgh has talked about but never had the back-bone to accomplish.

Philadelphia has forced the public utility corporation furnishing electric light and power to her citizens to cut the rates for such service twenty-five per cent.

By taking advantage of the reorganized public service commission Philadelphia has forced the Philadelphia Electric Company to give up illegal earnings amounting to over $1,250,000 annually through wholesale reduction of tariffs.

The lighting trust in Philadelphia was brought to its knees and when it saw that the era of graft was over arranged a compromise with the city officials which agreement was ratified this week by the Public Service Commission.

IF THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PITTSBURGH WOULD FOLLOW IN THE STEPS OF THE COUNCILS OF PHILADELPHIA, THERE IS NOT THE LEAST DOUBT BUT THAT THE DUQUESNE LIGHT COMPANY WOULD BE COMPELLED TO REDUCE LOCAL RATES AT LEAST THIRTY PER CENT.

THE PEOPLE OF THIS CITY, IN VIEW OF WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN PHILADELPHIA SHOULD MAKE THIS MATTER AN ISSUE. THEY SHOULD FORCE COUNCIL TO FILE A COMPLAINT WITH THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION IN THE MATTER OF RATES CHARGED BY THE DUQUESNE LIGHT COMPANY IN THE PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Here is what the Philadelphia Public Ledger says concerning the victorious outcome of the electric light and power rate case in that city:

The State Public Service Commission on Monday will meet in Harrisburg to receive for official sanction the compromise rate agreement effected between the Philadelphia Electric Company and ex-Director Cooke and other complainant taxpayers. In the meantime the company will prepare a new schedule of rates, by which, according to the terms of the compromise, $1,250,000 will be dropped from the gross earnings of the company and will be saved to consumers.

Joseph B. McCall, president of the electric company, said that the new tariffs will not be made public until they have been completed and approved by the commission on Monday. He announced, however, that the small consumers of light and power are to benefit more proportionately, than the large consumers. And while the exact ratio of reduction has not yet been determined, such ratio, it was learned yesterday, will probably be as follows:

Residence lighting (householders), 25 per cent.

Small shopkeepers and small manufacturing plants using both light and power, 20 per cent.

Large commercial power consumers, railroads and traction companies, none.

City to receive a refund of $150,000 on the 1915 arc lighting contract and a permanent reduction of $10 on each of its 15,000 arc lights.

Based on the past income to the company from these classes of consumers, the householders will save about $200,000; small storekeepers and manufacturing plants about $600,000 on light and about $200,000 more on power; and the city $150,000.

What Housekeepers Save.

What the reduction means in dollars and cents to the householder, perhaps the most interested of all classes of consumers, is this: The average householder now pays 9.83 cents per kilowatt hour for his electric light. His monthly bill averages $2.50 and his yearly lighting budget, $30. After April 1, when the new schedule is expected to become operative, his bill will be about 7.37 cents per kilowatt hour; $1.85 a month, and $22.21 a year.

The estimated reduction to small industries for commercial lighting will change from a range of from 10 to 5 cents to one of from 8 to 4 cents. The reduction to such consumers in the cost of commercial power will be from a range of from 10½ to 5½ to that of from 8½ to 4½.

The larger consumers of light and power furnished by the Philadelphia Electric Company, as the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Rapid Transit Company, will receive no reduction in all probability. At present they are paying a low rate, about 4 cents a kilowatt hour.

All persons interested in the rate hearing, which has continued for nearly two years and whose satisfactory settlement came somewhat as a surprise yesterday, were inclined to look upon the reduction as a benefit to all parties concerned. The householder, the small commercial establishment and the city will save money, and it is generally agreed that the company in the end will gain through increased business. Those interested in public utilities looked upon the compromise as a striking example of the practicability of regulation by the commission method. Among there were Dr. Thomas Conway, Jr., professor of finance in the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania; Ralph W. E. Donges, president of the New Jersey Public Utility Commission, and ex-Judge Mayer Sulzberger. "The settlement of the case is rather a clear vindication of the Public Service Commission as an effective instrument of regulation. It is an excellent beginning for the new body," was Mr. Sulzberger's comment.

There was indication yesterday of a feeling that as time goes on and the company is adjusted to the new rate schedule there should be sought from it by the city further reductions as long as they would not be inconsistent with the strength of the company. The coming reduction, it was said, should not be considered the last.

The cost of bringing the case before the commission was borne by ex-Director Cooke personally. When complaint was first made, in the early part of 1914, and the complainants were compelled to furnish preliminary proof of the necessity for an investigation Mr. Cooke had introduced into Councils a bill for $5,000 for expenses. This went no further than the Finance Committee. About a year afterward, when the hearing was under way, a second bill was introduced for $50,000. This went the way of its predecessor.

Since the city will receive approximately $160 000 from the electric company and will, in addition, save about $100,000 on the annual municipal electric lighting bill, it is belived that Councils will now pass these two ordinances and reimburse Mr. Cooke and his associates. Mayor Smith is reported to have said yesterday that he would endeavor to obtain such action.

The hearing of the rate case following the preliminary hearing to furnish proof of need of investigation, began in November, 1914. Shortly afterward the company began its appraisal, and this, together with other circumstances, virtually discontinued the sessions during the spring and summer of 1915. After Governor Brumbaugh had reorganized the commission, in November last, the hearing was prosecuted steadily. With the exception of Christmas week and two weeks in February, the case was heard almost every day. More than 30 expert and other witnesses were called during the entire case, and the testimony consists of about 2,500,000 words, covering about 8500 pages.

TWO LIKE FIGURES OF CHURCH'S BAPTISM.

SALVATION THROUGH NOAH'S ARK A LIKE FIGURE TO WATER IMMERSION.

Deliverance of Noah and His Family in the Great Deluge—A Figure of Church's Salvation Through Baptism into Christ's Death—Water Immersion a Similar Figure. Christ the Ark of Safety. Salvation by the Ark Prefigured Only Salvation of Church—Only Eight Souls Saved in Noah's Ark. The Church a "Little Flock"—Through Noah and Family Earth was Repeopled.—Through the Christ the Dead World Will be Recreated.

Peterboro, Ont., March 12.—Pastor Russell was in our city today. We give in condensed form his profoundly interesting discourse. He took for his text 1 Peter 3:21: "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God), by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." He said:

We see from the context that the Apostle Peter has in mind the great Deluge. He reminds his readers that all mankind perished in the Flood save eight souls, who were preserved from a watery grave by means of the Ark which God provided them. That Ark, though submerged in water, was their salvation. St. Peter declares that this is a "like figure to baptism." We are to notice that those who were saved in the Deluge were not saved from eternal torment, and that a like figure of salvation would not indicate that the Church is saved from eternal torment by their baptism into Christ. Noah and his family were saved from death; and the Church of Christ are likewise saved from death through their baptism.

As the whole world perished in the great Flood, so the entire world of mankind now is a dead world, a perishing world. The Church class were of that world until they got out of it through Christ. As Noah and his family were saved from death by coming into the Ark in obedience to God, so the Church of Christ are saved from Adamic death by obedience to God, by accepting His offer of salvation. (John 17:16; 15:19.) Noah's Ark represented Christ. Whoever comes into Christ comes into safety and salvation, out of danger and destruction. All who come into this relationship to God in Christ are said to have "passed from death unto life."—John 5:24.

Only a very limited number come into Christ and fulfill this picture. It does not include those who merely say, "I wish to live a better life." To do this is commendable; but it does not constitute a coming into Christ; for as the Apostle says, "If any man be in Christ, he is a New Creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." (2 Corinthians 5:17.) Just how much is comprehended in the words "a New Creature" even true Christians come to see only gradually. A New Creature is one who has died to his human nature, who has new hopes, new ambitions, new affections, who has the precious promises of God and the prospect of a spiritual existence in the future instead of a human existence. He is an exception to others in that he has been begotten of the Holy Spirit. From the Divine standpoint he is no longer a human being; a new life has begun in him.

This New Creature is at first a babe, and must take spiritual nourishment and grow up into Christ more and more. God has provided the "exceeding great and precious promises" of His Word, that this class might be stimulated, strengthened, developed, thereby, becoming more firm for righteousness and in opposition to whatever is sinful. The Church is indeed a New Creation, as the Apostle says.

TWO LIKE FIGURES OF CHURCH'S SALVATION.

Coming back to our text: We notice that St. Peter says, "The like figure whereunto baptism doth now save us." Salvation through the Ark was one figure of the salvation of the Church through baptism into Christ; baptism in water is another. There is a correspondence between these two figures. Noah and his family were submerged in literal water. Candidates for baptism are also submerged in literal water. But in neither case was it the water that saved. It is not the outward baptism that saves us, except in a figure. It represents the real. But the figure is not in washing away the filth of the flesh (the body) in water. And the filth of our flesh as New Creatures can be washed away only by the grace of God in Christ, "by the washing of water by the Word"; it is a gradual process after we become New Creatures. So neither of these is what is pre-figured in water baptism.

Our text is pointing out to us a peculiar baptism, not a baptism that washes the flesh clean, either literally or figuratively, but "the answer (the response) of a good conscience toward God." What has God said to which we should respond? We reply that our Heavenly Father has called us, invited us, to a wonderful Heavenly inheritance, and we respond by accepting His proposition. He has invited us to be a separate people. Just exactly as God said to Noah and his family that they should be saved by gathering into the Ark, so He says to all who are invited during this Gospel Age, "Gather My Saints together unto Me, those who have made a Covenant with Me by Sacrifice."—Psalms 50:5.

Let us notice to whom we are to be gathered. Serious mistakes have been made here. Some have thought that we were to be gathered to Luther; some to Calvin; some to Wesley; etc. Not so! "Gather My saints together unto ME," saith Jehovah. He did not tell us to gather together into the Church of Rome, into the Church of England, into the Lutheran Church, into the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Baptist, or any other man-made organization. Millions are gathered into the various denominations whose lives manifest that they know not God.

THE COVENANT OF SACRIFICE.

Only a very few have made this Covenant of Sacrifice with God, have presented their bodies a living sacrifice with Christ, in response to God's special Call during the Gospel Age. God is not trying to attract the world now. He tells us that they are blind and deaf. As Jesus said, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Again, He said to His disciples, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear!" (Matthew 11:15; 13:16.) We thank God on behalf of those who have the seeing eye and the hearing ear. It is a great privilege to see and hear.

The Apostle Paul tells us why the great majority of mankind cannot hear the glorious Gospel Message. He says "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) Satan is this god. He is in violent opposition to every feature of God's great Plan. He has been God's adversary ever since his deflection from righteousness. He does all in his power to thwart Jehovah's arrangements. He knows that if men could see the light of God's goodness and hear the glad message of God's grace it would have such an attraction that the great majority would surely respond. Hence he tries to keep them from seeing and hearing. He has multitudinous devices for blinding men. Fair earthly prospects, ambitions to be some great one, selfish schemes for gaining advantage over their fellows—all these and many other things of like nature are held up to keep them blinded to the things of real and lasting value.

Those who are hungering for God Satan endeavors to draw away into various reform movements, such as socialism, women suffrage, prohibition of the liquor traffic, etc. This he does to keep them from hearing God's special Call. These are all, perhaps, good for the worldly. These movements are probably more or less awakening thought and developing sentiment along lines of restitution for the next Age. But none of these are the work for the saints of God on this side of the veil. Satan would delight to deceive these, however, and entice them into some of these movements to prevent them from seeing and doing the real work of the Church of Christ, and thus to prevent them from making their calling and election sure.

The real Gospel is the most wonderful Story in all the world! There is nothing like it—that God is now inviting a certain class to become heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ, "to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, reserved in Heaven" for the Lord's faithful, an inheritance "that fadeth not away!" (Romans 8:17; 1 Peter 1:4.) Truly, "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love Him." (1 Corinthians 2:9.)

"THE ANSWER OF A GOOD CONSCIENCE."

Our surrender to the Lord was "the answer of a good conscience toward God." When God invited us to become living sacrifices through Christ, to be saints and follow Jesus, the answer of our conscience was, "Lord, we respond, we accept Thy gracious invitation." Was not that the answer of a good conscience? It was indeed. What could a good conscience toward God say except to be glad to do the Heavenly Father's will? He made a most wonderful proposition to us, providing a Redeemer to open up the way to all this glory and honor with Christ. The only answer of a good conscience could be, "Here, Lord, I give my little all to Thee!" That is what baptism means; and it is surely our "reasonable service," as the Apostle says. (Romans 12:1.) It is the most reasonable thing that could be imagined. Therefore we should carry out our covenant of consecration even unto death.

If our Lord Jesus, after He had made this Covenant of Sacrifice with God and had begun the work of carrying it out, had said, "Father, I know that I came to earth to do Your will; but I find that so many of the people misunderstand Me and speak evil of Me that I cannot go on in this way. They misrepresent all the good I try to do; and I cannot accomplish anything." What would the Father have replied? His answer would have been, "If you prefer the approval of men to My approval, take your choice. I cannot give You the glorious reward which I have offered to You unless You meet the conditions. You must love My will more than all else or I cannot accept you and use You."

So it is with the followers of Jesus. We receive the same tests that He did. The Father does not permit the trials to press us too hard, and He supplies His grace for every time of need; but we must have a heart that fully responds to the will of God or we cannot be acceptable; we shall lose the prize, and be accounted unfaithful servants. We are to be willing that loyalty to God shall cost us something, yea, even the loss of earthly friendships and earthly prospects.

The heart-attitude that says, "So long as right is as easy as wrong I will choose the right, but if wrong is easier than right I will choose the easier way," is disloyal to God. Such a heart would be unworthy of the glorious High Calling. Indeed, it would make even an unworthy human being. We are to be loyal to the very core, or God will reject us. The Lord Jesus puts the matter in just this light when He says, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of Me and of My words in this sinful and adulterous generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when He cometh in the glory of His Father with the holy angels." (Mark 8:38.) Jesus would be ashamed to have such a one in His Kingdom.

The Father and the Son are watching to see how true we are. If we are faithful—under present unfavorable conditions, when loyalty to the Truth brings much reproach, when people point the finger of scorn at us, then the Lord will say, "These are the ones that shall reign in My Kingdom. Those who so delight in My love and approval as to serve Me through evil report, misunderstandings, persecutions and sufferings, will be true when exalted to positions of glory, when the sun of prosperity will shine upon them."

DEATH WITH CHRIST THE GATE TO GLORY.

Such dear, faithful children of God "Follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth." To these Lord Jesus will say, "I take pleasure in saying to you, Sit down with Me in My Throne." (Revelation 2:26, 27; 3:12,21.) In Romans 6:3 the Apostle says, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ (into the Body of which Christ is the Head) were baptized into His death?" These become with Jesus The Christ of God, The Anointed of God; for the word Christ means The Anointed. God has never counted any in as members of the Church of Christ except those who have fully surrendered their wills to Him and become dead to the world.

This is our baptism into death as human beings and into life as spiritual beings. Our spirit nature is only begotten as yet, but we shall be born spirit beings at our "change" in the First Resurrection. We are now raised, as New Creatures, "to walk in newness of life," but not yet raised in the complete sense. We have not yet received our new bodies. Our new mind is in process of development. We have said that we gave ALL to God. If we continue in this attitude and fulfill our covenant faithfully, we shall abide in His love and in due time be associates of His Son in glory. The giving up of our will in consecration is only the beginning of the matter. Day by day, week by week, month by month, we are to carry out the terms of our covenant. We are to have no thought of turning back. Having put our hands to the plow, we are not even to look back. "He that looketh back is not fit for the Kingdom of God."—Luke 9:62.

When Jesus was here in the flesh, on a certain occasion He made some very strong statements (John 6:50-69); and it is written, "From that time many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him." They said, "This is a hard saying. Who can hear it?" Then said Jesus to The Twelve, "Will ye also go away?" Simon Peter—impulsive, noble Peter—answered, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

There is no other Message of eternal life open during the present Age than the Call to joint-heirship with Christ, suffering unto death with Him that we may share His glory hereafter. This is the only way by which we can get into the Ark and be preserved from the general death all around us. Jesus is our Ark of safety. "By the resurrection of Jesus Christ" our baptism is made possible, as our text declares.

It is this same Simon Peter who tells us in our text that the Ark of Noah was a symbol of saving power, a likeness or figure of our being saved now through baptism into Christ. What a refuge is this Ark of Safety! As Noah and his family were in the world but not of the world, and were carried in safety through the engulfing waters in which the whole world were dying, so it is with those who are in Christ. Everybody around us is in death, as the Bible says: "The whole world lieth in the Wicked One." (1 John 5:19, Diaglott). The Church alone have escaped the condemnation which is upon the world.

We who were children of wrath even as others, were sentenced to death with the rest of the world. But the Lord our God has graciously brought us into the relationship of sons, through our faith in Christ and obedience to the Divine arrangement in Him. And as Noah and his family, after their deliverance, started the world afresh, so Christ and His Bride will by and by give life anew to all of the race of mankind who will accept the gracious provision for them in Christ.

The dead world are soon to have a resuscitation, with the opportunity to fully live again. Christ is to be the Everlasting Father of the race (Isaiah 9:6,7); and the Church will be the mother. Grand and glorious as are the blessings in reservation for the world of mankind when they shall have learned their lesson of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, far greater and grander still will be the reward of the faithful Church, who so love the Lord as to be willing and glad to obey and follow Jesus under the trying and painful conditions of the present time.

THE BRITISH REFORMERS.

Essay IV.

Copyright 1916 by N. E. Nelson.

[Owing to the printer mixing up the article of Bro. Nelson's in last week's paper, we republish it this week in order that those who file it may have it correct.—Ed. Tribune].

"The polity commended by an illustrious example. They were no longer as in the days of John Robinson or Herry Jacob, the apologists of an unpopular and strange theory, hitherto unrealized save as a scale and under conditions that made it ridiculous, charged with all evils that could be proved logically certain to follow from it. On the contrary, they had now behind them the church-state beyond the ocean and they could proudly tell of how men of English blood, who had fled from Anglican oppression, had tried Independency and had prevailed. It showed that independence did not mean isolation, that churches that refused to be organized into a political unity still constituted a Christian Brotherhood, that societies that were so jealous of their freedom and rights as to deny to every external authority, judicial and legislative functions could yet seek and follow fraternal advice, and meet in common council and take advice and be advised. They did not desire all views to be tolerated, but only the views of good men, men of pious, tender consciences, not those of infidels or blasphemers. But the most advanced section courageously advocated absolute toleration, denied that so long as a man was a peaceable citizen the magistrate had any right to interfer with his conscience or conscientious beliefs. To this section belonged Harry Vane, Henry Burton, John Goodwin, ablest and most restless of controversialists in that controversial age; Roger Williams, now a Baptist, but still an Independent, home from America bringing with him the M.S. of a great book on this very subject; finally, above all, John Milton. These were the advance guard, and theirs were the section that made Independency so immense a political power in the England of the Commonwealth."

During the reign of Oliver Cromwell the Independents became a political power in England. The Presbyterians were instrumental in re-instating Royalty and the Independents were deprived of their common rights as citizens. They then contended for the mere privilege of existence and in this state they helped to quicken and deepen the religious consciousness and life of the English people. Their preachers, too, have not been without innuence, although they originally had no theological concept to hold them steady to one purpose. John Milton, their leading spirit during the England of the Commonwealth, was of no recognized school. John Goodwin was an Arminian. The rest were of the Calvinitsic cast, but not rigid.

The Independent denomination is today known as the Congregational Church—they changed the name to better convey the idea of their polity. It is strange that the Calvinistic Christianity survives in a modified form in this favorable system of government for the Arminian theology. This is the "bed" that our distinguished Brooklyn divine, Pastor Russell, got his "first impressions" of religion and served as Sunday School teacher. He, finding this "bed" too short to stretch in, and the theological blanket not sufficient to cover himself, vacates and revives the Independency of its founders by establishing an "Independent" congregation in Allegheny (N. S., Pittsburgh) Pa., the "Bible House" congregation, and recognized his call to the office of Pastor through the congregation and traveled to preach to others that extended an invitation. He insisted upon this principle aplying to those who challenge him to debate—he refused to recognize any proposal from an individual that has not a congregation to back his principle of theology.

DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES IN CHURCH GOVERNMENT.

Independency was the forerunner of Methodism in England. The democracy of the Independent Church changed the Calvinistic theology to which they still clung—experience gives place to but one thing at a time. Fatalism has been also considerably modified and individual responsibility is now admitted by Presbyterian Calvinists as taught by Knox, an authority in the Presbyterian Church. But in England there still remained adherents to the original Calvinistic school and we find Whitefield taking issue with Wesley when he adopted the Armenian view of Election. Wesley transformed Conditional Election into Free Grace by adding thoughts that run dangerously close to Future Probation. Wesley and Whitefield split on this question and when cut adrift from the influence of his former colleagues we see the strange spectacle of Wesley going against the principles of Independency by proclaiming himself a Bishop vested with the power of appointing others—all against the vain protests of his brothers and Whitefield. Here still lingered the respect for the special class—the clergy—as apart from the laity and he who gave us Free Grace revived the idea of Apostolic Succession in a modified form—just as did Williams who gave us religious toleration but later doubted the validity of his baptism by a layman, was baptised over again by an ordained clergyman while on one of his trips to England.

But circumstances may have justified Wesley's conduct as well as the germ of truth at the bottom of the error of Apostolic Succession for the real Divine Right of Bishops (Overseers) is not a legal or traditional ordination, but, like the annointing oil that was poured on the Jewish High Priest, Aaron, and ran down over his garments to the hem, which was a type of the Holy Spirit poured upon the church at Pentecost, has been conveyed through it's human channels and has constituted the real ordination—not an ecclesiastical ratification by a body of men that are destitute of the Truth and the Spirit of the Master. The next channel of the Truth and the Holy Spirit, our story has proven usually comes from an expected quarter outside of established institutionalism.

Pastor Russell, the last channel of Truth, and who has the proper qualifications of ordination ratified by the London and Brooklyn Tabernacle congregations, has the Democratic and Republican features of the Independency and Methodism embraced in two distinct phases of his propaganda, (1) Wesley's appointment system exists in the Pilgrim Department, a staff of able public expounders of the theology and represent the cause of the International Bible Students' Association, and (2) the principle of Independence is incorporated into the Associated Bible Students, which elect their own Elders and Deacons. It does not follow that those who are elected to teach in these classes, or the Pastors appointed, are the final authority in matters of faith, as in the systems of the past, but they hold forth the inspired writings of the Old and New Testaments as the source of their doctrines and practice.

Another very interesting and important distinctive and also peculiar thing about this combination of Democratic and Republican church government, the experience of the past, of punishing heretics and excommunication for other reasons are not vested in either of these two representative bodies, but is reserved entirely with the CONGREGATION! When an Elder goes wrong he is subject to "recall" by losing out in the election and should he, or any other member of the congregation, be offended by the teachings or actions of a fellow member, a prescribed course of action outlined by the Master Himself (Matt. 18:15) in which the offended selects primarily his own judges and should the question finally come before the Church (not its representatives) we have the only ecclesiastical council that bears any resemblance to those that were a source of error and suffering in the part. Excommunication here does not mean a final judgment upon the principal but is at liberty to go where he pleases in other classes. "Let him be to thee (the offended party) as a heathen and a publican." Excommunication is never for heresy, for those who take exceptions to the teachings of the majority invariably leave of their own accord.

We are not implying, in view of the marvelous system of government of the Methodist Episcopal church, approaching the greatest organization on earth—the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, a counterfeit of the Messanic Kingdom, that all this parliamentary machinery is embraced in the Russell propaganda, No! The underlying principle of Methodism is the idea that the church is to "conquer the world for Jesus" and the basic principle of the I. B. S. A. church government is that the church is to make herself ready for the future work of ruling the world after Christ's second advent. Hence the simplicity of the govenment of primitive Christianity seems quite inadequate for the purpose of ruling the world and it is not sufficient for that purpose. But the liberty and freedom accorded in the simplicity of the primitive church government, adopted by the A. B. S., is just the proper environments that let the principals govern themselves preparatory to the final oganization in the invisible Messianic Kingdom to be established on earth. Nor are we to be understood that present-day Episcopacy was formulated by Wesley, for he embraced the principle taught by Browne, "the kingdom of God was not to begin by parishes, but rather of the worthiest, be they ever so few," in establishing classes throughout England; and since his "followers" have lost many of his teachings and the spirit of their founder, and since the system was based upon the wrong principle, of converting the world, it has developed into an engine of oppression.

The Spirit of Dependency was developed in Primitive Christians by having the special miraculous "gifts" divided amongst the various members of the church and held them together. A similar circumstance exists in the Russell propaganda in that the business institution, The Watch Tower, Bible and Tract Society, controls the teachings and speakers that serve the Associated Bible Students. But the principle of Independency is pre-eminent here. We cite from the paragraph just presented on Dependency: "Episcopacy and Presbytery regards the collective organization as the church, but Independency the individual congregation, investing it with attributes and prerogatives the other systems reserve for the organized whole. Its membes possess equal rights, and are bound by equal obligations. They constitute (not) a state (but church) whose citizens (members) are all enfranchised, and are so because citizens (members) are limited to the qualified (consecrated), who have sought it voluntarily, voluntarily retain it." The will of the individual church of the A. B. S. is respected by the I. B. S. A. and will not send their traveling Evangelists and Pastors without the customary annual request voiced by the majority in the usual parliamentary way.

Pastor Russell defines the "church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven" to consist of all truly consecrated Christians, begotten of the Holy Spirit, regardless of what eathly denomination to which they are affiliated. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." It is an individual vital union with Christ. "If thou hata faith have it to thyself and to God." He invites the individual to

Appreciations.

Hurt, Va., March 9.

I notice my subscription to your good paper expired Jan. 26th and I thank you for continuing to send it until now. I expect to renew through the "Watch Tower" office very soon; I cannot at present.

I appreciate the "Truth" features of your paper very much. Also the fearless manner in which you expose "Patent Medicine Fakes and Fakers."

It's time those robbers were brought to justice I think.

I am sorry to see so many of your subscribers having their papers discontinued.

The letter which appeared in your issue of Jan. 6 signed "Albert Dripps" contained some truth but it was misapplied, I think. Although you are no doubt losing many of your subscribers on account of the paper in the Northwest, I am confident that the editor of that paper does not want to draw away subscribers to other papers publishing our dear Pastor's sermons to himself.

I have since reading that letter subscribed to that paper myself.

I had intended doing so anyway, and had thought of dropping the Tribune in its favor.

Now, here's where some truth was in that letter: It is indeed a good way to send a newspaper to the "graveyard" for so many to stop taking the paper. That letter saved you one subscriber, for I decided right there that I would renew my subscription to the Tribune.

Newspapers giving as much space to "Present Truth" as yours should be especially supported by all lovers of Truth and righteousness, and I shall continue to take it as long as you stand so firmly in defense of Truth, and I am given the means with which to pay for it.

"Our Father knoweth what things we have need of" and He has promised that our every need will be supplied. Our God is rich.

He says: "If I were hungry I would not tell Me: for the world is mine and the fullness thereof."—Psa. 50:9-12.

Praying for you many blessings from the Lord in your work of spreading the Truth, I am

Very respectfully yours,
ROBIE D. ADKINS.

Portland, Oregon, March 9.

I certainly enjoy reading the Labor Tribune and loaning it to others to read. Especially do I like to read Pastor Russell's sermons, N. E. Nelson's Bible and historical essays, etc., also the labor news. Wishing you continued success in the publishing of your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
E. A. WELCH.

Kewanee, Ill., March 11.

I notice my subscription expires on the 8th and write to ask you to discontinue it for the present.

We have greatly appreciated it, especially the religious features, and trust that your subsbcription list will be greatly increased and that you may be abundantly blessed in your efforts to advance the Truth.

Sincerely yours,
BION DERR.

Hartford, Conn., March 10.

We appreciate your paper very much—especially Pastor Russell's sermons—and wish to subscribe for another year.

MRS. M. L. TORGERSON.

Brandonville, W. Va., March 10.

I am renewing my subscription for the Tribune; it is becoming more precious every year, especially the religious features of the I. B. S. A. The last sermon delivered by Pastor Russell at Allentown, Pa., was worth five years subscription to any one who is interested in religious work. May the minds of many be enlightened and God be glorified, through the work of the Tribune is our wishes.

Yours with love.
ELMER CUPPETT.

Kittanning, Pa., March 9.

I have renewed my subscription, through the Watch Tower, and desire to express to you my appreciation of your paper, especially the sermons of Pastor Russell.

Yours truly,
ROBT. F. TARR, M. D.

Sherman, Texas, March 10.

I have just renewed my subscription though the Watch Tower. I thank you for continuing the paper for so long after my subscription expired. I thought to discontinue the Labor Tribune, not because I had anything against the paper but because I wanted to take the St. Paul Enterprise for a while and did not feel able to take both papers. But certain letters which have appeared in the two papers and the spirit of love manifested by the two editors together with due consideration for the service of the Truth being rendered by both papers has led me to conclude that I could not do better than to take both papers and pass them on to others as I have opportunity. In addition to the sermons I especially enjoy Mr. Nelson's articles on Pastor Russell's sphere in the reformation. Other features of the Truth are appreciated. I thank you again for the service you are giving us.

Yours for Truth and righteousness,
HENRY McCLELLAN.

Vandergrift, Pa., March 11.

You will find a money order for a renewal to your paper. I am sending direct to you instead of through Bible House this time. Your paper is a welcome visitor in my home every Thursday. I take it for the sermons and other Truth matter. I enjoy reading the letters from the friends and hope more will send in their appreciations. We have a small class here but are receiving great blessings from our endeavors to let our light shine, Brother Bohnet from Pittsburg was here Sunday, February 6th and gave us two grand and helpful discourses on the book of Revelation. We expect to have Brother Kendall of Washington, Pa., with us on the first Sunday in March and look forward to a grand season of refreshing. Surely the dear Lord has spread His table bountifully for us upon whom the ends of the ages have come.

Yours for the spread of more Truth.
H. A. SHAUGENHAUPT.

Bellevue, O., March 10.

I take this occasion to again thank you, dear editor, for the splendid way you are printing the sermons of Pastor Russell, the clear large type, the large space you give in your excellent paper, are much appreciated by the dear friends everywhere, I am sure.

We know the Tribune has met with bitter opposition from the Scribes and Pharisees (Preachers) especially because of its firm stand for Truth and righteousness and justice to all. The dear Tribune surely is a channel of blessing which the Father is using to dispense the waters of Truth to the thirsty soul; it is through the strength we derive from this source that we are standing in this evil day battling against are forces of evil within and without.

So with best wishes for you in your noble work of spreading the glad tidings of great joy which in God's due time shall be to all people and praying the Lord of the Harvest will reward you richly in His own good time, I am

Respectfully,
MRS. J. S. PFISTER.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. GRAND JURY INDICTS SIX STEEL CONCERNS

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio., March 15.—"A lawless condition of affairs in and about the steel industry," is one portion of the report of the Mahoning county grand jury, which has returned indictments against the United States Steel Corporation (the trust) and Judge Gary, chairman of its executive board, who are charged, together with five other steel companies, with combining to fix the price of common labor in violation of the state law, thereby bringing about an unrest that resulted in the recent strikes and riots at East Youngstown.

The other indicted concerns are: Republic Iron and Steel company, Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, Brier Hill Steel company, Youngstown Iron and Steel company and the Carnegie Steel company.

The grand jury report states that the evidence shows "an absolute disregard on the part of certain corporations and individuals indicted by us either of the rights of, or justice to, the laboring class or the public generally."

The report states that the shots which precipitated the extreme acts of violence, lawlessness and crime, which were committed on January 7, were shots fired by the guards of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company.

The Porkhouse Mill (Pittsburg Forge and Iron Co.) this city is on in full, double turn.

DEACON PHILIP AND THE ETHIOPIAN

Acts 8:26-40. March 19.

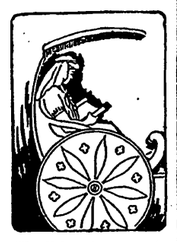
Another Faithful Deacon In the Early Church—A Gentile "Feeling After God"—Co-ordination of Divine Providences Bringing These Together.

"Understandest thou what thou readest?"—Acts 8:30.

DEACON PHILIP was just such a man as the Lord is pleased to use in the service of the Truth. Having proved himself faithful in the work of serving tables, he had been made an ambassador for God in the preaching of the Gospel at Samaria. Faithfulness in little things is sure to bring larger opportunities.

We are not informed by what means "the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip," sending him to the road on which he would find the eunuch's chariot. It was a time when the Lord used miraculous means of communication more than at present, doubtless for the very purpose of establishing both the faith and the work of His servants. Today we walk more by faith, less by sight and miracle. Yet so bright is the light shining upon the Word that we have much advantage every way, even over the early Church. There were no New Testament writings then.

The eunuch belonged to the kingdom of Meroe, which lay on the right bank of the Nile, and thence east to the mountains of Abyssinia. He was a court officer, evidently deeply religious, who had come into contact with the Jewish religion. In his religious fervor he had gone up to Jerusalem to worship and to gain additional knowledge of the true God. Evidently this occurrence was after the close of Israel's "seventy weeks" of special favor; for this eunuch was not a Jewish proselyte in every sense, eunuchs not being granted the privileges of the congregation.



The Ethiopian eunuch.

The eunuch had come away from Jerusalem with a manuscript copy of the Prophet Isaiah's writings—a very costly treasure in those times. That he was doing more than simply reading aloud is evidenced by his language to Philip. The question, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" was a test, so to speak. If the eunuch understood what he was reading, he would have gladly said, "Yes, friend, I thank God that I do. Do you also understand it?" But had he been in the wrong condition of heart, his answer might have been, "Mind your own business!" Or had he been hypocritical, he would have professed a knowledge of the subject and then, to cover his real ignorance, would have turned the conversation into another channel.

The Gospel For the Meek.

It was evidently of Providence that the eunuch was considering Isaiah 53. Like the majority of the prophecies, this could be understood only in the light of its fulfillment, and then only by those in proper heart attitude and under the instruction of the Holy Spirit. Deacon Philip had been taught of God through the Apostles, and was now able to communicate to the eunuch the simple story of the Gospel—that Christ had come into the world to redeem mankind, had died for man's sin, had arisen and ascended to glory; that now God was calling out an elect Little Flock to be joint-heirs with Jesus in the Kingdom; and that as soon as this election should be completed, The Messiah (Jesus the Head, and the Church His Body) would be manifested in ruling and blessing power to all mankind.—Acts 3:19-23.

Undoubtedly Philip further explained to the eunuch that those who accepted Christ as their Savior, and who desired to become His disciples, taking up their cross to follow Him, should give their assent to this matter by baptism. Apparently it did not take the eunuch long to decide what his course should be; and his readiness of heart to follow the Lamb is indicated by his promptness to be baptized.

"If Thou Believest."

Philip was ready to receive the eunuch as a fellow-member of the Church of Christ and to administer to him the symbol of introduction into the Body of Christ—baptism—as soon as the eunuch gave evidence of having accepted the Lord and of having made consecration to Him. He made no request that the eunuch learn the catechism or confess something else, such as well-meaning but mistaken men in the Dark Ages promulgated as necessary and as explanatory of the Bible. Neither did he say, "I will write your name as a member of the Church and will procure for you authority to preach the Gospel in Ethiopis." No: at that time the subject was not confused, befogged, as it is now.

On the contrary, Philip preached the Gospel in its simplicity; and the eunuch received it in like manner. Moreover, with the Gospel itself went the right and the authority to declare it. (Isaiah 61:1-3; Jeremiah 23:28.) All who have received the anointing of the Spirit, the unction from the Holy One, are thus fully commissioned to tell forth the Good Tidings.

Duluth, Minn., March 4.

Greetings and congratulations on putting out so excellent a paper. We have not missed a copy for several years and do not want to miss one, so we are renewing through the W. T. B. & T. Society.

Continue your good service and we shall remain,

Appreciative subscribers,
JOHN ENQUIST and FAMILY.

Chickasha, Okla., March 2.

As my subscription expires March 10th, 1916, I am renewing for your much appreciated paper, because of its cleanliness. I have taken it for a number of years and would feel lost without its visits each week, and I thank you for the noble stand you take for "Present Truth." May the dear Lord continue to bless and prosper you in the good work.

MRS. CLARA PHILLIPS.

Memphis, Tenn., March 3.

I notice that my subsbcription has expired; and, as a subscriber to the Watch Tower, and desirous of encouraging the dissemination of Present Truth, as exemplified in the teachings of Pastor C. T. Russell, I wish to renew my subscription, to extent of enclosure herewith.

Respectfully,

Coeur De Alene, Idaho, March 2.

Will you kindly discontinue sending the Tribune to me as circumstances prevent me from subscribbing for it any longer. We have appreciated reading the Tribune during the past year and regret having to stop taking it.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. J. E. NEWELL.

The Dalles, Oregon, March 3.

We are renewing our subscription to your very interesting paper, through the W. T. B. & T. Society. We are very much interested in the weekly contents of the Tribune, our especial interest is in Pastor Russell's talks, the letters by N. E. Nelson, and the short and spicy letters in the appreciation column, also the column on Bible study. These are all very interesting to us, and we have no fault to find with others expressing themselves in the Tribune even tho the Truth we love is often very bitterly assailed through the press, we have no desire to resent the attacks other than to continue to present the Truth for those having ears to hear. We trust, dear editor, that you will continue the good work of sending out the light through the columns of the Tribune, and if those sitting in darkness wish to remain in darkness while they hurl stones at what they suppose is an enemy to themselves and society in general—while in Truth it is their very friend. Just let them continue to throw stones—for they are living in glass houses and tho their stones strike—they will rebound with greater force upon their own heads (in shame) when they realize in the near future that they have made a great mistake—in smiting their friend for an enemy.

Mr. Editor, you will be rewarded for every good thought, word and deed in the day of rewards which is near even at the door. With best wishes for your continued success, we are ever yours,

J. W. BLAKELY.

My subsbcription to the Tribune expired the first of January and this is the first time I have ever let my subscription to run behind and I think my subscription dates back to 1905, and I have never missed a single copy.

I want to say one word of appreciation of the good I have received from reading its clean, pure pages all these years: Never a dark blot to mar its pure pages, and the change you have made in our dear Pastor Russell's sermons page is fine.

I an enclosing express Money Order for the year continuing from January first.

May the Lord's blessing be with you in sending forth the True Gospel and so many other things so much need at this time.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation

use whatever means are supplied, by the collective and individual organizations he countenances as herein stated, to this end. All of which are only temporary organizations, like the scaffolding by which the house is built, affiliation with these is only probationary and leads to membership in the "Church Triumphant" or Spiritual Seed of Abraham through which God will "bless all the families of the Earth" according to His unconditional Oath-bound Covenant with Abraham. In short, complete organization of church is not while in the flesh, but for the church in glory, when it shall be exalted to its place of ruling the world as the "New Heavens" and will succeed the present counterfeit "Heavens" or ecclesiastical ruling powers.

We note more of the details of Wesley's republican arrangement and its correspondency with the I. B. S. A. propaganda, in our short stop at the home of John Wesley.

Kewanee, Ill., Feb. 23.

I am writing you to say I have enjoyed your paper very much now for near three years. Am much pleased in the way you have brought forth truths both right and wrong in unions strikes, fakes and fakers whereby mankind may be benefited.

And your choice of a writer on religious subjects (I truly admire) nevertheless I have grievance that I must speak to you of. It is this that your issue of Jan. 6 your paper let some Drippings that has marred its pages for (in that a man of God, an editor in the Northwest was attacked with fiery darts which was meant to injure. Now, that hurt me. I really suffered because of this little one is of the same body as myself. I have never met him, I do not take his paper, simply because I am 61 years old, a widow, without means and dollars come my way very few and far between.

God speed the Tribune to them who are hungering and thirsting for right.

I am renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower. Can say I appreciate very much the improvement in printing of our dear Pastor's sermons, such large, clear type. Another feature of your valuable paper I can highly commend is being entirely free from all sensational news of the day which evidently not needed, at the present time the conditions are such as do not special agitation.

The Lord bless you in your good work.

BI-MONTHLY SETTLEMENT.

Puddlers employed in the iron mills received the best rates during 1880, 1888, 1907 previous to the rate established for boiling by the examination last Friday at Youngstown, Ohio. In the fall of 1879 and the winter of 1880, puddlers received $7.25 a ton in 1888 the prevailing price was based on $1.83 card paying around $7 a ton; in 1907 the prevailing price for puddling was $6.62½ a ton. The rate established Friday to date from March 1, is $6.60 a ton.

In the mills of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company and A. M. Byers company the price is $6.50 a ton, this being a level rate established January 1, 1916 and guaranteed for the year, without taking any chances of going either up or down under the sliding scale in force in the mills operating under the annual agreement of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers. Finishers are given a corresponding wage increase. The sheet mill rate is advanced by the settlement until the sheet mill workers' wages reach the figure at which they stood before the reduction made a year ago. At the last examination about one-half of this cut was restored and the rest will be given under a sliding scale.

Simply fill out the nomination blank which you will find elsewhere in this issue and send it in at once to the contest Manager, the National Labor Tribune. This makes you a full fledged candidate anu entitles you to share in the grand distribution of prizes on May 6th.. The prizes will be awarded according to the number of votes secured by the candidates who enter the contest. It is easy to secure votes. All you have to do is secure the ten free vote coupons published in each issue of the paper, and get your friends to subscribe and give you the benefit of the votes. The nomination blank alone gives you 5,000 votes as a starter so you see it will not be hard to come out a winner.

The big special vote offer now in force makes it especially easy to win. With each club of three yearly subscriptions which you turn in between now and next Thursday evening, March 30th, a bonus ballot good for 25,000 extra votes will be given. All these are in addition to the regular votes on each subscription. There is no limit to the number of clubs that may be turned in by any one candidate. You are limited only by the efforts and energy which you put forth. If you are interested in the campaign, if a $1,200.00 automobile or one of the other magnificent prizes looks good to you, now is the time to strike, for never again will there be so many votes offered on subsciptions as during this offer.

Don't put off working but start getting together your first club right now. There is no time like the present and there is a whole lot of truth to the old saw "He who hesitates is lost." The field is clear now and all your relatives and all your friends stand ready to help you. The more in earnest and the more enthusiastic you are, the more they will admire and help you. But if you let some other candidate "Beat you to them" there will be a different story to tell. First come, first served and you cannot expect your friends to wait for you to act if some other candidate is pressing them for their support.

While the campaign has been announced for several weeks the real work is just starting and by entering now you are getting in on the ground floor. A little effort put forth at this time will insure you winning one of the highest honors of the race.

You note by glancing over the list that there has been considerable action during the past week and that not a few votes have been cast by those already in the race. But the real fight is yet to come. Everything depends upon what you do between now and May 6th. What has been done in the past will count for but little. It is the next few weeks which will decide who is the most popular and well thought candidate in the list. Remember no one who enters the race and seriously interests themselves can fail to win something. But while even the least of the prizes is well worth winning the thing to do is to start out after the largest awards. Make up your mind that you will not be satisfied with anything less than the Regal eight cylinder touring car. GO OUT TO WIN, AND YOU WILL.

TWO VISITORS ASSAULTED BY UNKNOWN SLUGGERS

How a Chief of Police in East Chicago Handled a Serious Strike Situation.

Fremont Tarr, County Commissioner of Jefferson County and Howard Joyce, County Engineer of the same county and both residents of Stubenville, who were in Pittsburgh as delegates to the Good Roads convention were beautifully beaten-up by a band of ruffians before their departure from the city.

It was an instance where the police department was somewhat surprised and really an occurrance which was not anticipated by the police officials, who had been prior to this time most vigilant in guarding against lawlessness.

The delegates had left Exposition Hall, the place where the convention was being held, and were on their way to the Union Station, where they expected to take a train for home. They like strangers were taking in the sights and busily engaged in conversation when some thugs slipped up behind them and with some instrument sent them to the pavement from which they were later picked up in a semi-conscious condition.

The police department was more than shocked over this outrageous attack and where they had been lax in enforcing the city ordinance men loitering along the streets they have pulled the lines a little tighter. Prior to this a letter had been sent to Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong, and the Mayor replied that there was no need of unnecessary alarm, fully convinced, of course, that men in whom he had confidence would not take the law in their own hands. However, Mayor Armstrong wanted to be fair with the men and expressed his confidence in them even after his attention had been called to the danger imminent.

The trouble began over the men who are boarding at the Home Hotel, a hostelry provided by the Manufacturers Association during the strike and now being waked by the moulders. The Manufacturers contend the men are getting better wages than are paid in any other city in the country and notwithstanding this the moulders made a demand for shorter hours which means an increase. The manufacturers contend they cannot meet this condition when they must compete in the same market for business as manufacturers that are paying no more than $3.85 a day for 9 hours when Pittsburgh is paying $4.00. The new men who took the places of the moulders were provided for, at the Home Hotel and this being in the vicinity of 9th street the delegates were taken for men looking for the Home Hotel and they were attacked and knocked insensible.

There is no criticism offered now against Director Charles S. Hubbard for his failure to furnish better police protection but some are inclined to the opinion there was an apparent blunder in overconfidence in not awakening earlier to a necessity which would have saved two visiting delegates from a most brutal assault.

The Police Department is reluctant to enter into any strike trouble and policemen very much prefer that such work be delegated to others but policemen are loyal in responding to orders and rarely shirk from duty when stringent orders are issued.

Up until the time of the assault no one seemed to anticipate any serious disputes and on the occurrance of the men being assaulted the police department have taken steps to avoid a repitition. The officers of the union are as determined as the police department that order shall be enforced and they realize as well as the police department that every strike is lost through some ingnominous blunder and none so quickly as through the actions of some wellmeaning fool who rushes into trouble headlong with the belief he is doing some good but who is throwing open every dooa for additional protection at the expense of taxpayers and thus swinging against his cause a public sentiment that was previously with him.

Probably the most praiseworthy handling of a strike situation was that which brought to the front Chief of Police Charles E. Brown of East Chicago.

On October 29th, about five hundred men employed at the East Chicago plant of the Edwards Valve & Manufacturing Company, walked out of the plant on a strike. This company had in progress several million dollars worth of war munitions for the English army. Because of the cosmopolitan character of the laborers and artisans who were employed, there being at least seventeen tongues represented, and because of pro-German tendencies prevalent in the community, the strike was fraught with many possibilities of crime and disorder.

How the strike was brought to a successful termination largely through the intervention of outside agencies and how the police department directly and indirectly threw its moral force into the matter of settlement is a story of the triumph of tact and diplomacy rather than one of a dogmatic display of organized brute force, the story of the victory of sympathetic interest and wise counsel over the too common resort to the club and gun. What it saved to the city and to the company in life and property is incalculable.

The plant has been run upon what is known in labor circles as the open shop plan. There was no discrimination against union men, however, and in consequence the workmen represented both classes.

The men walked out without formulating or making any demand upon their employers. They were dissatisfied with the personnel of the management; they wanted a better graded and a higher scale of wages; they objected to a change to piece work and objected to certain methods in the distribution of the work. Their demands at the time of quitting were hazy and incomplete.

Subsequently, the machinists and their helpers organized and every man was affiliated with the union local to which he was territorially subject. The leaders of the strike were among the union men and as soon as the organization was perfected, these men appointed a committee to negotiate a settlement of the trouble. The president of the company, however, declared that the circumstances under which his plant was operating were peculiar and that absolutely he would not treat in any manner whatever with a committee of union strikers. He strengthened his views by calling attention to the fact that no strike was called by organized labor and that it had not in any way been authorized by union officials.

From even a cursory survey of the situation, it is evident that the strike possessed most unusual features. At times, it seemed like an inflammable hot bed of tinder that needed but the touch of a single spark to induce an almost uncontrollable conflagration. It was charged and surcharged like a black cloud in an electrical storm, about to send its bolts of lightning in violence to the earth.

Early in its development, Chief Bowen realized that he had on hand one of the greatest tasks in his experience and that a single step would precipitate a struggle, concerning the details of which he did not even dare to dream.

Should this be made the occasion of an exhibition of the physical superiority of organized force over unorganized rebellion? Should he show the spirit of high handed antagonism or might some evidence of sympathy work to better advantage? Was he to command or appeal? Should there be logic in his attitude, or obstinate dogmatism? Should he show some measure of understanding and intelligence or act along prehistoric barbaric lines?

These were the questions he had to answer. And some of them he was compelled to answer under the duress of requests that verged at last even on insistence. SHOULD HE get together a force in readiness for a battle?

The policy that the chief decided upon and his methods in handling one of the most unique strikes in the history of the region, is one of the most potent and forceful demonstrations of modern methods in police efficiency that the great State of Indiana has ever seen.

The period of "Watchful waiting" changed to one of action on November 2nd, when the president and superintendent of the plant referred to, sought the chief and informed him that unless the men returned to work peaceably within forty-eight hours, the company would import strike-breakers in sufficient quantities to start every branch of the big factory. This meant an importation of fully 3,200 men, most of whom would have been selected principally upon their reputation of being successful strike breakers. The president gave the information so that the chief could swear in sufficient deputies to handle the situation.

His first move was to send for the leaders of the strike. A committee of four responded and he took them into his private office and into his confidence.

He advised them helpfully. He sought the undercurrents that were actuating their conduct. He groped for some suggestion or clue that would enable him to hit upon some plan or expedient whereby some real constructive help might be extended. He told them of his fears and of the perils that were imminent. He made them realize that he was their friend, in every sense of the word, and that he did not intend to countenance any underhandedness or to assist in any way in making their efforts to get their rights more burdensome or more hazardous than the real exigencies of the case demanded.

His frankness, his fairness, his sympathy, his consideration and good judgement on every proposition, made every member of the committee his friend, and from that time forth he acted as one of the chief counsellors of the workmen.

LABOR'S GREAT BATTLE; MEN ARE BOUGHT AND SOLD

Capital and Labor Should be Lifted Beyond the Reach of the Demagogue or Professional "Skate"

That species of human degeneracy known as the labor skate among honest toilers has been making a vigorous protest against the exposure being made by the National Labor Tribune, and all kinds of methods are being pursued to discredit the truth but threat and intimidation has not been sufficient to change this, the oldest trade paper in America, from bringing to light the graiters and betrayers of honest men.

Why is it that union labor has been practically driven out of every plant in the Pittsburgh district?

Why is it that no longer will the employer tolerate organized labor about the plant?

Because the employer has experienced the duplicity of the "representative" and has learned that $100.00 will settle a dispute quicker than any argument and will put to an end any labor troubles. The Pittsburgh district is infested with the "skate" and he has destroyed all the respect and esteem which reputable men once had of trades unionism. The National Labor Tribune has already stated that men like John Williams, President of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel; Van Bitner, District President of the United Mine Workers; Edward E. Padgett, President of Typographical Union No. 7; the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees, and a few others including Jim McKee of the Plumbers, have no connection or understanding with those that are handing the organizations over to the various political parties.

On the eve of the approaching primary election the labor skates have completed their bill of sale and in that they have summed up "75,000 Members" who are to be handed over body, soul and pantaloons and the Cascas have again thrust the stiletto into the back of labor. The whole organization is gone and one job has been provided in the Allegheny county court house. This is part of the bargain.

In the days gone by organized labor was for the sole purpose of securing wage advances and better working conditions for its members but in the Pittsburgh district the labor "skates" use trades unionism as a political asset to be bargained and sold for either a job or a place on the ticket for some worthless political non-entity or for the real casr for the "endorsement."

It is said of Ex-Mayor W. A. Magee that after his election, a leader of the "skates" appeared at the office of Mayor and was admitted into the sanctum, no sooner had he been seated than he began to enumerate what he had done and how, through his phenomenal ability he threw the whole labor vote into the lap of the Mayor's adherents. The "skate" wanted a job, an appointment to Police Magistrate or some other office of importance. His committee reviewed how 25,000 workmen had gone insane over the candidacy of Magee and all in the city had lined up to a man—Labor was literally wrapped up in a pink package and handed over to the Magee leaders.

However, Mayor Magee had consulted the expense account and in reply handed back a package bound with a blue ribbon. Interpreted and written out it would sound something like Mr. ——— we appreciate your enthusiasm and your ability to hand over the working classes to a man but we cannot pay cash for your services and also give you a job. You must decide upon one or the other and since you got the cash I must give some one else the job. Good day.

It makes no difference which party desires the "endorsement" it's an easy matter to secure it. Both sides are absolutely assured that the "endorsement" or the "credentials" can be produced as soon as the price is paid. The next line of luscious fruit for the "skates" following the presidential timber or national delegates is the Judiciary and the harvest looks good. Each of the candidates for the Judiciary can have an "endorsement" from $100 to $1,000. If they are not too anxious they can get the real article for $100 but if they are hasty $1,000 will be the high cost. The hope is expressed that the judiciary will hold off until the latter part of the campaign when the half price or bargain offers are made.

This will be a big saving to each candidate.

The "skates" herald their strength as 75,000, of this number they have included in their list 50,000 miners who do not reside in the county; the remainder are scattered and are not controlled. The proper estimate is small and as the Tribune knows them they are not worth a single district and if they are challenged individually there is not a single one of them who can deliver the district in which he resides. They know them too well and where they are known none of them have influence.

So far as the factory, shop, mill, mine and industry goes the men who have the votes laugh at them and they are a laughingstock.

Is it any wonder that Union labor is rapidly becoming a thing of the past and can the average true union man understand what a tremendous task it is for the sincere union leader to cope with the grafter and the plunderer of organized labor. If the members of the unions could hear what the employers say and the paltry sums the "skates" are willing to accept for their services of betrayal they could understand why honest leaders are almost discouraged with their burdens.

Is there any wonder that the employer looks upon the leader

APPRECIATIONS.

Canyon, Texas, Jan. 18, 1916.

Am renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. It has been a weekly visitor at my home for a number of years and is always welcome. The large, clear print is restful to the eyes and you give such generous space to Pastor Russell's sermons and to other religious features. The Tribune is also up to date along other lines—industry, bettering the conditions of the laboring classes, getting after graft. etc. Wishing you continued success in your efforts to "do good" to all men as you have opportunity," I am,

Yours truly,
MRS. A. C. HENRY.

Quincy, Ill., March 16.

I have just renewed my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower, and for some time I have wanted to write you to express my appreciation of your firm stand in publishing Pastor Russell's sermons.

Now in the last few issues I see you have made an admirable improvement in that particular feature—the large type and nearly a full page. I enjoy the Tribune because it has visited our home for the past two years and we would be lost without it, so regular you send it is what makes it so pleasant. We can always expect it on Friday.

Yours most truly,
L. W. MERRILL.

Grand Junction, Col. March 17.

I will take this oportunity to express to you my continued appreciation of the Tribune. I am especially pleased with the sermons of Pastor Russell and the clear, plain type that you use. Trusting you will continue to publish the same. I remain,

Respectfully yours,
FRED J. DARRON.

St. Johns, Oregon. March 16.

We are renewing our subscription for another year through the Watch Tower and are thankful for the privilege of the sermons of Pastor Russell in opening up the Scripture to us and the Sunday School lessons we get also and ask the Lord's blessing on the continued service of yourself in printing of these good things.

Our subscription to your excellent paper must be about to expire so we are this day renewing through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society

We like your paper for the many good features it contains—the sermon, sunday school lessons and appreciation of the friends and all in such good clear type.

We hope to be able to subscribe for your paper and speak a good word for it as long as you continue to print the sermons of our Dear Pastor.

We have been greatly enjoying Bro. N. E. Nelson's article "Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformation."

Wishing you success we are yours in the One Hope,

MR. and MRS. ROY N. IRWIN.

Northumberland, England, March 9.

I am sending International money order for eight shillings, subscription for one year for the National Labor Tribune. We greatly appreciate Pastor Russell's sermons and after reading pass it on to others.

Yours sincerely,
A. HUNTER.

Detroit, Mich., March 14.

Have been very glad to note the large, clear type in which Pastor Russell's sermons are coming out in the Tribune.

Am quite sure that this will appeal to many of your readers—particularly persons whose sight is defective. The particular feature of your paper that especially interests Watch Tower readers is Pastor Russell's sermon, and they like to have it in good type and in full.

Am sure that some other features of the Tribune also. are of considerable interest to Tower readers. For eight or ten years the Tribune has done a noble work, in the promulgation of the Gospel by publishing Pastor Russell's sermons.

Personally, I very much appreciate that service. During that time I have sent in (through Tower office) scores of subscriptions and renewals.

The Tribune is read by a large number of persons who are not Tower readers. This makes it a good medium through which to spread the Gospel, among a class of people who have not become acquainted with God's wonderful plan of salvation. The writer is more than ever interested in that plan, and is more desirous than ever to make it known to others.

After having traveled (as a pilgrim) for about 20 years, have located in Detroit for a while, partly for the purpose of helping to look after the interests of my aged, helpless mother.

Am working in connection with the local "Class" and am finding plenty of work, to do here. and in nearby places. Detroit has a very fine Class, made up of about 250 devoted and earnest members. This is the English speaking class alone. Then there is a Polish class of about 200.

Yours very respectfully,
FRANK DRAPER.

Barre. Vt., March 17.

I am inclosing money order for renewal of subscription for another year, as per the clubbing arrangement with the "Watch Tower." I am not positive if this is the eighth or ninth year of my acquaintance with the Tribune and I wish to say for your encouragement that I fail to see but what you are giving as much space to the religious features in your columns as at any time since I have in eight years.

It is true the "Question Box" has been discontinued, but the same feature has been discontinued by every other paper because of not being supplied by the "Lecture Bureau." I must acknowledge a continued appreciation of your service in this connection as at any time. I would like to comment as also your correspondent, Dr. Murray, spoke about the letter of Alfred Dripps. The day I read the letter was January 7th, our manna text was "Speak evil of no man." I too felt grieved to see such a letter appear in the Tribune.

I recall that in writing you before I have expressed my appreciation of the service given by the Tribune in the publishing of Pastor Russell's sermons. etc., assuring you of my support if you continue such service if I am financially able. Because of pledging my support on these grounds if unable financially to take but one paper it will be the Tribune. I feel very sorry to see so many unable to continue to subscribe for the paper. It may be possible that many do not know of the advantage of the clubbing arrangement with "Watch Tower." In fact I knew one man the Tribune was made a present for one year to him was going to discontinue on account of the price. Compared with other papers printing sermons when I informed him of the clubbing price he assured me he would renew. Wishing for your continued success, I remain

Yours very respectfully,

doubted fundamental branches (if there be any such) of our common Christianity, and for that decision thereof I appeal to your own conscience. In the presence of the great God, before whom both you and I shall shortly appear, I pray you that are in authority over us, whom I reverence for the sake of your office, to consider (and that not after the manner of dissemblers with God), are you living portraitures of Him whom ye are appointed to represent among men?. Do you put forth all your strength in the vast work you have undertaken? Let it not be said that I speak here as if all under your care are intended to be clergymen. Not so: I speak only as if they were intended to be Christians. But what example is set us by those who enjoy the beneficence of our fore-fathers, by Fellows, Students, Scholars,and more especially those who are of some rank and eminence? Do ye, who are of rank and eminence — do ye, brethren, abound in the fruits of the spirit, in holiness of mind, in self-denial and mortification, in seriousness and composure of spirit, in patience, meekness, sobriety, temperance; and in the unwearied, restless endeavors to do good to all men. Is this the general characters of Fellows of Colleges? I fear it is not. Rather, have not pride and haughtiness, impatience and peevishness, sloth and indolence, gluttony and sensuality been objected to us, perhaps not always by our enemies, not wholly without ground? Many of us are more immediately consecrated to God, called to minister in holy things. Are we then patterns to the rest in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity? Did we indeed enter upon this office with a single eye to serve God, trusting that we were inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon us this ministration, for the promoting of His glory, and the edifying of His people? Where are the seals of our Apostleship? Who that were dead in trespasses and sins have quickened by our word? Have we a burning zeal to save souls from death? Are we dead to the world and the things of the world? When we are smitten on one cheek, do we resent it, or do we turn the other also, not resisting evil, but overcoming evil with good? Have we a bitter zeal, inciting us to strive sharply and passionately with those that are out of the way? Or is our zeal the flame of love, so as to direct all our words with sweetness, lowliness and meekness of wisdom?"

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. Who will start the ball rolling?

The Mystery Explained

(Written for Natl. Labor Tribune.)

Our attention has been called, in Feb. 1st, Tower, to the fact that Elijah. the Prophet, typified the Christ in the flesh. and that the taking up of Elijah represented the final passing of the Church from earthly to heavenly conditions. We were shown also, that when Elijah's time for translation came, the Lord sent him from one place to another; Jordan being the last point to which he was directed.

"As Jordan was the last point to which Elijah was directed, so 1914 is the last point to which the Church has been directed."

Doubtless Elijah expected to be translated when he reached Jordan. but he was mistaken. He must go further. ,

He found the great river of Jordan to be only an obstruction across his pathway; all further progress was intercepted, therefore he was compelled to stop and stand. "And they two stood by Jordan,"—2 Ki. 2:7.

He could not take another step until by Divine power he removed the great obstruction.

And so it is with the Church, the antitypical Elijah, when she came to Oct. 1, 1914. She also, was expecting her change at this point, yet she was not taken, but found 1914 to be a hindrance. Her progress was impeded. She had reached a crisis. She could go no further.

Then meekly submitting to His will she likewise stopped and stood by Jordan (1914) nobly endeavoring to be brave, to bear the disappointment courageously; she patiently waited for Divine power to be granted by which this hindrance should be removed; for the type shows that we cannot pass over 1914 without Divine assistance.

Looking at the picture very carefully, then we find that 1914 is like the great river of Jordan flowing across the pathway of Elijah and Elisha. We cannot dodge it by evasion, we cannot go around it by trying to ignore it, nor pass lightly over it, by shift. Then the only way we can ever go beyond 1914, is by correctly interpreting its real import to the Church.

Seeing then, dear friends, that the next thing in order is to remove this great obstruction to our faith. should surely stimulate us to action, for no matter what else we may attempt to do, we can not have the Lord's approval until this difficulty be properly adjusted.

Make an effort, therefore, to correct this mistake, and "God shall supply all you need."

The Lord often requires us to do something which we feel quite unable to accomplish, in order that we may realize our utter dependence upon Him. As we see our own plans and ideas dashed to pieces, we become more humble and draw nearer to the Lord. and He becomes more and more precious to us. He wounds only to heal. "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent."

That this problem is confronting us we do not deny and as an unpassable barrier to all future progress in the Lord's work, should we not meet it fearlessly and by the help of the Lord overcome it.

After this mistake has been properly corrected, our faith in God, in present Truth and in that "Servant", our noble, yet fallible, human leader, shall be strengthened.

We should remember, dear friends, that no special one is to blame for this mistake, because the misunderstanding has been mutual. God has given us all reasoning power and expects us to use it. Therefore, if we decide a thing to be right, and it proves to be wrong, surely we alone are to blame for it. Ps. 118:8; Jer. 17:5; Rev. 14:7.

However, this apparent failure was only permitted for our good, and was as much a foreseen result as was any other feature of the harvest work. Had it been for our best interests the Lord could have easily prevented it. Rom. 8:28.

This type signifying that if God predetermined that the Church should be disappointed in her expectations in 1914, should render us very humble, very sympathetic, and very careful not to censure any of the Lord's dear children, especially should we not prove ungrateful to our beloved Pastor, who has exhibited so much love and tenderness toward us. 1 Thes. 5:12-13.

I believe that I am voicing the sentiment of all when I say: We dearly love Brother Russell, and if it were possible we would gladly bear all the reproach connected with this affair and completely exonerate him. Gal. 6:2.

Finally, my dear brothers and sisters, let us not feel disquited or unduly perturbed over this perplexity, but lift up our hearts to our dear heavenly Father for assistance, realizing our own insignificance and His unlimited power, fully submitting to His will. Pray in the most humble, reverent and sincere manner; He is waiting to be gracious, and will only defer the answer to our prayers until He sees we are ready to appreciate it. Heb. 4:16, Jas. 1:5.

Our God is equal to every emergency that can possibly come upon us. He is able to rool away this great obstruction and leave nothing to further perplex us. Dan. 2:20-22.

I wish to say in conclusion that I rather think I have given the proper thought in regard to this Scripture because the similarity between the type and the antitype seems so striking. However, dear friends, I shall leave the final decision to those who are more competent to judge.

NEW CREATURES PERFECT IN HOLINESS.

NOT OF THE FLESH, BUT OF THE SPIRIT THROUGH IMPUTATION.

Holiness Means Completeness—Only the Church Are Holy Now—Jews Failed to Be Holy—How Christ's Follower Fulfil the Law—Development of the New Creation—Practising on the Old Bod—Judged by Heart Attitude—Self-Disciplining— Attaining the Spirit of Sound Mind—Love the Bond of Perfection.

BRANTFORD, ONT., March 19.—Pastor Russell gave an able address here today, based on 1 Peter 1:16—"Be ye holy; for I am holy." We give a condensed report:

The word "holy" is related to our word "whole," which signifies complete, unbroken. Viewed from this standpoint, our text is a wonderful exhortation. Our Lord Jesus also exhorted us, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." (Matthew 5:48.) Very properly we note who are thus addressed: it is not the world; for the Bible is not addressed to the world. In their fallen condition, out of harmony with God and not seeking to know His will, mankind are not in a position where God can thus address them. They are aliens, stranger, foreigners, as the Lord speaks of them through St. Paul. At present they have neither lot nor part in the things of God. So far as they are concerned, His great Plan is yet future. The Father loves the world sympathetically, and has made provision that ultimately they shall have a glorious place, rich blessings, but not yet.—Ephesians 2:11,12; 1 Corinthians 1:21-25; John 3:16.

During the long period from Adam to the making of the Covenant with Israel at Mt. Sinai, God recognized no nation. Mankind were cut off from fellowship with Him because of Adam's transgression. God did, indeed, speak through a few; such as Enoch, Noah and Abraham, to whom He made certain declarations not clearly understood by any at that time. No one was permitted to come into covenant relationship with God except in the sense that Abraham did, and through animal sacrifices, which typified the great sacrifice for sins yet to come.

Then came God's dealings with the one nation of Israel. He separated them from all other nations. (Exodus 19:3-6; Amos 3:2.) He gave them His law, and promised that if they would keep that Law they should have everlasting life and should exercise those gracious privileges which God mentioned to Father Abraham; namely, that through them all the families of the earth should be blessed. They thought that they could keep God's law; but they found that they could not do so—that they could not be holy.

This holiness was briefly comprehended in the command "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength; and thy neighbor as thyself." (Luke 10:27.) But Israel could not attain to this holiness, this completeness; for, like all of the Adamic race, they were imperfect. No imperfect man could keep a perfect law.

Year by year for over sixteen centuries God permitted Israel to offer typical sacrifices; and they renewed their covenant annually on the Day of Atonement. Thus they were made acceptable to God for the ensuing year, and were kept in covenant relationship with Him. Over and over again they tried to keep the Law, but failed continually. The Apostle Paul tells us that during all those centuries not one Jew was justified through keeping the Law.—Romans 3:20; Galatians 2:15,16.

HOW CHRISTIANS CAN KEEP GOD'S LAW.

Then came the Gospel Dispensation. Our Lord Jesus, by His life and His preaching gave forth a Message of mercy and peace, even to those Jews who could not keep the Law, saying still to them, "Be ye holy." During all those many centuries the Israelites had tried to be holy but had failed; and how could those of our Lord's day expect to be holy, complete, lacking nothing, any more than could their ancestors? Ah, there was a secret which Jesus disclosed to the earnest and sincere, the "Israelites indeed!" The reason why any could keep the Law after Jesus came, was that Christ accomplished an important work, applicable to those who became His disciples. The Jews could not succeed in keeping the Law of God, but Christians can do so. This is not because they are better born than the Jews; for naturally we are all "children of wrath, even as others."—Ephesians 2:3.

In the absolute sense, Christians cannot keep God's Law any more than could the Jews, and for the same reason. Doubtless we have all proved to our own satisfaction that we cannot keep that perfect Law in the sense of having no imperfection of thought, word or act. When the Apostle says that the righteousness of the Law is fulfilled in us (Romans 8:4), he means that God has made an arrangement through Jesus by which our imperfections are legally cancelled, made as though they did not exist. Thus, by keeping the Law in spirit and by having our Lord Jesus cancel our infirmities of body, we are perfect before God. As Christians, we keep His Law.

According to God's Plan, our Lord Jesus laid His life down as a Ransom, a corresponding price, for the life of Father Adam. Adam sinned, and must meet the penalty of sin—death. He died; and all of his posterity have been born under the conditions of sin and death which his disobedience entailed upon them. Mankind die because sin entered into the world through one man's disobedience, as the Apostle explains. (Romans 5:12.) But through His death our Lord Jesus secured the right to annul Adam's death sentence and to take possession of all mankind. Thus Adam and all of his posterity will be awakened from death; otherwise the entire human race would suffer eternal death; for the penalty of sin was not the mere act of dying, but remaining dead forever.—1 Corinthians 15:21, 22; 1 Timothy 2:5, 6.

At the beginning of the Messianic Kingdom our Lord will take possession of the world. Mankind are something like a scrap-heap of old machines, engines, boilers, etc., all rusted and twisted out of their original shape. But the One who will take control has infinite power and ability to repair and to reconstruct all these defective beings. During the thousand years of His Reign this will be His work. It will affect the dead as well as those having a measure of life when that Reign begins. The Messiah will bring all who will out of sin and death conditions back to the perfection lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary.

OFFICES OF THE GLORIFIED CHRIST.

God purposed, before the foundation of the world, to permit sin to bring forth its evil fruitage for six thousand years, and then to usher in a great Sabbath Day, the Millennial Sabbath, during which He would do, through Jesus, His appointed Channel, a work for mankind which they cannot do for themselves. Meantime, He has been selecting and preparing the classes that will be His agents, under Christ, to accomplish His great work for Humanity—first, an earthly class (enumerated in Hebrews 11), and then a spiritual class, the Church.

Jehovah God has also purposed that our Lord Jesus shall be the great King of the world during the Millennial Sabbath, and that this spiritual class shall be associate kings under Him; moreover, that Jesus and the Church shall be a royal Priesthood to bless and instruct the world of mankind, their subjects; and that this great High Priest and His under priests shall also be the judges of the world. These different features of the work of The Christ were shown in type in the anointed priesthood of Israel, their anointed kings and in their judges. The Apostle Paul says, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Corinthians 6:2). The Christ, Head and Body, will also be the world's great Prophet, the antitype of Moses.—Acts 3:22, 23.

All this shows us that the Church of Christ is separate and distinct from the world at large, as Jesus said. (John 17:14; 15:15, 19.) What God will do for the world through our Lord Jesus during the incoming Age, by restoring whosoever will to all that was lost in Adam, bringing them back to human perfection, is something very different from what He is now doing for the Church. The inheritance of the faithful Church is to be spiritual, not earthly; and it is the Church that are now called upon to be holy.

During the Millennial Age all mankind will be called upon to be holy; for then the standard of holiness will be set before them, and by the assistance of The Christ all the willing and obedient may attain human perfection. Whosoever will may become holy, as was Father Adam before he sinned. While on earth, our Lord Jesus was holy in the perfection of human nature. (John 1:14.) During the Millennium the whole world will be expected to come up to the standard of holiness, of completeness—nothing lacking, nothing imperfect. The merit which our Lord has, by virtue of His faithfulness to the Father even unto death, gives Him the right to purchase the human family and to help them back to that condition of completeness, of holiness, in which they can be holy, as God is holy.

GOD'S CROWNING WORK.

The difference between the call to holiness now extended to those who have an "ear to hear" God's present Message and the call to holiness to be extended to all mankind during the Millennium is this: It is not the flesh of the Christian that is holy, but the New Creature. His human imperfections are covered with the robe of Christ's imputed righteousness. This unique dealing with the Gospel Church is for a specific purpose. We understand that God, who had already created various ranks of spirit beings, and who then created man "a little lower than the angels," had planned before the foundation of the world that in due time He would have a New Creation, different from anything created before then, and the greatest, the most wonderful, of all His creations.—2 Corinthians 5:17; Ephesians 1:4; 2:10.

This New Creation, God tells us (2 Peter 1:4), is to have the Divine nature, His own nature. It will not only be higher than the human nature, which in perfection is the image of God, but higher than the various orders of spirit beings, who are also in the image of God. It will be the spirit nature in its highest form.

God first began to develop this New Creation in the person of our Lord Jesus Christ at the time of His baptism in Jordan. The Father's purpose in sending the Son into the world was: (1) That He might be the Redeemer of the world; (2) That He might become the Leader of the Church. (Hebrews 2:9, 10.) God has made our Lord to be Head over the Church, which is His Body—in the same sense that Congress is a Body. The work of the Gospel Age has been the gathering of the members of this Body. The blessings promised to the world cannot begin until this work of gathering of the members of this Body. The blessings to the world cannot begin until this work of gathering and developing the spiritual Body of Christ shall have been completed. We believe that this work is now almost accomplished.

THE HOLINESS OF THE SAINTS.

Now we see what the Apostle means when he says, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." (Romans 12:1.) We should rejoice to know that if we offer our little all to God, Jesus will make up what is needed to render our sacrifice fully acceptable to the Father. When the Holy Spirit comes upon one, an unction from on High, it constitutes him a son of God, on a new plane. He is no longer counted as a human being. He has been begotten as a spirit being; but he has no spirit body as yet. He still has the old body, the old brain, although a new will is there, a new mind, "the mind of Christ." He had the mind, the disposition, of Christ to present himself as a sacrifice; but when he was begotten of the Holy Spirit, he received from God the start of a new nature. He became a New Creature in Christ.

During the present life the New Creature must dwell in this earthly tabernacle. (2 Corinthians 5:4.) If he continues to walk humbly and faithfully before the Lord, seeking to do the Divine will, as the consecrated have agreed to do, he will be more and more filled with the Holy Spirit, until eventually God will complete the matter by giving the resurrection "change," the birth of the Spirit. (1 Corinthians 15:51-53; John 3:5-7.) Then the new mind will be transferred to a Divine spirit body, and the New Creature will be complete.

The fallen human body of the saints cannot do perfectly the things that the New Creature would have it do. But the merit of Christ, imputed to each spirit-begotten child of God, covers them as a robe, constituting them acceptable to God. If any of these should take off this "wedding garment," he would lose his life as a New Creature. But so long as the merit of Jesus covers the unintentional blemishes of the fallen nature, those which the New Creature is not able to overcome, the Father regards them, not from the standpoint of the flesh, but as New Creatures.—Romans 8:9.

NEW CREATURES TO JUDGE THEMSELVES.

It is the New Creature that is to be holy, perfect, as the Father in Heaven is holy, perfect. This does not give any one liberty to sin with the body, however. "How shall we who have died to sin live any longer therein?" asks the Apostle. (Romans 6:2). If we consecrated ourselves voluntarily unto death in opposition to sin, how shall we find pleasure in sin? Whoever enjoys sin thereby manifests that he has not the Holy Spirit. The mind of the Lord does not enjoy sin. We are to make a clear distinction, however, between the impulses of the flesh and the desire of the heart. Through the impulses of his fallen human nature, any one of God's people might be overtaken in a fault, and under stress of circumstances might do or say something that he did not approve. But so surely as he is a New Creature he will make amends for his fault, in order to return to full harmony with the Lord.

God is judging His people according to the heart. (1 Samuel 16:7.) The world cannot know all about God's people. They look at things from the natural man's standpoint; and when they see a child of God do or say something unkind or improper, they draw their conclusions accordingly. But we must not judge them. Our heart attitude must ever be to wish to do the Lord's will. Should any of God's people willingly consent to sin, he would be a partaker of that sin. If overtaken in a fault, he must correct it. Whoever as a New Creature in Christ is seeking to be holy as God is holy, will watch his words and conduct and will try to keep a strict rule over his mortal body; and if that body should temporarily get from under control, he will discipline it by way of punishment, will correct it in order to make it remember for the future.—1 Corinthians 11:31, 32.

All true Christians should be on the alert to note God's providences. Nothing can come to the Lord's people by accident; for all things must work together for their good. Should one of them meet with what would appear to be an accident, if he should have some peculiar experience, he should think, "Is this something to teach me a special lesson, or is it a chastisement from my Father for wrong-doing?"

Every child of God must receive discipline, in order that his character may be developed. Even our Lord Jesus had disciplining. But in His case these experiences were never punishments; and it is for the Lord's people to be on guard to see that their disciplinings are not in the nature of punishments, so as to get the greatest benefit from them.—Hebrews 12:16-11; 5:8.

The Lord's people should also study the character of God, to see His wholeness, His completeness, that they copy His example. They are to have "the spirit of a sound mind." Our minds are not sound, being blemished by the fall; but the mind of the New Creature is always loyal to God. The Scriptures tell us what God's will for us is, what His mind is; and we are to copy Him. God is LOVE. But He will not be loving at the expense of Justice. So let us copy God in His Wisdom, Mercy, Justice and Love. All these noble qualities will be manifest more or less in the Church of Christ.

JOHN WESLEY.

Wesley, like Luther, started his career to reform the actions of society that comprised the inmates of Oxford University from which he graduated and was ordained. That his efforts would result in a new institution that would continue after his death he had no idea. He, like Luther, stayed in the church until the church doors of England closed against him. His work was done in the open field of the world instead of ecclesiastical circles. Here Russell differs from Luther and Wesley, who from the start worked outside of Institutionalism, like Beecher who broke away and started an independent church of democratic cast, but, unlike Beecher, his actions were based upon Scripture which led him to the conclusion that institutionalism was a rejected system called "Babylon" and his message has been in the words of the Revelator "Come out of her my people." Russell styles his movement as the "Harvest Work," a separating work.

Wesley made little impression upon Oxford and soon became discouraged. About this time he met James Oglethorpe who was attracted to the Oxford group that had shared the enthusiasm of Wesley. Oglethorpe was a graduate of Oxford, an officer in the army, and at this particular time was Colonial Governor of Georgia, home from America on a visit. Oglethorpe recognized the worthiness of the Wesley group and purposed that they go with him to America and establish an ideal commonwealth. Oglethorpe had with him some fine specimens of American Indians. Wesley conceived the idea of becoming a missionary amongst the savage tribes and accepted the invitation and terms, and sailed for America. Wesley made no impression upon the Indians and met with discouragement again. He found fault with the slavery of the South and got into trouble with Oglethorpe who said this protest was "an interference with property right." He sailed back to England after two years in Georgia, leaving the slavery question for Beecher and Lincoln.

Arriving in England his services were secured by the overseers of Oxford as Greek professor and occasional preacher. He soon offended the precise parsons who pronounced their prayers with the precision of mathematics and kept them aloof. To them, religion was a matter of ceremony, but to Wesley a question of experience. They considered his demeanor on the platform irreverent and blasphemous and he was barred from some of the pulpits. He had arranged to be at a prayer meeting at a village church near by Oxford and the doors were locked against him. The people were wating at the entrance and John simply mounted the steps and spoke. This was a new experience and proved to be an eye-opener. People that never entered a church heard him and some remained to pray. He was the first clergyman in the church of England to attempt such an undignified procedure. His mother encouraged him in this and wrote "speak the words of love on any and every occasion." He continued to preach on street corners, on church steps, in front of taverns, and soon became very popular. He was cautioned by the church authorities and he remonstrated. From then on he was considered an enemy of the church—a preacher without a pulpit.

In this we have the experience of Russell foreshadowed. To catch fish you must go were they can be found. In our day the people are flocking to the theaters. Russell goes there on Sundays; they read the newspapers and his sermons are there through the week; of late years they flock to the "movies" and he is there with his famous Photo-Drama of Creation. You think it sacrilegious to picture the experiences of Christ upon the canvas? Well they said the same about Wesley. The trouble simply was because it was new. "Did you ever hear the like before?" If we have not then it must be bad and so we must educate people to use the means at our disposal to the best interests of mankind. Russell realizing the prejudice of many of those of his own propaganda, through out hints of his purpose long before he launched his latest stupendous task—this gave them time to think and they were ready to assist in an undertaking that has astonished the world. "The pots in the Lord's house have become like the bowls before the altar."

THE CIRCUIT RIDER.

Whitefield, Charles Wesley and others joined Wesley in the novel preaching and soon began to start classes in various parts of the country, in the fields and roadsides and cities. These classes were made purposely small and every member was expected to take part by standing on his feet and saying something. This practical method drew out interest in Bible Study, for they wanted to have something to quote, if not sing or give testimony. Wesley made it his special business to visit these classes annually all over the country and traveled on horseback—hence we get the "circuit rider." This out-door preaching developed into the camp meeting craze of the nineteenth century in America and later evolved into the Chautauqua, founded by John A. Vincent (Methodist), which produced men that later ser college professors to rout.

Wesley anticipated Russell in abolishing the paid ministry. He soon recognized that there was no necessity for sending them to Seminaries, when the talented could be developed in the classes by the opportunities afforded. This is precisely the case with the small ecclesias of the Associated Bible Students. A distinction however, and a very important one, must be here noted: Wesley appointed the "class leader" and this is the root of the subsequent ordinations of Bishops which still lingers in the Methodist church to this day—the Bishops of the church still appoint the clergy their charges. In the Associated Bible Student the "class leader" is only one amongst many Elders elected by the congregation according to its needs and size, serving as leaders and speakers with their natural inclinations, which renders them original and entertaining as contrasted with the manufactured product with their individuality ironed out in training.

This is a democratic affair, as compared with Wesley's republican arrangements. Another distinction is that these classes use in connection with their Bible study the publications of the International Bible Students Association, or the "Seminary Extension" plan put into effect. The church government is outlined in the sixth of the series of Millennial Dawn drawn from the Scriptures dealing on the question, and these are very simple but quite efficient. They remind one of the expression, "They are governed best who are governed the least." The only members of the propaganda that receive any financial remuneration are those who have given their entire time to the services of Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, a business, (not church) organization devoted to looking after the general interests of the work and "Promotion of Christian Knowledge," which is done through its publications and "Peoples Pulpit Association", or "Pilgrims" that travel over the circuits formed by the Associated Bible Students classes throughout the land. They all receive a like wage from the President of the Society down the rungs of the ladder, merely living expenses. This is an admirable system in sifting out the drones and is the wage system of Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backwards" actually applied. The only feature of this arrangement bearing resemblance to Wesley's appointment system is the "Pilgrim" department, but these all, barring the exceptions of those that come from the professional walks, such as clergymen and lawyers, are mustered from the classes of the Associated Bible Students that have been elected by them for similar services in extension work.

THE EVANGELIST.

The modern evangelist of the type of "Billy" Sunday gymnastics was not of Wesley—nor the present day "Methodist style." Whitefield and Charles Wesley started the modern style of "evangelist" and gave them their cast—they used considerable gymnastics (but did not develop into the "spiritual jag" characterizing some of the American Camp Meetings. John Wesley used moderation in his oratory which was conversational. His earnestness carried conviction. His commanding figure and honest face cleanly shaved and adorned with locks of long hair, revealed his comely features which silenced the jeers of those that got close enough. We will give a sample of his oratory which will also reveal the earnest heart of this man of God—a portion of a sermon delivered in St. Mary's pulpit to the Oxford clique. And be it noted that this sermon is not of the cheap type of the modern evangelist who takes his audience on an imaginary excursion over the abyss of a burning hell with its fumes of sulphur to arouse them from their sins—Wesley appealed to the consciences of his hearers. Note also his high conceptions of the principles of life of those posing before people as God's ambassadors—particularly his detestation of taking oaths of office and faith and not obeying and believing as prescribed, and the consequence in after life in undermining character and progress, the head, heart and hand:—

"Let me ask you, in tender-love and in the spirit of meekness, is this a Christian City? Are we considered as a community of men, so filled with the Holy Ghost as to enjoy in our hearts, and show forth in our lives, the genuine fruits of that spirit. I entreat you to observe that here are no particular notions now under consideration: that the question is not concerning doubtful opinions, but concerning the un-with the utmost contempt and that great papers are printing matter which presents the situation without any regard to the "skate?" Here is a picture from "Leslie's."

Millions every morning, with the steady tramp of a vast army of bread-winners, crowd the subways, the street cars, the bridges, the ferry boats that lead into New York City.

Every great city witnesses the same inrush in the morning and outgo in the evening. Who feeds this army of millions of workers?

Who brings them into the shops, places their tasks before them, and provides the pay envelope at the close of the week?

It is the employer. From the selfish standpoint, if that alone be considered, it is to his interest to make every one of his employes happy and contented, and healthy and surrounded with wholesome, sanitary conditions.

It is to the interest of the worker that the employer should get a fair return for his investment. The service for which the employer pays should be conscientiously rendered. The meddler who would interfere with the employer or the employe is an intruder and an enemy to be cast out.

The ideal of the highest manhood is a life of service for one another. This was the divine injunction. It was not directed to one, but to the masses. It meant the employer and the employe—the employer to have regard for those in his service and the employe no less to have regard for the interests of his employer. Young Rockefeller expressed this sentiment concisely in a recent interview in Colorado, when, as reported, he said:

"The idea that any business can survive with the man who receives the pay envelope working for his own interests solely, and the man who fills the pay envelope doing likewise, both pulling in opposite directions, is a fallacy. It is today as it ever has been. There can be no line of demarcation of interests between the two."

Woe to him who would turn the army of workers from the shop and the factory and send the surging crowd of breadwinners back from independence to the breadline and the "Bundle Day." Woe to him who would take from labor its reward or from capital a fair return on its investment.

We have emergency camps, we are preparing to meet the foreign foe upon the field of battle, if necessary. Societies are being organized to awaken patriotic impulses. Public men are disputing in heated words about our preparedness for war. Cabinet officers are pledging millions for a reconstructed army and navy. On one hand we have the cry for peace and on the other an appeal to prepare for war. But amid all the clamor, we hear not one word of protest warning against the warfare that threatens our industrial peace and prosperity.

On every street corner and in every legislative hall, demagogues are arraying labor against capital. Theorists eager to try experimental legislation are joining in the outcry against accumulated wealth, while our greatest fortunes are being disbursed, at the direction of the ablest and most scientific minds, for the mitigation of destructive disease, the alleviation of suffering, the extension of higher education and the uplifting of men and women.

It is time that we should remember the divine injunction and seek to be "our brother's keeper" and not his enemy, seek a reconciliation of capital and labor on the highest grounds, lifted beyond the reach of demagogues and professional politicians. Unless this can be done, we shall invite the conflict between capital and labor in this country that Macaulay foresaw when in 1857, in his well remembered letter to an American friend, he wrote:

"Either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of the Government with a strong hand or your republic will be as fearfully plundered and laid waste by barbarians in the twentieth century as the Roman Empire was in the fifth; with this difference that the Huns and Vandals who ravaged the Roman Empire came from without, and that your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your own country by your own institutions."

The deep significance of Lord Macaulay's words should not be lost upon the American people at this time of widespread unrest and unreason.

YOUNGSTOWN NEWS.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 18.—All of the steel mills in the Youngstown district will continue to operate to capacity next week. The schedule at the plant of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, Youngstown Iron & Steel company, Carnegie Steel company, Republic Iron & Steel company, Brier Hill Steel company, will all operate on their regular schedule.

MONTCLAIR BABIES HEALTHY.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., March 20.—"Baby week" in Montclair, which came to a close last Saturday, brought out the fact that the number of deaths of babies under one year of age per 1,000 births was 65 in Montclair in the last year, as compared with 123 for New Jersey and 124 for the United States. It is stated that the Montclair death rate has been cut in half since the organization of the local board of health, 22 years ago.

It might be added that Montclair is a fashionable suburb of New York and is populated by people with large incomes.

DENVER TAILORS GAIN.

DENVER, Col., March 20.—A score of custom tailor shops have signed the wage scale of Journeymen Tailors' union No. 6. A nine-hour day and back shops are agreed to, as is increased wages. These gains have been secured by the tailors after prolonged hearings before the state industrial commission, which recently decided that the tailors' demands were just. While the decision is not mandatory, the employers have accepted same. Under the law it would be illegal for the tailors to strike before 30 days' notice to the commission.

MAY CONTEST WEEKLY PAY LAW

SPARTANBURG, S. C., March 20.—Cotton manufacturers in this section of the state are dissatisfied with the weekly pay law, which takes effect July 1. Court action to test its constitutionality is urged by some mill owners. The law, they claim, will "revolutionize" the present system of bookkeeping, and that a weekly pay day does not benefit the workers as they are more liable to spend their wages instead of saving them.

THE GREAT MULTITUDE

Revelation 7:9-17—March 26.

Christians of Three Kinds—"Tares," or False Christians—Saints, a Little Flock of Self-Sacrificers—Average Christians, a Great Multitude—Their Destiny Shown In This Lesson.

*"They shall hunger no more * * * and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."—Verses 16, 17.*

ACCORDING to the Bible those professing the name of Christ are of three general classes. It is not ours to read their hearts; but it is ours, as our Lord said, to know them by their fruits. (Matthew 7:15-20.) Yet even here we might deceive ourselves. The only safe way, therefore, in respect to persons who claim to be Christians, and who live an upright, moral life, is to take them for what they profess to be. One of these classes Jesus styles Tares—"children of the Wicked One"—because their presence in the Church is the result of false teachings, false doctrines, sown by the Adversary. (Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43.) Many tares, we understand, are very talented, very honorable and very wealthy. They really, however, have neither lot nor part with the true Church of Christ, all of whose members are spirit-begotten through the Word of Truth.

In the sense that the consecrated are all called in the one hope of their calling and all begotten of the one Spirit through the one Word of Truth, they are one class, one Church, under one Lord, one faith, one baptism. (Ephesians 4:4, 5.) Their division into two classes is the result of coldness, lukewarmness, fear to perform the sacrifice contracted, fear of death, on the part of some—the "great multitude" referred to in this lesson. The Apostle describes them, saying, "Through fear of death they are all their lifetime subject to boudage."—Heb. 2:15.

Some of this class fear also loss of business or name or fame or social standing. Therefore they compromise with the world and its spirit. They do not deny the Lord. Indeed, many of them would die rather than directly deny Him. Yet by their works they really deny Him—ashamed of the Truth because it is not popular, or of the Lord's brethren because of their humble position or unpopularity.

While this class do not deny the Lord's name, yet they fail to walk closely in His footsteps, and therefore will fail to get the glorious prize of this Gospel Age: namely, glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with Jesus in His Millennial Kingdom, etc. These great blessings are to be granted only to the "more than conquerors"—the Little Flock, to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom—those who "follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth," rejoicing in tribulation, esteeming it an honor to be counted worthy to suffer for Christ, His Word, His Brethren.

Wheat and tares symbolize two classes of Christians.

The Two Classes Contrasted.

The Great Company described in today's Study will be overcomers; else they would have no part in the blessings which the Lord is about to dispense, at His Second Advent, when all of His faithful will be received to the Heavenly Father's House. The Lord will help this class through by forcing those living in the end of this Age to come to a positive decision—to banish their fears and courageously count not their lives dear unto them in the great tribulation with which this Age will end. The fact that when this crisis is reached these will die rather than deny the Lord will constitute them overcomers and secure for them the blessings described in our text.

Nevertheless, there is a still higher place that will be attained by some. As it was not necessary for Jesus to be forced by tribulation either to acknowledge the Heavenly Father and stand for Truth or else die the Second Death, so there is a class in the Church who will have experiences like the Master's. These are styled "more than conquerors" because they not only do the right thing—stand for Truth, righteousness and the Divine arrangement—but they do it as Jesus did—voluntarily, with hearty good will.

Why the "Great Multitude" lose the highest honor.

Here we see the difference between the two classes in the Church, all of whom are spirit-begotten, called with the same High Calling, with similar opportunities for attaining the great prize. The "more than conquerors" will be the Little Flock, the Royal Priesthood, the Bride, the Lamb's Wife.

The Great Company are to be found everywhere. They fail to become members of the Body of Christ, fail to become kings and priests. They will be granted a blessing, however, an inferior position, corresponding to that of the Levites, servants of the priesthood. In the Bible they are represented as the bridesmaids of the Bride, as the Foolish Virgins, and as the Great Company who will praise God that the Marriage of the Lamb is come, even though they will not be of the Bride class.—Psalm 45:14, 15; Matthew 25:1-13; Revelation 19:6-8.

PASS ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL.

TRENTON, N. J., March 20.—The state assembly has passed an anti-injunction bill by a vote of 35 to 12. A similar bill was approved by the last assembly, but failed of passage in the senate.

He saw the officials of the company and then, when in full possession of the facts and the spirit of the contending forces, he saw, that mediation of some kind, in some way, was the only possible solution of the trouble. He realized that the delicacies of his position necessitated that this mediation should come from some force without rather than through his office. Accordingly, he consulted with the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and a little later advised the committee of strikers to go to this body of men and ask them to render what assistance they could in the satisfactory adjustment of the trouble.

The committee accepted his advice and the Chamber of Commerce appointed three of its most able men to confer with the strikers and with the officials of the company and to counsel with them as disinterested business men in regard to details of a settlement.

It is significant of the possibilities open to a strong Chamber of Commerce that this committee of representative men met with the interests involved in almost continuous session for three long days and that it finally brought employer and employee together on common grounds, that eventually settled the strike, and on November 8th put back to work every single striker.

There is no question but that the Manufacturers have been open and they declare they are in the right. They allege the men in their employ have been getting the highest wages but the men have not been giving anything like a fair days work for a fair days pay. The manufacturers have since the present dispute found out that the moulders were capaple of doing almost twice as much work as they were doing and that the secret of why many of the big jobs were being lost to the manufacturers here was because the men were not doing their part. Estimates ran very high and other cities got the work. Pittsburgh manufacturers got what others regarded as expensive and profitless jobs.

The manufacturers feel that the men have treated them very unjustly and they are determined to operate their own plants in their own way, even if they cannot operate them in full at the start. The situation, the employers say, they have well in hand and they are not so badly handicapped.

Some plants are running full others almost full and every manufacturer seems satisfied over the success he has achieved.

The indications are the men will find that new hands have become so efficient that employers will not care to discharge them and eventually the old hands will be left out in the cold. The situation is growing rather serious for those who are anxious to remain in Pittsburgh and particularly those who have their own homes. It is hoped the trouble will end satisfactory to all concerned and that the old hands will be able to adjust their differences without any hardship. The union men are receiving strike benefits of $7.00 per week but this does not go far with a man who has a large family.

NEW ADVANCES IN PRICES

Contracts Booked Since March 1 at Rate of Million Tons a Week.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The steel mills continue to book orders for semi and fully finished products far in excess of capacity. Since March 1 it is estimated that contracts have been taken by all interests at the rate of nearly 1,000,000 tons a week. The Steel Corporation bought more scrap last week and independent companies again placed large orders for pig iron. The merchant blast furnaces sold nearly 400,000 tons of pig iron, making total contracts since March 1, about 800,000 tons, nearly half of which was steel-making iron.

The extraordinary activity brought further advances in prices of $2 to $10 a ton on finished products, the most important appreciation being $5 a ton on steel plate, $2 to $4 a ton on black and $4 to $10 a ton on galvanized pipe. Semi-finished steel also was advanced $4 to $5 a ton.

Heavy Buying for Export.

Export buying with additional foreign inquiries was again prominent. War munition contracts were placed calling for about 100,000 tons of steel bars and forgings and inquiries are still in the market for several million high-explosive shells and 60,000,000 cartridges. One lot of 30,000,000 cartridges for Great Britain was placed with a New England manufacturer. Sales of billets were made for export to Italy and 100,000 tons are wanted for Australia Great Britain and France are asking for 140,000 tons of barbed wire and wire rods. Sales of 15,000 tons of Bessemer pig iron were made for shipment to Italy and France.

Active Structural Buying.

Structural steel work was active throughout the country. The orders taken by the fabricating shops called for 40,000 tons of steel shapes, of which 7,500 tons were for the railroads. Manufacturing plants continue to make large purchases of steel for plant extensions. Among the largest contracts closed were 4,500 tons for the Donner Steel Company mill at Buffalo, 2,500 tons for the Hubbard factory at Pittsburgh, 5,000 tons for the Forest City Hotel at Cleveland, 2,100 tons for the Toledo Glass Company plant at Charleston, W. Va., and 2,200 tons for another loft building in New York city.

The railroads ordered 130,000 tons rails, 3,395 cars and 26 locomotives. Car builders have inquiries for 36,000 more cars, of which 28,000 are for export. Locomotive shops are asked to bid on 290 engines and eight rail mills have inquiries for approximtaely 100,000 tons of standard sections.

HIGH DUES ARE NECESSARY.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 20.—Writing in the Carpenter on the necessity for high dues, Secretary Frank Duffy, of the Brotherhood of Carpenters says:

"As a business institution advances and gains in power and influence more money is required for running expenses, and that money, as a rule, is freely forthcoming on the principle that the larger the investment the greater will be the net returns. With labor unions, however, that principle does not seem to apply, as least if we are to judge by the attitude of many union men.

"To their minds, the larger and more influential a labor organization becomes the lower should the running expenses be. They combat every attempt to increase the per capita tax on the assumption that such is not really necessary and that an organization of, for instance, 250,000 members, can be run on the same monetary basis as a union of 50,000 or less.

"On such a basis they expect benefits entirely out of proportion to the per capita tax paid. They expect strikes to be financed, elaborate organizing campaigns to be undertaken and the business of the organization conducted on the most approved up-to-date lines. Some there are who expect much more, but they never stop to figure out by what means such a financial miracle can be performed with the resources available.

"These members do not realize that the spread of democracy and the demands of the industrial system of today have plaved greater responsibilities upon the labor unions and exact more from them. The unions have to meet conditions that were unheard of in the past, adminstration expenses are much greater and strikes cost thousands where hundreds sufficed in former years."

UNIONISTS CALL ON PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—President Gompers, Vice President O'Connell, Treasurer Lennon and Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor urged President Wilson last Monday to put a stop to the competition of enlisted musicians of the government with civilian musicians. It was shown that the government furnishes uniforms and instruments to these enlisted men and pays them good salaries, and that they then enter into competition with civilian musicians, who walk the streets while the government musicans play in hotels and elsewhere at a lower rate than the private citizen can afford.

The unionists also asked the President to favor the Smith-Hughes bill for industrial education and vocational training.

President Wilson was presented copies of a resolution passed by the A. F. of L. convention against ship subsidies, which take public moneys for the purpose of promoting private gain. The resolution favors the creation of an American merchant marine to be manned by American seamen under conditions that will make them an effective naval reserve.

NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE

ESTABLISHED 1872—No. 18. PITTSBURGH, PA., THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1916. FIVE CENTS A COPY.

New York Public Library 476 Fifth Ave

BATTLE OF BALLOTS NOW ON--INTEREST AND ENTHUSIASM INTENSE.

National Labor Tribune to Give Away Automobiles, Pianos, Diamonds, Etc., Free on May 6th--Big Special Vote Offer Announced To-day---Turn Your Spare Time Into Gold.

Are you going to try?

Are you going after your share of the $3,100.00 in big free prizes, ranging from Automobiles down to pianos, diamonds, kitchen cabinets, merchandise, orders, etc., which the National Labor Tribune is going to give away through its big new contest.

These are the good things of life, the means with which to make life worth while, and yet the nearest, the average man ever approaches to them is just "wishing." Seventy-five per cent of the people live and die without ever having tasted of the real joys of living.

But today the National Labor Tribune, through it's big contest offers you a Golden Opportunity to win a share of the $1,100.00 in prizes absolutely free. It need not cost you one penny. The contest is open to all the friends and readers of the Tribune—all you need to do is clip out the nomination blank in this issue and send it in at once.

The candidate who secures the most votes will receive the eight cylinder Regal touring car. The other prizes will be awarded to the candidates who make the next best vote scores. It is easy to secure votes. In the first place each issue of the National Labor Tribune contains a coupon which is good for ten free votes. Each candidate can collect as many of these as possible and send them in to be credited. The second way to get votes is by means of subscriptions. Each new or renewal subscriptions counts for a certain number of votes. The number of votes which you receive with each subscriptions is large, and by interesting all your friends and neighbors, you can secure thousands upon thousands of votes in this manner.

Don't hold your subscriptions back, but send them in as fast as you secure them—at least once each week. This will help you to get ahead, for each new paper we start will contain the ten free vote coupon and this will mean just that many more votes for you.

BIG EXTRA VOTE OFFER.

In order to make the campaign more interesting and to encourage each candidate to put forth his or her best efforts early in the race when the votes come easiest, the Contest Manager has made another special vote offer to open tomorrow and continue two weeks, closing Thursday, April 13th. The offer in detail is as follows:

With each club of $14.00 in subscriptions turned in during this time, a special vote certificate for 50,000 votes will be given. The 50,000 votes will be in addition to the regular votes on each subscription. The offer is unlimited except as to time. Each candidate is entitled to turn in just as many clubs as he or she can secure and receive the special vote certificate with each club. The subscriptions can be old or new, for any length of time.

TO BE NO LOSERS.

One of the most attractive features of the campaign is the fact that there can be no losers. Everyone who enters and takes an active part in the campaign will receive a prize or a cash salary. Those who fail to win prizes will be paid cash for their work. This means that you cannot fail to profit by the contest no matter how much—or how little—effort you put forth. It's simply up to you to decide just what your reward shall be—once you have filled out the nomination blank and entered the list.

NO LARGER OFFERS LATER.

The contest Manager has been asked by many of the candidates if, later on in the campaign, there would not be large offers made on subscriptions. Absolutely—No. The offer now in force will not be repeated, and never again will you be able to secure so many votes for your subscriptions as now. And it is the votes which will determine the winners of the Automobiles, Diamonds, etc. The moral is plain—WORK NOW, IF YOU INTEND TO WORK AT ALL.

OUR PURPOSE.

Several times the question of how the National Labor Tribune can afford to give away more than three thousand dollars in prizes, has been asked by interested parties. The National Labor Tribune is simply giving to it's friends and readers the money that would otherwise be paid out to salesmen and solicitors for subscription work during the coming year. The Management realizes that, to secure subscriptions costs a great deal of good, hard money and it prefers that you—who are our friends—should have the benefit, rather than some outsider. The object of the contest is to secure subscriptions, at the same time it affords you a splendid opportunity to profit nonsomely by a little spare-time effort.

WINNING A PRIZE.

The National Labor Tribune has provided you with the chance to make as much in a few weeks as many hard workers make in years—and whether or not you take advantage of it depends altogether on you—if you are a "live one" you will act at once. The prizes are ready and waiting. Your energy and ability are the tools with which you will work. These qualities are yours as much as anyone else. You have the tools, and the winning of a prize is in your hands.

LAYING DOWN.

There are quite a number of candidates whose nominations have been entered by their friends, but who are failing to show their ability to "make Good". There is no question but that they could if they would, for the contest manager believes that no "dead ones" would be nominated by their friends as prospective winners of the big awards. Of course it may be possible that some of the nominations were made by people who mis-judged their candidate or didn't know them very well. There is the story of the little girl who was asked by her teacher at school to define a gentleman, and who replied "A gentleman is a man one doesn't know very well". And possibly the ability of some of the nominees was over-rated by people who honestly thought they had the ability, but the contest manager prefers to believe that in most instances it's just a case of "laying down" and waiting for the other fellow to "start something". If you are one of these, don't put off working any longer or you may not be able to come out a winner in the end. Do you remember the story of the mule and the ox?

Once upon a time a mule and an ox were complaining to each other about their hard days work. The ox suggested that the next day they play off sick and thus escape work.

In other words they wanted to "lay down" on their jobs.

The mule was stubborn and he said "I may be a fool, but I get good food and good care. I guess I'll just keep right along with my job".

Next day the ox played off sick, and the farmer gave him a fine hot bran mash, some clean bedding and fresh water. The ox loafed and rested and fed himself and enjoyed his idle day very much.

At night when the tired mule came in, the ox asked him how he had passed the day.

The mule replied that he had worked hard but that he had a fine appetite, and was looking forward to a good nights rest.

The ox asked if the boss had missed him, or expressed any regrets at his absence.

"No, said the mule, the boss attended to his work as usual".

"Fine business, said the ox, I'll try it again tomorrow, and you might as well try it too".

"No," said the mule, "I'm just stubborn enough to do my work as long as I am well".

The next day the ox worked the trick again and got the same nice bran mash and clean bedding.

When the mule came in at night the ox asked if the boss had said anything about him.

"No he didn't say anything to me but he had a long talk with the butcher on the way home".

The moral is plain. The four-flusher always gets his just dues. The man who lays down on the job never gets anywhere in life. The man who doesn't heed the knock of opportunity may never again have the chance.

Of course it's entirely up to you as to whether or not you secure a share of the big awards. With the Labor-Tribune your work is optional. But we would like to have you with us, your friends would be glad to see you win, and there is no reason why you should not come out with the very highest honors of the campaign.

WORK.

Pitch in right now. Don't put off

MACHINISTS END STRIKE MEN RETURN TO WORK

Business Disrupted for Time but Manufacturers Succeed in Winning Men Back to Work.

Hartford, Conn., March 29.—The machinists here have given up the strike and all strikes which have been in progress in this city with the exception of that at the Capewell Horse Nail Company plant, have been declared off by the Executive Board of Capital City Lodge No. 354, at its meeting in the Executive Office of the Hartford Central Labor Union. The action was the failure of the machinists to force their demands and the inability of the local to control the members under the circumstances but the strike was not ended without first being sanctioned by the General Executive Board of the International Association of Machinists, who advised the local organization to act according to its best judgment.

The strike practically disrupted business conditions and crippled the plants for a time but eventually they secured enough men and this finally resulted in the sudden termination of the struggle. The loss to the workmen was very large and while the manufacturers were for a time handicapped they later succeeded in securing enough men to take the places of the old hands. The success of the manufacturers in withholding the men from securing their demands will effect the entire New England states and the outlook is that no further trouble will be made by men in other cities although it was generally expected that if the men here won similar demands would be made in other industrial centres.

The general demand which was looked forward to has been given an unfortunate set back and there is but little hope of any recovery this year. The employers are of the opinion that the strike spirit for a time has been discouraged and that from now on work will continue and as soon as conditions justify advances will voluntarily follow.

BREWERS' TRIALS WILL START MAY 1

The next move in the prosecution of 72 brewing companies which are accused of violating the Federal corrupt practices act will be the jury trials which will start on Monday, May 1.

Judge W. H. S. Thomson's refusal at Erie to meet lawyers for indicted brewing companies to consider smaller fines in return for wholesale pleas of guilty pleased Government officials, who believe that the breaking up of organized activities in politics by the breweries is now only a question of time.

Reports continue to come to District Attorney Humes of dissensions among the Brewery Association, and several of the smaller companies have offered to throw open their books and help the Government prosecute the Brewery Associations and their officials.

For new prosecutions against leaders in the "State liquor ring," the Government has laid a good base. Officials of the State and national associations have refused to testify before the Federal Grand Jury on the plea that to do so might involve them in criminal proceedings. This admission the Government considers the most valuable result of the investigation.

WILLARD URGES PUBLIC HEARING ON WAGE DEMAND.

Interstate Commerce Commission That Fixes Rates Ought to Have All the Facts.

Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio, believes that some public body logically the Interstate Commerce Commission, should make a thorough investigation in the public interest of the fairness of the demand of railroad trainmen for a new wage schedule. He says:

The public interested in the right of train crews to fair, even good rates of pay, and suitable working conditions. If it should develop on investigation that these men are not well paid, considering the nature and circumstances of their service, they should have their wages increased.

If it should then appear that the railroads are unable to add such increases to their expenses and still render the kind of service that the public demands, while returning to owners of the capital invested the amount of profit necessary to attract additional capital the railroads require to enable them to take care of the country's expanding business, then they should be allowed to increase their rates and charges.

PUBLIC MUST HAVE THE FACTS.

If, on the other hand, it should appear that engineers, conductors, firemen and trainmen are already fairly paid, then there is no reason why the public should be compelled to pay higher rates, simply because these four large organizations have made, or expect to make, most unusual demands.

Officers of the brotherhoods have expressed their dissatisfaction with the results of arbitration in the past and have intimated that they might refuse to arbitrate in this case. If they should do that, it appears to me that a Congressional investigation or a thorough inquiry by the Interstate Commerce Commission, acting under a mandate from Congress, might become inevitable.

The carriers are not permitted to raise the rate they charge the public unless permission to do so is first obtained from the proper regulating agency. Under proper regulation, also in the interest of the public, no body of men, large or small, should be permitted to add millions to the operating cost of railroads unless permitted to do so after a full hearing of all the facts.

Logically, this hearing should take place before the same body that fixes the rates and other conditions of service—that is to say, the Interstate Commerce Commission.

HIGHER WAGES DEMAND OF MEN NOT SHORTER DAY.

Leader of Employes Explains the Meaning of Proposed Change in the Basic Day.

The eight-hour industrial work-day movement and the railroad trainmen's demand for an eight-hour pay-day are two very different things.

That the men are asking for higher wages and not for shorter hours is frankly stated by leaders of the unions. Val Fitzpatrick, legislative agent and vice president of the trainmen, in an article in the official organ, "Railroad Trainmen," calls a spade a spade. He says:

There appears to be some difference of opinion as to what the proposal for an eight-hour basic work day involves. Therefore, it may be reasonable to say there is quite a difference between an eight-hour work day and an eight-hour basic work day.

The first contemplates that eight hours shall be the maximum working time, and as a rule where the eight-hour work day obtains through contract relations between employer and employe, it is the constant endeavor to prevent working overtime except in cases of necessity.

It appears that some of the men in the train service are of the opinion that this is the proposal of the organizations. However, this is not the case.

The eight hour basic work day contemplates that eight hours shall be the basis for a day's work and any time in excess thereof shall be paid for as overtime, consequently under such a provision there is no limit to the hours worked. The latter system is the one proposed by the train service brotherhoods.

The employes know the unusual conditions surrounding railroad work, and the impossibility of any standard length of work day. Their demand for a new wage scale is based on their knowledge of this situation, and, as Mr. Fitzpatrick says, there is no idea that an eight-hour basic day means an eight-hour work day.

Organizers Move for Military Exemption

Seamen Also Desire Exemption from Conscription.

LONDON, March 16.

In connection with the big call for men for the British army practically every single man between the ages of 18 and 41 is now regarded as being in the army whether he has attested or not. Exemptions are given, however, in certain cases. Certain trades are wholly exempt and are called certified industries, the men being termed "starred" men. They are asked not to enlist and, in fact, are not allowed to. These men are therefore indispensable men in indispensable industries. I note now that the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress is being asked by the labor unions to take steps to arrange for the starring of a certain number of trade union officials in each district in order that labor organization may be maintained. It is feared that the calling up in a hurry all the single men who are well known labor organisers may easily create immense confusion in the organized labor services. No doubt the Government will give a kindly ear to this recommendation.

Some misunderstanding appears to exist as to the position of merchant seamen in connection with military service. The Board of Trade and the Admiralty consider that the vital importance of maintaining British merchant shipping at its maximum effectiveness makes it essential that no merchant service officers or seamen shall leave their profession to join the army. A notice to this effect was issued by the president of the Board of Trade and Lord Derby in November last, and still holds good. Any further depletion of the number of available merchant seamen would seriously affect the manning of merchant ships required for the needs of the country. Officers and men of the mercantile marine (except stewards in passenger steamers) are in the list of certified (that is, exempt from military service) occupations issued under the Military Service Act, and are therefore entitled to exemption from the act. Special difficulties exist in the case of seamen in the matter of appearance before a local tribunal and proof of title to exemption, and arrangements are now under consideration to do away with the necessity for such appearance. In no circumstances can officers and seamen of the mercantile marine be regarded as available for military service.

The secretaries of British trade unions have had forwarded to them a communication from the Board of Trade stating that the repayments of unemployed benefits which they have hitherto received from the Treasury in relief of their financial liabilities to their members under the National Insurance Act must cease at the end of May next. The letter points out the urgent necessity for economizing, and refers to the fact that there is practically no unemployment at present among trade union members. The suspension of the grants will, it is believed, continue until the necessity for them again arises.

About a month ago the Government Committee on Production heard evidence in Glasgow in support of applications for increase in wakes by the shipbuilding and engineering federated trades, the ironmoulders of Scotland, and other workmen employed in Central Scotland. The men in the Falkirk area, including blacksmiths, hammermen, pattern makers, grate fitters, and general laborers, numbering 5,000 or 6,000, received intimation on March 6th that they had been conceded 6 cents a day. This, in addition to the 12 cents granted recently makes an advance of $1.12 weekly.

The British Board of Agriculture scheme for organizing women workers to replace men on the land is making good progress. An important factor in expediting the movement has been the Women's County Committees appointed by Lord Selborne to impress on women the urgency of the question and to prepare a register of those willing to help. The women organizers have been indefatigable in their efforts, which have met with an excellent response. But larger numbers of volunteers are still needed, not only to fill places already vacant, but to release additional men of military age. The War Office mean to press their claim on every man that can be spared, and, encouraged by the success of those women who have emerg-

The threatened nation wide strike of railroad train employes involves two demands:

1. Ten hours' pay for, eight hours' or less work.

2. Pay for overtime at one and one-half times the new higher hourly rate.

THE BIG RAILWAY STRIKE NOW READY FOR ACTION

The "Aristocracy" of the Industrial World and the "Predatory" Rich of of the Labor Movement Not Supported by Great Labor Leaders.

An industrial and commercial paralysis is threatened by a small portion of the railway employes should the railroads effected refuse to grant the demands which in the aggregate mean to the railways $100,000,000. The new demands will be submitted this Thursday and a reply in writing is expected by April 29.

The right to increase the prices in freight rates is denied the railroads and the increased expenses can only be met by deducting $100,000,000 from $300,000,000 earnings on an investment of $7,000,000,000.

These vast fortunes show in earnings to their 660,000 stockholders only about 4 per cent and the employes making the demands are the locomotive engineers, the firemen, the conductors and the trainmen who represent alltold about one fifth of the employes of the railroads involved.

This is the aggregation whom S. E. Haberling, President of the Switchmen's union most viciously assailed in his letter to the Tribune and these are the men who are now making unreasonable demands while President Haberling denounces them in that short and ugly term "scabs" and spares no words in branding them as an element ever ready to take their neighbor's job.

Surely the public will have no sympathy with a species of trades unionists that has been resoluted against by the Central Trades body of Pittsburgh, Kansas City and other cities and unless they can clear their skirts of the charges now lodged against them there is little hope of the American Federation of Labor with all its sympathetic tendencies having anything to do with the "aristocracy" of labor; for surely this combination has well earned for its membership in labor circles, the cognomen so often applied to the millionaire plunderers "the predatory rich."

In order that the readers of the Tribune may familiarize themselves with the questions at issue many articles of interest bearing directly upon the questions involved will from time to time appear. In this way the reader may determine for himself the justice or injustice of the demands and a close observance of the facts will enable the average man to secure a wealth of information regarding the operation of the American railways with the monumental sums invested and the ability of the roads to earn for their investors sufficient interest to justify money being placed in railway securities.

In its statement to the stockholders for the eastern railroads the Conference Committee of Managers says:

> The 660,000 owners of the railroads, who have put 7,000 millions of their savings in the business, receive on their investment about $300,000,000 a year—or 4 per cent.
> The railroad train men on every road in the country are demanding an increase in wages that will add not far from $100,000,000 to the payroll.

These employes, the highest paid in the service are less than one-fifth of the army of railroad workers. They have taken the cream of the big wage advances of the past few years.

If they force their demands on the carriers, by threat of a nation-wide strike, surely the wages of the other four-fifths would require adjustment. Manifestly the resources of the railroads would not permit granting all employes the same proportionate increase.

The demand of the train men is that in all but passenger service they shall get their present 10 hours pay for 8 hours or less service, thus increasing the hourly rate by 25 per cent; and for overtime, one and a half times the new higher hourly rate, an advance of 87½ per cent.

It is not a demand for an eight-hour work-day. It is frankly a demand for higher wages on an eight-hour payday basis—the eight-hour pay to be a minimum, but the equivalent of the present ten hours pay.

Not only are these train employes not asking for an eight-hour workday, but they would bitterly oppose any effort of the railroads to make them work eight hours a day—no more and no less.

Considering the high wages and the favorable working conditions enjoyed by the train men, as compared with other railroad men and workers in other industries, their demand for still higher wages is not a fair one. Nor is it an honest statement to put this demand for higher wages in the form of a plea for an eight-hour day.

APPRECIATIONS.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 23

I am renewing my subscription to the National Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. I appreciate your paper especially because of the sermons by Pastor C. T. Russell. The large print and wide columns make your paper very attractive and easy to read. I trust this contest may bring you many new subscribers. I rejoice in the spread of the Truth through your paper.

Assuring you of any support possible and desirious of serving His Cause.

Sincerely yours,
ADA G. JUDSON.

SHARTLESVILLE, Pa., Mar. 10.

I have renewed my subscription through the Bible Society.

The manner in which you have begun sometime ago of publishing the sermons, and other religious features commends itself very highly to me, and I think they are made most attractive to all.

The present management is doing remarkably well in all these respects, and it delights one to have such a paper in the house.

Yours Respectfully,
IRWIN D. RIEGEL.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 22.

I want to thank the dear unknown Friend who is sending me the Tribune. I appreciate it very much. May our dear Heavenly Father bless and keep them to the end.

Gratefully,
MISS DORA HARRIS.

OTTAWA, Kansas, March 23.

Your most valuable paper has been a most welcome weekly visitor to me for sometime. I enjoyed its contents very much, especially the religious features. I greatly regret that I find it necessary to ask you to discontinue my subscription which expired Mar. 12, as I am in my 84th year and totally blind; so please stop sending it, wishing you continued success in the stand you have taken for Truth and righteousness. I remain.

Respectfully,
PHILIP ADAMS.

Rocky Mount, N. C., March 20.

I wish to tell you how I enjoy the large type now used in Pastor Russell's sermons. The last one of March 2nd, was splendid. I thank you so much for standing firm for righteousness and Truth, continuing printing the sermons and Sunday School lessons, etc. I've enjoyed Bro. Nelson's essays very much. They are very instructive. Trust no more such letters as the Driffs letter will ever be printed. He surely was blind to what is just and truth. I am enclosing a program of our one-day convention and am hoping you will give room in your good paper as an invitation to any friend who sees it and can, to come and share our feast with us. Wishing you continued success and that God may richly reward you for causing so many to get the good tidings of Truth. Trusting you will favor us by printing our program in next week's paper.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. M. E. WALLACE.

I cannot say how much I appreciate the way in which you print the sermons of our dear Pastor; also the many beautiful articles on different subjects. Thanking you for the regular delivery of the paper hitherto and wishing you every success in your endeavor to spread a nowledge of the Truth. I have been a subscriber for six or seven years, I am.

Yours very sincerely,
MRS. TOSH.

EAST WILTON, Maine, March 23.

I am renewing my subscription to your paper through The Watch Tower.

Am much pleased with the good print you are using for Pastor Russell's sermons as I loan and give my paper to several who can not read fine print. I consider the sermons worth many times the price of the paper and also appreciate very much the articles by Bro. Nelson and the letters from the friends.

"We are living we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time
In an age on ages telling
To be living is sublime."

"The hearts of men are failing them for fear of things coming on the earth."

Bible Students know that the trouble now upon the world will burn up all error and cause Truth to prevail. The time is at hand when the groaning creation is to receive the blessing which God promised, long years ago.

"God is not slack concerning this promise."

"He will bless all families of earth."

Yours Sincerely,
MRS. A. J. R. HOYT.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 23.

I have been a subscriber to your paper for several years, and enjoy reading it; especially the sermons by Pastor Russel. Trusting you will continue to publish them.

Hoping your paper may be blessed in its Harvest work, I am,

Yours truly,
GRACE DUNN.

WHERE IS FATHER ADAM?

In regards to the common belief and doctrine of men that only the body of a person is buried, and that the soul doesn't die, but departs from the body at death, and wings its flight immediately to a heaven of bliss or a hell of torture, (not waiting for the day of resurrection and judgment which the Bible teaches). I say in regards to this the following discussion took place between a sectarian or member of one of the creeds of nominal Christendom, (whom we will call, "Bro. A"), and a member of the I. B. S. A., (whom we will call "Bro. B").

Bro. B. said, "Now there was Adam, where do you suppose he went when he died?"

Bro. A replied, "Adam done nothing so very hineous, and even after he was driven out of the Garden of Eden, he seemed to have a longing for fellowship with God; so I presume Adam went to heaven when he died."

Bro. B said, "But Adam was the one who got all the rest of us into trouble by his disobedience; because we read in Rom. 5:18, 'By the offense of one (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation,' and according to your view this means that Adam's sin was the thing or cause that started millions of his race, on the downward road of destruction which terminates in an eternal hell of misery and torture, and yet Adam, the one who by his act of disobedience started them there, (see Rom. 5:19), has gone to heaven."

Bro. A replied, "That's so, too. I had never thought of that before. Surely Adam could not have gone to heaven after being the fault of all that; my statement was incorrect; Adam must have gone to hell when he died."

Bro. B said, "But see again what that involves you in. Because if Adam's small act of disobedience, by merely eating some of the forbidden fruit, has sent him to such an awful eternity, what hope could they have had who done far worse things than Adam ever did, and died before God sent a Redeemer to abolish death and (open the way or) bring life and immortality to light through the gospel? (2 Tim. 1:10)."

Bro. A replied, "That's so, that's so. My first answer was correct. Adam surely went to heaven."

(Dear reader the poor blind brother didn't catch even the thought that Adam could not have gone to heaven before Christ opened the way!)

Bro. B said, "If that's true, then it involves you in a still greater absurdity than before; because if Adam had been obedient he would not have had to leave his perfect paradise in the Garden of Eden and die; but he would have lived and dwelt on the earth forever, because to get to heaven we (the saints) must all die like men of the world, and fall like our Prince Jesus (Psa. 82:7), because, 'flesh and blood cannot inherit (or enter) the kingdom of God.' But now that Adam disobeyed and died, he has (according to your view) something far better than even he would ever have had if he had not sinned."

(Dear reader does not this sound encouraging to us to be sinners, because we all are wanting the best, or something better at least?)

Bro. A in his confusion trying to correct himself, again replied, "That couldn't be; that would be inconsistent; Adam must have gone to hell, that is the correct thought."

Bro. B said, "But see what that leads to. It is thousands of years since Adam died, while today men are dying who have far more the spirit of rebellion in their hearts than Adam ever had; and yet they will have so many thousands of years less of infernal agony than Adam who committed such a small sin in comparison. Would that be 'just'? Would our God whom the Bible says is a kind, 'just,' loving and merciful God, do such an awful thing as to so terribly punish Adam, for his little act of sin, so many more thousand years, than He will those far more rebellious ones?"

Bro. A replied, "You've got me all confused so that I don't know where I'm at, and I don't know where Adam's at either."

Bro. B said, "So are all confused who believe satan's lie, (Gen. 3:4; Jno. 8:44), that the soul of man is immortal, indestructable, and does not die. It is better and far more enlightening for a man to believe what God says.

"Search His Word, and study to rightly divide it (2 Tim. 2:15), for it may be that God (if He sees that you are in earnest) will remove the veil of ignorance and confusion from your eyes of understanding; because it is Satan—the deceiving 'prince,' and lying 'god of this (evil) world' who is blinding the minds of them that believe not—the true message of Jesus, that 'no man has ascended up to heaven' and that 'all that are in the graves shall hear His voice and shall come forth'—at the appointed hour (Jno. 3:13 and 5:28, 29), lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them, (2 Cor. 4:4) and he (satan) could deceive them no longer, (see 2 Cor. 11:3, 4, 13 to 15). For proof that the soul is not immortal and can die or be destroyed—See Rom. 6:23; Ezek. 18:4; Mat. 10:28, and be convinced that all who would have immortality must seek for it, put it on, and be clothed with it—see Rom. 2:7; 1 Cor. 15:53 to 55; and 2 Cor. 5:1 to 4.

"To prove that formerly God only, was immortal, and that He alone had immortality—see 1 Tim. 1:17 and 6:13 to 16, and that later He gave immortality to His Son Jesus and also made Him immortal—see Jno. 6:26, also 3:33 to 36. By these two latter passages with Rom. 2:7 and 1 Cor. 15:53, we have ample proof that God intends, also, to give (at sometime) immortality to the Bride of Christ—His true followers the more than overcomers—the 'little flock,' so that they too will have life within themselves the same as the Bridegroom; but none others shall have immortality."

"WHY PERSECUTEST THOU ME?"

Acts 9:1-11, 17, 19—April 2.

A Notable Illustration of Zeal Without Knowledge—Reproved From on High. Saul's Deep Contrition an Evidence of Genuine Repentance—His Eyes of Understanding Opened—St. Paul's "Thorn In the Flesh."

"Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief."—1 Timothy 1:15, R. V.

WHOEVER thinks of Saul's transformation from an enemy of Christ and His Church to a friend and zealous servant as an experience on a par with the conversion of sinners is greatly in error. Such conduct as is related in today's Study is not the conduct of sinners, enemies of God. The account of Saul's enlightenment in the Gospel is the account of a most noble character which commands the respect of every class in every time.

Saul of Tarsus was a loyal, true member of the favored nation of Israel, thoroughly consecrated to God and serving the Lord to the best of his ability, but blinded for the time by prejudice and misconception. The Master chose the original Twelve because they were Israelites indeed; and He gave them the instruction needed for His service. This He did also for Saul, though in a striking manner. The word conversion signifies a turning about in an opposite direction. But Saul was already going in the right direction—a whole-hearted service of God—although his efforts were being expended upon the wrong thing.

Apparently the circumstances connected with the stoning of St. Stephen only incited Saul to greater energy in stamping out what he believed to be heresy. The Jewish priesthood was granted considerable power under the Roman government. They could authorize arrests and imprisonments for infractions of their religious rules and regulations. Saul, exercising the same respect to law and authority that subsequently marked his dealings and teachings as a Christian, went about the persecution of Christians in the manner recognized as legal—under the sanction of the highest religious tribunal. Let us remember that nearly all persecutions have been sanctioned by some human law, and regulate ourselves according to the Divine code.

"Saul, Saul, Why Persecutest thou Me?"

Misdirected Zeal Reproved.

Today's Study is St. Luke's account of the opening of the eyes of Saul's understanding, and was doubtless received from the Apostle Paul himself, who gave two other accounts. (See Acts 22:6-11; 26:12-20.) These accounts are in practical agreement, and show only such variations as might be reasonably expected, considering the fact that they were delivered under different conditions. Had they been exactly alike, there would have been just cause for supposing a special preparation of the text with this harmony in view.

Saul's feelings, as he heard from the Lord of Glory a reproof of his misdirected zeal, can be better imagined than described. Nevertheless, we can but admire the promptness with which he at once ceased his opposition and placed himself on the side of Him whose Cause he had so recently persecuted. How deep a hold the matter took upon his mind may be judged from the fact that he neither ate nor drank for three days. He could not think lightly of his blinded course. Deep contrition is always good evidence of genuine repentance of wrong.

We may reasonably suppose that those three days of blindness and fasting were also days of prayer and reflection, during which he diligently compared the testimony of the Law and the Prophets with what he knew of the Nazarene and His teachings. His natural sight had been destroyed, but his mental vision had been opened. Now he saw matters in a new and wonderful light.

Ananias hearing the Lord's voice.

Although Saul's sight was miraculously restored, yet we are not informed that his eyes were made whole. It has been surmised, and we think with good reason, that the continued weakness of his eyes constituted what he terms "a thorn in the flesh." (2 Corinthians 12:7-10.) Although he was granted many gifts of the Spirit, and exercised the gift of healing upon many others, yet the Lord did not relieve him from his own weakness in this respect.

We are inclined to regard the Apostle Paul as in some sense of the word a type of the nation of Israel. Amongst the Jews are many who seem to be Israelites indeed, merely blinded as both the Prophet and the Apostle have described. (Romans 11:7-12.) That nation whose blinding took place during the Fifth Thousand-year Day, and which has been blinded throughout the entire Sixth Thousand-year Day, will have its eyes opened on the Seventh Thousand-year Day—the Millennial Age. When the due time shall have fully come, the Lord will send some Ananias, whose touch under Divine favor shall bring sight.

Appreciations.

I am renewing my subscription to the "Tribune" through the "Watch Tower." We have taken the Tribune a long time. Subscribed for it soon after you began publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, also was taking several other papers with our Pastor's sermon; but the Tribune we like best on account of the space given to the sermons, the good large type and the many other religious features published. I discontinued all the papers but the Tribune two years ago (when my husband passed beyond) feeling I could not afford to take all the papers. I would feel lost without the Tribune as it has been a welcome visitor in our home for many years.

I trust you will continue to publish the good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people in the near future.

Trusting you will continue the good work and that you are receiving spiritual benefit from the truth you publish. Wishing you success.

Yours for Truth,
MRS. A. E. TAYLOR.

PLAZA, Wash., March 23.

I am renewing my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower.

We so enjoy the Truth features of The Tribune, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and the Sunday School Lessons, and hope you will continue to publish them.

May God richly bless you for your part in helping to spread the glad tidings.

Yours truly,
S. D. LIMLEY.

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, March 22.

I am so glad, dear Editor, for the publishing of that sermon and deeply appreciative of the space you gave in giving it so much space. Were it possible I would give my little all to sending fairly hundreds of your paper to those who are hungry for Truth but know not where to find it. I trust the precious truths contained therein have filled your hearts with gladness and helped you to fully know,—"God works in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform," and will in His own way and "due time" fulfill His promises and cause all mankind to know "that not one jot or tittle" has failed but that "He will accomplish the thing whereunto He sent it."—Truly, truly we gaze everywhere about us and behold the prophesy, "There shall be a famine that day in the land, I say not a famine for bread and water, but for the hearing of the Word of the Lord." Could it be stated plainer, this lack of the world today? No.

May you continue to give us the precious messages which Pastor Russell so ably and courageously and honestly and faithfully gives to those who have the ear of understanding for God's ways and plans and character.

We know God will richly reward your efforts to "feed" His "fainting" "weary" saints. May God bless you is my sincere prayer.

My prayer goes up daily for all God's consecrated children. May they trust more to Him and less to self.

With Christian love,

The Boston Transcript in a self-conscious moment pauses to wonder at the unsophisticated curiosity of Bostonians. A semaphore to regulate traffic has been erected in the heart of the city. It was designed to facilitate the orderly movement of vehicles and pedestrians, but so great were the throngs that stopped to gaze at it the police had to be summoned to clear the congested pavements, says Chicago Evening Post. The Transcript considers it worthy of serious comment that "so simple an innovation, known for years in other cities, could have the power to interest Bostonians so much." But, after all, is it not possible that Bostonians, in spite of all sedulously cultivated illusions, are much like other folks?

An egg of the extinct aepyronis sells for $1,000, but if a surviving colony of rocs, dodoes or great auks should be discovered in some out-of-the-way corner of the world, their eggs would not be worth a cent a thousand. Will the chicken ever become extinct and the lay of the last hen a treasure of the museums?

The New York World asserts that for the quarter ended September 30 there was an increase of 9,598 in the population of Ireland, the birth rate of the island being 20.8 and the death rate only 13.4. Surely there has been a remarkable improvement in Ireland's economic condition if, despite the war-racked state of Europe, its population is substantially increasing for the first time in 70 years.

WONDERFUL CALLING TO THE DIVINE NATURE.

"THE GLORY THAT EXCELLETH" TO BE THE REWARD OF THE FAITHFUL CHURCH.

Promises Exceeding Precious—Not Many Great or Wise in Worldly Things Believe—Chiefly The Poor and Humble—These Humble Ones The Truly Wise—God's Truth Gives True Learning and the Spirit of a Sound Mind—Terms of High Calling Definite—Glorious End of the Heavenly Way.

Roanoke, Va., March 20.—Pastor Russell delivered a very impressive address here today, from the text: "God hath given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4.) He said in part:

God designs that the elect Church, the Royal Priesthood, shall, when completed and glorified, occupy positions of great honor and responsibility. They will be kings, judges, priests, throughout the thousand years of Christ's Reign. Moreover, they are to be honored associates of the Lord Jesus throughout eternity, spirit beings of the very highest order—the Divine. We trust that many of those who now hear us are of this class. Do we realize what all this means, dear brethren? Unless we have thoroughly tested characters we shall not be fit for so great an exhaltation. If we have any sympathy for sin, it would be unsafe to trust us; for sin might spread and make us in time emissaries of evil, whose influence would be disastrous. God is looking for those only who truly love righteousness and hate iniquity. He does not expect perfect works in an imperfect body; but He seeks a perfect heart and an overcoming spirit, with as nearly perfect conduct as we are capable of by His grace.

If those of this class do anything wrong, if they are overtaken in a fault, they are very repentant. They have a feeling of sorrow and regret, and go quickly to the Throne of Grace for forgiveness and cleansing. This shows that the heart is fully loyal. So the Lord tells us for our information and consolation that He judges us not according to our unavoidable weakness, but according to our hearts and our earnest endeavors. Surely in this merciful arrangement the blessings of the Lord hath made us rich! While God has not given us perfect righteousness as yet, He has imputed it to us. Every blessing we have comes to us through the Lord Jesus Christ.

How rich indeed the Lord has made His children, even in this present life, while we are only heirs of all this wealth laid up for us in Heaven, while we have only the earnest, or hand payment, of the wonderful things which we shall inherit when we enter into glory with Christ! The Spirit of the Lord gives rest of heart to His people and sounder judgment than they ever had before. (2 Timothy 1:7.) It often increases their physical health and their mental efficiency. As a business man a Christian is more capable, more conscientious, and hence more valuable, whether he be an employer or an employe. Those of this class who are housewives know better how to keep the home, how to keep things in order, how better to exercise common sense, than before they accepted the Message of Truth and began to live its spirit. Common sense is not a common article, even though it is so called.

The Lord's Truth brings a rich blessing wherever it is received into a good and honest heart. Many of you are parents. If you are faithful, obedient children of God, you are better parents than you were before. When you brought your children into the world you assumed a responsibility for them in the sight of God. This thought is sopering, strengthening. It helps you to watch your example, to and admonition of the Lord, as well as caring for their material needs.

WHY GOD CHOOSES THE POOR.

Many of the Lord's faithful are amongst the humble and obscure. They are largely from the poorer walks of life. "Not many great, not many wise, not many noble are called," but chiefly the meek ones of this world. Why has God chosen these? We answer, the people who are naturally poor and ignoble realize that they are nothing in themselves; they feel their weakness and long for something better that God can give. Men who are rich and learned and influential note this, and sometimes say, "This Gospel is a good thing for these people. They need something to lift them up." Those who are thus high-minded are not in the proper attitude of heart to realize their own need and to come to God. No matter how rich, how learned, how noble a man is, according to human standards, he must come to the point of acknowledging that he is a sinner, wholly dependent upon God for forgiveness and for every blessing. All such self-righteous ones miss the special blessing the Lord is now offering; for they do not realize their need.

This is why Jesus said of these, "Woe unto you that are rich; for ye have received your consolation!" "Woe unto you Pharisees!" for you are not anxious to know about God. It is as we would say, "Alas! alas! for they will lose this great privilege of the Kingdom! Only those who will humble themselves will ever be exalted. It is not advantageous to be rich in this world's wealth, either socially or financially. Those who are rich now in these things will in the next Age have difficulties that the poor will not have. "Blessed be ye poor!" if your poverty leads you to Christ, or assists in this direction. Few are willing to walk in this way of humility and self-abnegation; but to those who do a great blessing comes—the blessing of the Lord which maketh rich. A work of transformation is going on in them. From the Divine standpoint, these poor and lowly ones are the truly rich, the only ones who are rich.

The Apostle Paul says that the Truth of God which illuminates the mind gives a better mental poise, the spirit of a sound mind. The minds of all fallen men are unsound, just as their flesh is unsound. Our minds are more or less twisted and warped. But God has a sound mind; and He tells us of His will, His plans, His ways. If we accept these, then we have the mind of God, the mind of Christ. We direct our conduct by the Divine instructions. We receive from Christ these riches of God's grace which become a transforming power, working in us to WILL aright.

Should a Christian make a mistake, then he will go to the Lord for forgiveness, and resolve, "I will endeavor so to live that henceforth this difficulty shall never overtake me again." But if it should again overtake him, he will go again to the Lord, with deeper contrition. So the mind of Christ continues to work in God's children to will and to do all His good pleasure, and they become richer and richer in character.

THOSE EDUCATED BY GOD TRULY LEARNED.

This class are not only the richest people in the world, but the most learned—learned in Heavenly wisdom, the only true wisdom. (James 3:17.) Many have said of the Bible Students, "These people have a general knowledge of nearly everything." Whoever knows the Bible from Genesis to Revelation—understanding God's great Plan for both the Church and the world,—is highly educated, whether he has been instructed in the world's schools or not. He is educated in the best and most thorough School in all the Universe—the School of Christ. Many of the enemies of present Bible Truth admit the unequaled knowledge and understanding of the Bible which even the humblest of these Bible Students possess. And they say that these have a wonderful knowledge of right principles, in every direction. This was true of our Lord Jesus and of His immediate followers; and these children of God have been instructed by them.

We read that when St. Peter and St. John were preaching in the Temple, the people perceived that they were ignorant and unlearned men; and "they took knowledge of them that had been with Jesus and learned of Him." (Acts 4:13.) They had not been in the school of the Scribes and Pharisees, but they had been with Christ. Whoever attends the School of Christ receives the best education for the present time and for the life eternal.

ABRAHAM'S TWO SEEDS.

Everything that God has to bestow is designed to be a blessing. He has provided a great blessing for all the families of the earth. He declared to Abraham that this blessing should come through his Seed. The opportunity to become of Abraham's earthly seed will come to every member of Adam's race; and every one will have an individual opportunity, except those who get their full opportunity now. There is only the one class who have this opportunity during the present life.

The vast majority of those who live in so-called heathen lands have no knowledge of Christ at all. Very many in Christendom so-called have very little or no real knowledge of Christ. Some of these attend meetings with more or less regularity where Christ's name is spoken and where hymns are sung, and join in the singing, thought many who do so know not what they say. There was a similar class in our Lord's day, and it was these who joined in crucifying the Lord of Glory. St. Peter says of them, "I wot that in ignorance ye did it."—Acts 3:17.

So everywhere today there are many who do not understand. Having eyes, they see not; having ears, they hear not. But the Spirit of God gives wisdom, quickens the understanding. Jesus said of this class who see and hear, "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven." It is this class which is now on trial for life or death everlasting. The world is not now on trial for life or death, though their present course will have a bearing upon their future. For the world now to know these things that the children of God know would only increase their responsibility. The class that really know does not include one thousandth part of even the church membership of the world.

Those who know are those who have accepted the terms of discipleship laid down by the Master—"If any man will be my disciple, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow Me." (Matthew 16:24.) This means that he must give up his own will to take instead the will of the Lord Jesus Christ, who represents the Father. Whoever has not done this has not been accepted of God at all. Much more is necessary than abandoning sin. Nobody ever had a right to live a wicked or immoral life. We come into the family of God in only one way. Jesus is the Way. The first step in consecration is to deny one's SELF. The second step is to adopt the will of God, to take up the cross and follow in the Master's footsteps. These are the only steps.

Once we had the impression that the Bible taught that whoever would be saved must get into this Church of Christ, otherwise he would go to Hell to suffer torture forever. And in sympathy for our own we said, "John and Mary must join the Church!" But getting their names on the roll of one of the church organizations did not get them into the true Church, "the Church of the Living God, whose names are written in Heaven" not on earth. We get into God's Church by accepting Christ as our Ransom from sin and death and by fully giving up our minds, our hearts, our wills, to God.

"IF ANY MAN DRAW BACK."

For all who become His disciples Jesus becomes the Advocate. He accepts them to be members of His Church and presents them to the Father. Then the Father receives them by begetting them of the Holy Spirit. They are then members of God's family, sons of God. They are New Creatures in Christ and constitute the true Church. It is this class who are to go on from grace to grace, from knowledge to knowledge. The Father, through Christ, deals with them as with sons, giving them the chiselling, polishing, diciplining, refining, necessary to make them ready for their great inheritance in the Heavenly Kingdom. Heirs of glory are these. If faithful unto death, they will enter forever into the joys of their Lord.

But if any who have once been begotten of the Holy Spirit and have tasted of the Heavenly gift shall draw back from God, it will be impossible to renew such to repentance, seing that they have crucified unto themselves the Son of God afresh and put Him to an open shame. There is no further hope for those who have had their opportunity and have misused it. They will die the Second Death.

The great mass of those in the churches of today have not been begotten of the Holy Spirit, and cannot die the Second Death without further knowledge and opportunity. They are still to have their share in the future blessings coming to the world at large. But in proportion as any shall have been closely in contact with the Truth, and have seen and rejected it, to that extent matters will be unfavorable for them in the future. However, all will have an opportunity except those who have been made partakers of the Holy Spirit and have fallen away through wilful sin. If these fall away, there remaineth no more a sacrifice for sins: for Christ dieth no more. "But we (who are faithfully following Jesus) are not of those who draw back into perdition, but of those who believe to the saving of the soul."—Hebrews 6:4-8; 10:26-31.

God's promises to His faithful ones are so rich, so precious, so wonderful, that were it not that they are given by Jehovah Himself, in unmistakable terms, they would be beyond belief. "But," says one, "can we believe that God REALLY MEANT that we might have a part in His own nature, the Divine nature?" Surely! Of what use would the Bilbe be if it does not say what it means? The Apostle Peter, one of the inspired mouthpieces of the Lord, has so declared. Our Lord said to him and to the other Apostles, "Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in Heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in Heaven."—Matthew 16:19; John 20:22, 23.

The Twelve Apostles were supernaturally guided in their utterances. Jesus promised them that, after the Holy Spirit should come upon them, they should be guided into all Truth. (John 16:13.) So we have full confidence in St. Peter's words. The intent of God's wonderful promises is that they shall work in us, day by day, to will and to do the perfect will of God. "According to your faith be it unto you." If you let go your faith, you lose all. The greater your faith the greater your blessing. God seeks only those who will trust Him in everything, whether they can trace Him or not.

Whether we shall be of this blessed company is for us to decide. Our Lord Jesus has promised us the needed help. He will make all our trials and difficulties work good for us. He will make us meet for the glorious station to which the Father has called us. But He expects us to co-operate with Him, to have faith, trust and the spirit of loyalty and obedience. We are to be true to our covenant, true to all the principles of righteousness. He wishes all of His people to gather under the same banner—the banner of truth and love and of faith in God.

But as we have said before, not many of the professed children of God are of this mind. Not many of the great and mighty and wise are thus obedient and teachable, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith. But to those who appreciate the glorious High Calling of God, the call to the Divine nature, to joint-heirship with Him who has been exalted far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named, next to the Father, we would say, Having tasted of the exceeding riches of God's favor, are we not determined to go on and obtain the full inheritance promised?

The things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, which God hath in reservation for them that love Him, are for those who love God more than they love father or mother, brother or sister, children or friends, houses or lands, wealth or fame or pleasure of earth. If we are of this class, let us rejoice and be of good courage! God is for us. He has been blessing us all along the way; and if we continue thus to follow on, the end will be glorious. We shall be made partakers of the DIVINE NATURE!

Essay IV.

Copyright 1916 by N. E. Nelson.

"Once more: What shall we say of the youth of this place? Have you either the form or the power of pursuing your studies with all your strength? Do you redeem the time, crowding as much work into every day as it can contain? Rather, are ye not conscious—you waste day after day either in reading that which has no tendency to Christianity, or in gaining, or in—you know not what? Are you better managers of your fortune or your time? Do you take care to owe no man anything? Do you know how to possess your bodies in sanctification and honor? Are no drunkenness and uncleanness found among you? Yea, are there not many of you who glory in your shame? Are there not many of you that are foresworn? I fear, a swiftly increasing multitude. Be not surprised, brethren—before God and this congregation I own myself to have been of the number solemnly swearing to observe all those customs which I then knew nothing of, and all those statutes which I did not so much as read over, either then, or for a long time afterwards. What is perjury, if this is not? But if it be, or what a weight of sin, yea, sin of no common dye, lieth upon us! And doth not the Most Hight regard it?"

"May it not be a consequence of this that so many of you are a generation of triflers with God, with one another, and your own souls? Who of you is, in any degree, acquainted with the work of the spirit, His supernatural work in the souls of men? Can you bear, unless now and then in a church, any talk of the Holy Ghost? Would ye not take it for granted if any one began such a conversation, that it was hypocrisy or enthusiasm? In the name of the Lord God Almighty I ask, What religion are ye of? Lord, save or we perish! Take us out of the mire that we sink not. Unto Thee all things are possible. According to the greatness of Thy power, preserve Thou them that are appointed to die!"

As further revealing the soul of this great reformer we here present Hubbard's conception of him:—

"Philosophers with the brains of Newton, Spencer, Hegel and Shopenhauer, could never have done the work of Wesley. Had Wesley known more he would have done less. He was a God-intoxicated man—his heart was aflame with Divine Love."

Russell differs radically from Wesley in that the poetic and sentimental characteristics are entirely foreign to his nature. Emotionalism so prevalent amongst evangelists is no part of his mission. Evangelizing by arousing feeling in the subjects is reform and checks the tendency of waywardness, but brings diminishing returns in the end. Russell accomplishes the same results of reform but does it by following another trail—he appeals to reason, whereas Wesley appealed to conscience, and here lies the distinguishing feature. In an address to the public Russell usually first calls attention to the Great Unknown as a subject that has been sadly neglected in the thinking and investigation that characterizes this age. He then rehearses the theories of the world, Heathenism, Catholicism, Calvinism, Armenianism, Rationalism, shows their relative value and then the inconsistencies of the best. Then points out the Bible hopes for the world that is going down into the tomb at the rate of 90,000 a day, as the only reasonable and consistent hope of future life that appeals to our senses and answers to the longings of the human heart. He then revives the spirit of the reformer Luther by insisting on the rights of man to think and investigate the Bible and pass judgment independent of Clerical authority and creeds of the Dark Ages. His Gospel of Hope for suffering humanity has a remarkable transforming power on its votaries that does not stop with renouncing grosser sins merely. Hence he properly merits the title of Reformer. Hubbard's assertion concerning Wesley: "Had he known more he would have done less," does not fit Russell. It is because he knows more, that he has done what he has—"Knowledge is power." The proper version of Hubbard's statement should be, "had he known more he would have done differently," and perhaps he would have accomplished less in his age. However, Hubbard's statement admits that knowledge is not the chief end in life, it is only a means to an end—that end is service. We serve humanity best by a proper use of our endowments by nature—Russell's genius has been used to the best interests of the Church and incidentally the world.

Wm. T. Ellis found fault with the Russell propaganda on the grounds of not having any Evangelistic features with it. It did not occur to Mr. Ellis that the "Extension Department" which he reported in his investigation answered the same purpose—the difference consisting merely in the methods. The present day Evangelizing is a freak production of the methods of Charles Wesley and Whitefield and was not known prior to their day. The latest form of Evangelizing is that of the baseball gymnastics of "Billy" Sunday, carried to a point bordering on insanity. It is a vivid contrast to the moderate and dignified methods of Pastor Russell and other members of the International Bible Students Association. In fact the teachings of the I. B. S. A. propaganda eliminated the necessity for frenzied appeals to save men from the fires of a burning hell, for there is no such place. Instead they have resurrected the long lost teachings of the Bible of the world's salvation as being separate and distinct from that of the church, while the modern Evangelistis see only the salvation of the Church to the exclusion of the world's hope.

The particular point that the clerics hate about "Russellism"—the thing that they specially pronounce "bad" is Future Probation, and hate it for the reason that they fancy that if they preached this, they could not get any membership, and hence their coffers would become scant of finance. They would rather, by their creeds, consign all the heathens, Jews, infidels, and sinners to hell eternally, than to grant this one explicit teaching of the Bible which makes it another beautiful portrayal of the God of love and compassion, bringing to light the second salvation, the world's salvation. Many so-called evangelists preach hell as a matter of expediency and do not believe it—I have met many of this type. They use it to freighten sinners into their folds—they cannot imagine an evangelistic meeting without it. But Millennial Dawn is making inroads into Orthodoxy—"Billy" Sunday still has the popular conception of "evangelizing" with the doctrine of hell, but will not say it is literal fire! His sermon on the second coming of Christ, is said to be borrowed from Millennial Dawn, and, it is said, every reference it originally contained can be found in one chapter of one of Russell's Studies Perhaps this is the reason that he has so suddenly let up on blasting at Russell. He has centered on "Booze" and thrown good people off the scent—they do not know that in making the bad better he is making the good worse by his method and doctrines. Hell, defined as Sunday defines it, with or without fire, has the same effect upon its hearers as it had upon those of the Dark Ages when it led men to burn each other at the stake! In proof of this we cite from "The Literary Digest" (June 14, 1913) concerning this novelty and curiosity at Columubus, Ohio, a quotation from Dr. Washington Gladden in "The Congregationalist" (Boston):—

"Every day he mounts the judgment seat of the universe and sends men by scores to the right hand and to the left—mostly to the left. Statistics—of a sort—were kept of the number of 'conversions'; but of the number of those sent to hell, by name, no record, I believe, was made. It is a great omission; for that is a large part of the business.

"All evolutionists are consigned to hell. Mr. Sunday names, one by one, those whom he supposes to be evolutionists, and with a dramatic gesture flings each of them into perdition. 'There goes old Darwin! He's in hell, sure!' And the enraptured audience yells its applause, as one evolutionist after another is dropt into the fiery pit. A staid Methodist preacher, who watched this performance, said afterward, 'I would never have believed, if I had not seen it, that an audience of civilized Americans could show such a spirit as that.' The scene at a Spanish bull-fight is really, when you think of it, less horrible."

"And as a particular instance of Mr. Sunday's intolorence, Dr. Gladden recites as follows:

"One of Mr. Sunday's ministerial supporters in Toledo, Rev. Dr. Wallace, after listening to this sermon about the evolutionists, ventured to remonstrate with him privately. The next day on the platform Mr. Sunday turned to the protesting minister, shook his fist in his face and yelled: 'Stand up there, you bastard evolutionist! Stand up with the athetaists and the infidels and the whoremongers and the adulterers and go to hell!' I have these words from Dr. Wallace himself, who adds, 'It is impossible to describe the venom with which these last words were uttered.' "

WHO WILL WIN THE AUTO? IS QUESTION OF THE HOUR

Big 50,000 Special Vote Offer to Close Next Thursday Night, April 13, in $3,100 Contest--Mrs. Raymond Bowden, John A. Perry, Geo. Perry and Many Others Making Splendid Records This Week--Plenty of Room for New Workers.

WISHING FOR THINGS?

Do you long for an automobile, music in your home, Diamonds, etc.—all the good things that other people have and enjoy?

If you do—and every red-blooded man and woman does—the National Labor-Tribune offers you today the opportunity to make your dreams come true. The big new contest is open to every ambitious friend and reader of the paper and through it you may secure any prize you desire. The magnificent awards—which total more than $3,100—will be distributed free among those who seriously interest themselves with the National Labor-Tribune in developing its ever increasing fields of circulation. Ranging from two automobiles down to pianos, victrolas, diamonds, kitchen cabinets, etc., every prize represents a splendid value and even the least of these is well worth working for.

ENTERING THE CAMPAIGN.

To enter the campaign fill out the nomination blank in this issue and send it to the contest manager, the National Labor-Tribune at once. This will start you off with 5,000 votes and makes you a bona-fide candidate in the race. The prizes will be awarded according to the number of votes secured. The candidate securing the largest number of votes will receive the largest prize, and the other prizes will be awarded in the same manner. To secure votes you must clip the ten free vote coupons from the Labor-Tribune and get your friends and acquaintances to help you with their subscriptions. This is not so hard as it sounds for once you are started you will find all your relatives and friends standing ready to boost for you. The number of votes which it will require to win one of the automobiles or other prizes may not be as large as one would at first imagine—in fact it is possible that a very small vote score will carry off the largest of the prizes for the field is very fariy divided up between a large number of candidates

EVERYBODY WINS.

An especially attractive feature of the race is the arrangement whereby everybody who enters and takes an active part in the race will receive a reward. Those who fail to win one of the prizes will receive a cash salary equal to ten per cent. of the amount he or she has turned in on subscriptions during the campaign. This means that everyone is certain of receiving remuneration equal to the effort they put forth. To do this means the expenditure of a large sum of money—estimated at around five hundred dollars—but the matter of expense is not considered in carrying out the Labor-Tribune's policy of "Fair-Deal for Everybody."

BIG SPECIAL OFFER.

At the out-set of the campaign the Contest Manager announced that 25,000 extra votes would be allowed with each of the first two subscriptions turned in by any candidate. This offer is still good, but in order to make it worth while for each and every candidate to put forth his or her hardest efforts at the start of the campaign, when it is easiest to secure the support of your friends and neighbors, the Manager last week announced the following special offer.

With each club of $14.00 worth of subscriptions turned in a special vote certificate for 50,000 extra votes will be allowed the candidate. Each candidate may turn in just as many of these clubs as it is possible to secure. The subscriptions may be for any length of time, and you should remember that the 50,000 extra votes are in addition to the regular votes on each subscription. The offer will close next Thursday evening, April 13th and will not be repeated. By turning in every possible subscription now you will receive nearly twice as many votes for them as you will later on in the campaign. It is to your advantage to turn in every possible subscription during the time that this offer is in force for you can readily see that it means that you will only have to work half as hard as later on to win one of the prizes.

THE TERRITORY.

Anyone, anywhere in the United States is free to enter the campaign as long as they are of good standing in their community. There are no restrictions as to age, race, or place of residence.

And once you have entered the campaign there are no limits to the territory in which you may work. Subscriptions will be accepted from any place within the confines of the U. S. and you will receive the votes with each one.

SUPPLIES.

Receipt books, blanks, full information, etc., will be furnished to any one upon request. The Contest Manager will gladly help you to get started. The National Labor-Tribune is giving away these wonderful awards to increase its circulation among its friends, and we might say that we are absolutely neutral as to who secures them as long as they are able to make a winning run. This race, like the race of life—is to the strong.

GET IN LINE.

"Faint heart" never wins any prizes and nine times out of ten turns out a failure at everything. Don't hesitate if you feel that you would like to get your share of the free awards. You must grasp opportunity when she knocks for when you at last make up your mind the bird may have flown. Start getting up a subscription club under the big special offer today.

GETTING THERE.

More activity is noticeable in the list of candidates this week than ever before. Several new candidates are claiming the spot-light and some of those already entered are beginning to show visible signs of life. While we don't feel justified in patting any particular individual on the back and complimenting them upon their work, there are several whose efforts are worthy of praise considering the fact that the campaign is just starting. A glance over the list of candidates below will give you some idea of those who have been busy "Bringing home the bacon" during the past week.

THE HON. J. HAMPTON WITH A TERRIFIC KICK

A Little Late but in Ample Time to Land With Both Feet on the Long Eared Gentry.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES U. S.
Washington, D. C., March 30, 1916.

Mr. Joseph H. Vitchestain, Editor,
The National Labor Tribune,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Some time ago I received a letter from your office, inviting me to write something on the tariff situation. For some reason or other the letter was mislaid and this fact has just been brought to my attention. It is a busy time for all of us here in Washington and it may be too late for me to be of service in the matter referred to, but since we are this day receiving the news of the largest month's imports in the history of the country, it may be worth while to have our friends of the National Labor Tribune know that the question of a protective tariff is not likely to be forgotten in the forthcoming campaign. It is true that Preparedness is occupying the public mind and that there is a strong and urgent demand for the upbuilding of the merchant marine.

The activity in the industrial world, due to the demand for war supplies, is responsible for much of this agitation. We need preparedness and we need a merchant marine, but we must also have protection for the labor of the United States against unfair foreign competition when the European war closes.

The existing Democratic tariff law does not afford that protection now. The protection which our working men are now enjoying is due solely to the barrier raised by the European war. That barrier, however, has not been sufficient to stop the influx of the largest volume of foreign imports into the United States during the month of March that has ever been witnessed in this country. Most of these foreign made goods are coming into the United States free of duty. While we are selling war goods during the temporary splurge that exists, the foreign countries engaged in normal lines of trade are flooding the United States. Sooner or later, and possibly sooner than anyone now believes, we may be up against the return of normal trade conditions in the United States, when our dependence will be not upon war but upon the tariff law. As it now stands, the law will be found wanting, since the rates of duty are so low as to already invite tremendous competition to which I have referred. Under the present administration heavy burdens of taxation have been laid upon the people. They have not noticed it so much because of the temporary prosperity they have been enjoying, but there must be a day of reckoning and when that day comes the one great issue will be protection,—protection to the industrial interests of the United States as against those of competitive foreign countries.

"That the Democratic tariff law was a sledgehammer blow to the American farmer is amply proved by statistics compiled from official figures. The farmer was the pet target of the Democracy when framing this bill. Democratic stump orators had declaimed to the multitude that the Republican tariff was responsible for the high cost of living, and, acting on this theory they placed foodstuffs on the free list, along with other products on the farm. The cost of living went up, instead of down, but what was the result on importations of farm products?

"The records show that, five classes of farm products considered, imports for the first ten months of the Democratic tariff law exceeded those for the similar period under the Republican tariff law by $102,000,000, or nearly 142 per cent, and for the similar ten months, with the war performing in some respects the function of a protective tariff, imports of farm products increased 100 per cent over the Republican period. The five classes considered are meat and dairy products, wool, farm animals (including cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry), eggs, and products of the soil, such as grains, vegetables, hay, plants, etc.

"The Democratic tariff law took effect October 4th, 1913. The war began July 31, 1914. From October, 1912, to July 31, 1913, a ten months' period under the Republican law, our imports of the above-mentioned products amounted to $72,700,000. From October, 1913, to July 31, 1914, imports of these products under the Democratic law amounted to $174,600,000. Bear in mind that this was a normal period, not complicated by war. From October, 1914, to July 31, 1915, a full war period under the Democratic law, we imported these products to the value of $149,000,000.

"Notwithstanding the enormous competition to which

During the War Union Rules Suspended

They are to Be Reintroduced When Hostilities End.

Thomas Reeve, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON March.,25.

Labor has been plentifully beset with hostile critics during the war, but for the present it seems to have won through to some serenity. The automobiles and large establishments of the wealthy—not excluding Cabinet Ministers—are for the moment the scornful burden of the economist's discourses, rather than the alleged purchasing of pianos and other fictitious signs of equiality elleged high living of the working man. The change is for the better, and so, too, is the laying aside of that vigorous brush which tarred all workers as tipplers. But perhaps in this very immunity from criticism which labor is at present enjoying lies a danger that some people may forget how dearly that immunity has been bought. The r laxing of trade union rules and the dilution of labor were not, of course, consented to in order to buy off criticism on which no sensible man set any great price; they were sacrifices made in order to further Britain's common victory. But if they have incidentally silenced criticism they must not also be allowed to make gratitude seem superfluous. W. A. Appleton, the secretary of the General Federation or Trade Unions, in some rather fine words at the "Fight for Right" meeting on March 13th, truly remarked that labor had sacrificed some privileges which it had taken a hundred years to win. Another hundred years, he added, would be needed to win them back again unless faith was kept with the trade unions. That faith must be kept, and the recognition of the vital things which have been committed to its custody is an exercise which may profitably be recommended to all outside the ranks of organized labor.

On account of the number of enginemen and cleaners who have joined the forces and the scarcity of boys, the London and North Western Railway Company are engaging girls as locomotive cleaners at their large engine sheds at Crewe. A number of girls are now employed in the works, and, according to official accounts they are giving every satisfaction. Working on an engine, in fact, seems to have a fascination for them.

General Secretary Robert Young of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers makes the interesting suggestion to members that they should take advantage of the present prosperity of their trade to build up their general fund. "Why not," he asks, "a levy of 25 cents per month for this purpose?" The general fund is, it may be explained, the society's working capital, and is increasing without any levy at all at the rate of in round figures $350,000 a quarter. At present it stands at about $4,050,000, and with roughly $3,220,000 of superannuation reserve fund makes a grand total of funds in hand of not far short of a $7,500,000. In that reckoning the increases for the first quarter of the current year are estimated and added. A levy of 25 cents a month are estimated and added, a levy of 25 cents a month made on the same basis as that of the superannuated fund levy would yield well over $100,000 a quarter.

With reference to the report from Zurich that difficulties are being placed in the way of the employment of Swiss munition workers in this country, British trade unionists deny emphatically that objection has been raised, and they mention that munition workers from Belgium, France, Canada and Australasia are working under the same conditions as British workers without hindrance or interference. They add that there is no reason for their objection, as, under agreements with the Minstry of Munitions, the British workers' position is completely safeguarded.

Arthur Henderson, president of the Board of Education, who is also chairman of the National Labor Advisory Committee and secretary of the Iron Founders' Society, said he had heard of no complaints, and suggested that the whole story was a canard.

W. Mosses, secretary of the advisory committee and a well-known trade union leader, which committee has brought before it all differences arising in munition factories, stated that he had heard nothing from any quarter of the country which would give the slightest corroboration to the Zurich story. An official of the Ministry of Munitions also said that no complaints had been forwarded to the Ministry, either by British employers, trade union workmen, or Swiss immigrants.

Robert Young, the above-mentioned secretary of the Amalgamated Society

HOW THE RAILWAYS VIEW THE APPROACHING STRIKE

Pay Millions of Dollars a Year for Unproductive Labor and Employes Given Full Pay.

Railroad trainmen—less than one-fifth of the army of railroad employes—have authorized the leaders of their four brotherhoods to demand a new wage scale on all the railroads of the United States.

This is the first nation-wide railroad wage movement in this country. While all men in train service have joined in the concerted demand, the higher wages asked would be received by the freight and yard men, who outnumber the passenger men four to one.

The essential features of the demands are that wages shall be calculated on the basis of eight hours for 100 miles instead of ten hours for the same distance; and that overtime shall be paid for at one and a half times the new higher hourly rate.

The increased pay that would be received by these employes under this schedule is estimated at from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

This is not a demand for an eight-hour day as the eight-hour day is known in other occupations—eight hours' pay for eight hours' work.

The men in passenger service who earn very high wages working four, five and six hours a day well know that the brotherhoods are not asking for an eight hour workday. The seniority men in freight service, who are earning very high wages on eleven, twelve and thirteen hour runs, would bitterly oppose any effort of the brotherhoods or of the railroads to limit them to an eight-hour workday and thus reduce their wages more nearly to the level of that paid workers in other industries.

A workday of fixed length, whether of four or eight or twelve hours, is clearly impossible in railroad train service. The length of a day's service depends upon the speed of trains and the length of runs. Some employes work a short time every day and earn high wages; others are on duty longer hours, with many days off, and also earn high wages. The location of terminals, the character of traffic, the demands of shippers, and many other factors make any standard length of workday in all kinds of train service a physical impossibility.

The demand of the trainmen is frankly one for higher wages for service that they are now paid far above the average enjoyed by workers in other occupations.

THE PUBLIC AND ITS RAILROADS.

The railroads are public utilities; they are operated in the public interest under public regulation.

The billions of capital that have made American railroads possible, and the hundreds of millions of new capital put into them each year for their extension and improvement, are the savings of an army of investors.

The stockholders number not far from 700,000; the owners of other railroad securities number hundreds of thousands more; and the millions of thrifty people with savings in banks and insurance companies must be included in the list of owners of the railroads because their savings are invested in the business.

The public owns the railroads, and out of the profit of the business receives interest on its savings. From this transportation system that it owns the public buys some three million dollars' worth of transportation a year.

The public is vitally interested in getting efficient railroad service at a reasonable cost, and is equally interested in getting a fair return on its investment in the business.

Public regulation of the carriers through the machinery of government has come as a result of the public's dual interest in transportation—as owner and as user.

The price the public pays for transportation and the profit the public receives from the business both depend on the cost of operating the properties. The great cost of railroad operation is for labor. Nearly two-thirds of all the money spent by the carriers in the conduct of the business goes to the great army of employes.

Every owner of railroad securities and every buyer of transportation (and this means every consumer of American products) has a direct interest in the cost of railroad labor.

"CONSTRUCTIVE" MILEAGE.

The railroads pay millions of dollars a year for unproductive labor in train service, while the employes are guaranteed full pay for every minute of their time, and pay on a daily minimum basis regardless of how few hours they are on duty.

Railroad work is entirely unlike factory work. The manufacturer who has a ten-hour workday gets ten hours' work for ten hours' pay. If he has pieceworkers he pays them only for what they produce.

In railroad train service, where pay is primarily on the piece basis (by the mile), the employe gets time pay wherever he fails to produce miles. He takes pay on the piece basis whenever it gives him more than the time basis, and rejects it when it doesn't.

If a manufacturer's power plant breaks down his workers earn

APPRECIATIONS.

Royersford. Pa.. March 30.

I see that my subscription has expired. I am very thankful that Our Father has such wonderful ways to spread the "Good Tidings" which yet the whole world will hear. (Luke 2:10) I certainly enjoy Pastor Russell's sermons, and all the good things. I hope you will faithfully publish his sermons which are so upbuilding. Surely the Tribune has been a welcome visitor in my home but I ask you to please discontinue it at the present time. I am also thanking you for sending it after it had expired.

Yours truly,
MRS. J. S. MORRIS.

TIMELY QUERIES AND AN ANSWER.

As we backward cast our eyes
O'er the past that obscure lies
'Twixt the now that is so dark
And the then wherein did mark
Greatest event of all time
In the life of Christ sublime.
We must wonder more and more
As the mad scene we gaze o'er
What was meant by angel's song
Which through all this age along
'Mid their wherefores and their whys
Men have sought to realize.

When the angels sang the story
Of our God in highest glory
Who to earth had granted peace
And from grief and pain release
Sent to men, who wonder still,
R'chest prize, His sweet good will,
Did they make some grave mistake
In the message sent to make
Hearts with sorrow broke to glow
With the knowledge sweet to know
That a Savior had been given,
Sent by God from out of heaven?

And if no mistake were made
Why have men then been dismayed
Passing down throughout the age
Wherein phophet, priest and sage
Have repeated o'er the story
Of glad earth and coming glory?
Why have sorrow, pain and sadness
Been man's lot instead of gladness?
If the story sung were true;
Why have men these ages through
Battles fierce with brothers fought
While they vainly peace have sought?

As we scan these mad scenes o'er
Are we troubled, sick and sore
By the thoughts that will arise
With our tears, our groans and sighs,
"That the gift for which we've strove
Was gift of hate and not of love;
That our striving's been for naught
Through these ages where were taught
Loving precepts of this man
And the part in God's great plan
He'd been sent to earth to take
For the stricken sinner's sake?"

Are we victims now of fraud,
And at same time giving laud,
To imposter bo'd and shrewd
For whom praises are renewed
At each Christmas time most dear,
Gladdest time of all the year;
Are we heeding here the call
Of imposter worst of all,
Who by power good or ill
Moves men freely at His will;
In whose name much blood was shed,
By whose gospel We've been led?

No, dear heart, it is not so;
For the grand result will show
That such terrible conclusion
Formed while scanning mad confusion
Is of blindness, not of sight,
Is of darkness, not of light;
You must know there is a reason
For this long and painful season
Throughout which we contemplate
Satan's work of blackest hate;
Scenes of madness, murder, strife,
Making this a woeful life.

'Tis but a scaffolding you view
As you scan these ages through;
And the beauty of the plan
Has been hid from eyes of man.
Looking o'er the scenes with care
Searching here and everywhere
You will find a faithful few
Who to God were ever true,
And to these in forehead sealed
He has graciously revealed
"That the death upon the tree
Will in time make all men free."

"That a perfect man had lost
That which Christ at fearful cost
Purchased back that He might give
Life that man again may live;
That in sleep from Adam's side
Eve was taken for his bride;
That the race in Adam slept
At the time when Satan crept
Through the earth in lust of power
O'er this man whose darkest hour
Was proclaimed by voice on high
Speaking sternly, 'Thou must die'."

Thus the entire race was tried
In one man for whom Christ died.
Perfect man for perfect man
In accordance with God's plan.
As by one man came sore grief
So by one man comes relief.
As by man has come earth's sadness
So by man shall come earth's gladness.
And the years that intervene
To the ones who've lived between
Have with lessons been replete,
Lessons that have been most meet.

Grant that you may see the vision.
You, who shout now in derision
That these hateful wars on earth
Are but pains preceding births.
Of glad rule with Christ our King.
'Tis the song that angels sing,
That when man with lesson learned
To his senses has returned,
God will say the, 'Peace, be still.
And learn that I am God; My will
On earth now shall be done.
Your course of folly here is run."

Then in quiet not in storm
God will start His great reform;
Christ will exercise its rule
And in His great judgment school
Man shall learn that God is love
Has provided from above
Richest blessings, joys secure,
Peace that ever shall endure,
Highway that shall be so plain
That no darkness can remain.
Highway over which shall come
Back earth's millions to their home.

Millions who in death now lie
With the rest that moan and sigh
Shall be rescued from the tomb.
Shall no longer hear the doom
Passed on Adam, 'Thou shalt die',
Sentence passed by God on high.
No, the message then shall ring
While with joy they all shall sing,
'Christ from death hath ransomed all,
Will restore man from the fall.
Mark of sin and death remove,
Will God's richest mercies prove.'

And in that most gladsome reign
God shall ne'er be sought in vain;
'Fore His children then may cry
He will answer from on high;
Every need He will foresee
And His grace will then be free;
Everyone shall walk by sight
In that glad and glorious light;
Prince of Peace shall Christ become
Over earth, man's lasting home.
Everlasting Father too,
When the race is raised anew.

Man restored then by God's grace
Ever shall behold His face.
Death no more shall come again
When perfection men attain;
And then whosoever will
May partake of waters till
They have life complete in Him
Of whom angels sang the hymn
To the shepherds on the hill,
"Peace on earth, toward men good will,
Peace, with which the message rings,
From our Lord, great King of Kings."

R. G. RUSSELL.

Malinta, O., March 26.

Columbus, Ohio, March 29.

Please find M. O. renewing my subscription to the Tribune for another year. I fully appreciate your earnest endeavors to give labor's side of the question in an unbiased manner. Also commend you for the very careful way you are presenting Pastor Russell's discourses in your live paper. The writer is glad to lend his encouragement to a pioneer paper in the printing of our Pastor's sermons in every honorable way possible.

Very truly yuors,
V. W. BEAVER.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

I am a subscriber for the Labor Tribune and like it well, but have not time enough to study its contents. I am a widow with three little boys living on a farm. I would give a permanent home to a widow lady who is in present Truth, and who could help me half of her time to do my work, and who would be pleased to aid me in the study of the Divine Plan of he Ages. She could do some colporteur work here outside of our little Class in her own time.

MRS. V. A. BROWN,
Browns Summit, N. C., Route 2.

Plymouth, Mich., March 30.

Have just renewed our subscription through Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. We certainly appreciate the Tribune and its many good features and noble effort as well as the many other papers which are doing the same. We have been interested in present Truth now about fifteen years, and, like Bro. Draper, of Detroit, more interested in it and all its precious features than ever before.

Why should we not all be the same when the culmination of all earth's glorious hopes are so near at hand? My, what would we have thought fifteen years ago when we were "first illuminated" if we could have sit down and picked up one of the many grand newspapers of today and had Pastor Russell right before us. All hail for the Tribune, and all the others who give such a noble service and let all that are able not be content with subscribing for one paper, but as many as we can, not only to help the editors, but to pass the good message along. If we find no one to send our sermons to now, it is because something is lacking in us. We are taking several papers, though none better than the good, faithful Tribune.

Yours very truly,
EUGENE H. NELSON.

Sandusky, O., March 30.

We have taken the Tribune for some years and enjoy the reading of the sermon by Pastor Russell, it is in such good print for old eyes, as Sr. Matz and I are both living on borrowed time having passed the allotted time given to man. Praying the Lord's blessing on you in your effort to spread the Gospel Truth.

Yours in the Lord's service,
D. W. MATZ.

WINONA, Miss. March 26.

Am renewing my subscription to The Tribune through the Watch Tower office and wish to express my thanks to you for continuing to send it for so long after my subscription had expired. It is indeed a welcome guest and I look forward with eagerness to its arrival on Friday, and am seldom disappointed. The sermons of our dear Bro. Russell are worth many times the price of the paper. I wonder if you realize what a wonderful opportunity you have, and are using, for the spread of the glorious gospel of the Kingdom? Praying that you may continue faithful to the Lord and His cause now while the days are evil and asking our Father's richest blessing upon you. I am yours in the service of the Truth.

MRS. J. S. FOSTER.

AENEAS AND DORCAS

Acts 9:32-43—April 9.

St. Peter's Preaching Tour—Visiting the Saints—A Term Much Misunderstood—A Paralytic Healed at Lydda. St. Peter Called to Joppa—Dorcas Awakened From the Sleep of Death.

"In all things showing thyself an example of good works."—Titus 2:7.

FROM today's Study we learn that although the Apostles made Jerusalem their headquarters, nevertheless they went hither and thither throughout Judea, visiting the little congregations of Christians. In one of his tours St. Peter came to Lydda, a city ten miles southeast of Joppa. There he visited "the saints."

The word "saints" signifies holy ones, those set apart, sanctified believers in Christ. There is much opposition to the use of this word today, attributable, we believe, to two reasons. One of these is the fact that the vast majority of professing Christians know that they are not sanctified, not living as near to the Lord as they could live, not separate, even in heart, from the world, the flesh and the Devil. Another reason is that during the Dark Ages it became customary for the Roman and Greek Catholic churches to "canonize," or legally set apart as objects of reverence, certain persons respecting whom, after the lapse of several centuries, nothing especially evil was remembered, but only things esteemed praiseworthy.

St. Peter.

A third reason why some dislike the term "saints" is that they consider it to be rather boastful, even hypocritical. Having lost sight of the doctrine of justification by faith in its proper application, they have become accustomed to think of all Christians as miserable sinners. Thus they overlook the fact that there are some in whom "the righteousness of the Law is fulfilled" because they walk, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, and the merit of Christ covers all their unwilling shortcomings.—Romans 8:1-4.

God's people, however, should remember that almost all of the Epistles of the New Testament are addressed "to the saints"; and that those who cannot properly apply to themselves this term, which is authorized by Apostolic usage, cannot properly apply to themselves the promises contained in those Epistles. Let it be borne in mind that the word "saint" does not signify actual perfection merely, as in our Lord's case, but also applies to those who are reckoned holy through Him.

Two Notable Miracles.

The healing of Æneas, the paralytic, was a very notable evidence of the power of the Lord, very similar to the healing at the Beautiful Gate of the Temple. Here, as always, St. Peter made sure that none should think that the power exercised was his own. He distinctly affirmed that Jesus the Messiah, whom their rulers had crucified, had performed the cure and therefore was not dead, but risen.

The fame of the miracle spread abroad and resulted, we are told, in the drawing of many to the Lord. Thus did the Lord establish the Church and attract to it those who were in the right heart attitude, using miracles then, as He now uses other means. As already pointed out, those miracles ceased with the death of the Apostles and those upon whom they laid hands. The Twelve had no successors—St. Paul taking the place of Judas. The Heavenly Jerusalem had twelve foundations—no more—and in these were written the names of the Twelve Apostles—no others.—Revelation 21:14.

One of the saints at Joppa was apparently a woman of means and education. If her name described her appearance, she was very beautiful; for Tabitha in the Syriac, Dorcas in the Greek, implies grace and beauty. But whatever she possessed of these qualities naturally, she was named for the beauty of a meek and quiet spirit, full of love and helpfulness. She served the Lord, His Brethren, and all others who needed assistance, according to the best opportunities afforded her. Especially did she help poor widows, a class who at that time were often in a very trying position.

The awakening of Tabitha.

Under these circumstances it is not strange that her death produced great sorrow, especially amongst the beneficiaries of her charities, and amongst the numerous friends, which a beautiful Christ-like spirit of this kind is sure to make. Apparently she died suddenly, about the time that others of the saints at Joppa heard of the cure which St. Peter had performed at Lydda. At once they sent for him, probably with no thought that he would bring Dorcas back to life, but that he could give them some consolation.

The bringing of Dorcas back from the portals of death was St. Peter's most notable miracle. Like that at Lydda, it was peculiar to that time and for the special purpose of establishing the Church. We are not to suppose, however, that the Lord purposes to snatch back from death all of His people, or that all should have powers of healing such as St. Peter exercised.

Appreciations.

MAGNET, Ind., March 30.

We wish to express our appreciation of your good paper. We have renewed our subscription for six months through the Watch Tower office. We did not renew as soon as our time expired, but your paper still came which we were glad of. We thought that conditions would hinder us from taking the Tribune for a while. Now we can say with others that we like the way The Tribune is arranged, especially the clear large type. We take several papers publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons and always prefer reading the Pastor's Sermons from the Tribune owing to the large type and complete Sermons.

We appreciated the reading of Bro. Frank Draper's letter in your last issue as we are personally acquainted with him and also being a good letter.

Now we want to thank you for your labor of service and we believe that there is a love that prompts that service.

Respectfully yours,
CHAS. F. CART.

LETTS, Ind., March 28.

Your paper is a welcome visitor in my home. I take it for the sermons and other Truth matters. I love the Tribune for its large and clear type in which the sermon is printed. May the minds of many be enlightened and God be glorified through the work of the Tribune is our wish.

Yours with love,
MRS. S. M. COFFIN.

CROMWELL, Conn., March 29.

Am renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the "Watch Tower" I. B. S. A., Brooklyn, N. Y. I thought I could not afford to continue to take the paper owing to lack of funds; but it don't seem as though I could do without it, so by a little sacrifice I concluded I would renew in that way. I am one of the "Shut Ins," but I do appreciate the weekly visit of the Tribune very much.

I am yours truly,
ARTHUR C. HAWES.

Mobley, W. Va., March 30.

We wish to express our thanks for the weekly visits of your good paper, the National Labor Tribune, we appreciate all its contents, but most of all, the sermons by Brother C. T. Russell, the Sunday School lessons, the letters of apreciation and the Essays of the Reformers, by Bro. N. E. Nelson. The essays are good and surely will be appreciated by many Truth seekers. There are many who give very little thought to the Reformers and the work they did, etc. We nave often thought when reading those articles what a blessing the surely would be to many who had no opportunity to know the truth of the lives and achievements of the Reformers, the most complete and successful one of all in our estimation, is Pastor Russell. His teaching will endure the final test and come out victorious because they include the whole Gospel truth from Genesis to Revelations. Greetings to all faithful followers of Christ . Rich blessings be upon you and your grand service.

Yours for success,
R. C. and LILLIAN B. JOHNSTON.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. Who will start the ball rolling?

NO WAGES FOR SUNDAY LABOR.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 29.—Judge Charles T. Ray has dismissed the petition of M. P. Fears, a minor, whose guardian sued the S. S. Kresge company for wages for work performed on Sundays while in the employ of the defendant company.

The court held that the work performed by Fears was a violation of the statute, and that "the court will not lend its aid to further any unlawful practice, nor will it aid any one to reap the benefit of an unlawful act." Fears claimed he was compelled to work ten Sundays.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW ILLEGAL.

DETROIT, Mich, March 29.—Judge Frank Davis of Iona county has ruled that the Detroit minimum wage charter amendment is illegal. This legislation was initiated by the local federation of labor and was made a part of the municipal organic act last spring by the largest vote ever given a charter amendment. It provides that city employes shall work only eight hours; that common laborers on public work shall not receive less than $2.50 and that skilled mechanics shall receive the highest prevailing rate in that particular work.

Despite the emphatic vote this legislation received, municipal authorities have not looked upon it with favor and now Judge Davis rules that the amendment is illegal because it "did not lie on the table before the common council for 30 days before being voted on," and that the amendment was not placed before the governor before being submitted to the voters.

DIVINE PREDESTINATION REASONABLE, BEAUTIFUL

PREDESTINATION OF THE CHURCH A BLESSING TO THE WORLD, NOT AN INJURY.

Church Foreknown From Before the Creation of the World — God Foreknew the End From the Beginning — Our Heavenly Lord the Second Adam — The Church to Mother the Entire Human Family — Predestination Greatly Misunderstood in the Past— Elect to Bless the Non-Elect — Character Conformation to God's Dear Son.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Pastor Russell delivered a very interesting and logical address at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd street, near Broadway, this evening, on a subject which has greatly confused people in the past. His text was, "For whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the Firstborn among many brethren." (Romans 8:29.) He said in part:

It seems very wonderful, dear friends, that our great Creator should so long ago have planned not only the blessing of the world, but also the High Calling of the Church. He foreknew us before the world was created, before we had come into existence. He knew the end from the beginning, as we on a small scale often do today. If a man would put up a great building, he would employ an architect to draw up plans and specifications, and in the plan everything would be arranged for beforehand. The size and the location of the various rooms, the character of the material to be used, etc., would all be foreknown and forestated, so that whoever would read the specifications, and see the architect's drawings, would know exactly what kind of building was to be erected. Just so our Creator is a great Architect and Builder; and His entire Plan for mankind was pre-arranged before the foundation of the world.

God has had a special purpose in everything He has made, has had a blessing in view for all His intelligent creatures. He has not been working in a hap-hazard manner, doubtful of the outcome of His plans and purposes, as once it seemed to us in our ignorance. It is very comforting to know that our Heavenly Father has infinite Wisdom and Power, as well as infinite Justice and Love; and that His glorious purposes cannot be thwarted or even delayed, but are grandly progressing to their completion. No opposition of man or demons can interfere with the glorious outworking of His great Plan of the Ages.—Isaiah 55:8-11; Ephesians 1:9-12.

At one time many of us thought that the Devil had come into competition with God, and so opposed the Divine plans that the Almighty did not know just how to get around the matter, but tried first one way and then another. We supposed that somehow God would finally get His few children out of Satan's clutches, but that everything and everybody else would be burned up with literal fire, the unsaintly being confined in a place which we called Hell, to be tortured eternally. Now we see that we had very crude, confused ideas, especially when we tried to connect this thought with the Scriptural declaration that God had foreknown all this from before the foundation of the world. We are very thankful that all this darkness is scattered; and that we can now see why God has permitted evil, and how He will overrule all things in the end for the good, not only of the Church, but of the world.

THE SECOND ADAM AND EVE.

According to the Bible our great Creator predetermined first the creation of various ranks of angels and then the creation of man. All this was accomplished through the Logos, our Lord Christ in His prehuman state, as the Father's Agent. God knew that man would fall into sin. He knew that at the proper time He would send the Logos, His well-beloved Son, to redeem man. All this being known to God, He also foreknew that He would issue a special Call for a Church class to be associated with His Son as the Bride of Christ, for the judging, instructing and restoring of the race which that Son died to redeem.

We perceive that our Lord Jesus, now supremely exalted because of His obedience unto death (Philippians 2:8-11), is to be the second Adam, the second Father of the human race. He is to make good where the first Adam failed, and to recover him and his posterity—as many of them as will—to all that was lost in Eden.

Thus the Bible presents before us a beautiful picture— a second Adam and a second Eve, the new Father and Mother of the race. The father is the one who generates the life; the mother nourishes the life that is generated by the father. So the work of the Church when completed and glorified with Christ will be to care for, to nourish and to upbuild the human family, who will be recreated by Christ Jesus, their Redeemer. Step by step she will raise them up to perfection. What a marvelous Plan—a Plan by which the Heavenly Father's likeness shall be restored to the human race! Oh, how glorious it is to have a God like this, One who is working all things according to the counsel of His own will! We can rest securely by faith, assured that our God knows what He is doing; and that His plans are all good, wise and benevolent.

At first we could take only the A, B, C lessons; but as we have grown in love and in intelligence concerning our God we know Him better, and are beginning to see lengths, breadths, heights and depths of His Love and Wisdom which surpass all human understanding. "Whom He did foreknow," says the Apostle, "He also did predestinate." At one time that word "predestinate" had a terrible sound to us. We said, "Oh, yes; Calvin taught that God predestinated a few saints to be saved to Heavenly bliss, but that everybody else He predestinated to go to eternal torment."

But, dear friends, God has never predestinated anything of that kind. There is not even a hint in our text regarding predestination of the world. Our text refers only to a predestination of the true Church, a company who after they were called would by faithfulness to the terms of their covenant make their calling and election sure. God has predestinated a certain class, to be composed of a definite number, for a special purpose. Whoever would be of this class must meet the required conditions.

THE BIBLE PREDESTINATION.

This class is predestined to be conformed to the image of God's dear Son. This is a grand predestination. It rests with us individually whether or not we shall thus conform ourselves. In this same Epistle the Apostle says to the Church, "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed, by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." (Romans 12:2.) Nobody will be in that elect class who does not become conformed to the character-likeness of God's dear Son. This Church of Christ is almost completed. The predetermined number—144,000—is about filled up. Every one of them will surely be a copy of Christ in character.

Since God has foreordained that He will have such a company, it follows that all of our experiences from the time that we have come into the Church will work favorably to us if we continue loyal. But if any who have been numbered amongst this class should become tired of the narrow way and should walk out of it, their names will be dropped, and others chosen to fill their places. There is absolutely no Scriptural authority for the doctrine held by some that none of the Elect can fall; in other words, "Once in grace always in grace." The Bible abounds in warnings as to the danger of falling.

When we consecrated ourselves to the Lord through Christ Jesus, when we made our covenant with God (Psalm 50:5), we were accepted through the merit of our great Substitute. Our Lord Jesus became our High Priest. We were begotten of God's Holy Spirit, and then became New Creatures. (2 Corinthians 5:17.) To all such God guarantees that so long as they ABIDE IN CHRIST, they shall be kept; and that all things shall work together for their good. If we remain faithful unto death, we shall have part in the First Resurrection, Christ's resurrection, as members of His glorious Body. (Revelation 20:6.) If we keep our Covenant of Sacrifice, if we keep our sacrifice upon the altar until it is fully consumed, we shall surely win the crown of life—glory, honor and immortality. Keeping our covenant means to walk daily in the narrow way, to walk in the footsteps of Jesus.

The attainment of the character-likeness of Christ is a gradual work, an education. We cannot get it all at once. When first we are accepted into the family of God, we enter the School of Christ to receive daily lessons along this very line. By the Word of God and by the providences of life we are taught. Being imperfect, blemished by the fall, we cannot render perfect service to God, as did our Master; but we are to do our best to follow our great Pattern. Our loyalty is demonstrated in our wills, our hearts; and our wills are manifested in our works up to the point of our ability. Any shortcoming, any mistake or sin on our part would not be an act of the New Creature; for it cannot sin, being begotten from Above. The wrong-doing would be of the old nature, the fallen flesh.

TRIALS ESSENTIAL TO DEVELOPMENT.

The new mind, working in us to will and to do of God's good pleasure, grows stronger day by day, hour by hour, and makes us more and more copies of His dear Son. But in order to have this new mind grow stronger, TRIALS are necessary. How could we know that we are developing, if we had no trials to demonstrate the matter? As we pray for patience, meekness, love and various other fruits of the Holy Spirit, we are sure to have trials along these lines, to demonstrate our growth and to develop us further in each of these directions. Only by continued and earnest effort, only by struggling and prayer and the study of the Word of God, can we grow as New Creatures in Christ.

God answers our prayers for more of His Holy Spirit by giving us experiences whereby we may have a larger measure of the likeness of Christ. And we should rejoice in this; for by no other means can we be developed and proven. We need patience, meekness, gentleness, faith, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love. It takes time to develop these qualities. We desire to be fitted for the Kingdom. But what kind of characters will be acceptable? The Church is to govern the affairs of the world for a thousand years; and how could any one be qualified for such a work who had not learned the necessary lessons? Those, and those only, who have developed the necessary qualities will be fitted for so exalted a position. We must learn patience before we shall be able to teach patience to others. We must become loving, kind and meek before we can teach these graces to the world.

TRIALS SUMMED UP UNDER TWO HEADS.

We might sum up all of our trials under two general heads; faith and loyalty. Faith in our Lord Jesus is one of the greatest tests—not merely a belief that He was the Son of God, but a different kind of faith from that of intellectual assurance. We must develop faith in the precious promises of God and in His loving care. Our Lord Jesus assured us that if we are faithful in that which is least, we shall be faithful in much. In all our experiences with the brethren, in our business affairs and in our dealings with the world we are to learn the required lessons.

We are ever to recognize God First, and to remember that we have given ourselves to Him. We are to recognize His hand in all the affairs of our life and to believe His promise that all things are working together for our good. Whoever has this faith will have a rest of heart and mind. When difficulties arise, his first thought will be, "What lesson has God for me in this experience?" The Lord's people are not to think, "This person has opposed my plans and has brought me this trouble"; but they should say to themselves, "My Father knows all about this difficulty, and has permitted it for my good. He will overrule it all."

If circumstances so shape themselves that we are obliged to change our residence, we are not to feel, "I do not wish to make this change. I prefer to continue just where I am." Rather we are to think, "If the Lord wishes me to make a change, it is all right; for I know that His way is best, and that this experience will work out for my good." Our Lord Jesus always recognized the Father's will and gladly bowed to it, whether He understood it or not. We are to be followers of Christ; we are to have His mind. There is no lesson that the Lord's people need more than this lesson of implicit trust in God.—2 Peter 1:12-14.

Let us never forget that nothing can come to us unless it is permitted by the Lord. Let us look beyond our environments and say, as our Master did, "The cup which My Father hath poured for me, shall I not drink it?" He did not say, "Why do the people treat Me so? Why do the rulers scheme against Me?" On the contrary, He accepted all His painful experiences in perfect faith and trust, as the cup which the Father had poured for Him to drink.

THE GOLDEN MEASURING-ROD.

Now what about our loyalty? The loyalty of the New Creation is loyalty to God. This means loyalty to the principles of righteousness, for which He stands. The first of these is justice, the very foundation of His Throne. The Master gave us a beautiful picture of justice when He gave us the Golden Rule: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." (Luke 6:31.) This is indeed a Golden Rule. We could not properly represent God unless we practised the Law of our great King—the Ruler of the Universe. This is His first requirement—loyalty to the principle of justice.

In Revelation 11:1 St. John was given a reed, or rod, with which to measure the Temple of God. That Temple, which is the Church, is now being measured by the Golden Rule, here called a reed, a rod. If we are earnestly endeavoring to apply the Golden Rule in every affair of life—in the home, in the Church, in dealing with the world, then we are practising the principle of justice. Each of us is to do the measuring for himself. We are not to measure one another. Only in an extreme case is the Church to do the measuring. (Matthew 18:15-17.) We are to judge, or measure, our thoughts as well as our conduct by this rule; for "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

But loyalty to God goes beyond the Golden Rule. It includes supreme love to God, love to the brethren, love to the whole world, even our enemies. Our love for God causes us to wish to represent Him properly, as His ambassadors. (Philippians 2:15.) We are under the banner of Jesus Christ. This means that we are to fight against all manner of sin and error—not with carnal weapons, but with the Sword of the Spirit. We are to fight the good fight of faith against the weaknesses of our flesh, striving to bring ourselves into a condition where we may glorify God in every act, word and thought. This is loyalty.

SPECIAL BLESSINGS OF CHURCH TODAY.

This predestined class, the Church of God, has been in process of preparation for more than eighteen hundred years. Now we have come to the close of the Age. The Church of today has had wonderful favors from God. We have Bibles and Bible Helps such as were never before possessed. We have various translations of the Scriptures, good lights, shorter hours of labor, affording more time for study, etc. In this time of special blessing and advantage, however, we have correspondingly more trials, as we should expect.

Moreover, we are favored with a fuller understanding of God's great Plan, with its times and seasons of fulfillment, than the Church has ever had before. Therefore we should be better able to use skillfully the Sword of the Spirit than were our brethren of an earlier day. Surely we should have on securely "the whole armor of God." (Ephesians 6:12-18.) We need every piece, that we may be able to stand. A great fight is on now, at the end of the Age. There is much contention against "the faith once delivered to the saints." We must not only stand ourselves, but we must help others to stand also. Thus shall we be conformed to the image of God's dear Son, and fitted for our exaltation to bless the whole groaning creation.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

In order that we may conform strictly to the laws of the Postal Department and live in perfect harmony with Uncle Sam we are compelled to urge, and we do it most tenderly, immediate and most prompt remittance of all subscriptions that are in arrears.

Our generosity in hesitating to cut off promptly those who have become delinquent and who have been unable to pay owing to financial reverses is in conflict with Uncle Sam's prescribed rules and unless we revise our list at once there is grave danger of having our entire issue excluded from the mails.

We do want to live in absolute obedience to the laws of our nation as well as our God and we are confident every one of our subscribers are thoroughly in accord with our law abiding policy both spiritual and temporal. To aid in this won't every subscriber please consult the yellow label on the wrapper carrying the Tribune to your home and if your subscription is due won't you please mail the subscription price AT ONCE?

Please do it NOW. Won't you? If you delay there is danger you will forget. Lest we forget, Lest we forget. Do it right NOW. Do Remember the momentum and the ponderosity of the little wonderful word NOW. AND PLEASE DO IT NOW.

WESLEY, THE THEOLOGIAN.

The great heart of enthusiastic Wesley changed somewhat by his experience in life. His ardor cooled but not his purpose—he gained in extent what he lost in intensity; his disappointments in America and later at Oxford contributed to this. His firm stand against the theological squatters was not of the bigoted kind. He kept pace with other departments of research as well. "Always in my saddle-bags beside my Bible and hymnal I carried one good book."

He later split with Whitefield on the question of Election. Wesley taking the Arminian view and Whitefield the Calvinistic. This proves that his high conception of principle outlined in his sermon just quoted has been applied in his personal experience and subsequently bore fruitage—the doctrine of Free Grace. His utterances later indicate his progress and his attitude towards the institution he attempted to reform. We present another sample which will reveal the contrast. The first quotation heretofore presented sounds like Russell in the "Watch Tower", which he styles his sixteen page letter, or heart to heart talk with his congregation, principally the product of the "table talks" at the family of self sacrificing Christians at the "Bethel Home." and the following citation approaches more to what might be an epitome of Russelel's teaching in general, including the theological features which proves Wesley's assertion that his former faith was fused with Paganism. It follows:

"To adopt and live a life of simplicity and service for mankind is difficult; but to follow the love of luxury, making a clutch for place, pelf and power, labeling Paganism Christianity, and imagining you are a follower of Christ, this is easy. Yet all through life we see that the reward is paid for the difficult task. And now I summon you to a life of difficulty, not merely for the sake of the reward but because the life of service is the righteous life—the right life—the life that leads to increased life and increased light."

Temperamentally Wesley and Russell differ to such an extent that they admit of little comparison, but they were both living examples of the adage "Firmness of purpose but variablesness of mind." What both men set out to do they remained doing, but changed their method to suit circumstances as they presented themselves—they both sailed under sealed order and obeyed them when the seals were broken by divine Providence, when out in the open sea away from the shores of precedence of institutionalism, Wesley, in line with doctrinal differences from the Church of England, formally broke away and founded a new institution to defend his theological principles and returned to preaching in the pulpit, much to the consternation of his brother Charles and Whitefield. Whatever can be said against a self-appointed Bishop, vested with the power of ordaining others, is offset by the wisdom of separating and keeping his congregations apart from formalism and doctrines of the Established Church—so unlike "Billy" Sunday who packs his converts away into the "cold storage" sects that support his campaigns. Wesley's life was a life of service—he gave himself to the people of England and was guided by Providence. This applies to Russell as well. To attribute the remarkable success of the I. B. S. A. propaganda solely to the genius of its founder would be as preposterous as flattering. Both men governed by Providence and varying temperamentally their individuality was still preserved—Russell's experience was Wesley's inverted (as also was his temperament) in that his theology was developed near the start of his career whereas Wesley's near the close. Note the following prayer of young Russell indicating his natural inclinations which is such a vivid contrast to the sermon heretofore quoted from Wesley delivered in early life:

"Oh, great, Almighty God, although unknown to me, I worship Thee! I adore Thee. My whole being cries out for the pleasure of more intimate acquaintance with Thee, that I might know Thy will regarding me and Thy purpose respecting humanity. I said, assuredly, as God is all wise, He must have an all-wise purpose, of which I need not be ashamed! So surely as He is just and loving, all of His plans and purposes must accord with these qualities; and having made man capable of appreciating these qualities, He will surely be willing to bestow the information which I desire—Information as to how I can best please and serve Him and as to what His purpose and intentions are respecting mankind."

In characterizing these men by a sample of the predominating sentiments as revealed in these citations from their pens, it seems like passing from the beautiful to the sublime. The sentiments of this prayer predominating a man of genius, divested of all prejudice in having lost his faith in the creeds of Churchanity, with a simple, innocent, child-like faith that God would answer his prayer, suggest that he would be the most likely one that God would use to call attention to His purposes as revealed on the pages of the Bible in His own time and way! This prayer proves the assertion of Prof. W. E. Ellis that "he is not to be measured by the common standards." In contrasting these men from these citations, we have Wesley centering on Christian life as a means to more light and succeeding in this in anticipating the Divine Plan in Free Grace and Future Probation. Russell centers on an intelligent appreciation of God's purposes respecting Christian life and a knowledge of His purposes concerning mankind with a sympathy that extends to the whole creation, groaning in the bondage of sin and superstition and succeeds—his mission culminates the Reformation in the sense that it brings all its doctrines to their zenith from a rational point of view in being considered in the light of all of the leading attributes of God—not only of Wisdom but also of Justice, Love and Power.

100,000 CERTIFICATE TO THE HIGH CANDIDATE.

Under last week's offer, every one worked hard and turned in a lot of good business but we believe that you can do even better and are going to offer you a Special Prize of 100,000 votes to the one that turns in the most business, dating back from April 1, to April the 27th, which time this Special Offer closes.

For the six candidates that finish next high, we will give each a certificate for 50,000 votes.

We are going to let the old offer stand another week feeling that there are a few that did not get as much business that they should have and now they will have one more chance to get these extra votes.

Remember the offer—50,000 extra votes for $14.00 worth of business.

The 100,000 and the 50,000 certificates are in addition to the Special Offer Votes.

Or in other words, you get credit for all the business that you have turned in since the first of April to the 27th.

Remember that this is the last and final offer that will be put on during the contest and you had better work hard now as you will get more votes for your money under this offer than if you wait until the last week.

MINERS SETTLE SCALE; MANY RETURN TO WORK

President Van Bitner Signs the Scale and Three Thousand Men Return to Work--Four Thousand Still Idle.

The United Mine Workers after their successful adjustment of the scale of wages on a run-of-mine basis, which means an additional advance of 15 per cent on top of an advance of about 20 per cent have determined to carry their war in the Allegheny valley and along the Kiskiminitis river.

On the first day of April 7000 miners went on strike and remained out until Monday when President Van Bitner of district No. 5 with members of national and district executive committee met the operators and the scale was signed by the Ford Colleries company, for Curtisville mines, The Bessermer Coal & Coke company signed for Russelton, Allegheny Coal company for Harwick, and Saxman for the Superior. The settlement by these companies means that 3000 additional miners have been added to the Pittsburgh district and are now under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers in what is known as Sub District No. 7 with James Oates, formerly of the Monongahela valley, as chief organizer.

There are 4000 more miners still on strike in this Valley and the organizers are sweeping up the Kiskiminitis toward Blairsville with an avowed determination that all miners in the Pittsburgh district will eventually be brought within the jurisdiction of the Pittsburgh local. The last mines reached in the Allegheny Valley were those of the Johnetta Coal and Clay company near Kittanning.

President Bitner is looking forward to a great year and boasts of an organization of 50,000 miners in the Pittsburgh district of which he is the head. There is an abundance of work ahead with profitable contracts and the district organization the president declares will bend all efforts to see that the operator is given a square deal and that any assistance required to force the prices of coal up to a profitable margin for the operator will be done so that the operator will feel that while he is paying high prices for labor the public is shouldering the burden and paying the bill.

He realizes the necessity of avoiding any bargain in restraint of trade but contends that since 1896 the miners have been chiefly responsible for establishing better markets for the operator than he was able to create for himself. The intention is to make the prices for mining uniform and thereby establish a uniform market price as well as a market wherein all miners shall be paid a uniform scale of wages by which all unjust competion may be destroyed. Under such conditions there can be no undercutting by the producer as now exists by producers in some parts of West Virginia and all will be given an advantage of prices that have been lifted to the pinacle through the ability of the miners to control the cost of mining in the respective fields and thus eliminating that keen competition that was so often responsible for the destruction of the coal market.

Of course it is known that coal only exists in certain stratas and the production can better meet a uniform price in competitive fields than any manufacturing product. Hence the selling prices are controlled by the organization demanding a higher price for mining and thus forcing a higher cost to the consumer. The advance secured by the miners is immediately transferred to the consumer and the burden of meeting the responsibility seems not so difficult after the increased cost has been heralded throughout the country by the newspapers.

THE REAL SIGNIFICANCE OF THE EIGHT HOUR DAY

By William Gordon Jamison.

Organized labor has instituted a persistent propaganda for what is popularly known as an eight-hour day. Its chief argument for this limited working day is that it gives the worker more time for recreation, for mental development and for home life. This is an argument that carries a very wide appeal and, undoubtedly, it has helped to create a very substantial amount of smpathy for those who are making this demand. There are very few in the United States who do not desire that labor shall be made as light as possible, and that the condition of the working man shall be improved as much as possible by recreation, rational enjoyment and the means provided for mental development. One great argument against a general eight-hour day is the economic impossibility of its general adoption. It is evident that an eight-hour day applying to all industries in the United States, and strictly enforced to the extent that each man should work only eight hours a day, is economically impossible.

In the first place, the industries of the country could not, under such circumstances, turn out sufficient product to supply normal demands, and certainly they would be in a very poor way to enter into competition either with foreingn manufacturers or manufacturers working their men more than eight hours a day. Even if it were possible, financially, for a manufacturer to employ two different shifts of men eight hours each and pay double wages the condition would remain practically the same, because there are not enough skilled men in the whole nation to furnish two shifts for each factory in the country. Therefore, the proposition resolves itself into a question of decreased output, limited markets and decreased trade for the United States if a straight eight-hour day is demanded and actually enforced; or, if the industries of the country are to be operated practically to their full capacity, and trade continued under normal conditions, there must be very substantial overtime. But overtime is strictly at variance with the argument which is presented in favor of an eight hour working day. The minute a man who is committed to the eight-hour day labors overtime he stultifies himself and belies the argument that he wants eight hours only for work because of his need for recreation, mental development and home life. The man who willingly puts in ten hours, two hours of which are overtime, is not a consistent advocate of the eight-hour day. He is rather an advocate of a limitation of the working day for the purpose of creating overtime which means overpay for himself.

This is the actual situation which exists. The eight-hour working day is a myth, but the eight-hour day as a preliminary to overtime is what is actually demanded. While statistics are not available, it has been asserted on good authority that not five per cent of the men who are supposed to have an eight-hour working day actually work exactly eight hours. Fully ninety-five per cent of those operating under an eight-hour day arrangement are working nine, ten, eleven and twelve hours, drawing overtime for the additional hours they work. Furthermore, they work overtime cheerfully, if inconsistently, at least, with their argument of recreation and mental development. The eight-hour day is simply a device, in most instances, for the creation of overtime, and in a very limited way only is it availed of by workers either for recreation, mental development or home life. The inspiration and purpose of the eight-hour day is two hours' overtime at one and one-half or two times the hourly wage during the regular working day.

This condition necessarily dissipates that sympathy which the arguments of those in favor of eight hours created. These arguments are essentially dishonest, and it were better if organized labor, seeking a limited working day, came out flatly and said that eight hours at regular pay must constitute a day's work in order that there may be more overtime and overpay, and, therefore, greater remuneration for the worker. That would be honest and perfectly plain, and it would not excite maudlin sympathy based on a bogus argument.

This situation is best illustrated by the present demands of railroad employees for an eight-hour workday. The men are asking for higher wages and not for shorter working hours. Val Fitzpatrick, legislative agent and vice president of the trainmen, in an article in the official organ, the Railroad Trainman, puts the point specifically and without any flourishes:

"There appears to be some difference of opinion as to what the proposal for an eight-hour basic workday involves. Therefore, it may be reasonable to say there is quite a difference between an eight-hour workday and an eight-hour basic workday.

"The first contemplates that eight hours shall be the maximum working time, and as a rule, where the eight hour workday obtains through contract relations between employer and employees, it is the constant endeavor to prevent working overtime except in cases of necessity. It appears that some of the men in the train service are of the opinion that this is the proposal of the organization. However, this is not the case.

"The eight-hour basic workday contemplates that eight hours shall be the basis for a day's work, and any time in excess thereof shall be paid for as overtime, consequently under such a provision there is no limit to the hours worked. The latter system is the one proposed by the train service Brotherhoods."

This is an honest confession, although it is more or less plain that the statement was not intended for public consumption, inasmuch as other arguments offered on behalf of an eight-hour working day for railroad men contained the old platitudes of a shorter working day for recreation, mental development and home life. It is high time that the employers of the country who have granted an eight-hour working day should examine their books and find out and publish to the world the exact facts as to the actual number of working hours which these eight-hour men are paid for. Undoubtedly, the average would be ten hours a day, two hours of which are overtime. It might then occur to the sociological experts, who are desirous of providing recreation, mental development and greater home life for the worker, to inquire into the number of those who have availed themselves of the limited working day of eight hours in order to take advantage of those other and higher things for which the eight-hour day was demanded.

If an eight-hour working day was an economic possibility in the United States, there is not the slightest doubt that it would become general automatically. These things develp of themselves and as a result of actual conditions. Hours of labor would adjust themselves to the economic demands of the country and, if eight hours or six hours were possible, then there would be a general eight-hour or six-hour day. But a general eight-hour day is at present impossible and, in the meantime, the demands of labor for an eight-hour day cannot be complied with although labor may force a nominal eight-hour day and exact over time for the necessary additional hours which it works. The time is ripe for the elimination of the cant that labor's demands for a shorter working day are primarily humanitarian, because the facts show that the reasons are actually pecuniary.

PEOPLE ON THE MOUNT PLEAD WITH THE COURT

No Saloons Needed for "Entertainment of Man or Beast" on the Hill Tops is the Plea.

Nowhere in the city is the opposition to the saloon being more bitterly waged than in the 19th ward and the eagerness with which the actions of the license court is being watched exceeds that of any other community.

Every resident of the hill top in that section is interested and the manner with which applicants for liquor license are fought clearly illustrates the determination of the residents to use every influence to destroy the saloon in that residential section.

No valid reason can be advanced why a license should be granted to any one of the applicants and the few who have signed the applicants' petitions are overwhelmed by those who are remonstrating. In a small portion of the ward and chiefly adjacent to the saloons 6892 persons of legal age have signed petitions to the court protesting against the granting of licenses. This is 1587 names more than last year and more than 3000 names over two years ago. This is not all. Others sought an opportunity to sign but were refused because they resided only across the line in the 18th ward but near to some of the places for which licenses are being asked.

Mt. Washington is no longer a place for a saloon and should the court decide to eliminate the few remaining there need be no fear that any living soul will die of thirst. Within five minutes walk of the present locations there is ample to drink and if the court desires to comply with the wishes of the residents and win everlasting praise the refusal of the present applicants will meet with general satisfaction and almost universal approval.

That Boggs avenue is a principle thoroughfare is absurd and Judge Carpenter is too familiar with the street, knowing full well that the only exit at the south end is to fall off.

The opening of the West Side Belt line has removed any traffic hauling through Mt. Washington back to Brookline, Beechview and what is commonly called the south hills and the only traffic now is left to the laundry man, the bread man and the milkman, the latter's rounds are begun and ended between closing and opening hours. Hence the myth of accommodation is shattered and the only purpose is to destroy the peace and dignity of the community in which the institution is permitted to exist. The absurdity of accommodation and entertainment is apparent when the heart of the city is so near. There are no business houses of any size that would require agents to loiter any length of time in order to sell a bill of goods.

Three applicants are seeking license on Boggs avenue and two of these places flank the Cargo Public school. What magnificent emblems of enlightened civilization. From the highest pinicle of the school building Old Glory waves her welcome to the morning sun and beneath are the monsters whose finished product would in a moment of dispair rip her from the mast head, trample her in the mire or pond her for "just another drink."

Beyond the school to the south and very near one of the saloons is a church while near to the other applicant down Ruth street is being erected the new High School. What marvelous spaciments of architecture to grace our public institutions. Do the citizens in any other section of the great city of Pittsburgh wonder why fathers and mothers are so anxious to sign remonstrances and register their protests against granting licences to places such as are being applied for by Jacob Pfeil, Corner of Wyoming and Boggs street and August Fuchs, Corner Boggs avenue and Greenbush street. If the Court would win applause and earn for itself extreme gratitude wipe from the Mount the liquor traffic.

Another applicant is Chris Wilbert whose place is at the corner or Shiloh and Sycamore, scarcely a hundred and thirty-two feet from the Mount Washington Baptist Church, an institution that has been there ror 50 years, several generations before that place became the habitation for a saloon. Next door to the Baptist church is the Mt. Washington M. E. Church and beyond that the Penticostal church. There can be no "entertainment for man and beast" at Wilbert's. The street car track is within three feet of the curb and no place nor room for wagon or horse. In the rear of the building the entrance must be made along Sycamore street and to get down Sycamore street a derrick is absolutely essential and with the aid of such an instrument of convenience a wall six feet high confronts the "man or beast" and this by all appearance cannot be removed nor changed without threatening the stability of the saloon building. The age of the applicant is said to be 75 years and for the obstreprous he is said to be too feeble. Those wishing accommodation five minutes will place them in the heart of the city via the incline. August Meahl, Jr., is the last applicant to apply for 223 Shiloh street.

This is the perennial, the never fading, the everlasting spot. History only can record the number of times this place has been refused for man's memory is too short. The memory of the location and its past fate is new only to the judiciary and then only when the Court for the first time is basking in the crimson presence of liquor applicants. The place of John Trainor is regarded as a rendevous for employes of the Pittsburgh Railways Company who are drinking in violation of the rules of the company and here it is alleged drivers going to funerals take on liberal loads.

The applicant himself is regarded as unfit and the refusal of this applicant would meet with entire satisfaction the wishes of many of the residents. Adam Spohn, No. 39 Southern avenue wants a license but he is charged with violating the law, in that he has sold to habitual drunkards. When the wife of one man after requesting that no liquor be sold her husband again protested it is said that Spohn asked for a photograph of the husband but the wife promptly administered a rebuke by declaring she had no desire to have her husband exhibited as a rogue.

There is no necessity for such institutions on the hill and the Court would win everlasting praise by eliminating them. The feeling is general for a clean sweep and the argument that there is a necessity is simply ridiculous. The Court may rest assured there is no danger of death, epidemic, starvation or anyone dying of thirst in the event the saloon is eliminated and the community will be greatly enhanced as a residential section. Nothing is more deplorable and repulsive than to know that children must pass by such institutions on their way to and from school and the church and the language and the debauchery is revolting. It is conclusive as well as very apparent by the sentiment the Court could do no harm in responding to the wish of the remonstrants among whom are the best people of which the city can boast and those who have the welfare of the community at heart.

SEAMEN'S ACT DEFENDED.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 12.—In a speech in this city United States Senator La Follette defended the seamen's act and said the reason American boys are quitting the sea is because they cannot compete with the $8 a month wage paid to Orientals.

"Every line of the bill is in the interest of safety for human life at sea and for justice to the American seaman," he said. "There was only one small body of men under this flag of ours who had not the protection of the thirteenth amendment to the constitution. Do you know that every American seaman sailing the high seas was subject to imprisonment if he quit work? Think of it for just one momet. Do you know what the effect was? It was driving every American boy who had a love for the sea to find something else, with the result that American sailors were supplanted by Japanese, Chinese and men from the Mediterranean who could be employed at $8 a month."

THE PACKERS' "GENEROSITY."

The St. Louis packers have raised the wages of their employees $30,000 a week. Sounds big, doesn't it? But there are 30,000 of them and this is the first raise in eighteen years.

Meanwhile the cost of living has risen by not less than 50 per cent. The packers take great credit for allowing this advance "unsolicited."

Their generosity seems to have been influenced by their porcine associations. But a dollar a week will pay for considerable lard, if one can't afford butter, says the San Francisco Star.

Satan's Counterfeit of True Religion

By Arthur Pink.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Proverbs 14:12.

It may be a subject of some surprise to learn that Satan has a gospel, yet such would not be the case if all were familiar with the Satan of Scripture. Unfortunately for themselves the great majority today are not acquainted with the delineation of the Devil which God's Word supplies. They know little or nothing about his motives, his methods, his ministers, his machinery or his media. To them he is either a hideous monster with horns, hoofs and a tail, or else an abstract principle of evil—the absence of good, a negation. The words which Goethe put into the mouth of Mephistopheles in "Faust," "I am the spirit of Negation," is the popular definition of the Devil today. He is impersonal, immaterial, impossible. As one has quaintly put it, "They spell Devil without a 'd' as they spell God with two 'o's.'" Good and evil is their scheme. "All the Devil there is, is the devil within you," is the last word of modern theology.

Now, an intelligent enemy always keeps in the background, remains hidden; out of sight. It is an important factor to his success that his identity should be concealed. The assassin who plunges a knife into the back of his victim is generally hired for the purpose. The one who throws the bomb is merely a pawn, the master mind that planned the deed is unseen and unsuspected. The police in some of our large cities know perfectly well that many of the most daring crimes are engineered by one who is too astute to show his hand. Those whom he employs to execute his plans may be caught, but the genius who "pulls the strings" is secure. Therefore it need not surprise us to find that the masses do not believe in the existence of a personal Devil. It would be strange were it otherwise. "Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise" is doubtless an axiom, of the truth and value of which, in relation to humanity, the Devil is fully assured.

The Word of God does not leave us in any doubt as to the existence of a personal Devil. It furnishes us with a full-length portrait of him. It gives us a comprehensive description of his being, his emissaries and his aims. Personal names are ascribed to him and personal characteristics attributed to him. He is represented as being the originator and source of all evil in the universe, and the implacable enemy of God and man. His power is so tremendous that we are informed, "Michael, the archangel, when contending with the Devil (he disputed about the body of Moses) durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee." (Jude 9.) His dominion is so great and his impudence so audacious that he offered all the kingdoms of the world to the Son of God, on the one condition that He would fall down and worship him. And our Lord did not challenge his right to make such an offer, but upon a subsequent occasion acknowledged him to be the Prince of this world.

Moreover, the Word of God not only describes at length the person and power of the Devil, but it also acquaints us with his purposes, which may be summed up under two heads, namely: To deny the Word of God and to destroy the work of Jesus Christ. It would be apart from our present purpose were we to turn aside and show at length how every available weapon was employed in the first centuries of the Christian Era to destroy the Bible, and how in these last days Satan is using the pens of the "higher critics" to destroy the authority of the Holy Scriptures. Suffice it to say that, from the day when he repudiated the words of Jehovah to Eve, until the moment when he is cast into the Abyss, his untiring energies will be devoted to the work of denying the Oracles of God.

Ever since the first Messianic prediction Satan has tried to destroy the Work of our Lord Jesus Christ. First by way of anticipation and secondly by a method of imitation. When Jehovah declared to the serpent that the Seed of the woman should bruise his head, it was not long before that old serpent, the Devil, tried to frustrate the purposes of God. Cain (who was of that wicked one) slew his brother Abel as the first attempt to destroy the woman's seed. Later on, God declared to Abraham that "in him should all the families of the earth be blessed," or, as the Holy Spirit's comment on these words informs us, "Now to Abram and his Seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to "seeds," as of many, but as One, And to thy Seed, which is Christ." (Galatians 3:16.) When in Egypt the descendants of Abraham began to wax numerous and it appeared that there was an immediate likelihood of this prophecy receiving its fulfilment. Satan tried to frustrate the prophecies of God and destroy the channel through which that Seed was to come by inciting Pharaoh to issue a command that the male children of the Hebrew women should be destroyed. (Exodus 1:16.) When at a still later date God made known to King David that the promised Messiah was to be born of the royal tribe of Judah, Satan made a still more persistent attack to thwart God, as may be witnessed during the time of the divided kingdom, when the ten tribes made an untiring and determined effort to exterminate the tribe of Judah.

When the fulness of the time was come and Immanuel was born at Bethlehem, Satan promptly made an effort to destroy the young child's life. Through Herod he slew all the children in Bethlehem from two years old and under. But his effort was in vain. For being warned of God in a dream Joseph had taken the young child and his mother and fled into Egypt. At the commencement of our Lord's ministry (in the Temptation), Satan tried to make Him throw Himself down from the Temple. On another occasion when, wearied out with the day's work, our Lord sought a few minutes sleep in the bow of the boat, the Prince of the Power of the Air lashed the sea of Gallilee into a fury until the disciples feared that the little ship was doomed. And it was not until the Creator of the sea commanded it to be still that the plot of the Devil was foiled.

Other instances could be cited in which the Devil sought to prevent our Lord offering Himself as a Sacrifice for sin. Perhaps the supreme occasion was while He was upon the cross itself. Weakened by His sufferings, tortured by His merciless enemies, hanging helpless between the earth and Heaven, Satan challenged Him to demonstrate His Deity by descending from the cross. "Thou that destroyest the Temple, and buildest it in three days, save Thyself. If Thou be the Son of God come down from the cross." (Matthew 27:40.) But glory to His blessed Name He never faltered. He patiently and majestically bore His sufferings in silence until He cried in triumph, "It is finished!" and surrendered His spirit into the hands of the Father. But the Devil had still another card to play. His sacred body having been borne from the cross and laid in the sepulchre, Satan then made it his business to see that it was securely sealed and guarded by a company of Roman soldiers. Ah, Satan! if thou canst only succeed in keeping in the tomb that Body, thou hast triumphed. But no, again thou art defeated! The grave cannot retain its victim, Death cannot hold the Lord of Life. "Up from the grave He rose, with a mighty triumph o'er His foe—Hallelujah, Christ arose:" And today He lives and is alive forevermore!

Having been thwarted and defeated at every point, having failed to prevent the incarnation (His being "made flesh," John 1:14) of our blessed Lord, having failed to prevent His offering Himself as a Sacrifice for sin, having failed to keep His body in the confines of death, it behooves us to inquire, has Satan given up in despair Has he ceased in his efforts to destroy the Work of Christ Has he changed his attitude toward the Son of God or is he still perpetuating his hellish deeds? Is he yet desirous of destroying the virtues of the cross? An answer to these questions is of the greatest importance.

Again we need to turn to the Infallible Word if we would obtain a reliable answer. In the parable of the Tares our Lord has exposed Satan's methods during the time of His absence from this world. After the Son of Man had graciously condescended to scatter the Word of God, Satan likewise did some sowing and went and scattered broadcast his Tares among the Wheat. It is to be noted that he sowed neither thorns nor thistles, but something which so closely resembles the genuine grain that it is not until the time of the Harvest that the one can be distinguished from the other. Then it is seen that the Tares, though resembling the Wheat in every other respect, bear no fruit, produce no increase. In a word, then, just at Satan formerly sought to destroy the Work of Christ by way of anticipation, he is now engaged in the work of nullifying the virtues of the Death of Christ by a method of imitation. Consequently, as Christ has a Gospel Satan must also have a gospel. And, in the nature of the case, it must be a gospel which so much resembles the Gospel of Christ that it is capable of deceiving the unwary and deluding the unsaved. It will be our business now, not to expound his gospel, but, with the Spirit's aid, to expose it.

The gospel of Satan is not a system of revolutionary principles, nor yet a programme of anarchy. It does not inspire wars and strife, but peace and security. It does not set the mother against her daughter and the father against his son, but promotes the fraternal spirit whereby the race is regarded as one great Brotherhood. It does not seek to drag down and degrade the natural man, but to improve and uplift him. To use a popular phrase, it appeals to "the best, all that is good within us." It aims to make this world such a comfortable and congenial habitat that the absence of Christ will not be felt and God will not be needed. It endeavors to make men so satisfied with this life that they shall be totally indifferent to the life hereafter. It propagates the principles of self-sacrifice, mercy, charity and benevolence, teaching men to live for the good of others and to be kind to all. For those who observe its conditions and obey its commands, it promises the development of certain inherent occult powers, the solution of the more recondite problems of man's constitution and the accumulation of esoretic knowledge which is withheld from the multitude. In short, it declares that all who eat of the forbidden fruit shall "be as gods."

In contradistinction to the Gospel of Christ, the gospel of Satan is one of works. Its fundamental principles are: salvation by good deeds, redemption by human merits and regeneration by reformation. Its sacramental phrase is: "Be good and do good." Its motto is: "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." Its various ramifications and organizations are manifold. Temperance reform movements, Christian Socialist Leagues, ethical culture societies, "Peace" Congresses and various other organizations are all employed (perhaps unconsciously) in proclaiming this gospel of Satan—justification by works. The pledge card is substituted for Christ: socal purity, rather than individual regeneration, is the idol of the hour; the cultivation of the flesh is considered more practical than the "birth" (begetting of the spirit; while universal peace is looked for without the interposition of the Prince of Peace.

The apostles of Satan are not saloon-keepers and white slave traffickers, but for the most part "ordained" ministers. Thousands of those who occupy our modern pulpits are not engaged in presenting the fundamentals of the Christian faith, but have turned aside from the Truth and given heed unto fables. Instead of magnifying the enormity of sin and setting forth its eternal consequences, they minimize it by declaring that sin is merely ignorance, the absence of good. Instead of warning their hearers "to flee from the wrath to come," they call God a liar by declaring that He is too loving to destroy His own children and too merciful to send one of His own creatures to eternal damnation ("krisis," condemnation). Instead of preaching that "Without shedding of blood there is no remission" (Hebrews 9:22), they merely hold up Christ as the great Exemplar and exhort their hearers to "follow in His steps." "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." (Romans 10:3.) "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into (imitating) the Apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an Angel of Light. Therefore it is no great thing (not to be wondered at) if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be according to their works."—2 Corinthians 11:13-15.

Added to the fact that hundreds of churches are without a leader who will faithfully declare the whole counsel of God and present His way of salvation, we also have to remember and take into consideration the lamentable and ominous fact that the majority in these congregations are in no way to learn, and have very little possibility of learning the Truth for themselves. The family altar, where portion of God's Word was wont to be read daily, is now—even in the homes of nominal Christians—a thing of the past. The Bible is not expounded in the pulpit and is not read in the pew. The demands of this rushing Age are so many that the multitudes have little time and still less desire to meditate upon the things of God. Hence the majority who are too indolent to search for themselves are left at the mercy of those whom they pay to search for them—those who betray their trust by studying economic and social problems instead of the Scriptures of Truth.

In the Scripture which we have taken as the basis of these remarks the gospel of Satan—the Devil's Delusion—is described as "a way which seemeth Right unto a man." That is to say, it is presented in such plausible language that it appeals to the emotions; it is set forth in such a subtle manner that it commends itself to the intelligence of its hearers. The success of illegitimate coiner depends upon how much the counterfeit resembles the genuine article. A lie is not so much the absolute denial as the perversion of truth. Hence half a lie is always more dangerous in its effects than the total of the truth. Consequently, when the Father of Lies enters the pulpit, he does not flatly deny the great doctrines of Christianity, but he rather tacitly acknowledges them and then proceeds to give an erroneous interpretation and a false application. For example, he would not be so foolish as to boldly announce his disbelief in a personal God—he takes His existence for granted and then gives a false description of His character. He announces that God is the Father of all men, when the Scriptures plainly tell us we are "the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." (Galatians 3:26.) Again, Satan would not make so flagrant a blunder as to ignore the central figure of human history; namely, the Lord Jesus Christ. Instead, He is acknowledged to be the most perfect person who ever lived. Attention is drawn to His deeds of compassion and acts of mercy, the beauty of His character and the tenderness of His teaching. His life is eulogized, but His death is ignored, the all-important-atoning work upon the Cross is never mentioned. It is a bloodless Gospel, and a crossless life and, in regard to His Person, He is merely considered as the Ideal Man.

In 2 Cor. 4:3, we have a Scripture which sheds an abundance of light upon our present subject. There we are told: "If our Gospel be hid, it is hid to those that are lost. In whom the god of this world (Satan) hath blinded the minds of them which belive not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine upon them." He blinds the minds of unbelievers by hiding the light of the Gospel of Christ in presenting his own version of the Truth. Appropriately is he designated "the Devil and Satan which deceiveth the whole world." (Revelation 12:9.) In merely appealing to "the best that is within man," and in merely exhorting him "to lead a nobler life," there is afforded a general platform for all shades of opinion and every shade of philosophic speculation. Atheists. Pantheists, Unitarians, and all other Sectarians can unite to proclaim this common message.

Again we quote our foundation passage: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." The Devil's Delusion is that we can be saved by our own works, and justified by our own deeds. Whereas God tells us, "By grace are ye saved through faith, . . . not of works, lest any man should boast." And again, "Not by works of righteousness which we have done; but according to His mercy He saved us."—Ephesians 2:8, 9; Titus 3:5.

Perhaps at this point an illustration from personal experience may be pardoned Some two years ago the writer became acquainted with one who was a lay preacher and an enthusiastic Christian worker. For over seven years he had been engaged in public preaching and religious activities. But from certain expressions and phrases he used, the writer was not satisfied in his own heart that his friend was really a "born (begotten) again" man. When he began to question him he found that he was only very imperfectly acquainted with the Scriptures and had only the vaguest conception of Christ's work for sinners. For a while the writer sought to present the Plan of Salvation in a simple and impersonal way, in the hope that if he were still unsaved God would be pleased to reveal unto him the Savior for sinners. One night to his joy the one who had been preaching the Gospel (?) for seven years confessed that he had found Christ only the previous night. He confessed (to use his own words) that he had been presenting "the Christ ideal," but not the Christ of the Cross. He had been trying to know Christ as the "Truth" before he knew Him as the "Way."

The writer believes there are thousands like this preacher, who have been brought up in Sunday Schools, taught about the birth, life and teachings of Jesus Christ, who believe in the historicity of His Person, and who think that all that is necessary for their salvation. When they reach manhood and go out into the world they encounter the attacks of atheists and infidels who declare that such a person as Jesus of Nazareth never lived. But the impressions of their early days cannot easily be erased and they remain steadfast in their declaration that they believe in Jesus Christ. Yet when you examine their faith, too often you will find that though they believe about Jesus Christ they do not believe in Him. They believe with the head that such a person lived (and because they believe this, imagine they are saved), but they do not believe with the heart that this Person died to save them from their sins. A merely intellectual assent to the reality of Christ's Person and which goes no further is another phase of the Way "which seemeth right unto a man." but the end thereof "are the ways of death!"

Lack of space prevents our doing more than just pointing out other ends of this Way which "seemeth right." Those who are trusting to an outward form of godliness. those who are religious because it is considered a mark of respectability, those who attend the House of God because it is fashionable to do so, and those who join some Church because they imagine that such a step will enable them to become Christians, all such are in the Way which ends in death—death spiritual and eternal.

And now, my reader, where do you stand. Are you in the Way which 'seemeth right," but which leadeth to death, or are you in the Narrow Way which leadeth to life eternal? Are you trusting in yourself or in Christ? are you relying upon your own works or are you reposing upon the finished work of Christ? A pious life. a self-sacrificing spirit, attractive manners, a charitable disposition, regular attendance at religious services, saying prayers and even reading the Bible, none of these things—nay, all of them together—without faith in the Blood of Christ can obtain for you a passport to Heaven. If any of the above virtues could ever save a single soul, where was the necessity for the awful death of Jesus Christ? No, eternal life is neither a wage nor a reward, but the free Gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. However pure your motives, however noble your intentions, however well-meaning your purposes, God cannot accept you as a son, until you accept His Son.

erford sums his vigorous defense as follows: "From a personal and painstaking examination of every charge that has been made against Pastor Russell, I am thoroughly convinced and confidently state that he is the most unjustly persecuted man on earth. Notwithstanding this his good work continues and thousands testify to the blessings received therefrom. For many years he has stood forth to the battle for the right. He is prematurely aged from his arduous and unselfish labors in behalf of mankind He is loved most by those who know him best, and while he has some relentless enemies his staunch and substantial friends are numbered by the thousands. WHEN THE MEMORY OF HIS TRADUCERS HAS PERISHED FROM THE EARTH THE GOOD NAME AND GOOD DEEDS OF PASTOR RUSSELL WILL LIVE IMMORTL IN THE HEARTS OF THE PEOPLE."

Appreciations.

Weston, Oregon, April 5.

Inclosed you will find money order for the renewal of my subscription to the good old Tribune. I would have remitted sooner but for the fact that I have been so very busy here lately assisting in the work of presenting that most wonderful photo-drama of Creation here at the city of Weston; this is now the second time that it has been presented here, and each time it has been most highly appreciated, indorsed and praised by the common people, even by some of them who at other times have fought against the Truth are heard expressing great praises of that edifying and soul-stirring drama. And the Creed-preachers alone, have had a rather lonesome time of it while that drama continued here, for try as hard as they could they were unable to keep their flock away from it, which clearly proves that the self-same condition prevais upon the earth today, just as it existed during the first advent of our precious Lord Jesus, to wit: "The common people heard Him gladly."

And now a word or two, in regard to the faithful old Tribune; I am sincerely sorry to read every week of so many of the Truth friends withdrawing their support from the Tribune; this does not appear neither right nor just from my viewpoint or the matter. I have not at all forgotten how greatly pleased I was four years ago, when Sister Tatum, of Kearney, Neb., and some other dear Truth friends introduced me to the N. L. Tribune, by sending me some sample copies of that paper, and how gladly I hastened to send in my subscription. I felt that I had found at last a newspaper with clean, honest principles, and a strong and fearless advocate in support of the blessed Truth of God; and I have since endeavored to "prove my faith by my works," having paid for some twenty or twenty-five yearly subscriptions out of my own pocket to have the Tribune sent to other people both far and near.

Now in regard to that other paper, (St. Paul Enterprise), it is truly a great good little paper, and is well worthy to receive the loyal support from every lover of the Truth and who are able to subscribe for it. But nevertheless, whenever we happen to find a new additional friend, it is a very poor policy for us to turn our back upon our old one whose loyalty for the cause of present Truth has never faltered at any time. Let us remember (and apply) the old adage, that "A friend in need, is a friend indeed" and let us not forget that the good old Tribune has always strongly supported the Truth regardless of any and all opposition, and long before we had any St. Paul Enterprise with us. I am not speaking disparagingly of the Enterprise at all, God forbid that I should ever do so, I am taking that paper myself, and both it and the Tribune are welcome visitors at my home every week, but as before stated I canot see any justice at all in our turning the cold shoulder to the Tribune which is still fighting the good fight on the side of the Truth of God.

Furthermore, when it comes to the publishing of the sermons of our dear Pastor Russell, the National Labor Tribune is certainly miles ahead of any other paper both in form and in the style in which those grand sermons appear every week in its columns. And I most earnestly plead that the Lord's people everywhere continue to extend loyal support to that same old faithful Tribune, it surely is worthy of, and we cannot afford to be unthankful. nor to withhold our appreciation from them unto whom it is due.

"Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it" (Prov. 3: 27.)

When you have tried a friend and proved him true,
Change not that old one for the new.
In loving kindness and Christian love.

RASMUS F. JOHNSON.

AS A MAN SOWETH SO SHALL HE REAP.

JUSTICE IS THE FOUNDATION OF TRUE CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

Purpose of Calling out the Church in Advance of the World's Blessing—Church's Battle Against Entrenched Sin—Necessity for Recognition of the Principle of Justice—Golden Rule Should be Basis of Our Dealings—Precious Promises the Inspiration of the Christian—Disciplinary Self-Training Necessary—High Standard Demanded of Those to be Future Judges of the World.

Trenton, N. J., April 9.—Pastor Russel was here today. He gave a very interesting discourse on 1 Timothy 6:12—"Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou are also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." Excerpts follow:

In the discourse of last Sunday we saw that during the present time the merit of Christ's righteousness is imputed to the Church class in order to permit them to become New Creatures in Christ, of a different order from the world. As we then noted, the sins of those who now leave the world to follow Jesus are covered by the imputation of His sacrificial merit, that they may join Him in sacrifice and thus be accounted worthy to reign with Him in the coming time of blessing for the world—the Millennial Age. They are to be a distinctly new creation. This covering of their sins lasts from the time when they become Christians until the end of their journey here below.

During this period each one will have a battle against the downward tendencies of his flesh—a severe conflict; and by the close of his earthly life he will have demonstrated to the Lord to what extent he has been loyal and true in striving against sin; for that which constitutes our battle as children of God, as soldiers of the Cross, is not merely a campaign against error. In times past we have all been under a cloud of error. It is important indeed to have recognized this condition and to have come out into the light of God's Truth. We are not to minimize the value of correct doctrine. But this is not the main thing; it is only a means to an end. The most important thing is to get rid of SIN.

There are errors of mind, of doctrine, of thought, of morals, of character. From childhood all these things had been going on in our life. We did not realize just what they were. As to errors of doctrine, few preached about them. Ministers of the Gospel said nothing about them; in fact, many of the clergy did not recognize these things as errors. But now we see very clearly what the Bible has to say about doctrine. Now we see that God wishes His people to be free from doctrinal errors. But especially does He wish them to be free from any sympathy with sin, unrighteousness, iniquity, injustice.

In other words, God wishes His people to be very loyal to the Golden Rule. This is the first proposition; and to learn this lesson requires sometimes the experience of years. Very many have never practiced JUSTICE. They are unjust in their dealings with their families. Husbands deal unjustly with their wives, parents with their children, wives with their husbands, and children with parents. With some people injustice would seem to be the rule of life.

But from the time when we become followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, and see how justice is written in the Law of God, we begin to perceive that God expects us to observe the Golden Rule. We should then begin to do so right in our own families—with our parents, our children, our companion in life. This Golden Rule will affect all the affairs of life. It applies everywhere and in everything. "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." As we learn to consider carefully, in our dealings with others, to do for them and toward them as we would wish them to do for us and toward us, we shall find a great transformation going on with us. Gradually the whole course of life is changed.

GREAT DILLIGENCE NECESSARY.

If we could get this Rule thoroughly worked into our hearts and lives, it would prove to be one of the greatest possible blessings, not only to ourselves, but also to others. No part of God's instructions to the Church is more important than this exhortation of justice. Nothing that He ever does is out of line with absolute justice; and He has invited His people to copy His character-likeness. He wishes us to cultivate and develop in ourselves the great qualities which He possesses and which He has illustrated to us.

There are brethren in Christ who from outward appearance are seemingly not so far advanced as they might be in this respect. Measure not yourselves by the world; for the world does not heed the Golden Rule. We are not to measure them as we measure ourselves; we are not to expect as much from them. Neither should we measure ourselves by other Christians. (2 Corinthians 10:12.) Some who are called Christians are only morally inclined people, who have never been begotten of the Holy Spirit, who have never come into the School of Christ. We appreciate their characters, but we are not to measure ourselves by them. We should measure ourselves only by the Word of our Lord, which asks, "What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" —2 Peter 3:11.

This pointed question of the Apostle Peter implies that the Church of Christ are a special class, different from all other people in the world—a peculiar people, as the Apostle Paul puts it—not peculiar in dress, but zealous of good works, zealous for everything that is right, laying down their lives for the Truth, in the service of others.—Titus 2:14.

JUSTICE IN THE HOME.

We should endeavor not only to say nothing to our families that would injure them, but rather to study to be a blessing to them. And so with our dealings with all. Every human being calls for justice As followers of Christ, we are to be foremost in exercising justice toward all. There should be nothing less than this in our intentions. If with our heart we are recognizing the Golden Rule, we shall continually seek to conform our very thoughts to it. We shall seek to think as generously of our neighbor as we would wish him to think of us, and to speak as kindly of him as we would wish him to speak of us. The principle of doing good to others would be exercised toward all.

Some who seem to be exact in their dealings with the world, who would not keep even one cent back from the person to whom it was due, appear to be very careless in dealing with their loved ones, treating them very unjustly. This should not be. Justice is the foundation of the Throne of God; and in practising the Golden Rule we become more and more like our Heavenly Father. He does to others only what He would wish them to do to Him. As He would not wish others to roast Him or torture Him, so He does not roast or torture them.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

In order that we may conform strictly to the laws of the Postal Department and live in perfect harmony with Uncle Sam we are compelled to urge, and we do it most tenderly, immediate and most prompt remittance of all subscriptions that are in arrears.

Our generosity in hesitating to cut off promptly those who have become delinquent and who have been unable to pay owing to financial reverses is in conflict with Uncle Sam's prescribed rules and unless we revise our list at once there is grave danger of having our entire issue excluded from the mails.

We do want to live in absolute obedience to the laws of our nation as well as our God and we are confident every one of our subscribers are thoroughly in accord with our law abiding policy both spiritual and temporal. To aid in this won't every subscriber please consult the yellow label on the wrapper carrying the Tribune to your home and if your subscription is due won't you please mail the subscription price AT ONCE?

Please do it NOW. Won't you? If you delay there is danger you will forget. Lest we forget, Lest we forget. Do it right NOW. Do Remember the momentum and the ponderosity of the little wonderful word NOW. AND PLEASE DO IT NOW.

THE EDITOR.

Let us ever keep the Golden Rule in mind, and it will furnish us with the very essence of the spirit of justice. First and always, let us treat others as we would wish them to treat us. Afterwards, let us do a little more; but let us strive never to come short on this fundamental principle. We should indeed, as Christians, give more than justice, but NEVER LESS. Love will lead us to do more, even as it led our Lord Jesus. He kept the Golden Rule inviolate in every instance. He never did less than justice; but He did more, much more. He gave His LIFE for others.

And this is what His followers have engaged to do. This is our covenant. We are to follow the Golden Rule, and then do more. We are to lay down our lives for the brethren and to do for the world as we have opportunity. This is the Bible thought for Jesus' disciples. It is one which should appeal to us even from the human standpoint as being the highest ideal of Christian living.

FIGHTING THE GOOD FIGHT.

There is no place where we can better learn to rule our own spirit than in our own home. With husband and wife, with parent and child, with brother and sister, the constant practise of the Golden Rule is an important matter. The battle with self is the greatest battle the Christian must fight; for in it he learns to exercise his will in the right direction—in the direction of control of self. It is only after we have conquered self, only after we have become master of our own flesh, only after we have subdued anger, malice, hatred and strife in our own hearts, that we are enabled, by means of these severe battles with our own weaknesses, to assist others, to aid them—by our example—to overcome their own besetments and infirmities.

No matter where this conflict may begin, we find entrenched within ourselves many armed and opposing powers. These have possession of us by heredity; they are there as the result of Father Adam's fall. If, when we begin the battle, we have passed the days of youth, these imperfections and weaknesses are all the more strongly entrenched; and it requires the greater conflict to rout them. But he that would win the prize of the High Calling must fight the good fight of faith down to the very end of his earthly existence.

This continual battle of the new mind against the fallen flesh is a good fight in the sense that the New Creature is fighting against the weaknesses and besetments of the fallen human nature, against temptations from within and from without, that appeal to us as human beings. It is a fight of faith because the entire course of the New Creature is one of faith; for "we walk by faith, not by sight." In this battle we could never succeed without aid from on High. Hence we must watch and pray. We must put on securely "the whole armor of God."—Ephesians 6:12-18.

INSPIRATION OF GOD'S PROMISES.

All of us who have become true followers of Christ have had these thoughts come before our minds. As we progress, we learn better what God wishes for us. When first we gave our hearts to the Lord we did not know all that is included in full consecration. many things were hidden from the eyes of our understanding. But as we have gone on step by step, the Lord has brought us to the clear realization that we must SUFFER WITH CHRIST. Let us, then progress along this way of sacrifice—sacrificing our lives for the Truth, following in the footsteps of Jesus.

Although we have learned that it is our privilege to sacrifice our lives with Christ, yet the greatest lesson for us to learn is what God is to do for us. He is the One who is doing the really great things. Our hearts are stirred within us by His great and precious promises. We feed upon them and meditate upon them. We are enamored of the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard.

Thus we grow stronger, taller, as Christians, day by day. With our desire to grow ever increasing, we see the necessity for meeting together with others of like precious faith, in order to build each other up in the most holy faith. We see the Heavenly things more clearly. Other things pass away from our vision. We see the great basis principles of justice and love, and realize their bearing upon our lives in every respect.

NATURAL TRAITS REQUIRE ATTENTION.

We note that after we have made our consecration and have learned that God has justified us freely from all sin through our Lord Jesus Christ, there is a tendency with some of the Lord's people to violate unintentionally the fundamental principles of justice and love as existent in the Divine character and manifested in the Divine dealings with the people of God. It is not enough that we should have started out to walk in the ways of the Lord, and that we should recognize the downward tendencies of sin. If we have the spirit of the Lord, we shall be anxious to do right. We shall meditate upon God's character; and as we see these basic attributes, we shall endeavor to copy them. Thus the work of grace in our hearts will continue and increase, more and more transforming us into the character-likeness of God's dear Son.

We are not to judge one another in these things, however. "The Lord will judge His people," according to His knowledge of their ability. Mercy will be granted for every unintentional defect; but no mercy will be extended toward those things which we could avoid. Whatever ability we possess we are responsible for; and God will hold us responsible if we do not do our best with what we have. Those who are living up to their opportunities and privileges should go on with courage, doing their best, exercising full faith and confidence in the Lord; for He has promised a sufficiency of grace to cover every imperfection. But there is no excuse for any one to live in careless neglect of his duties and responsibilities. Such are not fighting the good fight of faith.

It is the New Creature who will be held responsible for carelessness respecting the conduct, for indifference to the requirements of the Golden Rule and to the additional exercise of love; and it is he who will fail to receive the commendation, "Well done, good and faithful servant," unless he exercise great care respecting these important matters. God will have none in that special class of overcomers except those who measure fully up to the standard of His requirements. If we are to be the future judges of the world, we must cultivate justice as well as love, so as to be fit to occupy positions of influence and power, in which we shall be able to bless all the families of the earth.

IN THE NEW DISPENSATION.

During the Millennial Age, the Lord Jesus will deal with the world. As He declared, "All that are in the graves shall hear His voice ("the voice of the Son of Man"), and shall come forth." (John 5:2 , 28, 29.) Those who thus come forth will be the same imperfect beings that they were when they died. Justice will turn them over to Christ imperfect—just as they went down into death. The lifting up to human perfection of all who are willing and obedient will be the work of the incoming Age. The lower down they were, the more steps will they be required to take in order to climb up to perfection. Some will have much more to overcome than will others. But in every case the test will be the same.

The Messianic Reign will be the world's Judgment Day. As the Master said, it will be more tolerable in that Day for those who during this life had less opportunity than it will be for those who had more. (Matthew 11:20-24.) The latter class will come forth more tainted in mind, weaker in character, less inclined to hearken and obey; whereas those who had not heard the Message of God's Love will be all the more inclined to give heed. The Judgment Day will be a tolerable time for all mankind, but more tolerable for those who have never before heard and have never known.

Confucius, for example, will come forth in the Messianic Kingdom, and will be a towering giant morally amongst the people in that Day. Many who see him will be surprised at what a strong character he will be—a heathen man, who lived without our opportunities, who heard no church bells, who attended no church services. As they behold him, some will say, "If only we had availed ourselves of the privileges and opportunities that WE had, we might have attained a place even amongst the glorified saints in Heaven." But when they consider themselves in the light of their past lives, they will conclude that they are in their proper position; and, stimulated by the example of various worthy characters, as well as encouraged by the assistance afforded them at that time, they will strive to progress as rapidly as possible. Gradually they will learn the rules of the Kingdom—the laws of righteousness, based upon justice and love. Those who are willing and obedient will attain unto life everlasting; but the unwilling and disobedient will be cut off in the Second Death.

Essay IV.

WESLEY'S MARITAL WOES.

John Wesley was the fifteenth child of a family of nineteen, and left no children after the flesh. His unhappy marriage at forty-eight cut his life short full twenty years he said. If he had purposely sought a vixen he could not have done better than he did when he met Mrs. Vazeille, a widow of his own age, is attested at length by Bernard Shaw and Tyerman. His experience tallies with dictum that few men of genius are judges of women—the men with the canes and checkered vests are better judges of femininity than are the otherwise intuitive men of genius.

The circumstance that brought them together is very much like some love tale of young folks. Wesley had sprained his ankle and limped into the residence of Mrs. Vazeille, who cared for him. He was due on the circuit and could not ride on horseback. Mrs. Vazeille had a carriage with which Wesley could continue his journey, but she could not accompany him unless they were married and thus their troubles began. Wesley soon began to learn things he could not get elsewhere—all experience is good if you are able to make the best of it. "All things work together for good to those who love God, the called ones according to His purpose." While it may be true that Wesley suffered for his own blunders and therefore could not be properly said to be "suffering for righteousness sake" in his marital afflictions, yet he demonstrated his Christian principles in the manner in which he met his experience. "It is a trial sent by God—I must bear it all." All attest that from his fiftieth year onward he improved. To quote the words of another: "All his biographies agree that after his fiftieth year his powers as a preacher increased constantly until he was seventy-five. He grew more gentle, more tender and there was about him an aurora of love and veneration, so that even his enemies removed their hats and stood silent in his presence."

Wesley had learned to be exalted and now he was to learn to be abased and still keep his equilibrium. Some of the indignities to which his wife subjected him would have set many men into a rage and ended the whole tragedy, or given them a fit of despondency, but Wesley wrote in his eighty-fifth year "I never had more than a half-hour's depression in my life. My controlling mood has been one of happiness, thankfulness and joy." It will be well to emphasize the fact that a real gentleman is known by his demeanor to his inferiors and those that have no appeal. And to tolerate abuse with the power to stop it at the cost of principle, is a sure mark of greatness. Mrs. Wesley had not lived with him one year when she pulleh him about by the hair; and made faces at him when he was preaching, saying in an undertone that he could hear "I have heard that so often that I'm sick of it." She took charge of all his personal affairs, opened his mail; rifled his pockets, ordered people away that did not please her, and invited others to her hospitality and explained to them what a great man her first husband was, she read his journal and demanded that it be explained; she took his saddle horse and hitched him to a horse of her own mounted with a boy decorated, and tooting a horn. She renounced him and left. So Wesley rode on with his faithful horse as in the good old days. But this was only for a But they lived peaceably for only a short time and the old program with month for she was on his trail again repentant and sought forgiveness. all the variations possible were kept up for thirty-one years. Is it any wonder that under these trying conditions he gave way to some unseemliness—which, when hauled into court led him to be indicted on ten counts by a prejudiced jury!

His marital woes being aired in court gave his enemies material to work on and styled him as "spitting venom, spite and rage and telling bare-faced lies." Joseph Trapp, D.D. described his movement as a "new sect of enthusiasts or hypocrites or both, whose doctrines and practices tend to destruction of souls, are a scandal to Christianity, and expose it to the soffs of libertines, infidels and atheists." These persecutions served to sift out of his followers those that were not of him and did not appreciate his teachings and like the odium attached to the humble Nazarene: "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?" We have similarly: "Can anything good come out of Wesley, or Russell?"

As to the truthfulness of the current slanders of the character of Pastor Russell arising out of his divorce trial and his responsibilities for his domestic troubles, we point out an incident that will settle the question without rehearsing any of the matter that has been recorded in the courts, and wait for time to vindicate Russell as it did Wesley. A cluster of ministers approached the manager of the Illinois State Fair in 1912 to have Pastor Russell removed from the slate for a public address, on the grounds of alleged bad character in private life. The manager, being like the men from Missouri who demands visual demonstrations, made an investigation into the court records in Pittsburgh, Pa., and found nothing that would justify the insinuations of the clergy.

If this is not sufficient read Judge J. F. Rutherford's review of this international case—he knows for he has been Pastor Russell's legal adviser. (New York City Box 51, 10 cts.) Ruth-

AMERICAN LABOR MUST SHARE COST WAR'S WASTE

This is No Time to Raise Wages Says Jas. J. Hill the Veteran Railroad Builder.

By James J. Hill.

James J. Hill occupies a unique and commanding position in American business life. He is one of the great railroad builders of the United States. He constructed and developed the Great Northern system extending from Lake Superior to the Pacific and reaching through its steamship lines, to China and Japan. During the past forty years no other man has played so large a part in the development of the Northwest.

Railroad employes could not choose a more inopportune time to ask for a general advance in wages. When the devastating war in Europe is over the question confronting American wage earners will be that of finding a market for their labor instead of fixing a price on it.

We have a feverish prosperity that may vanish overnight. The great bulk of the business now taxing the capacity of our railroads arises from the war necessities of Europe. The money our people are getting in payment for their products is being provided on the forced credit of the combined nations of Europe. They are raising these hundreds of millions by piling up to enormous heights the debts of their Governments, thus building up a great financial burden that must be borne by future generations.

The instant that peace is in sight (and no one can tell how soon this may be, because Europe cannot go on much longer destroying lives and property at this unprecedented rate) all this flood of orders for war materials at high prices will suddenly cease. Europe will then begin the slow and painful process of recovering from the great losses of the war.

Paying the Cost of War.

Then the United States, which has been profiting by Europe's war necessities, will have to share her burden of the cost of the war. In these days of closely related markets one great nation cannot enjoy prosperity for any length of time while a large part of the rest of the world is in financial distress.

With the war over, we will no longer see the railroads blocked with merchandise bound for the seaboard, or our harbors choked with freight waiting for ships to carry it to Europe. How severe will be the reckoning the world must pay can only be conjectured, but we all know it must be paid.

With such a situation confronting us this can hardly be regarded as a happy moment for railroad employes, and especially those highly paid employes in the train service, to ask for higher wages.

HIGHEST WAGES, LOWEST RATES

American railroads today pay the highest wages in the world, out of the lowest rates in the world, after having set down to capital account the lowest capitalization per mile of all great countries of the world. No other occupation and no other employer of labor in the country can match this record.

The payroll now absorbs 45 per cent of the gross earnings of the railways. When business falls off it will be difficult to reduce wages correspondingly. The higher rate of wages established now would have to be adhered to in the period of severe financial readjustment which must come very soon.

These 300,000 train men, less than a fifth of the railroad workers, are now highly paid, and their working conditions are most favorable. In what other occupation con workers earn two and three days' pay in one day, and be able to spend many days at home in consequence?

These men all live comfortably, which is as it should be. The wage rate enables them to spend liberally for their families. Their consumption is an important factor in creating employment for other industries and raising the general level of prosperity.

But continually increased pay and decreased working hours for the employe means increased cost of transportation, and all the people must in the end pay the bill in higher rates. A railway can pay out only what it takes in. It takes in nothing except what the public pays to it for service. The logical conclusion, that every concession to employes must in time be reflected in a rise in rates and paid for by the people, is one which they too often overlook.

HIGH WAGES AND HIGH PRICES.

The greatest factor making for high prices is the wage rate. Everybody knows that labor cost is the principal item in all forms of industry. The wage rate has been rising steadily in this country. Powerful forces are back of this movement. It has public sympathy. As the labor supply diminishes wages rise still more.

High wages and high prices work in a circle. Every rise of one is reflected in a rise of the other. But somebody has to pay these wages. They do not come out of the air. In the end labor suffers when the business no longer pays a profit and the payroll cease entirely by the closing up of an industry no longer profitable.

But the railroads must go on. Capital once invested in the business cannot be taken out. The railroads need hundreds of millions of new capital every year. How is this capital to be obtained unless investors are convinced of the ability of the carriers to earn a fair return?

DOCK WORKERS GET RAISE.

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 17.—Freight handlers at the Fall River steamboat line dock have received wage increases promised if they returned to work. They struck several weeks ago. The old rate was 19 1-2 cents an hour. Now they will receive 23 cents an hour from 5:30 to 7 in the morning and 21 cents from then until 7 at night. They will be paid these rates if the boat is late.

WANT LESS HOURS.

BOSTON, April 17.—The Leather Workers on Horse Goods' union has presented a new wage demand to the Master Teamsters' association and corporations employing harness makers. A 53-hours week is asked, except in May, June, July, August, September and October, when work shall cease at noon Saturdays.

ABANDON INSURANCE BILL.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17.—Senator Mills has abandoned his bill providing for health insurance for employes and has accepted the suggestion of trade unionists that the question be submitted to a special investigating committee which will inquire into all matters concerning sickness and accident not covered by the compensation law.

The Mills bill was championed by the so-called American Association for Labor Legislation and was opposed by President Gompers and the New York trade union movement. The organized workers protested, among other things, against the compulsory visitations to the homes of workers by state officials.

CONCILIATORS APPOINTED.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 17.—Governor Manning has appointed two members on a state board of conciliation, created by the last general assembly. John A. Law represents employers and John L. Davis, a member of the Columbia Typographical union, represents the workers. The law provides that the workers' representative shall be chosen from "a member of a recognized labor union."

LUDLOW "HERO" OUT.

DENVER, April 17.—Adjutant General Chase is no longer connected with the Colorado state militia, as the "hero" of Ludlow stepped down and out last week. Chase's connection with the Ludlow killings is well known, as is his other activities during the recent strike of miners in southern Colorado. These brought the state militia in such bad repute that the federal government, it is said, forced Governor Carlson to oust him.

WIRE MEN RAISE WAGES.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 17.—Electrical workers have raised wages of inside men 10 cents and hour, secured union recognition and an eight-hour day. The contract will run for one year.

Men Refuse to Work With Women

Only in Some Places Does This Exist.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, April 3.

A curious story arising out of the replacement of male labor by female labor may be told this week. Women have invaded many new spheres of work since the war began, owing to the difficulty of the situation. What we term in this country, dock laboring, that is work in the docks, on the quays and allied places in connection with loading and unloading ships, appeared to be about the last possible occupation that a woman could enter. Excessive congestion at our ports and especially at Liverpool, however, led to a hundred strong women being engaged at the above mentioned port last week. The Leyland Line of steamers, working between Liverpool and the West Indies, being the employers. The women worked at what is known as trucking cotton—that is wheeling bales of cotton on trucks from the ships to the railway wagons. Perhaps the work was not more difficult than many others now undertaken by women, but it was certainly a big novelty. Many of the women are wives of soldiers on active service. They were paid the same rate of wages as men employed on the same class of work, namely, one dollar thirty-five cents a day; the hours being from seven in the morning until five in the afternoon. It is reported that the women gave every satisfaction. No sooner had the women been set to work than open hostility was manifested by the men dockers. The men refused to work with the women and the Dockers' Union supported them. James Sexton, the dockers' secretary, declared in support of the men's action that it was feared that accidents would occur through the women being unable to cope with the heavy work. The trouble went on for a couple of days, the men universally refusing to work with the women. They did not strike. They simply ceased working with the women and went off to other wharfs and quays where labor was wanted and engaged themselves there. After being first employed on March 13th, the women were withdrawn on March 19th, the ship-owning firms being desirous of avoiding further trouble with their male employees.

In other directions women are replacing absent men without trouble. Every day in London we see more and more women employed as electric tramway and motor omnibus guards or conductors. It is estimated that before many weeks have passed there will be 2,000 women and girls in this work, every one replacing a man who has left to join the army. When the London County Council first employed female guards they were only used on what we call here single deck cars, that is those only carrying passengers inside. The majority of our street tramway cars, however, are double deckers or two-story affairs and frequently carry a hundred passengers. Our girl guards are now at work on these collecting and maintaining order, and stopping and starting the car—all efficiently and well.

The shortage in the cotton trade of both male and female labor, resulting in the case of the men from the demands of the army and in the case of the women from the offer of more attractive work elsewhere, such as acting as tramway guards, etc., has become so serious that the managers are adopting means to persuade the women to stand by the trade during the crisis.

The British Association of Managers of Textile Works (Lancashire section) has decided to send to each of its members the following notice to women:—

"In the national interest production should be maintained at its highest level, and you are doing your bit for the war by not leaving your employment in the mill for employment of an unproductive character. Such occupations as tram conductors, postmen, and similar work can be filled by persons who have not had experience in textile mills.

"Imports—that is goods coming into this country from abroad—such as foodstuffs, raw materials, and munitions, are not paid for in cash, but are paid for by exports—that is, manufactured goods sent from this country. Cotton cloth is one of our chief exports, and if we are to meet the war expenditure, which amounts to $25,000,000 per day, it is a vital necessity to maintain at its highest figure the nation's exports. Every loom stopped means a loss to our home or

BUSINESS MEN TO INVESTIGATE WAGE DEMANDS

Harry A. Wheeler Head of National Committee of United States Chamber of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, March 28.— Although the personnel is not entirely complete, it has been learned that the forming of a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States on the railroad situation is now well in hand. In fact, so satisfactorily has the matter progressed, and so generally have those asked to serve accepted, that a meeting of the committee will be held in Chicago this week.

It is expected, among others, there may be present at that time the following newly appointed members, some of the most prominent business men in the country:

Harry A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company of Chicago, former president of the National Chamber, chairman of the committee

James Couzens, an automobile manufacturer, formerly president of the Detroit Board of Commerce.

C. A. Johnson, of Madison, Wis., manufacturer.

Bishop Thomas F. Gailor of Memphis, Chancellor of the University of the South.

Oliver Wilson, master of the National Grange, Peoria, Ill.

E. -. Meredith, of Des Moines, publisher of Successful Farming.

William Fellowes Morgan, of New York, president of the Merchants' Association of that city.

Charles E. Faeth, vice-president of the Kansas City Commercial Club.

Charles F. Weed, of Boston, lawyer

A. J. Porter, of Niagara Falls, president of the Shredded Wheat Company.

Robert H. Downman, a lumberman of New Orleans.

In a resolution, brought up during the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, held in Washington last month, and adopted, the National Chamber, referring to "the grave differences" impending between the railroads and "certain of their employes," which, "if not adjusted, may result in serious interruption of transportation," and characterizing such interruption of traffic as a "national calamity," declared that, in its opinion, the parties "must settle their differences without recourse to measures that would impair public service." The resolution further committed the National Chamber to the appointment of a committee which shall "carefully and impartially" investigate and consider "such phases of this critical situation as relate to the interests of commerce and the public" and report to the National Chamber board of directors.

Resolutions similar in import to those passed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States have been adopted by Chambers of Commerce in Chicago, St. Paul, Kansas City, Des Moines, Cincinnati, Fargo, N. Dak., and numerous other cities. All of these resolutions demand that the controversy must be settled without impairment of the public service and many of them insist that the public shall have a voice in the decision.

THE CREAM OFF BOTH CROCKS.

The railroad brotherhoods, in giving the carriers notice that they desire to open the wage schedules, include this "saving clause" in their demands:

> Any rates of pay including excess mileage or arbitrary differentials that are higher, or any rules or conditions of employment contained in individual schedules in effect January 1, 1916, that are more favorable to the employes, shall not be modified or affected by any settlement reached in connection with these proposals. The general committee representing the employes on each railroad will determine which is preferable and advise the officers of their company. Nothing in the settlement that may be reached on the above submitted articles is to be construed to deprive the employes on any railroad from retaining their present rules and accepting any rates that may be agreed upon or retaining their present rates and accepting any rules that may be agreed upon.

The employes reserve the right to accept any part of a settlement that appears to them advantageous, and to reject any part that does not so appear to them; and also to combine new rates with old conditions, or old rates with new conditions—that is, the cream off both crocks.

A DEADLY PARALLEL.

Mr. William Randolph Hearst's newspapers, from Boston to San Francisco, in giving their powerful support to the railroad trainmen's wage movement, make it very plain that Mr. Hearst is an advocate of an honest eight-hour day—eight hours' work for eight hours' pay—and does not believe in an eight hour pay day with a bonus for overtime. Mr. Hearst says:

> The system which strives not for the eight-hour day, but uses the eight hour day as a cloak for overtime on an extravagant charge basis, is unjust.

But the "Railroad Trainman," the official organ of the brotherhood, makes it plain that what the men are demanding is not an enght-hour workday, but an eight-hour payday with a higher rate for extra hours. The brotherhood journal says:

> The eight-hour basic workday contemplates that eight hours shall be the basis for a day's work and any time in excess thereof shall be paid for as overtime, consequently under such a provision there is no limit to the hours worked. The latter system is the one proposed by the train service brotherhoods.

COMPENSATION FOR WIDOWS.

ALTOONA, Pa., April 17.—The advantages of the new state compensation law were shown last week in the case of the widows of eight miners killed by an explosion in a mine at Robindale. In less than a week officials of the state insurance fund and the mine management reached an agreement and the widows will receive approximately $25,000. The state officials have advanced the women sufficient money to meet any emergency until the payment of compensation begins.

MACHINISTS REDUCE HOURS.

ALTON, Ill., April 17.—Through conferences with the Illinois Glass Works company the Machinists' union has reduced hours at this plant from 54 to 50 per week.

PAINTERS BREAK OPPOSITION.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, April 17.—The Painters' union has secured the signature of a large contracting firm to an agreement. This is the first break in the employers' ranks since they locked out their employes, over a year ago.

WILL ARBITRATE DISCHARGE.

WOBURN, Mass., April 17.— The five days' tie-up of the Woburn division of the Bay State Railway company is ended by the company agreeing to arbitrate the discharge of a conductor. The Street Car Men's union claims union activity was responsible.

PASS SUFFRAGE BILL.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17.—The state senate has passed a resolution providing for a resubmission to the voters of the women's suffrage question, which was rejected by the people last fall. The measure has been adopted by the assembly.

NEW LAWS FOR MARYLAND.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 17.—The state assembly, which has just adjourned its biennial session passed a mothers' pension law, amended the child labor laws and consolidated the labor agencies of the state. A new system of state control over public education is the best of any state in the Union, its advocates say.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The senate committee on interstate commerce has ordered that a favorable report to the senate be made on the Keating-Owen child labor bill.

LABORERS RAISE WAGES.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 17.—Laborers' Protective union No. 14,953, affiliated to the American Federation of Labor, has raised wages from $1.88 to $2.40 per day without a strike.

MISSISSIPPI HAS REFERENDUM.

JACKSON, Miss., April 17.—A constitutional amendment with initiative and referendum provisions, adopted by the people two years ago, has been ratified by both houses of the Mississippi legislature.

SECURE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

ROCKFORD, ILL., April 17.—The Sheet Metal Workers' union has secured the eight-hour day and wage increases, to take effect May 1. These gains were made through conferences.

WONT HELP BREAK STRIKES.

ALTOONA, PA., April 17. — The local branch of the state employment bureau has been notified by state officials not to furnish strikebreakers to any person, firm or corporation that is a party to any industrial dispute.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SPHERE

REFORMATION.

THE BRITISH REFORMERS.

Essay IV.

PRESENT-DAY METHODISM.

The followers of Wesley experienced what those of Luther and others did. A religious body founded to advocate a set of principles soon developed into a system that persecuted others who endeavored to advance beyond their founder. A religious sect is safe only when it is not safe to belong to it—as soon as persecution ceases it begins to lose its life and disintegration sets in. All of the many clusters of "come-outers" that have developed into institutions flourishing in ease and luxury today have joined hands in denouncing the neresies and life of Pastor Russell and the members of his propaganda, whose only offense is that they are endeavoring to assist others from the superstitions of the Dark Ages.

The concerted movement amongst the representatives of the various sects, The Ministerial associations, have been given special impetus since Wm. T. Ellis has appeared in print against Russell, who took issue with the report of the Foreign Investigation Committee, appointed by the International Bible Students Association, and of which Pastor Russell was the chairman. These attacks were published in the "Continent," the organ of the Presbyterian Church. The caliber of this brilliant Field Editor of "The Continent" can be noted by comparing his strenuous denunciation of the mild report of the Foreign Mission Investigation Committee, with his own report of the mission field in 1907. His own report put Russell's into the shade in a discouraging outlook and approaches more to Thomas Watson's articles published about the same time as Russell's—yet Ellis never said one word against these radical publications against the Foreign Mission enterprise. If he had the interests of the Foreign Missions at heart, why did he not defend it from the vicious out-pourings of the violent Watson? He knows the mission field and had the facts if the attacks were not proper! Apparently, he, like those who quote so copiously from him and so sparingly from Russell, wanted the popularity of lining up against a man worth while and placing himself as a David with his sling in the eyes of Churchmen, or as Russell has suggested he writes for those that pay and writes to please.

The clever and sassy articles of Wm. T. Ellis has set all the frogs to croaking. They are bellowing like the bulls of Bashan. His stealth and sass has been mistaken for scholarship and he is now being quoted by scores of petty clerics who are rushing madly into the limelight for publicity—all this fuss to curb the influence of one man! What more evidence need be required than this to prove that Russell is a real fact in the religious world—he has set them to rout by his masterly works and he is now being hailed by the best in the sects as a prophetic scout of the vanguard of the marching army of Christians. This is arousing the clerics who are becoming alarmed, fearing their honored titles and reputations as beacon lights are at stake. The only thing left to do is to throw mud and misrepresent. Tracts filled with references and quotations from the articles of Wm. T. Ellis, Prof. Morehead and other titled dignitaries with appendages as long as the alphabet, designed to awe and hypnotize the laity, are circulating galore. They are getting into the secular press in places and are busy with their vilifications.

At Asbury Park, N. J., the I. B. S. A. were invited by James A. Bradley, the founder of this beautiful seashore resort and tendered the auditorium free to hold a convetion in 1914. The courtesy and civility shown by Mr. Bradley and the citizens of Asbury Park towards the delegates to the convention was not shared by the "followers" of John Wesley who occupied an adjoining summer resort, Ocean Grove, a Chautauqua grounds with one of the finest and most spacious auditoriums in the States. These needlessly pious gentlemen of the cloth practically disowned the founder of Methodism by not according the delegates to the convention the same courtesy extended by those that did not profess Christianity in Asbury Park. Instead they crossed the boundary lines of the "holy city" into the world and stopped below the standards of the world by influencing the local press against their own brothers by profession, and mustered up all the dope of the many pamphlets of the Ellis and Morehead clique and affixed their names for publication! These gentlemen are otherwise so pious that they will not permit an automobile to pass through the city on Sunday; or permit a train to stop at the station; if you die on the premises the hearse is not permitted to convey the corpse for fear of desecrating the Sabbath! Is not this choking at a gnat and swallowing a camel? Wesley would be ashamed of his professed followers if he saw these tactics and witnessed the Ocean Grove police conducting I. B. S. A. Christians from the premises named after him, for the small offense of distributing announcements of Russell's photo-drama of Creation being exhibited in Asbury Park—this was not Wesley's Method(ism)! Well has Leo Tolstoi said that flourishing institutionalism "bears the flame of bigotry and hypocrisy. It lights lamps only in temples and on the altars of sacred institutions. It carries the seed of falsity and fanaticism. It kindles the minds that are still in the cradles and follows them to their graves."

SHE "SHALL ENTER INTO THE KING'S PALACE."—Ps. 45:15.

"Daughter!"

There was no jarring note in the voice richly mellowed with parental love.

The response was prompt and eager.

"Yes, father!"

"The King, of whom you have heard so often, is coming—Yea, he is even now present in these parts, scouring the country in search of a bride."

"And is it difficult to find one of such noble character as would be fit to grace his palace."

"Ah, yes! for the requirements are most rigid, causing few to even strive to compete."

"What are the terms to be complied with, Father?"

"The leaving of home and family, and, in pilgrim guise—oft-times the gazing-stock of sneering on-lookers—following the King 'whithersoever he goeth.' "

"Do you mean on foot, Father?"

"Yes, my child; for only 'foot-step followers' can ever hope to 'see the King in his beauty.' "

"The trail, too, is most perilous: jutting rocks oft-times overhanging the narrow path-way, where a misstep might precipitate the traveller hundreds of feet below. Rushing mountain torrents frequently impede the progress, while many a mountain lion crouches in the wake of the King's pageant."

"And is there no security, by means of which one may avoid these terrible pit-falls and dangers?"

"Ah, yes! therein lies the secret! By wireless the traveller may gain access to the King at any moment, provided it be kept in constant use; but so delicate is the mechanism that the longer it remains in disuse, on the part of any individual, the more difficult it is for the message to carry and receive a reply. Then, too, danger oft-times lurks where least expected. In the greenest of valleys are deadly reptiles, secreted beneath the waving grasses and shrubbery, or coiled about the branches of the trees. At such times, so engrossed may the traveller become with the beauties of nature and the ease with which she is enabled to proceed, as to forget her utter dependency on the continual use of the wireless—forget also the limit of her own strength, and, in time of merriment or heedlessness, fall or become entrapped."

"And cannot her companion make efficacious use of the wireless for her, should they perceive the danger before she herself?"

"Yes! yet there must be the co-operation on her own part as well."

"What provision is there for the journey in the way of clothes and sustenance?"

"The clothing—thoroughly durable and storm-proof—is provided by the King himself, as is also an abundant supply of bread and water, of such nutritive value and purifying quality as to meet the strength and sanitary needs of the journey, provided it be partaken of regularly, and thoroughly assimilated."

"Then one runs no risk provided the instructions of the King are carefully followed to the extent of the ability."

"No risk whatsoever, my child; for even the deadliest enemy quails before the commanding presence; yet gracious demeanor, of the King."

"Father, gladly will I undertake the journey! Wilt thou grant to me of thy blessing?"

"Most assuredly! Faithfully perform thy part, and 'thine eyes shall behold the King in his beauty!' He shall 'give thee the desire of thine heart.' Thou shalt enter into his palace—'With gladness and rejoicing shalt thou be brought.' "

* * * * * *

Few and simple were the preparations for the journey; yet of such character as to require undivided thought and attention.

Scarcely were the arrangements completed when a courier hastened through the quiet valley, and, catching sight of the would-be bride, presented her with a parcel from the King. On the wrapper, inscribed in lettering of gold, were the words: "Forget thine own people, and thy Father's house; so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty."

Tremblingly, the girl unwrapped the package, drawing from within a pair of richly embroidered sandals. The ease of the slippers—perfect in fit—together with loving thoughts of the Royal Giver, and the meditation upon His words, caused her to speed swiftly over the ground; nor did she once turn and cast a regretful glance toward the home, forever left behind.

As the days wore on, the heat of the sun oft-times oppressed her. Then would she bethink herself of the wireless, and, straightway, as buoyed on eagle's wing, all weariness vanished.

A powerful flash-light (also a present from the King) was, too, her daily companion; for many were the shadowy vales and dark ravines to be passed over on the route marked out by the King.

The monotony of the journey was frequently broken by royal gifts. At first, these came in packages attractively wrapped; fragrant with the delicate perfumes of choice flowers, and sealed with the King's signet. Yet there came a day when a parcel of such unsymmetrical proportions arrived as to cause the girl to hastily throw it in her knap-sack, unopened. It was encased in wrapping of uncouth appearance and most unpleasant to the touch. There,hidden as it was, it soon became the source of great annoyonce. No sooner did she open the knapsack to obtain a little oil to ease her aching feet, than she discovered that the bottle had become mysteriously uncorked, while the oil was entirely evaporated. The food, too, seemed contaminated, and to have lost its former relish. Even the water appeared muddy, and the wireless out of working order. No more presents arrived from the King.

Thirsty—famished—sick—for days she languished—then, feebly reaching in the knap-sack for the discarded package, she slowly unloosed the outer covering, and found within—wrapped, and tied with scarlet thread—a fruit much resembling a pomegranate. Enclosed in the package were the words: "Feed upon it! It shall be as bread to the eater and as cold water to a thirsty soul!"

To the taste, the fruit was very bitter; but after swallowing it there came a reinvigoration of the body such as she had never before experienced. The worble of the birds took on new sweetness; the flowers bloomed in greater luxuriance; swiftly were the messages carried over the wireless; packages from the King followed each other in quick succession. The latter were promptly opened, their contents distilling a rich perfume that floated far away on the balmy air, even to the King himself. He recognized the source, smiled—a smile so rare that only his betrothed could interpret its true significance.

As the days flitted away, many were the presents received from the King—some, sweetly fragrant, others at first abhorrent, both to sight and touch; yet taking on rare beauty as their contents were examined; for the choicest treasures were hidden in the most unsightly packages. Experience taught the lesson of promptness in the opening, and quick recognition of the royal signature, even when disguised.

More and more frequently did the King find the air pregnant with the bloom of spring.

Spring? Ah, yes!—But now the season advances, and spring has merged into summer. The fruits have taken on the coloring of the sun, and are becoming lusciously mellow—and see! These carefully graded terraces lead up to the Royal Palace. The Queen is crossing the threshold. "The Virgins, her companions,, follow her." To the Bride has come the "desire of her heart."

Priceless the wedding gift from the King: "a white stone, and upon the stone a name written," the golden lettering of which no one is able to decipher save the Queen herself.

"Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne," and to His Bride, "forever and ever!"

"The whole earth shall be filled with His glory!"

Appreciations.

Paterson, N. J. April 12.

I am writing to thank some dear friend in the Truth for sending me the Tribune. I did not realize at first that it had been renewed as my subscription run out last fall and I was not able to renew it myself, as a dear unknown lady friend sent it to me last year and for some little time I was without the sermons which are such a blessing to me, but just lately I have received it for four weeks. I finally examined the label on it and found it had been renewed for another year. I want to thnk my unknown friend, whoever it may be, as I do so much enjoy the sermons, also letters from the dear Truth friends. Not being able to hear the word spoken my only hope lays in reading it, which gives me great pleasure and blessing. I think the paper has been much improved in type and space. May God's blessing be with you all to the end.

Very sincerely yours,
MRS. JENNIE DREW.

Lyerly, Ga., April 13.

I am today renewing my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. I have been taking the Tribune for a year now and don't see how I could get along without it. I like the paper as a whole, but am especially interested in the religious features. I am taking the St. Paul Enterprise but I get something out of the Tribune that I don't get out of the Enterprise, and vice versa. I think all lovers of present Truth should continue to take the Tribune as long as its editor proclaims so fearlessly the Truth as taught by our dear Pastor Russell. May you continue to proclaim the glad tiding of great joy which shall be to all people.

Your Bro. by His grace,
W. H. BAGLEY.

THE RISEN CHRIST

1 Corinthians 15:1-28—April 23.

Ransom and Resurrection Twin Doctrines—Jesus' Resurrection Attested by Many Infallible Proofs—Today's Study In Irreconcilable Conflict With Current Theology.

"Now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the First-fruits of them that are asleep."—Verse 20. R. V.

TODAY'S Study calls attention to the great importance of the doctrine of the Resurrection, presenting it as the twin of the other great doctrine which the Apostle sets forth "first of all"—"how that Christ DIED FOR OUR SINS according to the Scriptures." (Verse 3.) To this fundamental doctrine of the Ransom the doctrine of the Resurrection stands related as effect to cause.

So important is this doctrine in the estimation of the inspired Apostle that he emphatically declares that if it be not true, then there is no hope for any one beyond the present life, the preaching of the Gospel is in vain, those who preach it are false witnesses, the faith of Christians is vain and their hope delusive. Moreover, he urges that their life of sacrifice, in view of the resurrection and its rewards, merely robs them of what little enjoyment and advantage they might gain in the present life, which is all that they would thus have; and those who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished.

Such indeed would be our sad plight if there were to be no resurrection. If this, which Christ died to secure, is not guaranteed to us, to be realized in due time, we are yet in our sins, under the death penalty without one ray of hope.

While Verses 12-19 declare the great importance of this doctrine of the Resurrection, Verses 20-26 emphasize its truthfulness. The resurrection of Christ Jesus, attested by many infallible proofs (Verses 5-8; Acts 1:3), is the guarantee that all mankind shall have not only an awakening from death, but an opportunity to attain a complete resurrection to all that was lost by Adam's disobedience.—Acts 17:31.

St. Paul.

In Verse 20 let Christians observe what the various creeds of Christendom ignore and what is in direct antagonism to their teachings; namely, that the risen Christ was "the First-fruits of them that slept"—that Jesus was the first to experience a resurrection in the full sense of the term—to perfection and life everlasting. True, some before Him were temporarily awakened, but only to relapse again into death; for example, Lazarus, the son of the widow of Nain, the daughter of Jairus, etc. These were only partial illustrations of resurrection, to assure men that Divine Power could accomplish it fully in due time.

The Scriptures Logical.

Mark the logic of these facts: If Christ was the first resurrected from the dead, no one was resurrected before Him; and if those fallen asleep in Christ have perished, except they be restored to life by a resurrection (Verse 18), and if those who die in Christ "sleep in Jesus" until His Second Coming, then it is plain that not one of them went to Heaven at death. They were dead; they slept in Jesus; they rested in hope; and they must remain dead until the time appointed for the resurrection—Christ's Second Coming.

"David is not ascended into the Heavens." Daniel must wait, and stand again in his lot at the end of the days. Abraham must wait for the possession of the Promised Land, of which he never owned as much as to set his foot upon. Job must tarry until the wrath of this "evil day" is overpast. St. Paul himself must wait the time when all who love the Lord's appearing will be rewarded.—Acts 2:34; Dan. 12:13; Acts 7:5; Job 14:12-15, 21; 2 Tim. 4:8.

All this Scripture teaching is in irreconcilable conflict with current theology, in whose theories there is no place whatever for the resurrection, logically considered. If a man goes to Heaven at death, why should he hope for a reunion with his body? The whole position is illogical, unscriptural and untenable.

"He is Risen."

Verse 21 antagonizes current theology with equal force. Current theology says that our redemption is secured by the sacrifice of a God, not a man. But the Scriptures very explicitly point out an exact equivalent, a human substitute for the human head of our race, whose redemption secures the redemption of his posterity, on precisely the same principle that his fall and condemnation entailed sin and death upon them. It was "the Man Christ Jesus," who, after He had left the glory of His previous spiritual existence and "was made flesh," accomplished our redemption by the sacrifice of Himself—His flesh, His humanity—and who in consequence has been highly exalted, even to the Divine nature.—1 Timothy 2:5, 6; John 1:14; Philippians 2:9-11.

Verses 22, 23 show the order of the resurrection. The time of Christ's presence (not coming) is the entire thousand years of His Reign. Verses 24-28 assure us of the success of Christ's Kingdom.

I am sorry to have to write this letter to you as I hate to give up the Tribune but I am not able to pay for it any longer. I am afflicted and have to buy so much medicine. May the Lord bless and keep you to the end is my prayer.

Yours by His grace,
W. W. LEALE.

EASTER GREETINGS.

These words our dear Redeemer said:
"I am the bright and morning star.
I am He that liveth and was dead—
I am alive forevermore."
When Jesus died and rose again—
"He tasted death for every man."

Since our dear Savior won the night,
From death and hell (the grave) to set us free;
Then, O death! where is thy sting?
O grave, where is thy victory?
All power now in earth and heaven—
Unto our blessed "Lord" is given.

A precious gift can now be thine,
'Tis promised in "God's Holy Word."
"This gift of God is eternal life"
"Through Jesus Christ our risen Lord."
The wondrous power of "God most high"
Hath raised Him up no more to die.

JOSEPHINE M. GELVIN, I. B. S.

Houston, Pa., April 14.

I am renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. The Tribune is surely a welcome visitor in our home. We enjoy so much Pastor Russell's sermons and all the religious features of your paper. May the Lord bless you and help you to continue publishing the beautiful message of Truth.

Yours for continued success.
MRS. ISAAC COX, JR.

Adaline, W. Va., April 10.

I am renewing for Tribune through the Watch Tower. While I am cutting out some of my papers and magazines yours is not one of them as I am an old reader of the Tribune for about thirty-five years since I first began to get it from carrier. I read it then from a different motive than now.

T. B. WEEKLY.

Atlanta, Ga., April 12.

I am very sorry to ask you to discontinue my paper as it is so helpful to me. I have noticed the special notice in your paper and noticed my paper's subscription was out some time ago so I will ask you to discontinue the paper as I am not able to renew it.

Thanking you for your kindness in sending it so long after it was past the time for renewing, I remain,

Yours truly,
MRS. J. L. FRETWELL.

Delaware, Ohio, April 12.

I am renewing through the Watch Tower. I enjoy very much the two letters in a recent issue by Robie D. Adkins and Henry McClellan. They are so delightfully truthful in childlike sincerity. They are so inspiring and refreshing in these days of dissembled excuses.

Surely we appreciate the Labor Tribune, but, friends, please say more; tell how you came into the Truth; it always helps someone: or write some helpful experience.

My uncle gave me the first volume of Dawn in 1896. I read about half way through it and threw it down, saying, "No, I don't believe in a second chance." I read no more of it for eight years. Then my heart was getting a deep plowing and a dear old lady gave me one of Pastor Russell's sermons on the "Atonement" and I caught the idea from it that I was to be a "Lord's goat." Then I went at the first volume again. I took a blank piece of paper and set down on it the places which I did not like or understand; like this: "top of page 45" or "bottom of page 84," etc. When I had finished the book I re-read these special parts and all was clear and accepted. It was hard to think that the nominal church was Babylon. I had been such a great worker in the Methodist church for years. But when I saw clearly their error of the immortality of the soul, the eternal torment theory, the soul never dying—just like Satan said, (Gen. 3:4) when God said it should die (Ezek. 18:4,20; Gen. 2:17 and Matt. 10:28). Gen. 1st chapter says (margin) anything that hath life is a soul. They went down into Egypt, "Souls," (Gen. 46:15,18, 22, 25-27).

They are preaching Satan's word instead of God's Word. As Jesus said of the Pharisies, "preaching for doctrines the commandments (opinions) of men." I have heard them preach, Thackeray, Bellamy, Poe, Shakespeare, Lincoln, Garfield, when, like St. Paul, they should have preached "Jesus and the resurrection," (Acts 17:18; 1 Cor. 2:2.

When I began to see these Scriptures and learn the Truth in the Bible through Pastor Russell's teaching I just came by leaps and rejoiced and loved God and Jesus and His Word with a love I had never known before. Oh, what rich pasture! and how we loved God's people and what a joy to meet with them. How thankful we are and how we desire others to see these glorious things and share our joy. Earthly things are very little to me now:

"I want to touch lightly the things of this earth, Esteeming them only of trifling worth;"

but prefer Jeusalem above my chief joy.—Psa. 137:5, 6.

Beloved in the Lord, please write something helpful for the Tribune. It is not dearer than the North West paper for we take it with the "Watch Tower." Bro. Dabney's article on "The Mystery of God" is so complete on the different pictures of the little flock, the Christ head and body. I have been able to get it into one of our local papers.

And Bro. Nelson's great work on Pastor Russell's sphere in the Reformation is very valuable. And our dear Pastor's sermon in such good, clear print.

We get good food in the Tribune and more of it all the tnme.

Your sister in the Master's service,
ALICE C. COLLUM.

ST. PETER AND CORNELIUS THE GENTILE

Acts 10:1-16, 24-48—April 16.

Cornelius, the First Gentile Convert to Christianity — Beginning of a New Dispensation—Expiration of Israel's "Seventy Weeks" of Exclusive Divine Favor—St. Peter's Vision.

"There is no distinction between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon Him." —Romans 10:12.

CORNELIUS, the Roman centurion, was evidently converted to God and righteousness years prior to the incident which forms today's Study. Although devout, he was not a Jew, and realized that he was outside the pale of Divine favor; for Israel was the only nation in covenant relationship with God. (Amos 3:2.) Perhaps he had heard of Jesus, and was perplexed on this subject. Perhaps this led him to the earnest prayers which the Lord saw fit to answer in a miraculous manner, sending an angel to assure Cornelius that his prayers and his alms were appreciated of the Lord.

The angel intimated that something further than prayers and good deeds was necessary; but he was not commissioned to tell the additional requirements. Instead, he instructed Cornelius to send to Joppa for the Apostle Peter, who would tell him what to do. The centurion's readiness of mind is shown by his prompt obedience. He not only prayed, but co-operated with God in its answering.

Meantime, St. Peter, with all the prejudices belonging to the Jews for centuries, must be prepared to receive this first Gentile to be brought into the Church. This was done by means of a vision Consequently St. Peter, with six brethren from Joppa, came promptly to the centurion's home on the following day—"doubting nothing"; for evidently the Lord was leading him in this matter. Of all the Apostles he was the best one for this work, because of his impetuous disposition and his zeal to follow the Lord's directions quickly and heartily, and because, he being the oldest Apostle and in many respects the most influential, his course would have the greater weight with the others.—Acts 15:6-12.

It is difficult for us to conceive the Jewish prejudice against any thought that the Gentiles would be fellow-heirs with them in the Abrahamic Promise. For centuries it had been considered a settled matter that Divine favor could not possibly go outside of Israel to other nations, in the sense of making the Gentiles equally acceptable to God. Their views were based upon God's Promise to Abraham (Genesis 22:15-18), and upon the fact that Israelites were not permitted to have general dealings with Gentiles or to intermarry with them. Furthermore, the Jewish religious rulers had gone further and had exaggerated to some extent these differences. But now a new dispensation had come. Israel's "seventy weeks" of special favor had expired; and the Lord began to extend His favor to the Gentiles.—Daniel 9:24.

St. Peter's trance-vision.

The Gospel Preached to Gentiles.

On arriving at the house, St. Peter found assembled there a congregation of earnest, God-fearing Gentiles, and asked the pointed question, "For what intent have ye sent for me?" Cornelius then related something of his past experience, his desire for fellowship with God, his endeavor to live a godly life, the vision which he had seen; and his expectancy that he would hear from St. Peter what had been promised him. Cornelius was not saved by his almsgiving, nor by his prayers, nor yet by the Apostle's Message. But that Message explained matters, and enabled Cornelius and his household to grasp by faith the great redemption in Christ Jesus—and thus to be saved.

We note with keen interest the Apostle's preaching, that we may clearly discern the life-giving Message from which Cornelius and his associates derived their saving faith. St. Peter's discourse was the same Gospel Message which he had delivered repeatedly before. The theme was Jesus, the sacrifice for sin which He had accomplished when He died on the cross, and the hope of a resurrection from the dead through Him, as attested by His own resurrection through the mighty Power of God. The Apostle's discourse was "the old, old story," which to many in our day has become tedious and distasteful, but which to every soul in the right heart attitude is the Father's Message of forgiveness of sins and reconciliation.

St. Peter at Cornelius' Home.

Cornelius and his household had been waiting for just such a Message of Divine grace, and accepted Jesus as their Savior quickly and gladly. But St. Peter had not fully grasped the situation, and therefore did not suggest baptism until the Holy Spirit fell upon them and they magnified God without the laying on of hands—in the same manner that it was bestowed upon the Jewish assembly at Pentecost.

I note that my subscription to your paper will be up on the 16th inst, and being unable to work to continue subscribing for same, I respectfully beg that it be discontinued. However, I thank you for the interst you manifest in the spreading of the Truth, your courage to dare to do right and your zeal in the defense of the oppressed.

Respectfully yours,
HELENA A. HARRIS.

Ellwood City, Pa., April 10.

I have been a subscriber for the National Labor Tribune for several years and have greatly appreciated its weekly visits, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and help to Bible study.

I see my subscription has closed and have concluded I would give a year's subscription to another Truth friend as I am provided with more reading than I am able to do. I know I shall miss it but I can afford some self denial when I know the friend will be benefited and you, dear editor, will not suffer the loss of a subscriber. I have noticed so many that have had to withdraw on account of means and I have felt very sorry that you should lose any subscriber after all your faithfulness to edit such a clean and reliable paper. Last year I sent you five subscriptions beside my own and would be pleased if I could do so this time. I belive it is one of the means that God is using to spread the "glad tidings." I am sure you will be richly rewarded and blessed for your labor of love.

"Not a word we say fall fruitless
Not a deed we do decays,
Every thought and word and action
Will be found in future days."

Thanking you for all favors,
Respectfully yours,
MRS. H. R. McILVAINE.

Oxford, Ohio, April 12.

I see my subscription for your grand paper expired March 6, 1916. Enclosed you will find money order for the Tribune for one more year. I cannot express how I appreciate the manner in which you publish Pastor Russell's sermons. Also we love to read the letters of appreciation from the dear ones. I have been taking the Tribune ever since the Russell-White debates, held in Cincinnati, O., and we wish to continue taking it to the end of our race if it continues to publish Bro. Russell's sermons and the many other good things of so much interest to those in present Truth.

Thanking you very much for continuing to send my paper, I am,

Yours respectfully,
O. R. WILKINS, Sr.

Waynesboro, Miss., April 10.

Inclosed herewith find money order to pay subscription to the Tribune. It appears that my subscription was out some time ago. I like your paper because of the fact of your publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, and other Truth literature; and because it appears to be free from bias and prejudice on all questions, discussing them in a calm and reasonable manner. I trust you may remain courageous and strong for the right. Those who take such a stand always have enemies to fight, but a man who is not brave enough to fight for the Truth as he sees it is not much of a man.

Sincerely,
M. L. HEIDELBERG.

PASSOVER IN TYPE AND ANTITYPE.

FIRST-BORNS OF ISRAEL A TYPE OF THE CHURCH OF THE FIRST-BORNS.

Only First-Borns in Danger of the Destroying Angel—Passing Over of Antitypical First-Borns Full of Meaning for the World —First-Borns the Blessers of Their Brethren—Eating the Lamb With Bitter Herbs—Jesus Our Passover Lamb—He Instituted a New Feature Not Shown in the Type—Partaking of Jesus' Blood—Church to Be Broken, to Shed Their Blood, With Christ.

New York City, April 16.—Pastor Russell lectured here today, at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway, on the subject of the Passover. His text was, "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." (1 Corinthians 5:7, 8.) We give a condensed report of his discourse:

The Passover ceremonies, the first institution of Divine favor with the nation of Israel, prefigured the first institution of Divine favor inaugurated by our Lord Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, or Holy Communion. As the Apostle indicated in our text, the Jewish Passover was a foreshadowing, or typifying, of the better things, the real Passover, with which we Christians have to do. We are not wholly dependent upon the Jewish type for our information, however; for we have clear, Divine statements by our Lord and His Apostles respecting the relationship between Christ and His Church and respecting the special salvation of the Elect. Nevertheless, we find in the Passover type many details which assist us greatly in the understanding of the Antitype.

First of all we should notice that the Passover directly affected only the first-borns of Israel, although it indirectly affected all the remainder of Israel. That is to say, the last plague upon Egypt was the death of all their first-borns; and the Passover celebrates the fact that the first-borns of Isreal were spared, or passed over, by the destroying angel in that night. As the younger children of the Israelites. Hence the latter were not passed over. Yet they were certainly interested in the passing over, or sparing, of the first-borns, not merely because of their relationship, but because in the Lord's providence those first-borns became leaders and deliverers of the people on the next day, as they went forth from Egypt.—Numbers 8.17, 18.

Furthermore, those first-borns of Israel, exchanged by Divine direction for the entire tribe of Levi, were thereafter represented in them; and they, as the sacrificing priests and the teaching Levites, became the ministers of the Law Covenant for that nation. The antitype of this was distinctly pointed out by the Apostle Paul; namely, that the elect Church of this Gospel Age is "the Church of the First-borns, which are written in Heaven." These are to be the "able ministers of the New (Law) Covenant."—Hebrews 12:23; 2 Corinthians 3:6.

These first-borns alone are being dealt with during this Gospel Age, or "night." These alone are in danger of a death penalty. As the Apostle declares, if we sin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for our sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour us as the adversaries of God and of righteousness. (Hebrews 10:26, 27.) Nevertheless, the whole world of mankind is certainly interested in this Church of the First-borns, in its successful passing over, its attainment of everlasting life; for these are the Royal Priesthood and the instructors of the New Covenant, which is shortly to be sealed, and by the terms of which all the families of the earth are to be blessed. All mankind will receive the blessing of reconciliation to God through the knowledge of the Truth and through the blessings of the Millennial Kingdom, associated with the New Covenant.—Jeremiah 31:31-34.

JESUS THE PASSOVER LAMB.

Having noted the first-born class, we should discern clearly also the Passover lamb, through the merit of whose blood the passing over of the first-borns was effected. The lamb is a peculiar innocent animal, wholly unprepared for defense or resistance, and thus a suitable picture, or type, of our Lord, who was non-resistant and who fully and freely surrendered His rights and His earthly interests on our behalf—on behalf of the First-borns. True, others than the First-borns will ultimately profit by His sacrifice, but these especially and peculiarly so. Thus far God's only dealings during this Gospel Age are with this class. These alone have an Advocate with the Father—Jesus Christ the Righteous. (John 2:1, 2.) These alone thus far are reconciled to God.

All of God's blessings to the unbelievers must come in the future, under the New Covenant; for only believers can be justified by faith and receive the blessings of the Faith Covenant—the Abrahamic Covenant. "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," first saves, or passes over, the Church of the First-borns, and later in the Millennium will bless all who become Abraham's seed.

There are pictures of the Church which represent her as participating with the Lord in His sacrifice; but this Passover type is not one of these. The Passover lamb represented our Lord Jesus Christ as "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1:29.) But the sin of the world has not yet been taken away. Our Lord has not yet applied His merit for the world, but only and expressly for the Household of Faith. In another sacrifice, which represents our Lord and the Church conjointly sacrificing, as Head and members, the body of the animal was cut into various pieces and laid with the Head upon the altar, thus typifying Christ Jesus as the Head and the Church as His members. (Exodus 29:15-18.) But provision was made that the Passover sacrifice was not to be divided. It was to be eaten whole—not a bone was to be broken. It represented, not Christ and the Church, but Christ alone in His sacrifice.—Exodus 12:46; John 19:36.

"IN THAT NIGHT."

Be it remembered that the passing over took place in the night, not in the daylight. When the morning arrived, the Israelites went forth out of the land of Egypt to liberty, to freedom from bondage. But during the night they were still in bondage, waiting for the deliverance which could come only after the passing over of the first-borns. That night of the type represented this Gospel Age.

This same thought is given by our Lord when He says, "Let your light so shine before men"; again, "Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." (Matthew 5:15, 16.) The Apostle Peter expresses the same thought, saying, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the Day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts." (2 Peter 1:19.) Again, the Prophet, speaking of the Church, says, "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."—Psalm 119:105.

Numerous other Scriptures refer to the new Millennial Dispensation as the Morning in which the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams, and in which the shadow of superstition and works of darkness shall all be driven away. The appropriateness of this figure must be evident to every reasonable mind. God's people are children of the Day in the sense that their hopes and sentiments belong, not to the darkness of sin, not to the nighttime, but to the Day, to the Reign of Righteousness, for which they are praying, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven."

Eighteen centuries ago our Lord said that He had come as a Light into the world, but that men loved darkness rather than light. (John 8:12; 3:19-21.) Only a few yet recognize Him as "the true Light." But eventually He will "light every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9.) Indeed, His Church are invited to become associated with Him as lamp-bearers; and if faithful in permitting their light to shine now, they will by and by be parts of that great Sun of Righteousness which shall heal the world with its beams. Our Lord pointed this out in the parable of the Wheat and the Tares. He declared that in the end of this Age He would gather the wheat into the barn; and that then should "the righteous shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father." (Matthew 13:43.) Alas, that so few have "an ear to hear" and accept the wonderful teachings of the Divine Plan!

BLOOD ON THE DOORPOSTS ALL NIGHT.

The Israelites were instructed that the blood of the lamb must be sprinkled on the doorposts and the lintels of their houses that night. This indicated that all who would belong to the Household of Faith must believe in the precious blood of Christ, and thus be "justified by faith" irrespective of denomination. To believe thus would make us members of the Household of Faith; but it would not determine whether or not we would be of the First-borns. The Very Elect, the Saints, the Royal Priesthood, have this place of seniority in the Household of Faith—not by reason of natural years, but by reason of spiritual development. They are priests, elders, in the sense of their primacy of development in the character-likeness of their Redeemer, which also indicates their faith and obedience.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that this is the Scriptural teaching. We are not merely to believe that Jesus lived, that Jesus died. We are especially to believe that He died SACRIFICIALLY, "the Just for the unjust," and are to accept our share of the redemption which He secured by His precious blood. The sprinkling of the blood upon the doorposts in the type implied public confession of the precious blood of the Lamb of God, in His death and in its efficacy for us, which is thus signified.

It will be remembered that the Israelites were enjoined against going out of the house during the night; for when the Lord would pass through to smite the Egyptians, He would see the blood upon lintels and doorposts, and would not suffer the destroying angel to come into their houses. (Exodus 12:1-13.) The injunction that those under the door sprinkled with blood should not go out from under it during that night had special application and force with respect to the first-borns. Antitypically it signifies that if any of us who are of the First-borns should go out from under the blood, in the sense of denying the merit, the efficacy, of the blood of Jesus, the penalty of such a course would be death—the Second Death—hopeless extinction.—Hebrews 6:4-6; 10:26-31.

EATING THE LAMB.

As the blood of the lamb marked the household of faith, not merely the first-borns of that household, so the eating of the lamb was not merely for the first-borns, but for all the household. So our Lord said, "My flesh is meat indeed"; and again, "This is the Bread which came down from Heaven; he that eateth of this Bread shall live forever." (John 6:55, 58.) In other words, not only was it necessary that Jesus should die, a meritorious Sacrifice, but it is also necessary that all who would have profit through His Sacrifice must feed upon Him—must appropriate the merit of His sacrifice.

The eating of the lamb pictured, or typified, the appropriation, by the Household of Faith, of those earthly rights and interests which were forfeited by Adam's disobedience and redeemed by Jesus' death. In other words, it signifies our appropriating justification from sin. We eat by faith, and therefore are said to be "justified by faith." By faith we are permitted to count ourselves as fully reinstated in God's favor through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, even as we were debarred from Divine favor through the demerit of Adam's sin. The eating of the lamb signifies the appreciation of these things and the appropriation of them to ourselves. The more we eat, the greater is our feeling of satisfaction in respect to our freedom from condemnation and our reinstatement in Divine favor through the merit of our Passover Lamb.

THE BLOOD OF THE NEW COVENANT.

Year by year for more than sixteen centuries the Jews kept the Passover by Divine decree—not merely the sacrifice of the lamb and the eating of it on the same night, after the doorposts had been sprinkled with blood, but additionally a feast of seven days following. That Passover feast represented the joys and rejoicings, the blessings and favors of relationship to God, based upon the merit of the Passover lamb—its sacrifice and the eating thereof. Yet the Jews understood not the meaning of what they did. It was not necessary that they should understand. When God's due time came, the explanation would be granted.

That due time came on the night in which our Lord was betrayed—the night of the fourteenth day of the first month, the very night of the typical killing of the Passover lamb. The Master gathered about Him His twelve Apostles. They had their usual Passover supper of roast lamb; and afterwards our Lord introduced what we familiarly term "The Lords Supper"—a new symbolization of the antitypical Passover.

What our Lord introduced was to take the place of the Jewish ceremony with His followers, to carry out the same thought, but on a higher plane, as representing a clearer, better understanding of the matter. Instead of the lamb would be the unleavened bread, representing our Lord's flesh. This He distributed to His Apostles, saying, "This is My body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of Me." (Luke 22:19.) The eating of that unleavened bread represented their appropriating to themselves of the merit of Christ's sacrifice—their justification by faith.

Then our Lord added a new feature—"the cup." For while all believers might partake of the bread, might realize justification through the merit of His sacrifice, yet only a certain class of believers were invited to partake of the blood. The cup represented death. Ordinarily, under the Jewish Law, the partaking of blood would represent blood-guiltiness, or responsibility for the death. (Leviticus 17:10-14.) But our Lord gave His diciples fruit of the vine as symbolic of His blood; and He urged upon them its appropriation, saying, "This cup is the New Testiment in My blood, which is shed for you," and "for many." "Drink ye all of it."—Luke 22:20; Matthew 26:27, 28.

This invitation to drink of His blood signifies a participation with Christ as His members in a sacrifice of earthly life, earthly interests, hopes, aims, ambitions—everything. All who accept this invitation to drink of His blood thereby pledge their lives in the same service for which He gave His life. This thought is entirely additional to anything in the Jewish Passover type. There is no intimation that any of the household were to partake of the blood of the slain lamb. Nevertheless we who now accept our Lord's proposition to share in His blood and lay down our lives with Him in defense of the Truth, thereby mark ourselves as elder brothers in the Household of Faith, members of the First-borns with our Lord, our Redeemer, and as prospectively the Royal Priesthood.

"AS YE ARE UNLEAVENED."

The Apostle Paul points out these items to which we have called attention. He says that the Lord's consecrated followers are counted as members of the Body of Christ, the Church, under Jesus the Head. He indicates that the broken loaf represents primarily our Lord Jesus, who was broken for us, and that secondarily it represents the Church of Christ, those who willingly and joyfully yield themselves for the sake of the Lord's Cause. He also points out that the cup of Christ's blood, of which we are invited to partake, signifies to us a common union in the sufferings and afflictions of Christ.

Therefore whoever intelligently partakes of the Memorial Supper thereby indicates two things: (1) his faith in Jesus as the Passover Lamb, and his appreciation and participation in the merit of Jesus—his justification by faith; and (2) his membership in the Body of Christ, all the members of which agree to be broken—membership in that "little flock" whose faithfulness is manifested by drinking of the Master's cup—sharing with Him in His sacrifice, suffering with Him in order to reign with Him.—1 Corinthians 10:16, 17; 2 Timothy 2:11, 12.

GREAT POLITICAL BATTLE READY FOR COMMAND

Armstrong-Jamison Faction Lined Up for the Primaries Against the Brumbaugh Forces--All Details Complete.

The great political contest is on in full and the indications are that before the primary election has ended a new Richmond will have entered the field and new faces will be found in the political arena.

The Armstrong-Jamison forces are lined up as never before and a most strenuous conflict is imminent. The factions are evenly divided but the organization forces are apparently under the control of Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong and Coroner Samuel Jamison while the actions of Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh in hesitating so long has created a peculiar skepticism in the minds of his own followers and these hesitate to declare themselves lest they find later they have been dealt out of the game.

Senator Boies Penrose is coming and his visits have heretofore been exceptionally profitable to those on whose side he has allied himself. His visit here will have its weight and there is no question but that it will have a most powerful influence with the advocates of a high protective tariff. Senator Penrose has been the champion of prosperity since he has been in the United States Senate and his attitude there is responsible for his leadership. Thus he is looked upon as the ideal leader and through his activity in tariff legislation he has solidified the high protectionists who are lining up with him in this campaign which at this time, is of national and international importance.

During the Senator's stay here, Chairman Samuel Jamison will go over the details of the campaign and the forces will go into action immediately.

There are some old faces among the legislators and George Hosack a former member of the General Assembly is coming back into politics with Lieutenant Governor Walter Lyon, one of Senator Quay's old lieutenants is re-entering the field.

The line-up indicates a careful selection and with the exception of but one or two candidates the slate as politicians look upon it, could not be much better.

What Governor Brumbaugh's friends intend doing is not yet clear but the indications are that Mayor W. A. Magee will take a most active part, and if he does, the contest may be interesting. Without Magee, Governor Brumbaugh may as well close shop. Magee is the entire organization of the Brumbaugh forces. The Governor has weakened himself very materially by his peculiar indifference to the wishes of his friends here, and his sort of vasilating methods has done him much harm. Many things that may have been of vast importance to strengthening his friends here politically have been delayed until people have lost sight of them and the Governor is now looked upon with suspicion. He has not treated Magee as he should have and instead of supporting Magee he has embarrassed him. To support Brumbaugh is no assurance of any special reform or beneficial legislation. The whole matter is merely to support Brumbaugh and the question is, what for? Why jeopardize the nation or the state by entering into some political factional contest merely to satisfy the whims of a governor. The people were looking forward to splendid legislation but hope is now almost lost and since two years of the Governor's time has expired the voters hesitate to go along further. Hence the Armstrong-Jamison ticket, it is said, will undoubtedly reap the benefit of such dilitory tactics. All the forces are now lining up and a real live contest may be expected at any moment.

It is hard to say who the followers of Magee will be, and there will be a strange mix-up for a time as those who were formerly staunch supporters of the Ex-Mayor, are now looming up with the opposition.

The candidates on the Armstrong-Jamison slate are as follows:

CANDIDATES MAKE GOOD SHOWING AT THE CLOSE OF THE BIG OEFER

Time is Growing Short and it Won't Be Long Until the Winner is Decided--One More Chance is Offered Those That Really Want to Win--The Vote Schedule in Effect Until the Close.

Double votes will be the schedule from now on and no special vote certificate will be issued after Friday. Make all your slips out for twice the regular votes and send them in. There will be no change in the vote schedule from now until the close.

Under this plan you can still get thousands of votes and those that are a little behind now may be the ones that will win out at the close. It is the one that can make a good finish that usually wins the race and it behooves all the candidates to work to this end.

Bear in mind that there are two big cars and a number of splendid prizes to be given away and you might as well have these as any one else. Even the smallest one of them will be worth the effort of some of the candidates. There are a few of the candidates that could make a better showing if they really wanted to win out in this contest.

The one that works the hardest will be the one that will carry off the first prize. This is not a something for nothing proposition, and the candidate that works the hardest will receive the largest reward.

Perhaps there will never come a time in your life when you can own a car for so small an effort. A little time and effort is all that it will cost and if you can not afford to own it, just turn it into cash and put it in the bank as ready money looks good to all of us.

Don't say that I can't, but say that I can and I will and you will be surprised how easy it will be for you to win.

The following is a list of the contestants:

TEACHERS TO FORM UNION.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Public school teachers in the nation's capital are discussing trade unionism. In a call signed by nearly 100 of these educators, it is said:

"Every class of people in the country, including capital, labor and the professions, have nation-wide organizations for their protection and well-being. The teachers alone remain in an unorganized condition.

"The teachers of this country, through the molding of the political thought and the developing of the economic efficiency of each succeeding generation of citizens, control, more than any other class of people, the future of the republic, and have the least control over their own destiny.

"A nation-wide organization of teachers, consolidated for protection, would be recognized by the political parties, by capital and by labor as a body possessing unwonted power.

"Such an organization would give the teachers of the country a voice in their own affairs which they do not at present possess.'

SCANDAL FAST, TRUTH SLOW

MADISON, Wis., April 24.—Scandal travels 1,000 yards a second, according to Prof. Benjamin Snow of the University of Wisconsin, who bases his calculations on observations around the university, but which might be applied to other localities.

Flattery has the second greatest speed, according to the professor, traveling from 400 to 500 yards in the same time. Truth, however, he declared, was slowest of all, moving only about 2½ yards per second.

He said his computations were based on the speed of the sound of an alarm clock, which is zero.

STREET CAR MEN WIN STRIKE.

ALLIANCE, Ohio, April 24.—The street car strike on the Stark Electric and Cleveland, Alliance and Mahoning Valley Interurban and Alliance city lines has ended with motormen and conductors winning wage increases.

The new wage scale calls for these rates respectively per hour for the first and second six-month periods and after two years: Alliance city, 22, 24 and 26 cents; Stark Electric, interurban, 26, 28 and 30 cents; Cleveland, Alliance and Mahoning Valley interurban, 24, 26 and 28 cents.

The companies agree not to discriminate against any employe because of strike activity.

WANT IRON MOULDERS ENJOINED

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The American Engineering company discriminated against active union iron molders and a strike was called by this organization after the management refused to discuss the matter with union representatives. The company now finds it is losing $5,000 a month because of the strike and has rushed to the court for relief. It wants an injunction—the awe-inspiring kind preferred.

WAGE INCREASES AT NASHUA.

NASHAU, N. H., April 24.—Employes at the textile plants of the Nashau Manufacturing company and the Jackson mills have secured wage increases. These concerns say they will pay the "prevailing wage" as usual. A strike at these mills, which started last October to enforce wage demands, was recently settled.

End of a Famous Shipyard Strike

Story of Great Liverpool Dock Strike's Ending.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, April 14, 1915.

The important strike of shipyard and allied workers on the Clyde at Glasgow, Scotland, of which I gave a full story last week is now over. It began at one particular forge on March 17th and spread to other munitions of war factories in the Clyde area. On April 3rd mass meetings were held in various parts of Glasgow and after the hearing of official communications from the various unions the men agreed to return to work as from April 4th. The particular men working at the forge where the trouble arose decided to return to work only by a narrow majority but elsewhere the return was unanimous. Unless the unexpected now again happens a peculiarly awkward (and also in view of the European war now taking place, regrettable) chapter closes.

All questions in dispute on the side of the men have now been placed in the hands of the Glasgow district committee of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers with a view to the men's complaints being considered. The particular questions discussed are in connection with the matter of dilution of labor, that is, the introduction of new labor into the shops in opposition to the old trade union rules. The idea behind the Government introduction of the principle of dilution of labor was to prevent anything that would restrict production, and provision was made for the admission of male or female unskilled labor for the period of the war.

The trouble over dilution of labor is one of considerable standing in the skilled labor movement here. I give the story of the Clyde arrangements regarding dilution of labor in order that American readers may be able to thoroughly understand this question. Dilution has been a big hot topic in this country ever since it was introduced, meaning as it did a tremendous temporary break with all the old valued trade union traditions. So far as last year's developments were concerned they were closed in the engineering trades by the following resolution agreed to by the executive council of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers on December 31st last:

That we, representing the Amalgamated Society of Engineers' National Conference, having heard the statements and pledges of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Munitions, decide to accept, on behalf of the conference and membership of the society, the scheme of dilution, and to co-operate actively therein, provided that the Government pledges itself to incorporate in the bill the power to enforce the rates of pay and conditions of labor as set out in Document L3 as well as L2, in controlled establishments.

The bill referred to was the bill then pending in Parliament which afterwards became law under the title of the Munitions of War Amendments Act 1916.

Document L2 was a series of recommendations drawn up by the Munitions Labor Supply Committee, and related to the employment and remuneration of women on munition work of classes which prior to the war were not recognized as women's work in districts where such work was customarily carried on. It consists of some 15 clauses. The first 14 provide specifically the rates of wages to be paid to women employed upon work customarily done by men or customarily by fully skilled tradesmen. The fifteenth clause provides that any question which arises as to the interpretation of these recommendations shall be determined by the Minister of Munitions.

Document L3 is a series of recommendations by the same committee, and they relate to the employment and remuneration of semi-skilled and unskilled men on munition work of a class which prior to the war was customarily undertaken by skilled labor. It consists of seven clauses, the first six dealing with rates and wages and the seventh providing that any question as to interpretation shall be determined by the Minister of Munitions.

The conditions which have been uniformly applied to all schemes of labor dilution so far as the important Clyde district is concerned are in the following terms:

The scheme is subject to the safeguards provided by Schedule

STRIKE OF RAIL MEN IS NATIONAL MENACE

Rule of Reason Must Supplant the Rule of Force in Settling Railroad Dispute.

By John Franklin Crowell.

Mr. Crowell is widely known as an educator, economist and publicist. He served as expert to the United States Industrial Commission and to the Treasury Department.

Whenever any considerable group of our fellow-citizens demands a fresh deal in the distribution of the national income, the proposition has no right to become operative until it has been considered from at least four distinct viewpoints. The proposition of the four-train service organizations, stripped of its pretense, is simply this: "Give us a basic eight-hour day and an overtime higher rate of pay, or we'll put the thumb-screws of starvation on the country by use of our power to tie up all traffic, from coast to coast."

Who Owns the Vineyard?

Well, let us look at this proposition a little more closely before we throw up our hands in expected fashion. For this may, after all, be concocted by a small knot of otherwise useful citizens who have got into the bad habit of thinking themselves the whole show. These useful men, to whose technical ability and skill as workers I take off my hat, figuratively speaking, everything I have anything to do with railroads, have for the time forgotten that they are the creatures of the great public's confidence in their capacity to render responsible service. They are looking into the wrong end of the telescope.

1. Is this demand economically sound, or is it self-condemned out of the mouth of economic experience? These men are already the best paid workers in a country with the highest wage-level in the world. What do they get? From $1,020 a year for trainmen to $1,760 a year for enginemen. That averages $1,240 a year, including conductors and firemen.

These four classes comprise only 18 per cent. of all employes in railway occupations. The other 82 per cent. get an average of $700 a year.

If it were good business to cut up the pie in such proportions for the big-four organization of men, it were still better business to raise the pay of those not so well paid—the $700 men. But if the first step were taken, the second could probably not be avoided.

Political Milk in the Cocoanut.

2. This brings us to the second test of the case—the political aspect of it. Here the railway rate-payer becomes the tax-payer. If these 312,000 voters out of 16,000,000 should get what they demand by strike or threat of strike it will mean only one of two things. The enforced diversion of $75,000,000 or $100,000,000 of income to the credit of 18 per cent. of the railway employes, must either arrest railway development in all other directions or the railroads must go to the public treasury to make progress possible.

That means that this demand on the railway treasury may turn out to be the same thing as a raid on the public treasury in the interest of 18 men out of every 100 employed in the country's railway service.

Are we as a nation of voters ready for this? If we are not, then we had better not allow even that entering of the wedge, until we see further ahead.

At all hazards the American voter should discredit that mirage of railway labor logic, that whatever the employes manage to get out of railway treasuries can be recouped out of increased rates.

What we need now is to take the entire range of American experience into account (including the Canadian method of settling such disputes) and make it a criminal offense to attempt to throttle commerce by conspiracy, to interrupt transportation.

3. The third test of this particular big-four conspiracy is consequently ethical. Is it right for men, paid so well as these are, to utilize their position of responsibility and trust, to choke off the arteries of commerce for purely private advantage?

Pay $100,000,000 Ransom or Face Famine.

This is no time to mince words. I ask men why we suffer such things to be. They tell me that men's moral sense has become blunted to the real character of this threat; that if $100,000,000 ransom is not credited on the books of the railway accountant to the 312,000 men in question, the thousands of communities served by the roads shall be taken as hostages to famine.

4. I beg now to close with one more word. This is a social question. We are all beneficiaries of this heritage which is called a nation—a nation dedicated to liberty under law—. In this family we are fellow-members—brothers may it be. But the brotherhood that counts is governed by the social conscience, not by the self-willed crowd. For one I should like to see every railway wage-earner's income doubled, trebled or more. But each man's share must have some relation to the measure of wealth his efforts add to the total available for distribution.

This law tends to give the railroad its capital for a minimum cost, so that the residual must be divided between the cost of progress and the worth of the employes to the business. If 8 hours a day with higher pay for extra time over that basic unit be the line of rising productiveness, then by all means let the scale go into operation. But that is as different from saying "Give me this, or I'll starve you," as heaven is from hell. Let progress be by law and not by violence. If the public has to pay, it will have something to say.

THE INNOCENT THIRD PARTY.

Mr. Howard Elliott, President
New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co.:

Dear Sir: For the past twenty-three years I have worked in the grocery business from fourteen to fifteen hours per day. And all the money I have saved in that time, about $6,000, I have invested in different railroad stocks in the United States.

It now looks to me as if the railroad employes are going to take my life savings from me and my family.

Since the Government is undertaking to protect the shippers of merchandise and the traveling passengers, I now believe it is up to the Government to protect the people that have invested their hard earned savings in railroads.

Very respectfully,
JOHN F. MILLER.
2296 Amsterdam Ave.
New York, April 6, 1916.

"UNSKILLED" WORKERS WIN.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Tunnel workers employed on New York city's $200,000,000 underground street railway system won a victory over the General Contractors' association after a two weeks' strike that involved 10,000 employes.

These workers belong to the so-called "unskilled" class and are members of the Tunnel and Subway Constructors' International union, affiliated to the American Federation of Labor.

Wage rates agreed to are: Laborers, $2 a day; timbermen, 2.75; timbermen's helpers, $2.20; concrete machine runners, except wherein the engineers have jurisdiction, $2.50; wooden concrete form makers, $2.75. An eight-hour day is agreed to and the interested union shall have the same privileges on the work as representatives of other organizations.

WAGE GAINS WITHOUT STRIKE.

URBANA, Ill., April 24.—The following gains have been made by locals affiliated to the Twin City Federation of Labor (Champaign and Urbana) without strike; Sheet Metal Workers union has raised wages from 40 to 45 cents an hour.

The Carpenters' union has increased rates from 50 to 55 cents an hour.

Electrical workers have signed an agreement for increased wages the present year from 35 to 42½ cents an hour; 45 cents for 1917 and 47½ cents for 1918. A year ago this organization had but 10 members. An active organization campaign resulted in a 100 per cent local, which is responsible for raising wages 12½ cents an hour during the next three years.

RAILROAD'S INCOME LARGE.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The annual report of the New York Central Railroad company shows a surplus available for dividends of $27,711,473, or 11 per cent on the $249,711,473 of stock, as against 3.7 per cent in 1914. Freight revenue for the year increased $14,195,000, and operating expenses, despite this greatly increased business, decreased $3,954,000.

The report includes the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and nine smaller roads.

APPRECIATIONS.

Chicago, Ill., April 19.

It affords me a great deal of pleasure to make known to you how I do appreciate your stand for Truth and righteousness. I feel we ought to do our part, in showing forth our appreciation of same, by subscribing and sending broadcast such good news as I find in your paper, especially the religious features. May the good work go on.

I am sending money order to Brooklyn for another year's subscription for myself and also please send the paper to one of those on your list who would like to have it but are not financially able.

Sincerely yours,
A. HOLMGREN.

Rome, Ga., April 20.

I am renewing my subscription to your splendid paper through the Watch Tower B. & T. Society today I value this paper very highly for its many good features, but especially the religious department. Words cannot fully express the benefit I derive from Pastor Russell's plain exposition of Bible truths, in his weekly sermons, that your paper furnishes so complete, and in such plain large type that I can almost read without glasses that I have had to use for years. My subscription was some time past due and only for lack of funds is why it has not been renewed before. I am indeed thankful to you for your kind favor in continuing my past due subscription for me until now. May the Giver of all good bless your efforts in showing forth His wonderful truths.

Truly a friend to the Tribune,
MRS. J. O. WINFREY.

Franklin, Mass., April 20.

I have been a subscriber to your highly approved paper for several years and shall continue to be as long as its present policy is maintained. It is just what I like to use in the Volunteer harvest work. It is especially good to give to those people who are interested in economics and social uplift. I have a complete file of Watch Towers since July 1, 1902. Many of the friends desire these in complete yearly lists, they can have them for $1.00 per year and pay their own transportation.

Sincerely yours,
MISS LUCY M. KING.

London, Ontario, Can., April 18.

Am wrting to tell you have sent money for renewal of subscription to your most valuable paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society and thank you for sending so long after date. I hope to send more promptly in the future as we cannot afford to miss the receiving these grand sermons and we greatly admire the lovely large type which is so easy to read. We know you will be richly rewarded for your fearless stand for Truth.

MISS G. HUGHES.

Leon, Okla., April 20.

Your special notice caught me and I am sending renewals with other orders to the Watch Tower. I trust all will pay up at once. I have taken the Tribune for years, and never let my subscription "run out" before. It's like a weekly visit of a dear friend to a person isolated. I stand alone here among swarms of sectarians but have stood it for more than a third of a century, and will continue till death removes me. Hurrah for the Tribune and its cause.

PETER B. ARTHUR.

Waycross, Ga., April 18.

I am enclosing subscription price for renewal of my subscription to the Tribune. We thank you so much for sending the paper right on after subscription was out. The paper is quite a welcome visitor in our home and hope to take it as long as you publish the sermons of Pastor Russell. Sunday School lessons, etc., because we enjoy them so much and they are a great help to us in this evil day.

Very sincerely,
H. H. SMITH.

Dallas, Texas, April 19.

I am this day renewing my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. Many thanks to you for continuing to send the paper after my subscription had expired. Many thanks also for calling my attention to same through the columns of the paper as I should not want to miss a single copy on acount of its religious features which brought me out of the miry clay of Babylon and placed my feet on the solid rock. Hoping you success, I am, as ever.

Yours truly,
G. W. PAFFORD.

Montrose, Iowa, April 20.

We very much appreciate your kindness in sending us the paper after our subscription had expired. We are now renewing trough the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. We like the Tribune and one of our reasons for liking it is that you print our Pastor's sermons and for all other Truth it contains. We want to thank you for your kindness to us and for the publishing of these "good tidings" which is "Meat in due season for the household of faith."

Yours very truly,
MR and MRS. JAS. B. CRESSWELL.

Orosi, Cal., April 19.

My subscription for the Labor Tribune expired some time ago, I am enclosing money order for renewal of my subscription for another year, as per the clubbing arrangements with the Watch Tower. We feel that you should be commended for the excellent paper you publish and particularly for the religious features that you continue to give us in such good type.

Pastor Russell's sermons are so soul comforting. He certainly teaches nothing but the Truth. The world has long been in darkness, but the time is drawing near when all shall know our Lord from the least to the greatest and fully understand His great plan.

Wishing you continued success in your efforts to do good to all men as you have opportunity, I am,

Yours truly,
MRS. F. L. VANATTA.

Louisville, Ky., April 20

See by the slip that my subscription to the Tribune has expired, and I have renewed same through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, and I trust you will continue to send same, as I suppose you will be notified in a day or so through the society of my renewal.

I enjoy the many features of your paper, aside from giving us Pastor Russell's sermon in large type, the article by Bro. Nelson is interesting and helpful.

Wishing you continued success, I remain,

Yours truly,
WM. RUEDMAN, JR.

Fort Worth, Texas, April 19.

I am writing to let you know that I have renewed my Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower. I have been a reader of your paper for a long time and want to continue it as long as Bro. Russell's sermons are in it. I am glad that you help to spread the blessed light to the groaning world. May the Lord be with you all. I wish you best success. I remain,

Yours,
JOHN FALK.

Red Bank, N. J., April 20.

It is with deep regret that I must ask you to discontinue sending the above paper. It will be a great loss to me, because of Pastor Russell's sermons and all the religious parts of the paper is so good.

Owing to financial conditions I cannot send my subscription but I hope to do so later.

I thank you for sending the paper after the year, but I was not informed from the kind friend who had sent it from the start, and did not know if she had renewed subscription. God bless her—whoever she is.

MRS. A. C. PENNY.

Baltimore, Md., April 20.

I have renewed my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower Society. I desire to thank you for publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, also the many religious articles. Also the stand you are taking against injustice and fraud. That alone is most commendable for there are so few papers at this time willing to stand and fight these evil conditions and fraud for to do so means no earthly gain at this time, but thank God that you are willing to await your reward in the future, yet future reward will not pay present expenses. That is why I am a subscriber to your paper which has been such a loyal supporter of our dear Pastor. I would like to be in the position to pay the subscription price for all that are not able to subscribe but that I cannot do. I am also a subscriber to the St. Paul Enterprise which is also doing a commendable work. Find good features in both the Tribune and Enterprise.

Dear editor, I hope it will always be possible for you to publish the good tidings that the world is so sorely in need of. I am mindful of the opposition it is causing in doing so but the reward will be amply sufficient when the battles here are at an end. May you continue to use your influence and your paper for the cause of justice and righteousness. I am as ever,

Sincerely yours,
H. KRUHM.

West Middlesex, Pa., April 21.

I am renewing my subscription today through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society and also paying for subscription past due. I wish to thank you for continuing to send the paper without it being paid for in advance. I wish you continued success in spreading the good tidings.

MRS. BELLE BRIDGETT.

Rockland, Mass., April 19.

I note my subscription date has outrun, and I am renewing through the Watch Tower office. A friend sent me the paper for a year and I do not feel hardly able to subscribe for it, but have become so attached to its religious features that I have decided to sacrifice something else than the Tribune.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. ANGIE B. HARRIS.

Baltimore, Md., April 20.

I am renewing my subscription to your very interesting paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. It has been a welcome weekly visitor to my home for some years. I enjoy the sermons of our dear Pastor so much and also the letters from the friends. May your reward be great for lifting up the standard high. The Lord bless you in your good work. I remain

Yours in the Master's service,
MRS. W. SHRINER.

Lawrence, Mass., April 20.

It is with regret that I must stop taking the Tribune which has been such a comfort with all of Pastor Russell's sermons and all religious matter that you have always put in. Have ever looked forward with pleasure to its arrival. As I am not able to pay for it must do without it.

Wishing you success ever for its circulation as it is a grand paper.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. A. M. BLANCHARD

Norfolk, Va., April 20.

Thanks for sending the Tribune so regular after my time had expired, also the kind friend who has given it to me for another year accept my thanks and now, dear friend, if you have any old back numbers of Tribune to spare I would be glad if you would give them to me to take to the sick patients at city home, and give mine after reading and today I was asked by several to please get them some more to read. We have 300 men and women here all in different wards. The city of Norfolk sent out two nurses at very small pay to help nurse the sick. I was one sent so I will be glad of anything sent me to give them even if a year or more back.

MRS. C. E. McCLOUD.

Temple, Texas, April 19.

For some time it was my intention to write you a few lines of appreciation for your good paper. I think your paper has improved considerably in that Pastor Russell's sermons appear in such large clean type. Surely those who have weak neyes can now read with pleasure. I must tell you that four in our home read the sermons.

For a time I thought I would have the Tribune discontinued, but it kept on coming and I saw that the Tribune kept up the good work, so I renewed through the Watch Tower. It was good I did it for it was getting better all the time.

It causes me to feel that the Tribune is being somewhat disregarded when I read so many letters from friends asking that your paper be discontinued because of financial inability to pay for it. I feel sure that many will miss it and may through a little self denial again subscribe for the good Tribune.

The stand that you take in spreading the good tidings and your efforts to keep on publishing the sermons of Pastor Russell that contain real, rich food for the hungry and thirsty people causes me to value and appreciate your paper more.

I wish to say that the sermon published in your issue of March 2 is an excellent one and worth more than a year's subscription to the Tribune. With much success to you, I am,

Yours sincerely,
FRED WISMAR.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformtion

strap, were of value in developing him for his career. The Russell children consisted of but three, two sons and one daughter, but one of the boys died very young. Russell says that had his mother lived she would have ruled him so firmly that he would never have developed as he afterward did. Apparently too much discipline serves no better than too little. Russell lived close to his father after his mother's death, going into business with him when he was eleven years old, and at that age he wrote up the articles of agreement under which they did business. That lie thonght of other matters besides his business affairs, and, as indicating the inclination that has led him to be distinguished as being the greatest Bible scholar of the age, we narrate the following incident. Like the boy Jesus, who strayed from His parent and was found among the Doctors o the Law discussing Scripture, on night his father missed him, when he was about 12 years old, and going down to the store found him, at two o'clock in the morning, completely lost in a Biblical concordance—the boy was so absorbed in the book that he had no idea that it was so late. Russell's father embraced the new light resurrected from the Bible by his gifted son and loyally encouraged him in his darkest hours until his death.

On one occasion Henry Ward said: "My first mother stands to me for love; my second mother discipline; my father for justice." His father, Lyman, was a logician; Henry was a lover and longed for a mother's sympathy and caresse which his stepmother did not give. He clung close to his older sister, Harriet, when a boy, and referred to her as his "third mother." Beecher, like Lincoln, idealized upon his first mother in his manhood and has been likened in type to Meissonier who wrote in his journal the following tribute to his dead mother: "This is the morning of my seventeenth birthday. What a long time to look back upon! This morning, at the hour my mother gave me birth, I wish my first thoughts to be of her. Dear mother, how often have the tears risen at the remembrance of you! It was your absence—my longing for you—that made you dear to me. The love of my heart goes out to you! Do you hear me, mother, crying and calling for you? How sweet it must be to have a mother."

Wesley kept up a constant correspondence with his mother and she was his source of inspiration and support. She influenced him considerably; she was the true founder of Methodism (a methodised Christian life), but his theology was his own, not hers. Beecher on the other hand held communion with his dead mother in his contemplations of her and it colored his theology. "My first mother is always pleading for me—her delicate, long, tapering fingers stroke my hair—I hear her voice, gentle and low." Note his application of this beautiful emotion to his conceptions of Christ: "You know how the heart is subject to freshets, you know how the mother, always loving her child, will catch it up and cover it with kisses and break forth in a rapture of love. Such a kind of heart glow fell from the Saviour upon that young man who said to Him, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" It is said, "Then Jesus, beholding him, loved him."

Portland, Oregon, April 18.

Noting that my subscription to the Tribune soon expires I am renewing same through W. T. Bible and Tract Society, Brooklyn, N. Y.

We, like many others, cannot get along without Pastor Russell's sermons and especially like the "make-up" 3-column service of the "Old Standby" Labor Tribune.

We greatly enjoy the weekly visits of the Tribune and its contents contained therein. Hoping that you will continue the publication of Pastor Russell's sermons and wishing success in so doing, I am

Yours for the Truth and Righteousness

G. M. STEVENSON.

Wenatchee, Wash., April 20.

I am renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower. I want to thank you for your great kindness to me in continuing sending the paper when my subscription had expired.

I want to tell you that I appreciate your paper very much especially the sermons by Pastor Russell and other religious features. The type and quality of paper are excellent and I take pleasure in passing the paper on to others who are not yet subscribers.

Sincerely,
VENDELLA M. SAMPSON.

EASTER GREETINGS.

Rejoice with me this Easter morn,
That from the dead our Lord is born.
When the women came to His tomb
that day,
And found the stone was rolled away;
O, did He not to them appear?
Did they not see our Saviour dear?
So le us all our powers employ,
To tell the "tidings of great joy."

To us assurance has been given,
That He was carried up to heaven.
And that the heavens doth Him retain Until He comes "His Bride to claim.
"Her raiment in fine gold is wrought."
"Unto her Lord she shall be brought"
"All glorious at the King's right hand,"
"In gold of Ophir" she shall stand.

She shall His throne and kingdom share,
And "a crown of life" His Bride shall wear.
"This Glorious King" has now come
in,
His reign of peace shall soon begin.
And we are in the Judgment day,
When the stumbling stones shall be rolled away.
For a thousand years His reign shall be,
Then follow the ages of Eternity.

JOSEPHINE M. GELVIN, I. B. S.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 23.

I am writing to you to tell you to stop my paper, as I cannot pay for it any longer. I can see by the yellow tab I am behind, but I thought something would turn up, but until now there has not. It is hard to throw up a paper you have been taking so long. I am not taking your paper now for the labor news; it is for Pastor Russell's sermons and his addresses. I have read his Dawns; I have listened to his debates with Dr. Eaton; I went to Bible House Chapell on Arch street. In fact I have watched him for many years. Long before your valuable paper took him up.

I have read about the fake doctors and fake remedies. In fact your paper is fine all the way through. Then again there is N. E. Nelson's Essays on all the Reformers from Martin Luther to Pastor Russell. Is that not fine? I thought of seeing the end of that to see what he said about Pastor Russell (as he is the last.) You can fancy one after taking your paper over thirty years or more. I would always say when I came from work, "has the Tribune come?" The answer would always be "Yes." I shall be lost without it, as it is like losing a dear friend.

I thank you for letting it run so long and if I can afford to pay for it I will take your paper again. I have saved the papers for two or three years, so you see I can read the sermons over again; they will always be fresh to me. I have all of Pilot's Reports, and many other useful articles too numerous to mention.

Wishing the Tribune every success, I remain

Yours truly,
THOMAS WEBB,

ST. PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON

Acts 12:1-11—April 30.

Passover Trials and Testings—Death of St. James—St. Peter Imprisoned. His Miraculous Deliverance—An All-Night Prayer-Meeting—The Reward of Faith—Lessons For Our Day—Divine Guardianship of All Truly His.

"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him, and deliverth them."—Psalm 34:7.

HEROD was the family name of several kings who ruled Israel but who were Edomites.

At the time of today's Study Herod Agrippa I. had been appointed king of Judea. He was the grandson of Herod the Great, murderer of the babes at Bethlehem, and the nephew of Herod Antipas, who beheaded John the Baptist and subsequently, with his soldiers, set Jesus at naught and mocked Him, just prior to His crucifixion.

Herod Agrippa appears to have been desirous of the good will of the people, even at the cost of principle. He took pains to observe the minutiae of Jewish ceremonials. On the lookout to curry favor, especially with the influential Jews, Agrippa caused the Apostle James to be beheaded. Finding that the death of St. James brought great pleasure to the Jews, he had the Apostle Peter arrested. The expression, "When he had apprehended him," implies that some delay occurred—that St. Peter's arrest was after searching. Probably all of the Apostles were more or less secreted about that time. But, trusting to the sacredness of the Passover season, St. Peter had ventured forth and was imprisoned, Agrippa intending his death after the Passover week.

St. Peter's Deliverance.

We can well imagine the sadness of the Church at this Passover season, which must have reminded them considerably of our Lord's death. For some years past it has seemed to us as though each Passover season, each Memorial celebration, was a time of special trial and testing amongst the followers of our Lord. Whether this is a fact or not, surely it will not injure the Lord's people to be especially on guard against the wiles of the Adversary at these times. Let us watch and pray lest we fall into temptation.

St. Peter is supposed to have been imprisoned in the famous Castle of Antonia, where our Lord was arraigned before Pilate, and where St. Paul was subsequently taken when mobbed in Jerusalem. The Apostle had a guard of four quaternions—four soldiers each—who relieved each other every three hours. Two of the four were chained to his arms, the third stood outside the door, and the fourth was stationed in the passage leading to the outer gate.

The power of grace Divine to give peace amidst alarms is well illustrated in this case by the fact that St. Peter was fast asleep when the angel of the Lord came to deliver him. The proprieties of the case are also illustrated by the fact that the Church were not asleep, but praying for the Apostle. It was not for him to pray for deliverance from Agrippa's power. For him to have asked for the prolongation of life would have manifested a wilfulness incompatable with a full consecration to God's will. But with the Church it was different. They could with all propriety tell the Lord of their love for St. Peter, and express the hope that it might be the Divine will that he should continue with them.

Between three and six o'clock in the morning St. Peter was awakened by an angel, whose radiant features enabled the Apostle quickly to discern that his deliverer was a holy being. The Apostle was bidden to arise. Simultaneously the chains were loosed which bound him to the soldiers. He then was instructed to put on his cloak and to follow his leader. He did so. Thus he was led past the first and second doors, until they came to the great iron gate leading into the city. This swung open of its own accord; and then the angel left him.

St. Peter and Rhoda.

Doubtless the angel had started St. Peter in the direction of Mary's home, where prayer was being made on his behalf. The description of the house implies that it was of the better class. St. Peter's knock was answered by Rhoda—little Rose—who was so delighted, when she recognized his voice, that, childlike, she neglected to open the door before running back to tell the praying household that he was at the gate. Some thought that the little maid was mistaken, and insisted that it was his angel—in harmony with the thought that an angel had supervision of each of God's people, and that such might personate his charge.

The brethren were surprised at the Lord's answer to their petition; for it came very unexpectedly as respects time. When they realized that it was St. Peter, there was an outburst of excitement which he was obliged to silence by shaking his hands. Then he narrated the wonderful story of his deliverance, and bade them tell it to the other James, the cousin of Jesus, and other disciples. Then he went his way.

THE BIBLE HOPE COMPREHENSIVE

THIS HOPE THE SOURCE OF STRONG CONSOLATION TO ALL WHO SEE IT.

THE CHURCH'S HOPE THE GRANDEST AND HIGHEST—THE WORLD'S HOPE ALSO GLORIOUS—SIX THOUSAND YEARS OF EXPERIENCE WITH SIN AND DEATH — WHY PERMITTED — BLESSINGS AND FAVORS PROVE A CURSE TO THE UNSANCTIFIED AND SELFISH—PRESENT WORLD-WIDE TROUBLE THE FORERUNNER OF A BETTER DAY—DELIVERANCE OF BOTH CHURCH AND WORLD AT HAND.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 23.—Pastor Russel addressed the public here today in his usual impressive manner. His text was from Hebrews 6:18, 19: "That by two immutable things (His word and His oath), in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." He said in part:

The Apostle's words here intimate that there is but one hope set before the Church—the hope presented in the Gospel of Christ. It is very important, then, that as Christians we understand what that hope is. Once we had such confused ideas respecting our Heavenly Father and His glorious Plan that we could not understand what constituted our hope. Many supposed that it was a hope set before a few and a threat set before everybody else—the threat of endless torment. How we misunderstand "the God of All Grace and the Father of Mercies!" Now we can see that there is a glorious hope for all who will come to love righteousness and hate iniquity, although the world's hope is not the Christian's hope.

The hope set before the Church is the hope of reigning with Christ, as His joint-heirs, His Bride. (Romans 8:17; 1 John 3:2; 2 Peter 1:4.) It is the hope of attaining the Divine nature. This hope has been held out in advance of the blessings which will be proffered to the world later. The Church has no part in the hope of the world. But we have the admonition of our Lord and of His Apostles that we "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." We are enjoined to put off the works of darkness—anger, malice, hatred, strife, and all other works of the flesh and of the Devil—and to put on meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love—the fruits of the Spirit of Christ, the Holy Spirit.—Hebrews 12:14; Galations 5:19-23.

FIRST INTIMATION OF CHURCH'S HOPE.

The first intimation that God would raise up a class who would roll away the curse from Adam's race was given to Abraham. God said, "Abraham, I will call you My friend because of your faith." He could not call Abraham His son; for there could be no sons of God amongst the fallen race, because all were condemned to death in Adam. Not until the death sentence should be lifted from Adam's posterity could any of them become sons of God. Therefore there were no human sons of God from Adam's day until our Lord Jesus came to earth a man. He was the first human son of God after Adam. But since the time when our Lord died a Sacrifice for human sin, a special class of humanity have been given the great privilege of becoming sons of God, as St. John tells us. John 1:12.

But God said to Abraham His friend, "I have a Plan by which to bless the world." The Almighty was the very One who had placed the condemnation of death upon the world. The Great Judge had determined that man was not worthy of everlasting life. Two thousand years after He had pronounced that curse, the Eternal One declared that it should be rolled away; for when He promised that a blessing should come to mankind, He implied that the death penalty should be removed.

It required great faith on Abraham's part to believe God in this matter. But he felt that in some manner God would roll away the curse. Put yourself into Abraham's place, and you will realize how remarkable this was. He knew that the death penalty was upon the race. After God had said that mankind should die, it was not easy to see how He could reverse His own sentence and declare that man should live. Would He say one thing at one time, and then two thousand years later say another? For a time there must have been great perplexity in Abraham's mind. But he appreciated God's Promise.—Genesis 12:3; Romans 4:3.

And now, four thousand years after Abraham's time, we are proclaiming that same great Promise; for it has never yet been fulfilled. God promised to bless the whole world through Abraham's Seed. That Seed, the Apostle Paul assures us, is Christ and His Church. (Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.) The hope of being this Seed is the great hope to which St. Paul referred in our text and its context.

ABRAHAM'S TWO SEED.

This hope is based upon a comprehensive Promise; first, that the world was to be blessed; second, that this blessing was to come through Abraham's Seed. God showed that there would be two different seeds of Abraham; for He said, "Thy seed shall be as the stars of heaven, and as the sand of the seashore"—a Heavenly and an earthly seed, though the Heavenly was to be the Seed of blessing.—Genesis 22:15-18.

Four hundred and thirty years later, God said to the children of Israel, in substance, "You know that I promised your father Abraham that through his Seed I would bless the world. As his natural seed, are you ready to have that Promise fulfilled in you? If I bring you up out of Egypt, will you appreciate My will and do it?" And they replied, "We will." Then the Lord said, "I will give you My Law. If you cannot keep My Law, you cannot be proper teachers and blessers of the world. I have promised to bless all mankind, and I will do it. As the children of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, are you ready to be heirs of that Abrahamic Promise?"

You remember that Moses read the Lord's message of the Law to the people; and that they heard the blessing that should come upon them if they would keep the Law, and the condemnation that should come upon them if they failed to do so. Then the people said, "All these things will we do."—Exodus 19:1-8.

God designed that the whole world should come to a knowledge of the fact that no fallen human being could possibly keep the letter of the Divine Law; for it is the measure of a perfect man's ability. But He dealt with the Israelites just as though they could do it. They had typical sacrifices. For sixteen hundred years they tried to keep that Law; yet year after year they failed to do so; and hence they failed to be the Seed of Abraham which was to bless the world. As St. Paul showed us, "By the deeds of the Law shall no flesh be justified in God's sight." (Romans 3:20.) God was merely teaching them, and through them all of His intelligent creatures, that it is impossible for sinners to justify themselves in His sight. Therefore it was impossible for any of them to bless the world.

Then, in due time, God sent forth His First-Begotten Son, the Logos, His great Mouthpiece. To Him the Father had made the proposition that if He would become a man, live a while on earth amongst sinners, and accomplish a great work for mankind, He would afterwards be received back to greater glory than He had before He undertook this mission.

The Son knew that if the Father had anything to make known in His Plan, it must be for good. So we read that "the Logos was made flesh," and "for the joy set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame." (John 1:14; Hebrews 12:2; Philippians 2:8-11.) Jesus was born a decendent of Abraham, through the Virgin Mary. He kept the Jewish Law inviolate, and thus proved Himself worthy to be that Seed who would bless the world. He died to redeem the race—"the Just for the unjust." He rose again, qualified for the great work of the world's deliverance. To Him is given all power in Heaven and in earth.—Matthew 28:18.

The Bible tells us that the salvation of the world is waiting until our Lord shall take unto Himself His great power and reign. God has been holding this salvation in reservation for over 1,800 years, during the selection of the Church, the Bride of Christ—the work of the Gospel Age. Before the Church He has set this great hope of being associated with our Lord Jesus, of constituting with Him this Spiritual Seed of Abraham, which is to bless all the families of the earth. For this reason our Lord is "the hope set before us in the Gospel," of which our text speaks. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the Promise."

God has still in reservation the work of blessing the world, this great work of a thousand years. But it is now almost due to begin. The promised Spiritual Seed is about completed. Under them the earthly seed—the faithful Worthies of Previous ages, who will be raised from the dead, and Natural Israel, who will be restored to Divine favor—will ere long be ready to co-operate; and then the world's uplift will begin.

OUR ANCHOR SURE AND STEADFAST.

In the dream which God gave to Nebuchadnezzar, there was a stone taken out of the mountain without hands, and it became a great mountain that filled the whole earth. (Daniel 2:31-45.) This stone represented Christ's Kingdom. The power which has taken this spiritual Stone out of the mountain—the world—is simply the hope inspired by God's promise to Abraham. Some of us have heard the Call to follow Christ, and have responded. (Matthew 5:6; 11:28; 16:24.) The Word of God has entered into our hearts. Our minds; our aims, our ambitions—everything—are beings transformed, are being set on Heavenly things.—Romans 12:1, 2; Colossioans 3:1-3.

How precious is this hope! It is indeed "an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast." By this expression St. Paul suggests the picture of a ship at anchor during a storm. So in the storms of life the child of God has a firm anchorage. This anchor of hope takes hold even upon the things within the veil.

The basis of our hope is the Word of God. If we let go of our hope, we are letting go of everything. The "hour of temptation" is now up on the whole world; and a still greater stress is coming. (Revelation 3:10.) All the more, therefore, shall we need our anchor of hope, of faith. Through the Prophet the Lord points out that He is about to "do His work, His strange work, and to bring to pass His act, His strange act." (Isaiah 28:20-22.) The world will not be able to understand it. As they see the trouble extending everywhere—to all governments and institutions—and realize that it will terminate in anarchy, they will say, "Where is God? What is coming to this Great Babylon that we thought was about to bless the world? What is about to happen to us?

THE UNSANCTIFIED HEART SELFISH.

We are now living in the day when the light is shining more brightly than ever before, and when the darkness is gradually disappearing. We whose eyes of understanding have been opened see the hope for mankind, see that blessings are soon to be showered upon the world during the Messianic Kingdom.

More and more it is impressed upon my mind that the numbers of humanity who love righteousness and who prefer it to unrighteousness are very considerable. The major part of the world would rather do right than wrong, provided that it did not cost sacrifice to do right. If the world were in a healthy, normal condition, it would not cost sacrifice to do right. It should be easier to do right than wrong, and it would be if things were as they were originally. When God created our first parents, it was easier for them to obey than to disobey; and when the Divine Kingdom shall introduce the New Order, it will become easier to do right than to do wrong.

As the days go by, we see still more clearly the glorious hope of the groaning creation, groaning now in weakness, sin and bondage to death. After the Church is delivered, the creation is also to be delivered, set free from the bondage of sin and death into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. (Romans 8:19-22.) Mankind will have the same opportunity for life that Adam had at first. But they will have the advantage of Adam in that they have had six thousand years experience under the degredation of the fall, during which the world has been learning the exceeding sinfulness of sin and their need of Divine assistance.

THE PRESENT OUTLOOK.

Yet with all the experience of six thousand years behind us, the world today is plunged into the most terrible war ever known. Each nation imagines that God is with it. The spirit of anger, bitterness and hate is spreading everywhere. Yet there are blessings, comforts and conveniences today such as the world never even dreamed of before. These blessings are coming because we are living in the dawn of the New Dispensation. But the fact is apparent that people are being injured by the wealth and other favors of our day. We have an increase of education far above any previous time. And what is the result? It is being used to defraud and overreach fellow-men. It is being utilized to destroy men's lives. In another century, if present conditions were permitted to continue, it would be worse.

Light and knowledge entering the heart that is unsanctified, unconsecrated to God, merely increases the power to do evil. Through sharpened intellectual perception the increase of ability operates along the lines of selfishness. The only ones ready to receive aright God's favors and to profit by them are those who have yielded themselves to God, who have renounced their own wills and have accepted His will. Upon these the blessings of God have a sanctifying effect. Increased knowledge adds to their power for good.

We are glad that we have given our hearts to God, and that our eyes of understanding have been opened to see more and more the lengths, breadths, heights and depths of God's Justice, Wisdom, Power and Love. How refreshing this is to our hearts! It is good to be so near to the ushering in of the New Dispensation; for our anchor of hope is grounded firmly in God. Soon He will deliver Zion—"when Morning appeareth."

TROUBLE PRECURSER OF COMING GLORY.

Upon the battlefields of Europe there is now being sacrificed the flower of the strength of every country embroiled in war; and the war spirit is spreading. In every country engaged in this mighty conflict the death list is piling up prodigiously. Homes are being devastated, wealth is being consumed. Revolution and Anarchy will be sure to follow. Of this time our Lord Jesus declared, "Except those days be shortened, there should be no flesh saved; but for the Elect's sake they shall be shortened." (Matthew 24:21, 22.) Then "the desire of all nations shall come." Through Messiah's Kingdom shall be granted the peace, prosperity and blessing for which the poor world have so long hoped and striven in vain to bring through their own efforts.

Thank the Lord that He has given His people to know what it is to follow this dark night of trouble! What a blessing He has granted in the knowledge that there is a golden lining to the black clouds now gathering thick around humanity! Let us not dwell too much on the coming trouble, however. Rather let us point men to the time beyond. Let us tell them that God has a great blessing in store for all the families of the earth. Let us show them how comprehensive is the Bible hope. It will be a sad day for the world when the plowshare of trouble shall go in deep; and yet the experience will prove to be a blessing. When mankind see everything beginning to collapse, then they will begin to realize that there is no hope except in God, then they will be willing to be taught. Then they will say, "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for Him, and He will save us!"—Isaiah 25:6-9.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

THE AMERICAN RENAISSANCE

"The influence of Henry Ward Beecher upon his times was marked. And now the stream of his life is lost amid the ocean of our being. As a single drop of aniline in a barrel of water will tint the whole mass, so has the entire American mind been colored through the existence of this one glowing personality. He placed a new interpretation upon religion, and we are different people because he lived. He was not constructive, not administrative, he wrote much, but as literature his work has small claim on immortality. He was an orator, and the business of the orator is to inspire other men to think and act for themselves. Orators live but in memory. Their destiny is to be the sweet elusive fragrance of Oblivion—the thyme and mignonette of things that were."

If the thought expressed in the foregoing paragraph from the pen of the late Elbert Hubbard, an eminent thinker and accepted authority, of civil history in many quarters be true, then Beecher's influence has been in the direction of modern Rationalism—he contributed towards paving the way for Higher Criticism Infidelity which followed on the heels of Darwinism. Darwin's theories, embraced by Drummond and his cult, and Christionized, have permeated and colored the whole mass of present day Orthodoxy. Beecher's own experience foreshadowed this; for, as heretofore shown, he succumbed to the Darwinism theory, as attested by Lyman Abbott, who was personally acquainted with the orator, with whom he confided or to whom he came close enough to detect it, before it manifested itself in Beecher's sermons in the evening of his manhood. He did not consciously encourage Higher Criticism Infidelity so much by what he said, but since "the business of the orator is to inspire others to think and act for themselves," he must have set the orthodox clergymen to thinking by his culture and gospel in emphasizing the Love of God to the exclusion of His Wisdom, and this habit (thinking) prepared the way for Rationalism, just as Greek and Roman learning, fused into the poetry of Dante and Petrarch, set the world to thinking, broke the spell that papal dogmatism held over the world, and paved the way for the Reformation. In fact, history has repeated itself in America, as in Europe prior to the Reformation. The tidal wave of reason that swept over Italy was essentially a humanitarian spirit, born for the literature of Dante, who chanted his love for Beatrice in the glowing terms of poetry. Love (and hate) will fecundate and spur the intellect of the individual to action. Similarly Beecher's gospel was simply human love fused into the heart phase of Wesley's theology—his gospel was not based on any theological concept or principles of Christian conduct; it was simply love—human love—that colored all his conceptions of Christianity. This can be proven by an analysis of the man, his utterances, and his principles of conduct as exemplified in his life

BEECHER'S LOVE FOR HIS MOTHER.

Wesley and Beecher were both gifted with a strong sense of filial love, and both exercised it in the direction of their mothers, with this distinction, that Beecher's mother was dead and Wesley's mother lived 'till he was well up in manhood. Susanna Wesley's mind fully matched the genius of her son, and upon her, through correspondence, the great reformer leaned until her death. Beecher was raised by a step-mother; his first mother died when he was three years old and to him she stood for the ideal—representing his highest conception of God.

Lincoln's mother died also when he was a babe and the great statesman revelled in the memories of her. It was said that he resembled an overgrown boy, and the same was said of Beecher and Wesley—they were, each of them, just full grown children and this applies to Russell also. Russell's youthful appearance in his early manhood often hid his real worth. Once, when traveling to a town to fill an appointment, he arrived late on a rainy night and lingered around the station for some time wondering why no one came to meet him. Long after the train had pulled out from the station, a gentleman walked out from seclusion and said, "I have been looking for a Mr. C. T. Russell, the great Bible student, surely it can hardly be that you are he."

As with Beecher and Lincoln, Russell lost his mother when young—she died when he was nine years old. But he did not have a step-mother until after he had grown up and was married, his father married his wife's younger sister. Beecher referred to his step-mother as standing for discipline and Russell refers to his own mother in the same manner. Russell relates that when a mere slip of a lad he once concealed or slightly deviated from the open truth in something he had said to his mother and that she chastised him thoroughly. This mother's chastisement was not the ordinary outburst of passion to relieve the pressure of a fit of temper, for she calmly informed the youth just why she punished him, explaining that she "was not going to have her boy grow up and be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone reserved for whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Children are proverbially noted for sharp perception—they readily resent injustice and are quick to see into the motives of their parents. That young Russell appreciated his mother's principles in this severe punishment and strict discipline in general is attested in that "he once heard his father say that he thought his wife was too strict with Charles, and Charles (an extremely bashful, timid youth) loyally told his father that he thought she was just right, a most unusual procedure for him, as he was so difident, but it shows his love of right, from the first."

Young Russell, for years, shared his mothers belief in the doctrine of endless misery in a burning hell and he must have had strong sympathy for the wayward when young, for he wrote Scriptures, giving color to the hot hell theory, in letters of chalk, in prominent places along the highways of Pittsburgh, warning the erring of the wrath to come. This belief was, in a probability, at the bottom of his early ambition to become a missionary in the heathen lands. When six years of age, and at his own request, that he might, by personal sacrifice, have a share in the missionary work, young Russell declined to eat any butter on his bread, that the money thus saved might be used to help swell the fund for the first missionary ship sent from the United States to the Caroline Islands, of the South Pacific.

Beecher and Wesley were both raised in big, bustling and strenuous household where children are taught to do for each other and also to do without each other and thereby are taught self-reliance. Wesley came from a family of eighteen and Beecher from a family of nine. Beecher's life-drills and discipline in his home, which consisted of the let alone kind, except for the occasional use of the

MACHINISTS' BIG STRIKE DID NOT SPREAD FAR

Expected Tnat Men Would Return to Work by the Beginning of the Week.

The strike of the machinists and the machinists helpers which threatened a complete suspension of the industries in the Pittsburgh district was inaugurated as scheduled Monday but the effect has not been as far reaching as was at first anticipated.

The leaders of the machinists gave out the list of plants idle on Monday as 24, while the Manufacturers Association conceed only six and the latter were idle only through the closing of the plant by the employer to avoid interference of the men through pickets.

The machinists contend that 4,000 men responded to the call to strike and this number was increased by an additional 3,000 Tuesday, while the Westinghouse employes which include all classes of workmen were devoting much time to visiting plants of the United States Steel Corporation and others along the line of march.

It will take a day or two before the situation is cleared and the real effect of the strike determined, but the indications are the leaders will not be able to disturb plants like Jones & Laughlins, who are the largest independent manufacturers in the Pittsburgh district, or any of the plants of the Carnegie Steel Company at Homestead, Duquesne, Braddock or McKeesport. The latter are controlled by the United States Steel Corporation and only last week did the trust grant the second advance to the workmen. The purpose of the increase was timed to forestall any suspension and this has had its effect. The Machinists leaders are counting every plant idle as a victory for themselves, while the manufacturers are jubilant over what they regard as the conservative action of the men. The men, it is apparent, are anxious to continue at work, as they had hope of getting some of their back debts settled but the spirit of strike has struck the entire district and until this feeling has passed off there is an indescribable feverishness that indicates uncertainty.

However, both employer and labor leader is able to cope with the situation and that feeling created by the radical element has been practically eliminated and life and property seems to be absolutely safe. Unless a change for the worse should overcome the community and that is now almost out of the question, the men will return to work by the beginning of next week and the greatest industrial center in the world will again be down to business.

There has been a tremendous suspense among the workmen as well as the business interests for the last four or five months and men returning from work were unable to tell what might happen by morning. Plants were closed on the merest pretense and men thrown out of employment on an alleged difference, and yet there seemed little occasion for the strike. No sooner had a satisfactory adjustment been reached than the plant was again crippled but the hope is the trouble will be settled permanently this week and that during the next year there will be plenty of employment for every one and at substantial wages.

Since the suspension Monday peaceful methods have prevailed and there is no occasion for any other course. One thing is certain, the machinists are not financially able to support for any length of time the men on strike and while the men who were not members of the Machinists' organization have been recently taken in, the new men have paid an initiation fee of three dollars but there is no money for strike benefits and the men will have to do the best they can to meet this condition.

Tuesday morning the workers gathered at Swissvale, Wilmerding and East Pittsburg for a parade to Homestead for the purpose of trying to bring out the employes of the Carnegie mills there.

All saloons in Homestead had been ordered to close.

As the result of the peaceful methods of the strikers, a large number quit work in the Monongahela and Turtle Creek valleys.

The American Steel and Wire company's plant at Braddock, employing 1,000 men, was closed down. The same company's plant at Rankin, employing 2,600 men, also was closed. The McClintic-Marshall Construction company's plant at Rankin, employing 2,500 men, was closed, as was also the Braddock Machine & Manufacturing company's plant, in Braddock. This plant employs 600 men. The Columbia Steel Shafting company, employing 400 men, is idle at Rankin.

At the Edgar Thomson Steel company's plant in Braddock it was estimated that 1,000 men went out on strike this morning. The plant is operating with reduced forces. A strike is on at the Standard Chain company's works in Rankin. About 500 men are out, the strikers say.

The Braddock plant of the American Steel and Wire company is closed. About 1,000 men employed at this plant did not come to work today. There were 25 pickets on duty and five deputy sheriffs guarding the entrances.

At the Rankin plant of the American Steel and Wire company 2,600 men are out. Many of these plants closed merely for a time to let the marchers pass by in order to avoid trouble.

The first meeting yesterday afternoon was held at the Edgar Thomson steel works, North Braddock. The strikers marched in orderly style from East Pittsburg and Wilmerding about 4,000 strong. Upon reaching the Edgar Thomson works the paraders were assembled in front of the buildings, speakers were chosen from the ranks of strikers and the meeting began.

Following outside speaking, the men entered the plant. Small meetings were held in different sections of the works and in each instance some of the men quit work.

The McClintic-Marshall Construction company's plant, Rankin, the works of the American Steel and Wire company, also at Rankin and Braddoc, and the Standard Chain works, Rankin, were other plants entered. Some of the employes in these plants laid down their tools and joined the strikers.

Police and company guards were on duty at all plants, but there was no disorder or demonstration of any kind.

When the Ninth street (Braddock) plant of the American Steel & Wire Co. was visited, the police stood by and let the strikers enter the plant without any resistance. The men entered in orderly fashion and upon reaching the inside of the works gathered about the workmen and induced them to join the ranks.

It is said that the workers of this plant had been instructed by officials of the company to lay down their tools and quit work when the strikers entered. Wire, which should have been removed from furnaces when the strikers entered, remained and there and caused a loss of several hundred dollars.

BIG VICTORY FOR MINERS.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Details of the settlement of the anthracite coal controversy as a result of the negotiations which have been going on for weeks between the operators and the miners were made public here today by the operators. The agreement, involving increased wages, shorter hours and virtual recognition of the union, is as yet unsigned, but since it has met with the approval of the sub-committees which have been in session here, it is not anticipated that it will be rejected at the miners' convention at Pottsvile, Pa., tomorrow.

The agreement will be retroactive to April 1 and will avert a threatened strike which would throw some 176,000 employes into idleness. Contract rates for each colliery are increased seven per cent over and above those effected in April, 1912, and the working day established.

Before leaving the city this afternoon, John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, issued a statement in which he said the agreement "marks the greatest single advance won by organized labor in this year of victories. The miners have given the country a striking demonstration that the just demands of wage earners for improved wages and conditions can be won without strife when the men act together through a strong and responsible organization."

WHERE "PUBLICITY" FAILED.

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 3.—Ned Creighton, who conducted a publicity bureau for the mine operators during the recent copper strike, pleaded guilty in the United States district court of violating the federal law relating to printing advertisements under the guise of news matter. Creighton was proprietor of the Arizona News Service, which supplied newspapers with reading matter and photograps in an attempt to turn public opinion against the strikers. Many of the newspapers that accepted this subsidy from the mine operators failed to print the word "advertisement," even in small type, in the reading matter. Creighton, who procured the printing of the advertising, was indicted as a result.

Date Fixed for British Trade Congress.

Glasgow Munition Workers Go Back to Work.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, April 22, 1916.

It has been decided that the next British Trade Union Congress shall be held at the Town Hall, Birmingham, on September 4 and the following days.

Very few if any of the munition workers employed in the Glasgow area who struck work without the sanction of their trade unions are now idle. In the majority of cases a restart was made early in the week and stragglers joined up later.

The Glasgow District Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers arranged to discuss with the Clyde Labor Dilution Commissioners complaints made by the men, and negotiations for this purpose are understood to have been opened already. Peace is not assured even yet, however, among the section men who were on strike. Anything savoring of [illegible] in remedying the alleged grievances of making short of the surrender [illegible] is likely to be resented and a renewal of the trouble would at once follow.

That this view of the situation is not overdrawn the decision of the Trades Council reveals. Following speaking which lacked nothing in point and directness of expression, it was agreed that a demonstration protesting against the deporting of certain members of the trade union movement in West Scotland should be held.

In the April "Journal" of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers there are two fairly lengthy allusions to the recent strikes in the Clyde district. The "Abstract Report of Council's Proceedings" contains an account of the action taken at headquarters in the form of a letter to Dr. Addison, the concluding paragraph of which is as follows:

"The Executive Council, having regard to the national interests and undertakings given to the Government on behalf of the society, deprecates all unconstitutional strikes or stoppages of work that will impede the output of war material." Elsewhere they say: "Whatever may be the real merits of the case, having regard to the national interests, there was no just cause for a strike. In view of the agreement that was accepted, both by the employers and the men, a stoppage of work under the circumstances was unjustifiable." For in that agreement there is, they point out, this clause: "That a committee appointed by the skilled workers be accepted by the employers, with power to see that this arrangement is loyally carried out. Failing agreement between the employer and the committee, the matter to be referred to a final tribunal mutually arranged, or, failing agreement, appointed by the Board of Trade."

The other allusion is by Mr. Brodie, the organizing delegate, who deals in more detail with the dispute and its causes. At the end of it he expresses the opinion that there "would be less unrest if our unthinking members would pay less attention to the impudent interference by outsiders in our society's affairs."

"Overalled, leather aproned, capped and goggled—displaying nevertheless woman's genius for making herself attractive in whatsoever working guise—some eighteen women are being trained in the London workshops of the Women's Service Bureau in the unskilled engineering work of welding joints and fine flange sockets needed for the construction of aeroplanes.

As fast as they are trained the women are placed in Government factories, where they receive the same pay as men. The woman welder is another instance of woman's adaptability to work believed to be outside her province. She bends over an oxy-acetylene blowpipe with a flame of 6,000 Fahrenheit that can make steel run like sealing wax. Though her eyes are protected by goggles of colored glass a rain of bright sparks impinge on her face and neck, but she heeds them not, nor obviously does her complexion.

She saws, files and hammers steel, and the women welders' workshop is filled with a hundred loud and shrill clamors of metal but the nerves of the women welders are unaffected. Miss Woodward, the principal, declares that many of these women who have never done manual work before, find their work a "nerve tonic," and that headaches are left at home.

DEAD AND INJURED IN BIG STRIKE RIOT

Edgar Thomson Works of Carnegie Steel Company Scene of the Target and the Militia Called Out

A most serious situation has arisen in the strike zone and while it was at first thought that the strike would pass over without injury to any one yet in an attempt to force an entrance to the Edgar Thomson Steel Works at Braddock, Tuesday afternoon, some men lost their lives and others were injured. This was the result of an effort of the strikers to storm the plant and while attempting to scale the walls the guards fired upon them. The real riot started when shots were fired into the plant and this was met by an exchange which brought disaster.

It is a most unfortunate circumstance and one that will undoubtedly result in the end of the strike as Sheriff George W. Richards, after a conference with state officials, was given the aid of the National Guard of Pennsylvania and these will be on the scene before Wednesday morning. It is said 1,000 shots were fired and the guards and marchers had a hand to hand encounter with clubs and other weapons being used.

One of the injured was hurt while in a barber shop.

Scores are said to have been clubbed and injured when the strikers charged the plant and attempted to force an entrance.

Special guards, reinforced by coal and iron police, met the rush of the strikers with riot guns and clubs.

When the men attempted to scale the walls surrounding the plant, orders were given to fire. Several men fell at the first volley, but those who pressed on from the rear fought hand-to-hand battles with the police and deputies.

The riot was the culmination of a series of attacks made on Turtle Creek and Monongahela valley plants. A mob of foreigners, most of them said to have been intoxicated, charged plant after plant, and many of the places were wrecked. Carrying flags and shouting, the men charged the Edgar Thomson plant, against orders and warnings issued that they would meet with strong resistance.

It is said that 1,000 employes of the Edgar Thomson plant were sworn in as deputy sheriffs last night and notified where they could obtain weapons to defend the plant.

With more than 2,000 foreigners parading through Braddock and Rankin districts, armed with clubs and stones, breaking into plants in the district, residents of the district wherein the men were parading made insistent calls today upon county authorities for protection.

Attorney Robert J. Dodds today asked Sheriff Richards to send for state troops to take care of the situation at the American Steel Wire Co. plant.

Deputy sheriffs, armed, and Coal and Iron police, rushed here from as far west as Gary, Ind., made strenuous efforts to quell the disturbance.

Residents of Braddock have demanded that deputies in numbers large enough to cope with the situation be hurried to the district at once, or else that the state constabulary or the N. G. P. be called out.

Starting in the morning the mob marched to Rankin, created considerable disturbance there and then moved to Braddock. Efforts of the police to prevent them from marching through the town were futile, and the men moved on the Sterling Steel Foundry Co., Eighth street, forced their way into the plant, throwing stones and brandishing clubs. Workmen in the plant, which is one of the few plants working on an eight-hour day plan, threw down their tools and fled. Windows were broken and machinery and products of the plant damaged to the extent of several thousand dollars.

The men then marched to the plant of McCready Brothers, contractors and builders, in Seventh street, Braddock, and caused considerable trouble but little damage.

Asserting that they will close every plant in Allegheny county, the strikers again marched to Rankin. The men say they will go to the Carnegie mills in Homestead, but preparations have been made to meet them there. Coal and iron police are stationed at the plant and will resist any effort of the strikers to force an entrance to the plant.

The Edgar Thomson works has stationed guards at the plant and it is said has issued orders to resist the men if they attempt to enter the plant.

Paul Cinak, aged 21 years, of Rankin, alleged leader of one of the mobs in the Braddock-Rankin district, was arrested by deputy sheriffs and was taken to the county jail.

The frenzied mob had increased to 2,000 shouting men and boys in line. All were armed with clubs and pick handles and went ruthlessly through several plants, forcing workmen from their positions and threatening others.

The mob paraded to the McVey & Walker foundry, Ninth street and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Braddock, where 2,000 men are employed, but the gates of the plant withstood the attack. Stones were hurled.

Up Braddock avenue the mob marched to Rankin and through that borough to Hawkins station. At the plant of the Nicholson Chain Works, where 250 men are employed, the mob forced its en-

GAMALIEL'S INTERVIEW.

GAMALIEL'S INTERVIEW WITH JOSEPH AND MARY AND OTHERS CONCERNING JESUS.

The hagiographa or holy writings, found in the St. Sophia Mosque at Constantinople, made by Gamaliel, in the Talmuds of the Jews, 27 B. It seems Gamaliel was sent by the Sanhedrim to interrogate Joseph and Mary in ragerd to this child Jesus. He says:

"I found Joseph and Mary in the city of Mecca, in the land of Ammon or Moab. But I did not find Jesus. When I went to the place where I was told he was, he was sowewhere else; and thus I followed him from place to place, until I despaired of finding him at all. Whether he knew that I was in search of him and did it to elude me, I cannot tell, though I think it most likely the former was the reason, for his mother says he is bashful and shuns company.

"Joseph is a wood-workman. He is very tall and ugly. His hair looks as though it might have been dark auburn when young. His eyes are gray and vicious. He is anything but prepossessing in his apearance, and he is as gross and glums as he looks. He is a poor talker and it seems that yes and no are the depth of his mind. I am satisfied he is very disagreeable to his family. His children look very much like him, and upon the whole I should call them a third-rate family. I asked him who were his parents. He said his father's name was Jacob, and his grandfather was Matthew. He did not like to talk on the subject. He is very jealous. I told him that we heard that he had had a vision, and I was sent to ascertain the facts in the case. He said he did not call it a vision; he called it a dream. He said after he and Mary had agreed to marry, it seemed that something told him that Mary was with child; that he did not know whether he was asleep or awake, but it made such an impression on his mind that he concluded to have nothing more to do with her; and while he was working one day under a shed, all at once a man in snowy white stood by his side, and told him not to doubt the virtue of Mary, for she was holy before the Lord; that the child conceived in her was not by man, but by the Holy Ghost, and that the child would be free from human passions. In order to do this he must —that is, his humanity must—be of the extract of almah (that is the Hebrew word for virgin), that he might endure all things, and not resist, and fill the demands of prophecy. He said the angel told him that this child should be great and should rule all the kingdoms of this world. He said that this child should set up a new kingdom, wherein should dwell righteousness and peace, and that the kingdoms of this world which should oppose him God would utterly destroy. I asked him, How could a virgin conceive of herself without the germination of the male? He said: "This is the work of God. He has brought to life the womb of Elizabeth, so she had conceived and will bear a son in her old age who will go before and tell the people of the coming of this King." After telling me all these things, he disappeared like the melting down of a light. I then went and told Mary what had occurred, and she told me that the same angel, or one like him, had appeared to her and told the same things. So I married Mary, thinking that if what the angel had told ue was true, it would be greatly to our advantage; but I am fearful we are mistaken. Jesus seems to take no interest in us, nor anything else much. I call him lazy and careless. I do not think he will ever amount to much, much less be a king. If he does, he must do a great deal better than he has been doing.' I asked him how long after the interview with the angel before the child was born. He said he did not know but he thought it was 7 or 8 months. I asked him where they were at the time. He said in Bethlehem. The Roman commander had given orders for all the Jews to go on a certain day to be enrolled as taxpayers, and he and Mary went to Bethlehem as the nearest place of enrolledment; and while there this babe was born. I asked if anything strange occurred there that night. He said that the people were much excited, but he was so tired that he had gone to sleep, and saw nothing. He said toward day there were several priests came in to see them and the babe, and gave them many presents. And the news got circulated that this child was to be King of the Jews, and it created such an excitement that he took the child and his mother and came to Moab for protection, for fear the Romans would kill the child to keep it from being a rival to the Romas.

"I discovered that all Joseph's ideas were of a selfish kind. All he thought of was himself. Mary is altogether a different character, and she is too noble to be the wife of such a man. She seems to be about forty or forty-five years of age, abounds with a cheerful and happy spirit and is full of happy fancies. She is fair to see, rather fleshy, has soft and innocent-looking eyes, and seems to be naturally a good woman. I asked her who her parents were, and she said her father's name was Eli, and her mother's name was Anna; her grandmother's name was Pennel, a widow of the tribe of Asher, of great renown. I asked her if Jesus was the son of Joseph. She said he was not. I asked her to relate the circumstances of the child's history. She said that one day while she was grinding some meal there appeared at the door a stranger in shining raiment, which showed as bright as the light. She was very much alarmed at his presence, and trembled like a leaf; but all her fears were calmed when he spoke to her; for he said: 'Mary, thou art loved by the Lord and He has sent me to tell thee that thou shalt have a child; that this child shall be great and rule all nations of the earth.' She continued: 'I immediately thought of my engagement to Joseph and supposed that was the way the child was to come; but he astonished me the more when he told me that cousin Elizabeth had conceived and would bear a son, whose name was to be John; and my son should be called Jesus. This caused me to remember that Zacharias had seen a vision and disputed with the angel, and for that he was struck with dumbness, so that he could no longer hold the priest's office. I asked the messenger if Joseph knew anything of the matter. He said that he told Joseph that I was to have a child by command of the Holy Ghost, and that he was to reign over the whole world; that every man should confess to him and he should rule over all the kings of the earth.'

"I asked her how she knew that he was an angel, and she said he told her so, and then she knew he was an angel from the way he came and went. I asked her to describe how he went away from her, and she said that he seemed to melt away like the extinguishing of a light. I asked her if she knew anything of John the Baptist. She said he lived in the mountains of Judea the last she knew of him. I asked her if he and Jesus were acquainted, or did they visit. She said she did not think they knew each other.

"I aswed her if at the time this angel, as she called him, visited her, she was almah (that is, virgin). She said she was; that she had never showed to man nor was known by any man. I asked her if she at that time maintained her fourchette; and after making her and Joseph understand what I meant, they both said she had. and Joseph said this was the way he had of testing her virtue. I asked her if she knew when conception took place. She said she did not. I asked her if she was in any pain in bearing, or in delivering this child. She said, 'None of any consequence.' I asked her if he was healthy; to give me a description of his life. She said he was perfectly healthy; that she never heard him complain of any pain or dissatisfaction; his food always agreed with him; that he would eat anything set before him, and if anyone else complained he would often say he thought it good enough, much better than we deserved. She said that Jeseph was a little hard to please, but this boy had answered him so often, and his answers were so mild and yet so suitable, that he had almost broken him of finding fault. She said he settled all the disputes of the family; that no odds what was the subject or who it was, one word from him closed all months, and what gave him such power was his words were always unpretending and spoken as though they were not intended as a rebuke, but merely as a decision. I asked her if she had ever seen him angry or out of humor. She said she had seen him apparently vexed and grieved at the disputes and follies of others, but had never seen him angry. I asked her if he had worldly aspirations after money or wealth, or a great name, or did he delight in fine dress, like the most of youth. She said that was one thing that vexed her, he seemed to take no care of his person; he did not care whether he was dressed or not, or whether the family got along well or ill; it was all alike to him. She said she talked to him about it, and he would look at her a little grieved and say, 'Woman (for such he always called me), you do not know who I am.' Indeed, she said he takes so little interest in the things of the world and the great questions of the day, they were beginning to despair of his ever amounting to much—much less be a king, as the angel said he would be; if so, he would have to act very differently from what he was acting at that time. I told her that the Jewish doctors contended that the amorous disposition is peculiar to the male. I asked her if she had ever seen in the private life of Jesus any signs of such disposition. She said she had not. I asked if she saw in him any peculiar fondness for female society. She said she had not; if anything, rather the contrary; that the young bethaul (the word in the Hebrew for young women) were all very fond of him, and were always seeking his society, and yet he seemed to care nothing for them; and if they appeared too fond of him, he treated them almost with scorn. He will often get up and leave them, and wander away and spend his time in meditation and prayer. He is a perfect ascetic in his life. 'When I see how the people like to be with him, and ask him questions, and seem to take such delight with his answers—both men and women—it almost vexes me. They say there is a young woman in Bethany whom he intends to marry; but unless he changes his course very much he will never be qualified to have a family. But I do not believe the report. He never seems to care anything about women when he is in my presence.'

"Thus it seems that Joseph and Mary have both lost all confidence in his becoming anything. They seem to think that the Sanhedrim should do something for him to get him out and let him show himself to the people. I tried to console them by telling them that my understanding of the prophecy was that he had to come to the high priesthood first, and there work in the spiritual dominion of the heart; and when he had brought about a unity of heart and oneness of aim, it would be easy enough to establish his political claim; and all who would not willingly submit to him, it would be an easy mater with the sword of Joshua or Gideon to bring under his control. It seemed to me that his parents' ideas are of a selfish character; that they care nothing about the Jewish government nor the Roman oppression. All they think of is self-exaltation, and to be personally benefited by their son's greatness. But I told them they were mistaken; that the building up of the kingdom of heaven was not to be done by might nor by power, but by Spirit of the Lord, and it would not do for us to use carnal weapons, nor to expect carnal pleasures to be derived therefrom; that it was not my understanding of the prophecy that this king was to use such weapons either for himself or for the benefit of a party, but for the good of all men; that his dominion was to be universal, and it was to be of a spiritual character; that he was sent to the lost and not to the found.

"His parents told me of an old man who lived on the road to Bethany who had once been a priest, a man of great learning, and well skilled in the laws and prophets, and that Jesus was often there with him reading the law and prophets together; that his name was Massalian, and that I might find Jesus there. But he was not there. Massalian said he was often at Bethany with a young family, and he thought there was some love affair between him and one of the girls. I asked him if he had seen anything like a courtship between them. He said he had not, but inferred from their intimacy and from the fondness on the woman's part, as well as from the laws of nature, that such would be the case. I asked him to give me an outline of the character of Jesus. He said he was a young man of the finest thought and feeling he ever saw in his life; that he was the most apt in his answers, and solutions of difficult problems of any man of his age he had ever seen; that his answers seem to give more universal satisfaction—so much so that the oldest philospher would not dispute with him, or in any manner join issue with him, or ask the second time. I asked Massalian who taught him to read and interpret the law and the prophets. He said that his mother said that he had always known how to read the law; that his mind seemed to master it from the beginning; and into the laws of nature and the relation of man to his fellow in his teachings or talks, he gives a deeper insight, inspiring mutual love and strengthening the common trust of society. Another plan he has of setting men right with the laws of naturs; he turns nature into a great law book of illustrations, showing that every bush is a flame, every rock a fountain of water, every star a pillar of fire, and every cloud the one that leads to God. He makes all nature preach the doctrine of trust in the divine Fatherhood. He speaks of the lilies as pledges of God's care, and points to the fowls as evidence of his watchfulness over human affairs. Who can measure the distance between God and the flower of the field. What connection is there between man and the lily? By such illustrations he creates a solicitude in man that seems to awe him into reverence, and he becomes he becomes attracted toward heavenly thought, and feels that he is in the presence of one that is superior. In this talk he brings one to feel he is very near the presence of God. He says how much more your Father. The plane is one, though the intermediate points are immeasurably distant; Thus by beginning with aflower he reasons upward to the absolute, and then descends and teaches lessons of trust in a loving Father. The lessons of trust in God reassure the anxious listener and create an appetite that makes him long for more; and it often seems, when he has brought his hearers to the highest point of anxiety, he suddenly breaks off and leaves his company as though he cared nothing for them. Jesus in his talk brings all these illustrations to make man feel his nearness to his kindred man, teaching also their relation to and dependence upon God; and although his method is happy, is does not seem to me that it is the most successful. He teaches that man and the flowers and birds drink from the same fountain and are fed from the same table, yet at the same time he seems to do everything to excite suspicion and prejudice. We that are watching him to see his divine mission commence, he is continually tantalizing our expectations, as well as mocking our natural reason and desires. When a man separates himself from all other men, both in point of doctrine as well as discipline, he takes a very great risk on his part—especially when he confines God to one channel, and that one of his own dictation. A man that assumes these responsible positions must have vast resources from which to draw, or he will sink in the whirlpool which his own impertinence has created. Through Jesus, in his teachings or talks (his words sound so much like the teachings of Hillel or Shammai that I must call it teaching, though he has no special scholars), we learn that God is Spirit, and God is Father; and he says these are the only two things that are essential for man to know. Then he illustrates this to the parents, and asks them what would they do for their children. He was telling some mothers a circumstance of a mother starving herself to feed her child, and then applied it to God as our Father; and they commenced shouting, they were so happy; and Jesus got up and left the house in seeming disgust."

Please do not discontinue my paper. I subscribed through the Watch Tower and I will remit to the Watch Tower on May 4. I do not wish to miss a cop of the paper for the rich blessing it brings to hungry souls. I admire the way you print Brother Russell's sermons. I appreciate them so much because I am deaf and cannot hear a verbal sermon, but can read them which is gratifying to hungry Truth seekers. May the Lord's richest blessing be yours.

MRS. C. L. DUNAGAN.

Convers (Bern) Switzerland, April 5.

I am to thank you for receiving regularly your very estimated paper through the generosity of a dear friend and Bible Student Brother over there in your blessed land. I would not miss one number because of the sermons of our dear Pastor Russell. appreciations and other good things in it. These sermons are especially precious because of the awful time of trouble in which we are living and of the better time at the door of Messiah Kingdom, to which Pastor Russell is constantly pointing as the only remedy. We are here, in Switzerland, not in a bed of roses, because living is very more costly, yet how in a much better situation are we, compared with our neighbor lands in war. Thanks to God, we Bible student brethern are full of joy, seeing our deliverance so near at hand, and then the deliverance of the whole groaning creation.

I encourage you dear editor to continue publishing the sermons, you have God's blessing with you. I do greet you most thankful and kindly and remain

Yours truly,

Enclosed please find my subscription. I can truly say that I look forward every week for the Grand Tribune. I call it Grand for reason of the firm stand it takes for the Truth. Jesus says I am the Way, the Life, the Truth. Your paper upholds this very Foundation of the Christian's character by fearlessly and boldly publishing the Truth and revealing fraud and error. May your paper continue to publish the sermons until Present Truth has done its grand and noble work. Wishing you great success and added blessings.

Yours very truly,

St. Louis, Mo., April 27.

I have renewed my subscription to your valuable paper today through the Watch Tower, I. B. S. A., Brooklyn, N. Y. I feel that I could not do without it, and I am so thankful that by a little sacrifice, I still am able to renew in that way.

I deeply regret this late day, but should it be too late to conform with the laws of the Postal Department, I will have to do without it; since I have done what I could, or the best I was able to do, and should this be the case, I shall greatly miss its most welcome weekly arrival.

I thank you for the continuance of Pastor Russell's sermons, they are so complete—the Sunday School lessons, the letters of appreciation, and the Essays of the Reformers by Brother N. E. Nelson, but the greatest of all Reformers to my mind is Pastor Russell. May God bless you in your interest in behalf of the "Truth."

I am yours in the service of the "Truth",

MRS. A. M. RICHT.

Have just finished reading the sermon by Pastor C. T. Russell in March 2 issue of the Tribune which is one of the best I ever read. I consider it alone worth a whole year's subscription to your valuable paper.

Were I not to receive another copy of the paper, I would feel amply repaid by having today's issue of same.

Wishing you success, I remain

Hart, Mich., April 24.

I see in your good paper today that Brother Geo. C. Perry has come ahead in the contest and as he has announced in the Tribune that if he should win a prize to use it in the service of the truth and so I am casting my vote for him, and will say that I read in the Enterprise that Brother Newton of Hartshorn at Silver Lake, Mass., would like to get in touch with a Brother that has an auto and who would like to come to that delightful section and spend the Summer in the Harvest work. So Brother Perry that will be your chance if you should be so fortunate in gaining that grand prize, and my prayer is that it may help in gaining the greatest prize of all, and would like also to say to all the dear ones of the Tribune that I am running for the prize of the High calling in Christ Jesus and ask an interest in all your prayers that I may come off more than conqueror through Him that loved us and bought us with His own Precious Blood.

"Only thee, I ask no other;
Thou art more than man to me;
Present life or Present Comfort
I resign them all to Thee.

Only Thee, whose blood has cleaned me,
Would my raptured vision see
While my faith is reaching upward,
Ever upward Lord to Thee.

Have been a subscriber several years to the National Labor Tribune and take it on account of Pastor Russell's sermons—also appreciate other Truth news, etc. I am writing this article at the request of Mr. Collum in last week's issue, hoping it may do some one good. It is written "he that hath a dream, let him tell a dream." Jer. 23-28. It was this way: In my dream I was at a large hotel when a traveler, a middle aged, plainly dressed woman, stopped there, ordering dinner. Placed at a table they gave her the poorest fare, left-overs from the other tables, and no one to wait on her. She asked the proprietor why she was so treated, he said, "Because they were making great preparations for a number of people coming there, especially one who was very noted, a great man."

When his name was mentioned she said she was well acquainted with him. He replied with a sneer, "What! you? How can that be?" "Well, I came here to meet him, he is my husband." I awoke to find it a dream. Yet, not all a dream for it has in it a good lesson.—Read James 2-2 to 9—Psa. 138-6, Rom. 2-11. The world knoweth us not as His. 1 Joh. 3-1 and we are often despised and set at nought. Yet it is well to remember as a dear Brother has said, "if we are truly consecrated to God, we have no rights, naturally, which anyone is bound to respect.

"Woat poor despised company
Of travellers are these,
Who walk in yonder narrow way,
Along the rugged maze.

Ah, these are of a royal line,
All children of a king;
Heirs of immortal crowns divine
And lo! for joy they sing!

Why do they then appear so mean?
And why so much despised?
Because of their rich robes unseen
The world is not apprised."

Enclosed please find money order which is to pay for my 1916 subscription to the National Labor Tribune, and which I highly appreciate, especially for your noble service in the Harvest work of the Lord's cause, and for your faithfulness in printing Pastor Russell's sermons; which I greatly enjoy as "meat in due season" for the Household of Faith. I have been an interested reader of your valuable paper, for some time. May Our Heavenly Father richly bless you and cause His Grace to shine upon you, is my prayer. Number 6-24-26.

It was through Brother Bohnet's kindness that I first became acquainted with the Tribune in Stockton, Cal., several years ago.

With Christian love, your sister in the "One Hope."

I am renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower and I thank you kindly for continuing sending it up to the present time for I don't like to miss Pastor Russell's sermons, for they are truly meat in due season to the household of faith, and we do thank you, dear editor, that you have the courage to send forth the Truth that others may be strengthened. May God bless you in sending out the Light to others, and may you continue in the good work which you are engaged in and may He reward you in your efforts as have been the means of spreading the glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

McVeytown, Pa., April 27.

I wish to congratulate you, on the grand paper that you publish. It gives us the principal labor news, exposes patent medicine fakes, and lastly but not least, that of the religious part, of which I think is the most grand part of the paper, giving us the sermons by Brother Russell, the Sunday School lessons, also the piece by Brother Nelson, of which all are good. Last spring I had in mind to discontinue the paper, but am glad that I did not. I hope that you will get many more new subscribers, and that you will continue to publish the sermons, etc., as before. May the Lord abundantly bless you, and may he greatly reward you in the future for your labor.

Would wish to hear from friends having back Watch Towers, from 1900 to 1906, both inclusive, for sale.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. Who will start the ball rolling?

THE MISSIONARIES OF ANTIOCH

Acts 11:19-26; 13:1-3—May 7.

Persecution Spreads the Gospel—The First Church Amongst the Gentiles. Barnabas Sent From Jerusalem to Assist the Young Church—Saul of Tarsus Brought to Antioch—The Two Sent Forth as Missionaries. Ordination and Laying on of Hands.

"Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations."—Matthew 28:19. R. V.

ANTIOCH, at the time of our Study, was the third city in the world in commercial importance and population, only Rome and Alexandria taking precedence. It is noted as being the first city outside of Palestine in which a Christian church assembly was formed. Indeed, we might say that as Jerusalem was the center of influence in Palestine, so Antioch became a center of influence respecting the Gospel amongst the Gentiles.

It seems that the little spark of Truth which started the work of the Lord at Antioch resulted from the persecution at the time of St. Stephen's death. Some of those forced out of Jerusalem by that persecution settled at Antioch, and of course let their light shine out for others. At first this was done only toward those of Jewish faith; for in so large a commercial city there were sure to be large numbers of Jews. We know not how many of them were reached by the Gospel; but it was surely confined to them until the end of Israel's seventy symbolical weeks of Divine favor—until the autumn of 36 A. D.—Daniel 9:24-27.

The Church at Antioch.

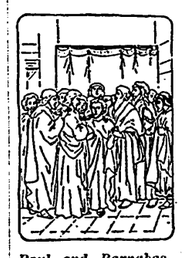
At the same time, therefore, that the Lord was sending Philip to the Samaritans and to the Ethiopian eunuch, and was opening the door to the Gentiles through the Apostle Peter, He was ready to open the door to the Gentiles everywhere. Under the leading of Divine providence some of the Christian Hebrews elsewhere got the proper thought at the proper time—that a Gentile who would receive the Lord Jesus could be classed as a disciple equally with the Jews who had done so.

The news that the Gospel was going to the Gentiles at Antioch, and that large numbers were turning to the Lord, reached the Church at Jerusalem —the head-center of Christian work. The brethren there had already been prepared by the Lord's manifest dealings in the case of Cornelius; and this, undoubtedly, would largely correct any prejudice on the subject of the Gentiles as fellow-heirs of the Abrahamic Promise, which had previously pertained to the Jews alone. Accordingly, Barnabas was sent to Antioch to judge of the true condition of things and to give some report as to whether the new converts were worthy to be recognized as fellow-heirs with the saints.

Christian Missionaries.

Barnabas was a Levite and a native of Cyprus, an island near Antioch, and probably was familiar with the dialect spoken in Antioch. Additionally, he had a beautiful character; in fact, he had been named Barnabas by the brethren, who had thus designated him "a son of consolation," a helper. He at once overflowed toward the Antioch brethren; and in the same comforting, helpful manner as at Jerusalem he exhorted them all. As a result "much people was added to the Lord."

While Barnabas was at Antioch, he had in mind Brother Saul of Tarsus, whom he had met in Jerusalem; and he concluded that, since Tarsus was not far from Antioch, he would look Saul up, interest him in the work, etc. He probably remembered that Saul's ideas were extremely broad in respect to the Gospel, and concluded that the brethren at Antioch would be greatly profited by his assistance. He found Saul and brought him to Antioch, where his influence was no doubt for the good of all. For a whole year they assembled with the Church at Antioch, and taught much people. It was there the disciples were first called Christians.



Paul and Barnabas Sent Forth.

The result of their labors was that the Church as a whole was developed. There were a number of prophets—public speakers—and teachers in the Church; and evidently they began to consider how they might be used of the Lord to His glory and to the blessing of others. They finally concluded to send forth Barnabas and Paul as their representatives in mission work. The proper course having been decided upon, the congregation fasted, prayed and laid their hands upon the two, then sent them on their missionary tour with the blessing of the Church.

The laying on of hands was probably done by the congregation, through the Elders. This would not signify authority to preach, as ordination sometimes means today amongst various sects and parties. It simply meant that the congregation were sending forth the two as their representatives, for whose maintenance the congregation was responsible. Later, the brethren returned and made report.

I am renewing my subscription to your paper through the Watch Tower office.

I appreciate your publishing Pastor Russell's sermons, for they are a great blessing to me, and not to me only, but to many others, I am sure.

The class of Bible Students here read the sermon from the Tribune every Sunday morning. We are especially grateful for the large type and wider columns.

Very truly yours.

likewise: "Love prays, Love makes covenants with the Eternal Powers on behalf of it's dear mate." The fact is there are two distinct kinds of religion; one is natural and the other is spiritual; that is to say, one is functional and instinctive and the other is the result of a Spiritual Begetting of the Word of Truth, or an appreciation of the principles of Truth—of God's Wisdom, Justice and Love. We have a religion born of nature and a religion born of theology, just as we have two kinds of friendship: the commonplace friendship of mere acquaintance of young folks and men and men and women, which is functional, and the Intellectual Friendship which has Reverence as its basis and which knows no sex, cast, and in which time and circumstance plays no part. The functional friendship may merge into the superior, as also will the emotional religion merge into the rational and spiritual; and this dual feature of friendship and religion applies to all of man's mental endowments. Beecher's experience classifies him as a Moral Reformer—the results of his religion, which was more the natural and intuitive ("That which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God manifest it unto them. For the invisible things of Him since the creation of the world are clearly seen, being perceived through the things that are.") than the Intellectual and Spiritual ("The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God.") Cupid plays his first pranks on the fountains of our vitality which spurs the faculties of the brain to the creative point. Love is then but the flavering of virtue—all virtue—not merely Veneration, the highest organ in the brain. Hence any faculty of the brain is a secondary sex manifestation. But the fine thrills and ecstacy of Platonic Love specially fecondates the moral sentiments to an extent that is quite foreign to our habitual state—hence courtship has been said to be a form of hypocracy. Great calamities, such as bereavement, sorrow, solitude and heart-hunger, will also produce this "new life." Beecher's religion was principally the product of his unrequited love and lived as long as did this kind of love.

Emerson's description of the effects of love upon the youth, in linking them first with inanimate nature (and later with society) tallies somewhat with Beecher's soliloquies in the Ohio woods heretofore quoted. Beecher's communion with the God of Nature reminds one of Emerson's statement: "The passion re-makes the world for the youth. It makes all things alive and significant. Every bird on the tree sings now to his heart and soul. Almost the notes articulate." This is the effects of requited love and differs from the experience of Beecher whose love was unrquited. But the results are the same in that it produces Natural Religion. We quote Emeron further:—

"Behold there in the woods the fine madman! He is a palace of sweet sounds and sights; he dilates; he is twice a man; he walks with arms akimbo; he soliloquizes; he accosts the grass and the trees; he feels the blood of the violet, and the clover and the lily in his veins; and he talks with the brook that wets his feet. The causes that have sharpened his perception of natural beauty, have made him love music and verse. It is a fact often observed, that men have written good verses under the inspiration of passion, who cannot write well under any other circumstances. The like force has the passion over all his nature. It expands the sentiment; it makes the clown gentle, and gives the coward heart. Into the most pitiful object it will infuse a heart and courage to defy the world, so only to have the countenance of the beloved object. In giving him to another, it still more gives him to himself. He is a new man, with new perceptions, new and keener purposes, and a religious solemnity of character and aims. He does not longer appertain to his family and society. He is somewhat. He is a person. He is a soul."

Salamanca, N. Y., April 26.

I am enclosing my subscription, or renewal, rather. I wish also to tell you of my continued appreciation of the Tribune. I expect many of the friends have dropped the "Tribune" for the "Enterprise", I feel that the "Enterprise" is purely a "Truth" paper interesting only to the friends whereas the "Tribune" is a paper largely suported by those not specially interested in religious matters therefore to have the religious features as embodied in our Pastor Russell's sermons and other contributed articles incorporated in a secular paper is doubly worthy of our support. Many I think the article which appeared some months ago attacking Pastor Russel's teachings, and slurring the "Enterprise" has rather stirred up many of the friends to continue their support of the Tribune, not because the article itself appeared, but because in an explanation by the Tribune it (The Tribune) expresed such kindly sentiments and showed such good feeling towards its competitor, The Enterprise.

I would not wish to censure any of the friends who have dropped The Tribune for The Enterprise, but I think that if they wish to spread the Glad Tidings there is no better way than a continued suport of The Tribune. Its great improvement in type and arrangement shows that the publisher is doing his best. I am a loyal supporter of The Enterprise also and I believe each is filling its own peculiar sphere.

Trusting in your continued loyalty to the principles of Truth and righteousness, I beg to remain,

Yours sincerely,
CHAS J. DAVIS.

GOSPEL PREACHING TWOFOLD OBJECT

PRIME OBJECT OF PREACHING RELATES TO THE CHURCH, THE SECOND TO THE WORLD.

Conversion of the World Not God's Present Purpose—Special Design of Gospel Age the Calling Out and Preparing of the Church Class—Secondary Design the Witness to the World—The True Gospel is the Gospel of the Kingdom—Gospel Message Only for those Having Hearing Ears—These but Few—Offer Now Made is the "Pearl of Great Price"—How the Church, the Bride, Makes Herself Ready for the Kingdom.

Boston, April 30.—Pastor Russell delivered here today a discourse of deep interest. His text was, "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matthew 24:14.) He said in part:

In the words of our text our Lord Jesus Christ makes a statement as to the purpose of the Gospel Message of the present Age. That purpose is quite different from what Christian people in general have thought it to be. Many have supposed that the object to be attained during this Age has been the conversion of the world. But not so, according to the Scriptures. The end mentioned in our text is not the end of the world, but the end of the preaching of the Gospel. After the preaching of the Gospel has accomplished its work, this kind of preaching will no longer be necessary. The work of the Gospel Age, as laid out by the Master, is not the conversion of the world, but the preaching of the Gospel as a witness to all nations.

There is a distinction between the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Kingdom itself. The Gospel of the Kingdom is the Message concerning the Kingdom, the Glad Tidings of the Kingdom. When this Message shall have accomplished its work of gathering out a special class from amongst the people to constitute the Bride of Christ, then the Kingdom itself will be inaugurated and will begin its work, which will be for the salvation of the world at large. So we make the distinction betwwen the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Kingdom. The Gospel is the announcement beforehand that the Kingdom is coming. When the Kingdom comes, of course the preaching that it is coming will be at an end; for the entire object of this preaching is to prepare for this coming Kingdom.

WHY BUT FEW HAVE HEARING EARS.

The Scriptures inform us that since our Lord's ascension to the right hand of the Majesty on High, He has been waiting until the time shall come for the Heavenly Father to make His enemies His footstool. (Hebrews 10:12, 13; Psalms 110:1.) In other words, He is waiting until His glorious Kingdom shall be inaugurated for the blessing of all the families of the earth. Meantime, those who hope to reign with Him have an important work to do in themselves, co-operating with their Lord in the preparation of themselves for their great future exaltation. Personally, they are to proclaim the Gospel Message, preaching it to every one who has an ear to hear, in order that the full number of the Bride class may be gathered in and fitted for their positions in the Kingdom.

But not many will hear this Message of the Kingdom. The great majority of the people are filled with their own ideas. Some are engrossed in money making, in pleasure seeking, in art, in music, etc. As a result, comparatively few have an ear for the Truth of God, the Message of the Kingdom. But upon the few who have the hearing ear, this glorious Message has a marvelous effect; for it transforms their entire lives.

In calling out this class God uses no force, no coercion. It is strictly a voluntary matter. The Gospel Message is only for those who appreciate it; and they will receive a great blessing. As the Master said to His disciples, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear." (Matthew 13:16, 17.) When our Lord was preaching in Palestine, comparatively few had an ear to hear. The majority were too full of their own ideas and projects. And thus it has been all down the Gospel Age.

However, God is not blaming those who have no ears to hear the Message of the Gospel; and neither should we. We do not smite a blind man because he does not see. On the contrary we sympathize with him. So we should do with those who have no spiritual sight. There are very many who lack spiritual sight, many who cannot exercise faith in what they cannot see; and according to the Scriptures they are not responsible for their failure. As the Apostle Paul says, "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." For this reason they cannot see. (2 Corinthians 4:4.) Later on, under the Messianic Kingdom, these blind eyes will be opened.—Isaiah 35:5-10.

So then, we perceive that this Message of the Kingdom was never designed to reach those now blinded by the Adversary. And this class forms the great majority of mankind. God never purposed that the Message should convert the world, but that the Kingdom itself should do this work when it is established in the earth. The Message is designed for only a "little flock." "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," said the Master. (Luke 12:32.) Only the Royal Family will get the Kingdom. All others will be the subjects of the Kingdom.

THE PRICELESS PEARL NOW OFFERED

The earth is the one rebellious province in God's Universe. There are only a few members of Adam's race who are inclined to listen to the Word of God and to follow its instructions. By nature our minds are all more or less twisted through the Adamic fall, and not one is fit to be a member of God's Royal Family. But there are some who have a disposition of heart to do right, who hunger and thirst after God and righteousness. It is to such that the Message of the Kingdom appeals. The Gospel attracts those who have an interest in the things of God, but passes by those who lack such interest.

God is seeking for those who, when they learn of His wonderful Plan for human salvation from sin and death, will become so thoroughly engrossed in it that they will practically forget everything else. Thenceforth His Plan will be the only thing of special value to them. Some of us have found it even so in our own cases. All other things are but secondary—eating, drinking, the kind of clothing we wear, whether we are poor or rich, etc. We desire merely to be neat in person and to have sufficient food to give us the strength required for what our Lord has given us to do.

With us the main object in life is the attainment of the great Heavenly treasure to which the Gospel called our attention. We are like the merchantman who was seeking goodly pearls, and who, when he found one pearl of great price, sold all that he had and bought that pearl. (Matthew 13; 45, 46.) The Kingdom of Heaven, the Messianic Kingdom, with its glory and honor and with its privileges in connection with the world's uplift to human perfection, constitutes the great prize peculiar to this Gospel Age. Never before this Age was this prize possible of attainment; and the opportunity to attain it will end with this Age.

Everybody is seeking something in life. The vast majority have before their minds some object or aim, to the attainment of which they expend their energies. Some are seeking the pearl of large financial influence in their community. Others seek the pearl of great wealth, the finest house in town, etc. Still others bend every effort to become famous musicians or great singers. A young woman may have before her mind the pearl of a cosy home, with a kind husband and little children. So there are pearls of many kinds and sizes. Whoever has no worthy object in life, no high ideal before his mind, is indeed a pitiable creature.

But the Pearl of great price presented to us in the Scriptures far eclipses all other pearls in value. Whoever possesses this Pearl will be in harmony with God. The majority of mankind have no God, although everybody really needs Him; for we were created so. The highest organs in the human head show that worship of our Creator is a natural requirement of man's being. But the race is so fallen from its original perfection, and our God has been so grossly misrepresented to us, that few realize their need. What we were told concerning Him was so terrible that we did not care to know anything more about Him. Contrary to our nature, we turned aside because of these misrepresentations of His character. Nevertheless, the first step is to come into harmony with God, to become His child, and to learn that "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that reverence Him."—Psalm 103:13.

HOW TO SECURE THE GREAT PEARL.

As we examine this Pearl more closely, we see a marvelous beauty that we had not noticed before. We see that God has made a wonderful offer to those who will renounce the world and consecrate themselves fully to Him, to follow in the footsteps of their Redeemer, faithful even unto death. For these the Heavenly Father has in reservation great glory, high honor and a change of nature from human to Divine. (2 Peter 1;4.) These constitute the Church of Christ, and the Church will be joint-heir with Christ Jesus in His Kingdom, through which God has purposed to bless the world.

Whoever gets the Pearl will have the privilege of being associated with our Lord Jesus in the work of helping the world up out of ignorance, superstition and sin. For a thousand years this wonderful privilege of raising to human perfection and everlasting life all of the poor, fallen race of Adam who will accept the offer. Who would not rejoice at the prospect of uplifting the world from sin and death conditions to perfection and life! What would not we give thus to bless and uplift all our relatives and friends who are not now interested in the Kingdom! How glad we are that all mankind will have the privilege of hearing and knowing about God.

But this is not all. After Christ and the Church shall have brought the poor world back to perfection, righteousness and life, the Church will be forever associated with her Lord, to show forth the riches of Jehovah's grace throughout the ages of eternity. (Ephesians 2:4-7.) Surely this is "a pearl of great price."

Are we asked what we must give to secure this pearl? In the parable, the merchantman sold all that he possessed to obtain that pearl; and so must we. It makes no difference whether we have much or little, we must give our all. We must yield ourselves wholly and unreservedly to God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. In one sense the pearl is very cheap—practically a gift; for the most that any of us may possess is as nothing in comparison. Yet in the sense that in order to purchase it we must submit ourselves fully to the Lord, henceforth to have no will of our own in anything, to suffer reproach, scorn, persecution, loss of friends, tribulations—all necessary to our preparation for future service—the cost is considerable. But whoever has once gotten a glimpse of the Pearl will gladly pay the price.

CONDITIONS FOR OBTAINING THE PEARL.

Whoever accepts this wonderful offer which God has made must enter into a Covenant of Sacrifice with Jehovah. (Psalm 50:5:) Day by day he must thereafter carry out his Covenant. He must study the course followed by our Lord Jesus Christ, who is our great Exemplar, then he must walk in the Savior's steps. He must deny himself—put himself fully into the hands of our Lord—and enter the School of Christ, learning daily lessons of faith and obedience.

After we have consecrated ourselves fully to the Lord, all that we have is His; and we are only His stewards, who must render to Him an account for our use of time, influence, means, strength and all. We have very little to render to the Lord at best. When the time necessary for eating, sleeping, earning a livelihood, etc., is deducted, we have not much left for active service for God. Therefore we are, so far as we are able, to redeem the time from earthly affairs, spending as little as possible commensurate with duty and necessity in housework, business, etc. Some of the earthly treasures can be relinquished in the interest of the Heavenly treasures, that more time may be given to the study of God's Word, in helping the brethern along the good way, and in proclaiming the Message of grace to others, that they may be blessed.

DOING GOOD TO OTHERS.

The number who will obtain this Pearl is limited. During the entire Gospel Age only 144,000 are to be selected to form the glorified Church class. This number, we believe, is very nearly complete. Therefore if we wish to be winners of the prize we must be up and doing. The time is short; and we must be about our Father's business. It is the Father's business that we cultivate the fruits of the Holy Spirit—putting away malice, hatred, strife, and putting on meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love. This is the Father's business; and by so doing we are getting ready to carry on His business by and by. He wishes us to attend to our own education now, and to do all that we can to help others to get their education also. This is not the time to attend to the interests of the world.

This does not mean that we shall do nothing for the world, however; for we are to do good unto all as we have opportunity, especially to the Household of Faith. Seek first the Kingdom of God for yourself; and afterward look after the brethern and those needing your assistance. Be kind and considerate toward all. Watch for opportunities to give a pleasant word or a smile—to your grocer, your iceman, your milkman, your butcher, etc. Do kindly by them. They will see that you are different from others, and that you are not trying to pick a flaw in everything that they have. This does not mean that you are to be willing to be taken advatage of, but that you are showing a kindly spirit towards them. By so doing, you may pave the way for speaking the Gospel Message to them afterwards.

We cannot know how much good may result from these seemingly small things. Thus doing we shall be showing forth the Lord's prase, which is to be our constant aim. All of this is preparing us for the Kingdom, laying up treasures to buy this great Pearl. To do so will take all that we have, however much or little. There is no other way to secure it.

With the majority, the sole object in life seems to be something to eat or to drink, a little pleasure, some attractive apparel, etc. Comparatively few know for what they are living or why they are in the world. To live in this way is to live like an animal. Rather than to have our mind in such a state we would prefer to be blotted out of existence. But how glorious it is to lift our thoughts and minds to things Above, to live for God and for the eternal future! Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the glories which God has prepared for them that love Him above all else.

GOSPEL WITNESSING ALMOST COMPLETED.

The Gospel of the Kingdom has been preached in all the world as a witness unto all nations. The end of the present Dispensation is at hand. The shaking process, which is to remove everything not in full harmony with the incoming Messianic Kingdom, is progressing. The Bride of Christ will soon be complete beyond the veil. The time of the deliverance of the Church is at hand. The end may come very suddenly. We wish only our Father's time and way. Let us, then, be faithful unto death. Daily we are learning patience, cheerful endurance, submission to the will of the Lord. All this is shown in the faces of the Lord's dear people. Let us continue thus to let our light shine; and soon, we trust, we shall gain the Pearl of Great Price—in the Kingdom.

EMOTIONAL AND RATIONAL RELIGION.

From these accounts it will be readily seen that Beecher was a true child of Nature—a noble and loving youth, yearning for sympathy. This applies also to his marital state, as we shall presently see—his home life and his marital life was a true case of unrequited love. Hubbard has said that "Next to love, heart-hunger is the greatest enlightener." Beecher's nature and experience produced his conception of Diety—a God of Love—but not an appreciation of a plan of redemption that revealed His character to be in accord with the law of Love. Being the product of heart-hunger, when Beecher fell in love with one that could reciprocate his Platonic affections, he lost his conception of God by embracing Darwinism; this, according to our standard, would reverse Hubbard's proposition to read: "Next to heart-hunger, love is the greatest enlightener." The following paragraphs from the pen of Beecher will indicate that his conception of God is solely from the standpoint of Love, to the exclusion of other attributes of God, of Wisdom, Justice and Power; and will also indicate that this idea originates from within—the original "law written in their hearts," inherited from Adam—or more correctly, his filial and unrequited love, and will indicate the occasion that gave birth to the idea—communion with the works of Nature in her gay and beautiful attire of Spring:—

"I was a child of teaching and prayer; I was reared in a household of faith; I knew the Catechism as it was taught; I was instructed in the Scriptures as they were expounded from the pulpit and read by men; and yet, till after I was twenty-one years old, I groped without the knowledge of God in Christ Jesus. I knew not what the tables of eternity have written down, but I think that when I stand in Zion and before God, the brightest thing I shall look back upon will be that blessed morning of May when it pleased God to reveal to my wandering soul the idea that it was His nature to love a man in his sins for the sake of helping him out of them; that He did not do it out of compliment to Christ, or to a law, or a plan of salvation, but from the fulness of His great heart; that He was a Being not made mad by sin, but sorry; that He was not furious with wrath toward the sinner, but pitied him—in short He felt toward me as my mother felt toward me, to whose eyes my wrong-doing brought tears, who never pressed me so close to her as when I had done wrong, and who would fain with her yearning love lift me out of trouble. And when I found that Jesus Christ had such a disposition, and that when His disciples did wrong He drew them closer to Him than He did before—and when pride, and jealousy, and rivalry, and all vulgar and worldly feelings ranked in their bosoms, he opened his heart to them as a medicine to heal these infirmities; when I found it was Christ's nature to lift men out of weakness to strength, out of impurity to goodness, out of everything low and debasing to superiority, I felt that I had found a God. I shall never forget the feelings with which I walked forth that May morning. The golden pavements will never feel to my feet as then the grass felt to them; and the singing of the birds in the woods—for I roamed the woods—was cacophonous to the sweet music of my thoughts; and there were no forms in the universe which seemed to me graceful enough to represent the Being, a conception of whose character had just dawned upon my mind. I felt, when I had with the Psalmist called upon the heavens, the earth, the mountains, the streams, the floods, the birds, the beasts, and universal being to praise God, that I had called upon nothing that could praise Him enough for the revelataion of such a nature as that in the Lord Jesus Christ."

"Time went on, and next came the disclosure of a Christ ever present with me, as a companion and friend, to uphold me and sustain me. This was the last and the best revelation of God's Spirit to my soul. It is what I consider the culminating work of God's grace in man; and no man is a Christian until he has experienced it. I do not mean that a man cannot be a good man until then; but he has not got to Jerusalem till the gate has been opened to him, and he has seen the King sitting in His glory with love to Him individually."

The place that Beecher was seized with this idea of Diety is said by Abbot to be in the Ohio woods. This beautiful sentiment expressed in the last paragraph quoted—"A Christ ever present with me, as a companion and friend, to uphold me and sustain me"—is a comforting thought to any that are disappointed with the world, or disappointed in love, or in bereavement, and sorrow from whatever cause. But what would justify our suspicion that Beecher's religion was more natural than rational, is the fact that he does not indicate that he was dissatisfied with himself—his attainment morally—for the basis of a superior religion is the recognition of ones own unworthiness. This is the standard set forth in the New Testament.

To reveal the weakness of the flesh was one of the purposes of God's Law given by Moses. St. Paul speaking as a representative Jew, honestly endeavoring to keep the Law, portrays the experience that should precede acceptance of Christ; it is that of regret that he could not measure up to the Divine standard in attainments, although he could follow it with his mind, or in short Repentance. Note his words, (Romans 7:22.): "I deligt in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members, waring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. Who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Paul recognized the fact that he needed a Saviour because he could not measure up to the Divine standard in the flesh—he recognized the Justice of God in condemning him because of this. Elsewhere he says that this weakness is the result of the Fall in Eden—that the whole world was condemned representatively in Adam and that the whole world was redeemed in Christ who takes Adam's place in death, thus satisfying God's Justice which condemned the race, and it remains for the sinner to recognize these facts before he can appreciate the love of God in His gracious provisions for the sinner in Jesus Christ. The experience of the Jew who accepts Christ as their righteousness, after having failed to secure the righteousness of the Law, he depicts thus: "There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ; who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit (of the Law.) For the (Mosaic) law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own son in the likeness of sinful flesh—condemned sin in the flesh."

Beecher saw the mercy of God for the sinner in the life of Christ (not His death) and did not recognize this principle of justice in God's dealing with the sinner; this is further attested by other statements presented later in which his aversion to the Sacrificial Death of Christ amounts almost to an antipathy. Luther's early experience, and theology produced later, tallies with St. Paul's, but Beecher's does not.

In other words we have two phases in religion—a functional and a rational; the functional and love go together. Hubbard has remarked that "Religion is a secondary sex manifestation." Darwin said something to the same effect: "Love and religion has been strangely united." Emerson

CONGRESSMAN COLEMAN'S LAST WORD TO REPUBLICAN VOTERS

Congressman Mann Boosts the Present Congressman and Urges His Return to the House.

Congressman William H. Coleman makes his last and final appeal to the voters of the district which he now represents in Congress and in this appeal he tears the coverin from the enemy and exposes him to the gaze of all concerned. Not only does the present Congressional incumbent, Mr. Coleman, use liberally the munitions found in the Congressional Record of his opponent, when said opponents was a member of Congress, but Congressman Coleman presents a letter from Hon. James R. Mann, minority leader of the Republican forces in the House of Representatives and Mann makes a strong appeal in the interest of Mr. Coleman.

J. Denny O'Neil, like Polissie, the great potter, is throwing the last piece of furniture into the furnace to put a successful enamel finish on M. Clyde Kelly. Coleman's friends declare that Coleman, the present Congressman, has put a damper on the whole thing and the crockery has been ruined and Kelly and his friends have gone to the rubbish heap.

The excitement in the district is intense and the political pot is boiling. Not a vote is being overlooked and every voter physically able is allied on one side or the other, while the lame, the blind and the halt will be out at the polls on Tuesday.

The last appeal made by Congressman Coleman is given out and the last trumpet call is thus sounded.

In his final call Congressman Coleman says:

The primary campaign is practically over. It is now the duty of the Republican voters of the Thirtieth Congressional District to choose a worthy standard bearer.

By press notices, circulars issued and speeches delivered, my cause has been placed before you, and I respectfully submit that I have been faithful in the performance of my duties, and staunch and loyal in my Republicanism.

My opponent, who seeks a Republican nomination, voted for the Underwood Tariff Bill in the last Congress, and for this and other votes he has been highly praised by leading Democrats, and is now being supported by a number of Democrats in this district, all of which stamps him as a sympathizer with Democratic principles, and one who is in no sense deserving of consideration from true Republicans.

There are those who do not hesitate to charge him with selling his Republican birthright for a mess of pottage consisting of the Democratic patronage in his district, and the activity shown at this time in his behalf by some postmasters appointed under the present administration is evidence of the truth of the charge.

CAMPAIGN MISREPRESENTATION

Deliberate misrepresentation is his favorite weapon. For, while posing as a reformer, he does not scruple to resort to the vilest falsehoods in his forlorn effort to regain position lost by reason of his own folly.

In a circular issued, entitled "The Deadly Parallel," he pretends to set forth his official record in contrast with mine. His own record is briefly set forth, and consists of a boastful claim to faithful attendance upon his duties while a member of Congress, coupled with a long apology for his free trade activities.

Had he made effort to give you his true record he could have told you of the acute Mexican situation when Congress had before it a resolution to authorize the President of the United States to make use of the armed force of the government against Huerta, at which critical time he was absent from his post of duty, and unrecorded on this important vote.

He might have told you of the passage of the Emergency Currency Legislation just previous to the outbreak of the European war, and of how Republican leaders and members of Congress rose above partisanship and followed the majority party in their efforts to provide an elastic currency to carry us over the dangerous situation with which we were threatened.

At this critical time, Mr. Mann, the Republican leader, said: "In times like these, certainly we ought to rise above partisanship, and seek to do that which is for the good of our own people, our own country; aye, of the world itself."

Mr. Underwood, the majority leader, said: "I wish to congratulate the gentleman from Illinois, and his party, in the patriotism they are showing today in laying aside party lines and party differences, and recognizing that under the stress of present conditions there are no party lines."

But at this critical juncture in the affairs of our nation, Mr. Kelly was one of six lone men who refused to respond to the promptings of patriotism and voted against this important legislation which meant so much to the people of this country.

He might have told you, in connection with his boastful claim of faithful attendance on the sessions of Congress, that during the month of April, 1914, when he was a candidate for renomination, and properly rejected by Republican voters, he answered but five out of twenty-one roll calls in the House, thus missing more than seventy-six per cent of the calls, but to have done this would have been but telling the truth, and telling the truth is not a trait in the character of my opponent as I will now proceed to show.

UNTRUTHFULNESS.

In this same circular where he fails to tell of many of his own acts that should be known to his constituents, he accuses me of being against pensions for deserving veterans, and states that I did not vote on a pension bill as recorded in the Congressional Record, page 2728 of February 11th, this year. If you will glance at the record on the page referred to you will find his statement to be false, as there was no roll call that day on any pension bill.

While making this statement, my opponent well knew that I had supported the pension bills in the present Congress, making a speech in behalf of the bill for pensioning the widows of the Spanish-American war veterans, which speech will be found in the record of February 16th, page 3059. In the record of the same date, on page 3079, you will find me recorded as being in favor of pensioning the veterans of the Indian wars.

He charges me with having introduced a bill to pension the United States Judges, and yet he knows that this is not only false, but that the United States Judges are now, and for some years past, have been pensioned by law.

He accuses me further of not having voted for a Post Office appropriation bill on February 18th, this year, and refers you to page 3201 of the Congressional Record, a glance at which will show that the only vote taken that date was on going into the

HOSACK MAKING BIG HEADWAY

A Clean and Capable Man Pitted Against Magee for Senatorial Honors.

George M. Hosack, a lawyer of large practice and an old time member of the Legislature is making an exceptional fight against Charles J. Magee, present member of the State Senate in the Forty-third Senatorial District. Magee thought he had things his own way but he has been awakened to a genuine realization that Hosack is a man of considerable standing in the district and in addition he is a man well equipped with abundance of legal training and experience in matters of legislation, he having represented the old fifth legislative district in the House when the district at that time took in almost all of the City of Pittsburgh, including every ward on the South Side.

Hosack has a very large practice and he is very successful as a lawyer. With his commanding appearance and his ability to present issues he is well prepared to go before the people requesting their support and he places the faction supporting him in a splendid position of having responsible men on the ticket. There is no question as to the character and standing of Hosack nor is there any reason why he should not be elected. The whole issue is who shall control the 43rd Senatorial district and that is a most vital question. If the district is to be controlled by the ordinary street corner politicians then Magee, the friends of Hosack say, will be successful, but if men of ability and fitness are to represent the people Hosack will be the choice of the citizen voters. Hosack has ability that commands support and in order to strengthen the Republican organization ticket, Hosack has been given the endorsement and he is well able to meet every condition that might arise either during the remaining days of the campaign in presenting or defending any issue of state or national importance, or in the halls of legislation in matters of significance in General Assembly.

In past years representative men in the General Assembly have become very scarce and the character of legislation in the last few sessions was nothing more than a joke. Men of ability hesitate to permit the use of their names lest they become defiled with the common rabble that has managed to drift into Harrisburg as representatives of the people but Hosack, after much persuasion, took courage and finally consented to the use of his name. He is now promised the backing of the regular Republicans and the indications are very promising as to the ultimate result.

On Tuesday when the polls close the friends of Hosack declare he will be nominated and there will be no old time tricks pulled off without ample airing in the courts. Hosack's friends they have two children. He was admitted to the Fayette County Bar in 1892, and after practising at Uniontown one year, removed to Pittsburgh, where he was admitted to the Allegheny County Bar, to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and the United States District and Circuit Courts. He served two years as secretary of the Fayette County Republican Committee; and was a member of the House of Representatives, sessions of 1897, 1899 and 1901, representing the Fifth Legislative District of Pittsburgh, and served as Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in 1899. He is engaged in the general practice of law. He is a member of the Board of Directors of St. Francis Hospital, having served on that board for the last fifteen years. Mr. Hosack is a member of the Duquesne Club and the Pittsburgh Athletic Association in Pittsburgh and of the Harrisburg Club.

everywhere are giving warning that the issue must be fought out squarely and nothing else will be tolerated. Hosack cares nothing for criticism. His life, both private and public, is open and the record of his public career while representing the old Fifth Legislative district, may be examined at any time. He is a reputable lawyer of considerable practice with offices in the Park building.

Born in Dayton, Armstrong County, Pa., October 7, 1866, of Scotch-Irish ancestry. He was educated in the public schools and graduated from the Connellsville High School in 1886. In 1887 he entered the literary department of the University of Michigan, and devoted his time to special study of economics in the School of History and Political Science; entered the law department in 1889; and was graduated LL.B., 1891, and admitted to practice in the Circuit and Supreme Courts of Michigan. Returning to Fayette County, Pa., he read law with Hon. S. Leslie Mestrezat, now a justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Mr. Hosack married in 1893 Della Clark of Connellsville, and

CALL OF THE COUNTRY.

Once in a while, if you are a normal person, you suddenly find yourself tired of everything around you. All the conventional things you do are irksome; even the luxuries seem superfluous. The trouble is that the gypsy is stirring in your blood. It is the call of the country.

When this mood comes upon you, as it does about the time when the trees seem to burst into full leaf over night, and when the spring epidemics of marbles and skip-the-rope break out in every square, you will turn with zest and interest to a little book just issued by the Erie Railroad Company, the "Road to Summer Land." It tells you in word and picture of the many joys and charms of summer life in the vast region that begins just beyond the western outskirts of New York and stretches out into the storied land of Goshen and up into the reaches of the Delaware. This lovely country, with its towering hills, wild mountain brooks, calm upland pastures, and gem-like lakes hidden in the heart of thick forests, all encircled like a gleaming girdle by the Delaware river, is an ideal summer playground for grown-ups. And incidentally, quite apart from its natural charms, it abounds in resorts where the price of accommodations is reasonable and transportation facilities are easy and quick.

ANTI-INJUNCTION LAW IS URGED BY GOMPERS.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—In the American Federationist, May issue President Gompers urges unionists in the various states to call a conference for the purpose of starting a campaign against the injunction process in labor disputes.

He impresses upon organized workers the necessity for state legislation similar to the Clayton federal statute, which declares "That the labor power of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce." The American Federation of Labor has had prepared a model anti-injunction bill and unionists are urged to insist that their state legislatures make this bill a statutory measure, thereby assuring to every worker a complete ownership in his own labor power and immunity from judge-made law that disregards constitutional guarantees.

A meeting of Illinois trade unionists will be held at Chicago May 26, for the purpose of taking counsel on the best methods to check the injunction evil in that state, hwich has reached the point where judges have declared peaceful picketing illegal. President Gompers will attend this meeting. The A. F. of L. executive will attend a similar meeting of Indiana unionists at Fort Wayne, May 30; of Ohio unionists, at Columbus, May 31, and of Michigan unionists, at Detroit, the date to be announced later.

Labor Alliance to Meet in London

Trade Union War Levy Has Been Suggested.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

London, April 27, 1916.

The first full meeting of the Triple Labor Alliance will take place within the next fortnight, in London, under the presidency of Robert Smillie. It will be remembered that I have referred at length in earlier letters to this closr union between England's three greatest labor aggregations. Meetings of the sub-committee of the Alliance have taken place, but the three executive committees of the Miners' Federation, the National Union of Railwaymen, and the National Transport Workers' Federation have not yet met in common council. While the formal agenda for the conference is not yet available, it is understood that the general policy of the alliance will be under special consideration. The last sub-committee meeting of the alliance considered plans for the employment of their members on the demobilization of the army, and this will also be debated by the joint executives.

A trade union war levy has been suggested by George Barnes, M. P., in an appeal to societies affiliated to the Trade Union Congress. Unions of trades, he says, in which employment is good, and especially those on war work, might well consider the raising of levies for war use. Such money could be invested in Government stock and used to wage the war, but would afterwards be available, with the added interest, for the troublesome times which may be ahead.

A local tramway strike of some importance has broken out at Croydon, a large residential district on the southern outskirts of London. The Croydon town council runs passenger trams or street railways and along with all other tramway owners has of late been suffering greatly from shortage of labor, with the result that large numbers of women have been taken on and trained as guards or conductors. The lady tram guard is now a common feature of all London's trams and omnibusses as well as of those in other parts of the country. When the news of a strike on the Croydon trams was first mentioned it was stated that the strike had broken out because the Croydon Town Council was also starting to train women as tram drivers or motor women and that both the male and female conductors had struck as a consequence. This was rather a silly rumor and appears to have been very wide of the truth. The Croydon strike, which has been supported by both the old male conductors who remain and by all the new girl conductors, is against general bad conditions of work. According to Ben Smith, who is the tramway union leader, the daily work on the Croydon trams is usually over 17 hours 20 minutes against an average of 14½ hours in other parts of London, whilst wages at Croydon are on an average $1.50 a week less than those paid by the London County Council, which is, by the way, the biggest of all London tram-owning associations.

Motormen on the Croydon trams get 13-14 cents an hour and conductors or guards from 12-14 cents. The reason for the long hours is not that the men and women are employed the whole of that time but that they have to hold themselves ready all the time although they may be three or four hours with nothing doing. It is declared by the tram workers that it is time this old system of things was put an end to; and as the trouble exists in a smaller degree on other London tramway systems there are some fears that the strike may spread once it has started. The strikers of Croydon receive strike pay at the rate of five dollars a week, with 25 cents extra for each child. The Croydon Town Council declare that the concessions sought by the strikers would cost the corporation $50,000 a year more, but this is surely a matter that may be put right by a change of fare charges. It is thought that the final decision as to referring the strikers' demands to arbitration may be speedily arrived at.

There was a joint conference on April 14th between representatives of the Master Spinners' Fedration and th Operative Spinners' Amalgamation, but wages questions take a good deal of answering, and it is not yet regarded that the particular one is safely out of the way. The last advance was a war bonus of 5 per cent which came into operation as from June 17, 1915 having been awarded by the Committee on Production, which had been

HON. M. CLYDE KELLY RAPS CONGRESSMAN COLEMAN

Takes Exception to the Character of Newspaper Publishing Speech of Present Opponent in Big Fight.

The Kelly-Coleman controversy in the 30th Congressional District is now sizzling and while Congressman William H. Coleman, has shown what remarkable strides he has made during his brief term in Congress M. Clyde Kelly takes exception to the organs that have seen fit to reproduce the famous speech delivered by the present incumbent.

Hon. M. Clyde Kelly calls himself the servant of the people and he is referred to as a constant worker and fearless representative, an advocate of good government and his record in the 63rd Congress is matchless and commendable. His endorsements, his friends declare extend from Maine to California and his ability and nearness to the people make him a fitting champion of Lincoln's "common people." He is determined to win and the ex-Congressman knows that every vote counts double in the Primary on Tuesday, May 16.

There is not a corner into which the friends of Kelly have not gone and his associates are imbued with a feeling that if the manhood, the womanhood and childhood of today are to be protected Kelly should receive the unqualified support of every Republican and every citizen voter in the 30th Congressional district. It is a genuine "battle for ballots" and the conflict is more strenuous this year than when Kelly overthrew the Hon. John Dalzell, the great American champion of high protective tariff. So determined is Kelly to win that his friends have heralded throughout the district that "he was counted out of the 64th Congres but he will represent the people in the 65th Congress."

In combatting Coleman's arguments Kelly responds with the following terrific charge:

Will organized labor stand for a member of Congress whose only recommendation comes from the Los Angeles Times, a name that is a stench in the nostrils of every union worker in the world. The Los Angeles Times plant was dynamited some years ago and union men were convicted in the case but there has always been a belief that its publisher, Harrison Gray Otis, was concerned in the dynamiting himself in order to ruin the cause of union labor.

W. H. Coleman, member of Congress from the 30th district, is publishing in the newspapers of the district, an editorial from the Los Angeles Times as a reason for his re-election. It is a deliberate insult to every union man in the district. Here is what Hon. C. H. Randall, member of Congress from the Los Angeles district says about this backer of Coleman.

"The Los Angeles Times, edited by Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, is known all over the world as the most rabid and vicious opponent of Union Labor in existence."

Coleman shows his disregard of even common respect by publishing a favorable editorial from this paper in the columns of a Union paper as a reason why Union men should vote for him. It is reason enough why every Union man should vote against him. When the Los Angeles Times is for a man, the workers know what to do. Coleman was campaign manager for John Dalzell for many years and is now a little Dalzell in Congress.

M. Clyde Kelly, ex-Congressman, is opposing Coleman for the Republican nomination at the primary, May 16th. As a member of legislature and Congress he made a record which cannot be excelled. He helped to frame the Full Crew bill in 1911 and voted for it on the floor. He led the fight for Child Labor bills, Workmen's Compensation and every measure in the interests of the workers. In Congress he made such a record that he has received the strongest endorsements from Samuel Gompers, President of the A. F. of L. Frank Morrison, Arthur Holder and every labor reprsentative in Washington.

M. Clyde Kelly established the first Union daily newspaper in Allegheny county. He still publishes it in Braddock and the union label is at the masthead in every issue. M. Clyde Kelly has performances of years to back his friendship for the workers. The Los Angeles Times is against him.

Now is the time for every man who believes in a square deal for Labor to come to the front. The Primary on May 16th will decide the election. Let every worker go to the polls on that day and vote for M. Clyde Kelly, his friends, tried and true. The result will be one of the greatest victories for the people, in the history of Pennsylvania.

GAMALIEL'S INTERVIEW.

"Massalian says he is tempted at times to become impatient with Jesus, as he devotes so much time to details. It seems almost a waste of time for a man who came to save the world to be lingering over a special case of disease. He thinks he could hasten Jesus's physical deportment. Why not speak one word and remove every sick patient from his sick-bed at the same hour? What a triumph this would be. I asked him if Jesus had healed anyone. He said not as yet; but if he is to be King of the Jews, he was to heal all nations, and why not do it at once? If he would, there would be nothing more required to establish his kingship. But I said to him, 'Is it not equally so with God's cerative power? See what time and labor it takes to bring forth a grain of corn. Why not have caused the earth to bring forth every month instead of every year? Christ was talking in defense of his Father. The people must learn to love and obey the Father before they would reverence the Son. Yes, he said the God that Jesus represented was one that the people might live and venerate; that he was a God of love, and had no bloody designs to execute on even a bad man, provided he ceased his evil ways.'

"It is to be noted that in all Jesus's talk there are manifest references to the future. Many of his statements were like a sealed letter—not to be opened but by time. A grain of mustard was to result in a large tree. All his ideas refer to the future; like the parent helping the child with his burden of to-day, by telling of the blessings of to-morrow; and by making to-day the seed-corn of to-morrow; keeping the action of to-day under moral control by making the morrow the day of judgment. He stated further that Jesus was a young man who was the best judge of human nature he had ever seen; that he thought at times he could tell men their thoughts and expose their bad principles; and while he had all these advantages or life, he seemed not to care for them nor to use them abusively. He seems to like all men—one as well as another—so much so that his own parents have become disgusted with him and have almost cast him off. But Jesus has such a peculiar temperament that he seems not to care, and is as well satisfied with one as another. He said that Jesus seemed fond of Mary and Martha, who lived at Bethany, and probably I might find him there.

"Massalian is a man of very deep thought and most profound judgment. All his life he has made the Scriptures his study. He, too, is a good judge of human nature, and he is satisfied that Jesus is the Christ. He said that Jesus seemed to understand the prophecy by intuition. I asked him where Jesus was taught to read the prophecy. He said that his mother told him that Jesus could read from the beginning; that no one had ever taught him to read. He said that he, in making quotations from the prophets, was sometimes mistaken or his memory failed him; but Jesus could correct him every time without the scroll; and that sometimes he thought Jesus certainly was mistaken, but never in a single instance was he wrong. I asked him to describe his person to me, so that I might know him if I should meet him. He said: 'If you ever meet him you wil know him. While he is nothing but a man, there is something about him that distinguishes him from every other man. He is the picture of his mother, only he has not her smooth, round face. His hair is a little more golden than hers, though it is as much from sunburn as anything else. He is tall, and his shoulders are a little drooped; his visage is thin and of a swarthy complexion, though this is from exposure. His eyes are large and a soft blue, and rather dull and heavy. The lashes are long, and his eyebrows very large. His nose is that of a Jew. In fact, he reminds me of an old-fashioned Jew in every sense of the word. He is not a great talker, unless there is something brought up about heaven and divine things, when his tongue moves glibly and his eyes light up with a peculiar brilliancy; though there is this peculiarity about Jesus, he never argues a question; he never disputes. He wil commence and state facts, and they are on such a solid basis that nobody will have a boldnes to dispute with him. Though he has such mastership of judgment, he takes no pride in confuting his opponents, but always seems to be sorry for them. I have seen him attacked by the scribes and doctors of the law, and they seemed like little children learning lessons under a master. His strongest points are in the spiritual power of the law and the intentions of the prophets. The young people tried to get him to take a class of them and teach them; but he utterly refused.' This Jew is convinced that he is the Messiah of the world.

"I went from there to Bethany, but Jesus was not there. They said he and Lazarus were away, they could not tell where. I went and saw Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus, and had a long talk with them. They are very pleasant and nice young maids, and Mary is quite handsome. I teased her about Jesus, but they both denied that Jesus was anything like a lover; he was only a friend; though this is so common for young maids I did not know whether to believe them or not until I told them my real business. And when I told them that this was the same person that was born of the virgin in Bethlehem some twenty-six years before, and that his mother had told me all the facts in the case, they seemed deeply interested. They then told me upon their honor that Jesus never talked or even hinted to either one of them on the subject of marriage. Martha blushed and said she wished he had. If he was to be a king, she would like to be queen. I asked them if they had ever seen him in the company of young virgins. They said they had not. I asked them if they had heard him talk about young girls; or if he sought their society more than that of men; and they both declared they had not; and they were very much surprised that he did not. I asked them what he talked of when in their company; and they said he was not much in their company; that he and their brother would go upon the house-top and stay there half the night, and sometimes all night, talking and arguing points of interest to both. Mary said she had often gone near, so she could listen to them, for she loved to hear him talk, he was so mild and unpretending, and then was so intelligent that he was different from any and all other young men she had ever seen. I asked them what was their brother's opinion of him. They said he thought there never was such a man on earth. He thought him to one of God's prophets. He said when they are out in the mountains, as they are most all the time, Jesus can tell him all about the flowers, trees, and rocks, can tell him everything in the world, and that none of the wild animals are afraid of him. He says often the stag and the wolf will come and stand for Jesus to strike their mane, and seem almost loath to go away from him. He says that no poisinous serpent will offer to hiss at him. Their brother thinks he is perfectly safe if Jesus is with him. I asked them if he had ever told their brother anything about himself. They said that if he had spoken to their brother he had not told them.

"Now, Master of Israel, after having investigated this matter; after tracing Jesus from his conception to the present time; after obtaining all the information that is to be had on this important subject, getting it from those who are more likely to tell the truth from the fact they are disinterested persons; and then taking a prophetical as well as a historical view of the subject, I have come to the conclusion that this is the Christ that we are looking for. And as a reason for my conclusion, I will call your attention to the following facts: First to the prophecy of Isaith, section 7: 'And he said, Hear now, saith the Lord. Oh, house of David, is it a small thing for you? Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name God with men. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil and choose the good; for before the child shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good the land that God abhorrest shall be forsaken of her king.' Section 8: 'Bind the testimony; seal the law among his disciples; the Lord will hide his face from the house of Jacob, and he will look for him.' Here is a literal fulfillment of this word of the Most High God, so clear and plain that none may mistake. Jeremiah, 31st section: 'Turn, oh virgin, to thy people, for the hand of the Lord is upon thee; for the Lord shall create a new thing in the earth; a woman shall compass a man.' Here again are set forth the same things that Isaiah speaks of, and the same things that I have learned from Mary. Micah, section 5: 'Thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, thou art little among the thousands of Judah; out of thee shall come forth unto me him that shall rule my people. He is from everlasting; and I will give them up until the time she travaileth to bring forth my first born, that he may rule all people.' Here we have the city, the virgin, the office, his manner of life, the seeking him by the Sanhedrim. All these things are under our eyes as full and complete as I now write them, who have all this testimony given in this letter. How can we as a people dispute these things? In the 49th section of Genesis, making reference to the history, that is now upon us, the writer says: 'A captive lawmaker from him, until Shiloh come shall not depart from Judah, nor a and gather his people between his feet, and keep them forever."

Natural Law in the Spiritual World, published ten years later. Drummond purposely concealed the Darwinism in this book to the surface reader, and later came out boldly with it in his Ascent of Man, and according to Abbott, Beecher secretly embraced Darwinism—Evolution applied to the creation of Man long before he openly taught it.

In this particular sermon Beecher makes no reference to the New Testament doctrine that "the just shall live by faith" in the Sacrificial Death of Christ prior to their begetting of the Holy Spirit. He speaks in glowing terms of the New Testament and discredits to some extent the Old Testament and its story of the Fall. "The New Testament does not look back. It but glances in that direction," apparently ignoring the fact that Jesus and His Apostles constantly quoted the Jewish Seers and Law: "All Scripture is given by inspiration and is profitable for instruction." As indicating his attitude towards the Fall, and consequently his attitude towards the necessity of the Sacrificial Death of Christ and its culmination in the "Restitution of all things" lost in Eden, we here extract some statements from this particular sermon:

"The fundamental and universal fact derived from observation and experience is the physical and animal condition of the race, as a primary one. There are two theories: one that man fell from a much higher estate to this low and rude one; and another that man came from the low and rude beginning, and has been working toward a higher condition. Either theory comes to the same thing as to the matter of treatment. The first man may have fallen. His posterity could not very well fall, for they began at the bottom. They were there, and any change, as men are born into life, must be a change upward. But this matters little. The New Testament does not look back. It but glances in that direction. There are only the merest hints-hints on the way to something else."

I am enclosing money order for renewal of my subscription, as per the clubbing arrangements with the Watch Tower.

We do sincerely thank you for continuing to send us your valuable paper after our subscription had expired. We have taken your paper several years, and while we enoy it all, of course Pastor Russell's sermons are most highly appreciated, and the large type in which they are printed is grand.

Yours truly,
ALBERT P. JOHNSON.

London, Ont., May 9, 1916.

I wish to express my appreciation of the Tribune for the space it devotes to Paster Russsell's sermons, and so many other articles in behalf of the Truth.

I have been taking the Tribune for the last six years, and hope to continue to do so as long as you publish our Pastor's sermons. I have renewed my subscription for this year through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. Wishing you the best success.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. L. C. DICKER.

Cortland, N. Y., May 12.

Please accept my thanks for continuing my paper after the subscription had expired. I am renewing through the Watch Tower to show my appreciation of your continued stand for the Truth as exemplified through Pastor Russell's sermons which you print in such clear type. The dear old Tribune has weathered more than one storm on acount of the Truth, may it be blissed and uesd of the Lord down through the golden age the world is about to enter—the whole thousand years of Christ's reign. "Them that honor me I will honor." (1 Sam. 2:30).

Yours for the Truth until death,
MRS. FRANCES K. NORTHWAY.

Grafton, W. Va., May 12.

I am this day renewing my subscription to your paper through the Watch Tower office; enjoy Pastor Russel's Sermons and do not want to miss a single copy. Will continue to be a subscriber as long as you publish Pastor Russell's sermons.

Yours truly,
MRS. CHAS. W. AYER.

West Middlesex, Pa., May 12.

Inclosed find subscription which is part due. Thank you for your kindness towards us in sending us the paper after our subscription had expired, as we appreciate the Labor Tribune every week. We wish to thank you for the way in which you print the sermon of our beloved pastor and other Truth features, which are all so helpful in helping us to make our calling and election sure, knowing that the time is short, in which to prove ourself faithful.

With christian love,
H. R. POWELL.

Danbury, Conn., May 10.

Noticing that my subscription was nearly expiring, I recently renewed same through the Watch Tower office and trust that same will reach you "in due time." I have had a desire for some time to express in writing, my appreciation of the Tribune and I feel now is the opportunity. It seems to me that the clean conduct of the Tribune would recommend itself to any open and unbiased mind and that its stand for public rights and its defense for the moral welfare of the community are welcome activities for any newspaper. However, I especially admire The Tribune because it prints Pastor Russell's sermons, which matter is such satisfying "meat in due season to the household of faith." I hope that the paper will always continue in its present course and unflinchingly continue to print these Divine Truths which are in such irreconvilable conflict with current theology. As long as this is so just as long I hope to be able to be a good subscriber and to enjoy through this channel the good things that are found in God's word and explained as "present Truth" by "that servant."

I am, yours very truly,
MRS. CHAS. VOEGELE.

"LO, WE TURN TO THE GENTILES!"

Acts 13:13-15, 42-52—May 14.

St. Paul's First Missionary Tour—His Sermon at Antioch In Pisidia—Effect of His Discourse Twofold—Violent Opposition From Those Blinded by Sectarian Prejudice.

"I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Verse 47. R. V.

FROM Antioch Paul and Barnabas went to Seleucia, where they took ship for the island of Cyprus, probably because Barnabas was a native of that land. With them went a cousin of Barnabas, John Mark, writer of the Gospel of Mark and son of one of the Marys at Jerusalem. They passed through the island, preaching Christ from village to village on the way. Apparently nothing of note occurred until they reached Paphos, where they came into contact with Elymas, a Jewish sorcerer.

Perceiving that St. Paul's reasoning was interesting the Roman deputy, or proconsul, Elymas sought to gainsay the Truth, recognizing that the Apostle's success meant loss of prestige to his own presentations of falsehood. St. Paul made a plain statement of the case, and declared that as a punishment the hand of the Lord would be upon the magician, so that he would become blind. This manifestation of Divine power enabled the proconsul to reach the right conclusion and to decide to be upon the Lord's side.

Preaching Christ.

Then St. Paul and his company departed for Asia Minor. Today's Study briefly states that John Mark left the missionaries and returned to Jerusalem, but gives no reason for his departure. But whatever the cause, the Apostle Paul considered it quite insufficient. (Acts 15:38.) Later on, however, Mark was again accepted to the Lord's service, and St. Paul made due acknowledgment of his faithfulness.

The first stop made in Asia Minor was at Antioch of Pisidia. The usual custom was followed—of going first to the synagogue. The missionaries were recognized as men of talent; and after the reading of the usual lesson from the Law, they were invited to address the assembly—Jews by birth, and Jewish proselytes from the Gentiles. The Apostle Paul was the speaker and made a telling address.

The Very Essence of the Gospel.

The trend of the Apostle's discourse was chiefly to show that in the past God had established a typical kingdom which had never reached the grand stage essential to the fulfilment of the Abrahamic Promise (Genesis 22:15-18); and that the thing necessary and lacking was a REDEMPTION of the world and the forgiveness of sins. Then he presented to their attention Jesus as the Messiah—not merely a crucified Messiah, but also a risen One who, because of His death for the sin of the world, was able to save unto the uttermost all that should come unto God through Him.

The discourse had a twofold effect. The honest-hearted, realizing their need of just such a Savior as the Apostle had preached, were especially drawn to the missionaries, who recognized their right attitude of heart and assured them that they were already in God's favor. Others were much less prepared for the Apostle's words, and were inclined to be envious of the attention bestowed upon the missionaries and their teaching.

On the next Sabbath the whole city gathered to hear the Message of the missionaries. Such attention to two strangers and their new doctrine naturally awakened a spirit of jealousy in those whose interest was much in forms and ceremonies, honor amongst men and denominational pride. As a result, they contradicted St. Paul with blasphemy—not that they blasphemed God's name, but that they slandered, blasphemed, the Apostle and Barnabas, speaking evil of them, misrepresenting their motives, their character, etc. This is the usual course of those who fight against the Truth.

Departing that Region.

The missionaries courageously explained to their vilifiers that they were rejecting God's Plan to their own injury. They pointed out that God had long favored Israel; and that in sending the Message of Messiah to the Jews first, He was still favoring them; but that according to His direction the Gospel was to be preached to whoever had ears to hear—whether Jew or Gentile. Many of the Gentiles were glad to hear that God's favor was broader than they had previously supposed. And some of them, we are assured, believed in the true sense of the word, accepting Christ as their Redeemer.

But the more the Truth spread, the more angry grew its opponents, the Jewish leaders. By misrepresentation they secured the cooperation of some of the most honorable people of the city to such an extent that the missionaries were obliged to depart from that region.

HON. J. R. WYLIE MAKING STRONG FIGHT TO WIN.

Past Record in Legislature Gives Him Big Chance Over all Rivals.

Hon. J. R. Wylie, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., is a candidate for re-election as a member of the Legislature from the 10th Assembly district.

Mr. Wylie is one of Wilkinsburg's most substantial and representative citizens, and is a clean cut, conservative business man. He was always interested in public affairs and is fully equipped to perform the duties of an Assemblyman, which he demonstrated at the last session of the Legislature as a member of the House.

Mr. Wylie enjoys the distinction of having been elected by the largest vote received by any member of the Legislature from Allegheny County, which has twenty-four representatives. He is one of the four members from Allegheny County who cast his vote for Governor Brumbaugh's Local Option bill.

HON. J. R. WYLIE.

Mr. Wylie was born in Elizabeth Township, Allegheny County, Penna., of Scotch-Irish parentage and has always lived in the district. He was educated in the public schools and is a graduate of Geneva College, of the class of 1887. He taught school and entered as a law student, but having to earn his own livlihood, he embarked in the real estate and insurance business, in which he continues to be successful.

He is also interested in banking, being a director and vice-president of the Central National Bank of Wilkinsburg, and a director of the State Bank of Elizabeth. He devotes much of his time to school affairs, having been a member of the Board of Education for several terms. He thoroughly understands the needs of our public school system, having been president of the Board for several years, which position he now holds. It was in this work he first met Governor Brumbaugh and they are today close friends.

He, his wife and four children are all active members of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg, of which he is president of the Board of Trustees. He is actively interested in all moral and social problems that have for their object the common good and uplift of humanity. He is well and favorably known in his legislative district, as a member of the last session he missed but few roll calls, and prepared himself to vote intelligently and conscienciously on measures brought before the House.

Men who vote in the Legislative bodies of both State and Nation, according to the dictates of their own conscience are scarce, and men of Mr. Wylie's type who make as thorough a study as possible of the measures brought before the House for the purpose of voting in the interests of his constituancy should receive the support of every citizen who believes in truly representatives government, which is a government of the people.

WEEKLY ADDRESS of
PASTOR RUSSELL
of the
LONDON TABERNACLE and of
NEW YORK CITY
— TEMPLE —

GOD'S SALVATION IS FOR ALL MEN.

MARVELOUS PROVISIONS OF DIVINE FAVOR FOR THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

Scriptural Meaning of the Word Grace—The Grace of God Bringing Salvation First Provided During this Gospel Age—Natural Israel Under Law, Not Under Grace—God's Loving Plan for Man Arranged Ages Ago, but Long Kept Hidden—Blessings of God's Grace Effective Only on Certain Conditions—Church Blessed First, Then the World.

Lowell, Mass., May 7.—Pastor Russell gave a very interesting address this evening at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd street, near Broadway. As usual he was heard with close attention. His text was, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation for all men hath appeared." (Titus 2:11). The Pastor said in part:

The word Grace is a term which is peculiar to this Gospel Age. As used in the Scriptures it has the significance of unmerited favor. Whoever believes in the grace of God believes that he is privileged to have a favor that he does not merit. That which is merited would be justice; and it is not justice which we are receiving from the Lord, but mercy, favor.

To the nation of Israel God offered, through the Law Covenant, something peculiar to them—He gave them the privilege of coming into relationship with Himself. This privilege was not given to other nations. But God's favor was not extended to them upon the terms of grace. He offered Israel life upon condition of perfect obedience to the Law Covenant. (Leviticus 18:5). But their endeavor to keep the Law merely demonstrated what the Apostle Paul and our Lord Jesus Christ point out; namely, the fact that no imperfect man can keep God's Law. (Romans 3:20; John 7:19. The Bible explains why this is so. It is because God's Law is adapted to perfect men, not to the imperfect. Hence it is that the imperfect could never gain life under the Law Covenant. God does not purpose to have a Kingdom with imperfect subjects.

The Almighty Jehovah has made full arrangement that all who attain life everlasting shall be perfect. Here it is that the work of grace comes in. This grace of God was brought to us through our Lord Jesus Christ. It has appeared for all men, although it has not yet been manifested to all men; for the great majority have never yet heard of the grace of God in Christ our Redeemer. But it is for the benefit of all, "to be testified in due time." (1 Timothy 2:5, 6). As yet the grace of God has appeared only to those who have heard and received the Message of God "speaking peace through Jesus Christ." It appeared to the disciples of Jesus who followed Him when He was on earth. It has appeared to all those who have since heard the Message and become His followers. To these the Master says, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear."

GOD'S GRACE REVEALED TO BELIEVERS.

The Christ, the Anointed of God, had been promised for many centuries. But until the time of the First Advent the grace of God had not appeared. For 4,128 years after Adam fell there was no grace manifested, only the Law and Justice. But when our Lord Jesus came, "herein was manifested the LOVE of God," as the Apostle declares. (1 John 4:9, 10). God had this Love all along, but it had not been manifested; for He wished mankind to learn a great lesson in regard to the effects of sin. He wished them to learn their own weaknesses and their need of Divine assistance. So He permitted them to take their own course of waywardness and sin, in order that they might see that it would result in depravity of mind, body and morals, that it would lead them down the broad road to destruction.—Matthew 7:13, 14.

If God had not intervened, had not provided a recovery, all mankind would have slipped down that broad road to eternal ruin and death—death, not eternal torture. God never provided eternal torture for anybody. A great mistake has been made regarding this matter. During the night of the Dark Ages people got the idea that God had purposed a devilish thing—that He had provided a way for the vast majority to slip down to an eternity of torment. Once born, they could not help themselves, unless they were of the Elect. But not so! As Bible students, we are finding that the Bible most positively and clearly declares that "the wages of sin is death"; that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die"; that the broad road leads to destruction.—Romans 6:23; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; 2 Thessalonians 1:9; Proverbs 2:22; Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6, 10.

The Justice of God has been manifested ever since the fall of man. The Power and the Wisdom of God are manifested in all His great works of creation, in the planetary systems, in the human body. But the Love of God, the Grace of God, had not been made manifest until our Lord Jesus came; and it is not manifested even yet to the whole world. Only a comparatively few have any clear perception of the grace of God as is shines in the face of our Lord Jesus Christ.

REVEALMENT OF TRUTH GRADUAL.

When our Lord came to earth to become the Messiah and to die for mankind, even His Apostles were slow to grasp the real import of His mission. (Luke 24:25-27). They could not comprehend that it was necessary for Him to die as a Ransom-price for Adam and his race. When He was crucified, they were sadly disappointed; for they had hoped that the Man Jesus would set up God's Kinghom upon earth, would deliver the Jews from the Roman yoke and would use Israel for the blessing of the world. They hoped soon to reign with Jesus in His Kingdom. After His resurrection they understood much more clearly. But it was not until after Pentecost that they grasped the matter in full. Then they saw that He could not set up His Kingdom to bless the world until first He became the Redeemer of mankind by dying for them; and that they themselves could not reign with Him until they had first suffered with Him and died with Him.

The disciples then saw that as only one man—Adam—was sentenced to death—all others dying in him—so the death of only one man was necessary as a Ransom, that the whole world might be purchased back from death. (1 Corinthians 15:21, 22; Romans 5:12, 18.) The penalty for sin is death. Our Lord Jesus died, and thus laid down the sufficiency of price on behalf of the whole world. God had dealt with only the one man—Adam. Only one man had been sentenced—Adam. When Jesus died, therefore, He was the equivalent, or corresponding price to Father Adam. His death fully offset the matter. It was sufficient to procure the release of the whole world, for the whole world was under condemnation, under the curse. Through the one man sin had entered the world. Therefore the death of the Man Christ Jesus furnished the price sufficient to ransom Adam and all his race.

Such is the beautiful picture that God gives us in His Word—the beautiful Story of the operation of His grace toward man. The philisophy of God's great Plan is indeed clearer today than ever before; for the fulfilment of all its parts is at hand. The more we study the wonderful Plan of God for human salvation, the more we grasp its fulness, the more are we in love with the glorious character of our Heavenly Father. As we see its lengths, breadths, heights and depths, we are truly "lost in wonder, love and praise"!

OPERATION OF GOD'S GRACE.

As we have just said, this grace of God has as yet appeared only to a few, a "little flock." But the revelation of His grace to these does not mean that God will overlook all their sins and imperfections, call them to Himself and give them all His gracious promises, just as they are by nature. The grace of God does not operate in that way. There has been a Grace Fund provided in the death of Christ, sufficient not only for the sins and imperfections of this class, but for the whole world. But God has His own arrangement as to how the merit of Jesus' death is to be applied.

Thus far the death of Christ has only opened up the "narrow way" for the Church, and provided for their cleansing. The Lord is now seeking those who have the courage and the strength to climb this rugged pathway. (Luke 13:24.) All the grace of God now manifested is in this narrow way. Of course, the world are recipients of God's unmerited favor in the sense that He causes the sun to shine upon the evil and the good, and sends his rain upon the just and the unjust. He treats the whole world graciously; but He is receiving none into His favor now except those who have entered the strait gate and the narrow way.

God has not sent His Message of Grace to the heathen nations save to a very limited degree. It was first sent to the Jews, and took out from amongst them the "Israelites indeed." Then the nation of Israel was set aside and left in the dark regarding the Message of the Gospel Age. God then opened the door of opportunity to the Gentiles, sending the Gospel principally to the civilized nations of Europe and later to America. He knew what parts of the world would be most fruitful as respected His present Message.

The Apostle Paul explains why it is that all mankind do not hear the Message. "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) Even in the so-called civilized nations, the great majority have no ears to hear the Message of God's grace; for they are under the same blinding influences. Only here and there is there a truly hearing ear. This class God is now taking out of the world to be a people for His name—"a peculiar people, zealous of good works."—Acts 15:13-17; Titus 2:14.

Some who for a time seem not to heed the Message come later on to have a hearing ear. Perhaps something has occurred that changes the current of thought and purpose. Today there are many who have an ear to hear who did not have it a few years ago. The great European war has brought many people to their senses. They are listening now and asking, "What does this war mean?" Others have been sobered and set to thinking by severe afflictions. Some have lost friends whom they almost idolized. But these sorrows and sudden awakenings have proved to be their greatest blessings; for by these experiences their hearts have been turned to the Lord.

MEANING OF THE NAME CHRISTIAN.

It is only with this peculiar people that the Lord is now dealing. The merit of Christ has as yet been applied only for these. Some may ask, "Do you mean that good, moral people, honest in their business and clean in their lives, are not Christians unless they are walking in this narrow way of self-sacrifice?" Yes, we answer. Unless they have taken the definite pathway marked out by our Lord Jesus, they are not walking in His steps. (Matthew 16:24.) Hence they are not Christians; for a Christian is a follower of Christ. To none others than the followers of the Master has God's grace come.

As others have watched God's dealings with His own people, they may have learned lessons of morality and obedience. Perhaps they have learned that fire burns, that sin brings punishment, and so have learned to walk decently and honestly; but they are still in the broad road. The only way to get out of that broad road is to get into the narrow way; and they get into the narrow way by accepting Jesus Christ as their Savior and making a full consecration of their wills and of their lives to God.

After one has entered the narrow way, there is still more for the grace of God to do for him. After one has come into Christ he is a New Creature. Of itself this New Creature needs no grace. But this new "mind of Christ" must tabernacle in an imperfect earthly body, which needs continual cleansing from earthly defilements. The New Creature must use all the force of the new will to control the thoughts, words and action of the mortal body in order to serve and glorify God properly. But while he is in the imperfect flesh, he cannot perform perfect deeds, even as the best musician cannot render a perfect melody on a very imperfect instrument.

As the Apostle says, "Ye cannot do the things that ye would." (Galatians 5:17). But we are to fill up the measure of our ability, by Divine assistance. If we do this, we are reckoned perfect, through the imputed merit of Christ. This is where the grace of God comes in, after we have become disciples of our Lord Jesus. The Lord has arranged that if we are overtaken in a fault, we are to go to the Throne of Heavenly Grace to obtain mercy and help for every time of need. Thus "the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin."—Hebrews 4:16; 1 John 1:7.

As we apply daily for forgiveness for our unwitting transgressions, the blood of Christ keeps us cleansed. If we have not willingly co-operated in the sin, God will freely forgive us. If we have yielded our will to any extent, we must suffer stripes proportionate to the degree of wilfulness; for God will not cover wilful sins with Christ's merit. Fully wilful sin in a child of God would mean to such a one the Second Death. So we see the responsibility resting upon each one who has become a member of the Body of Christ. He must make good or lose life altogether. This is a very solemn thought.

The true Christian learns valuable lessons from his mistakes, and gradually grows strong in the Lord. As in his daily experience he notes the loving providences of God, his faith is increased and his love deepened. Appreciating more and more his own weaknesses, he learns not to trust in self, but in the Lord alone. He gains greater control over his natural infirmities of character, and thus is gradually transformed into the likeness of Christ. Thus "the grace of God that bringeth salvation" is made applicable to him.

RICHES OF DIVINE GRACE.

This salvation has not yet been brought to the children of God, however. As yet they are "saved by hope" only. (Romans 8:24.) We are not yet fully delivered. When we receive our new bodies and are freed from all imperfections, we shall be saved in the complete sense. The Apostle Peter speaks of this salvation as the grace which is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Peter 1:13.) So it was still future in the Apostle's day. But we believe that today we are very near to the revelation of Jesus Christ, and that the last members of the body of Christ will soon be with Him in glory. As they lay down their consecrated lives in death, they "will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye"; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 Corinthians 15:50-54.

This salvation we could never get ourselves. We receive it only through the grace, mercy and favor of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Whoever becomes a member of the glorified Church, the Bride of Christ, becomes a joint-heir with our Lord "to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away."—1 Peter 1:4; Romans 8-17.

But the grace of God only begins with the Church. Just as soon as these are glorified with their Lord and Head, the narrow way will be out of commission at once; and another way will be opened up—the Highways of Holiness, upon which men shall walk in the glorious New Age soon to be ushered in. (Isaiah 35:5-10.) This great Highway will lead up to perfection of human nature; for the blessing of the world will not be a change of nature, as with the Church, but will be the attainment of perfect human life and an Edenic earth. The redeemed of the earth shall walk upon this great Highway, which shall lead to life everlasting upon the earthly plane. But only the willingly obedient shall walk up this Highway. The willfully disobedient shall be destroyed. Oh, the grace of God is a wonderful thing! the grace that bringeth salvation to the entire fallen race, giving each member thereof a full individual opportunity to attain life everlasting.

BEECHER'S MINISTERIAL CAREER.

Beecher's public career was eventful, but he created no unusual stir like Wesley, Arminius and Luther, yet he created many enemies. He came from a tribe of preachers, and had five brothers in the pulpit. His father Lyman, was president of the Lane Theological Seminary at Cincinnati; Henry Ward acted as assistant. In this occupation both men made a discovery. Lyman discovered the value of his son in whom he was disappointed in not being able to pass the preparatory examinations into Yale of which Lyman was a graduate; he was a flower of slow growth and his value was not noticed until he matured. Henry Ward made the discovery that his father was fettered to the theology of the institution he represented—he was not a free man. The recognition of this fact affected young Beecher, and he decided to be a free man: the word LIBERTY loomed large on the horizon. He left the Seminary at twenty three years of age and launched into the open air of the world with high hopes, faith, a healthy and energetic man. He preached two years at Lawrenceburg, Indiana (Congregational); six years in Indianapolis; and forty-three years in Plymouth Church, in Brooklyn, (Congregational); and also occupied Brooklyn Tabernacle, the site later occupied by Talmage and finally by Pastor Russell. He traveled extensively in lecture tours with Major James B. Pond, an ex-army officer—of a rough and rustic sort, who looked after the renting of auditoriums, collections at the doors, etc.

Beecher, in common with Russell, was reared in the Congregational Church. The polity of this denomination we have noted in Essay IV to be Independent; that is to say, each individual congregation stands independent in government and theology. Each decide the nature of their government and adopt their teaching respectively, and from these decisions there is no appeal; their government has been Democratic and their creed Calvinism in a modified form. The various congregations are held together—not by a superior ecclesiastical body, for they recognize none—but by felowship; to this end they have conferences; they meet together to give and take advice—not to enact laws. These social and intellectual assemblies, Beecher has likened to a family reunion, or the relation of families of a village; if one family misbehaves the other refuses to visit and fellowship—these are the only penalties if a congregation strays very far from their traditional teachings and customs. Their minister has no ecclesiastical power beyond a single vote and is regarded as a layman elected to be minister because he is apt to teach. Russell was elected pastor by the "Bible House" congregation at Pittsburgh, Pa., and this "Independent" congregation became isolated from the Congregational Church because of his teachings. Beecher was elected by the Plymouth Church and likewise broke away from the traditional teachings of the Congregational Church, and, like Russell, retained the democratic government. Beecher distinguished himself by emphasizing the love of God above His Justice, as exemplified in the life of Christ, and insisted on it as an example instead of centering on His sacrificial death, as did Russell. In short Beecher's heart revolted against New England theology and leaned to the other extreme, and Russell's head revolted against the same Theology and restores the balance by reinstating the Sacrificial Death of Christ as the cornerstone of theology from a rational and altruistic standpoint, which proves Beecher's contention that God is a God of Love.

History teaches that the strong men who influence the times in which they live have learned the other way and give place to but one thing at a time and retain it to the exclusion of others, and this applies to Beecher. For instance, Wesley put the breath of life into the galvanized religion of the state church of England by his great heart and enthusiasm, but retained its government. The founders of the Congregational church gave England a Democratic church government but retained the cold and stiff creeds of England; their government, however, was adopted by the Unitarians of England, but they lacked the heart phase of religion. Congregationalism, Unitarianism and Methodism were all imported to the New England states and was the dominate religious forces. The ritual of ceremony and the cold creeds of New England, inherited from Calvin, put a damper on the heart phase of Methodism which changed into the fanaticism of the camp meeting craze and developed into the American Chautauquas; and this ceremony and theology of Calvin also revived Unitarianism in the person of Dr. Channing of Boston. Lyman Beecher set out to head off the spread of Unitarianism and effected a division of the Presbyterian Church—rent it into the old and new school factions. From this new faction Henry Ward broke away and revives Wesley's heart religion fused with many of the thesis of the Unitarian school, expressed by Theodore Parker, and coupled it with Independent church movement. Unitarian church polity was also congregational, but was cold and rational in doctrine. These are the principal things that Beecher tinctured with his mind, and to do this he must of necessity lean the other way; he magnified the Love of God by his humanitarian spirit.

In other words, Calvanism is God's Justice magnified and of its proper proportions. Unitarianism is God's Wisdom magnified out of its proper state. Wesleyism and Beecherism is God's Love isolated from His other attributes. These being apart and extreme statements color each other, there is no denomination formed in the Reformation that has not been benefitted by the work of Wesley, Chauning and Beecher. Russelism is God's Wisdom, Justice and Love placed in relation and blended, and is now making inroads upon the teaching of other creeds as well as taking the best members from the existing denominations, and is an antidote for Destructive Higher Criticism, which Beecher did much to promote, and in fact anticipate. The so-called Higher Criticism is a fusing of Orthodoxy and Darwinism and Henry Drummond was a pioneer in this by Christianizing the doctrine of Evolution as applied to the creation of Man. Beecher in not supplying a philosophic system of thought, prepared the way for the Darwinism to make inroads into orthodoxy—in fact he anticipated much of what Drummond taught.

BEECHER ANTICIPATES DRUMMONDISM.

Lyman Abbott informs us that "Mr. Beecher was one of the first ministers in the Christian Church, if not the very first in this country, to advocate the doctrine of evolution as a doctrine which, so far as being inimcal to the cause of Christ, was certain to prove its friend and supporter. The first reference to Mr. Beecher's public teaching which I have been able to find, that indicates an acceptance or an inclination to accept the doctrine of evolution, was an incidental reference in a Sunday morning sermon, March 11th, 1860." From this statement it is evident that Beecher kept abreast with the times for, this was just one year after Darwin published his "Origin of Species" (1859), and Spencer's "First Principles" was published in 1860. These scholarly works were being translated into the common language of the people through the editorials and magazine articles, and the great heart of Beecher having revolted against the Puritan theology, one principally to it being an extreme statement by teaching the doctrine of Total Depravity in connection with the Fall, led him to reject both. Having no definite theological concept to defend, and in fact had an antipathy for philosophy in his younger days, when the war between Science and Orthodoxy broke out, he was led to see the necessity of a philosophical system to defend the faith from the attacks of those of an agnostic tendency, and sets about to formulate one. We hear him say: "I am not thinking of man, but of mankind; I am not in sympathy alone with the church, but the whole human family. And my longing, as it has been for many years (indicating that he had been effected by Darwinism for some time before publically teaching it) for such teaching and such philosophies as shall lead the whole human race to a higher and nobler condition."

Beecher made the mistake of magnifying the Love of God, almost to the exclusion of His Wisdom and Justice, by centering on the life of Christ; and the culminating effects of this resulted in developing a taste for Darwinism. His lack of appreciation of the doctrines of the Fall and the necessity of the Atoning Blood of Christ as a reconciliation for sin, was clearly stated in the sermon "The Evolution of the New Testament," delivered in 1873. This sermon contains the essence of Henry Drummond's

CITY EMPLOYES READY FOR BIG ORGANIZATION

Plans Being Arranged and General Meeting to be Called to Complete Work and Elect Officers.

The organization being formed by the City employes was halted during the past week owing to the primary election Tuesday and there were some who were disposed to criticise the movement with a misguided impression that the organization was to be whipped into activity for the organization candidates at this time.

There was no intention of doing this but the impression prevails the organization can be completed and in splendid condition for the November election in which there will be a Presidential candidate in addition to a United States Senator, Congressman and candidate to the General Assembly with state offices to fill.

The first opportunity for effective work will come in November but there will not be a chance for the organization in local work until the Mayorality campaign and the selection of a Mayor promises some very large things and some big doings. It is in a local contest that the organization of employes will be able to demonstrate its worth and it will be in such a battle that the feasibility of such an organization will be put to the most vital test. There are many skeptical expressions as to its practical value and there are many enthusiastic sponsors for the organization and its future good.

However, under the system being cunningly pushed forward by a small clique through what is craftily termed the efficiency bureau there is nothing else for employes to do in order to keep in office, but to organize themselves against the corrupt practices of alleged efficiency.

The organization of the employes is the only thing to forestall the destruction of efficiency by those who are paid to introduce efficiency but who are drawing the money from taxpayers under false pretense.

It is claimed that every department has well under way the nucleus of an organization and by the time the word is sent throughout the departments, every employe will be ready to enlist. The plans are to have each department elect three delegates and these three shall meet with a similar number of delegates from each of the departments. As there are several departments under each head the number of delegates will be quite large. For instance the police and firemen will be under the Department of Public Safety and there are many others such as the Bureau of Health and the Pure Food, Plumbing and Sanitary and each will have its own representatives.

The place for meeting will in all probability be in the Council Chamber and at this meeting the plans will be introduced. There are those who believe that the first meeting should not be in such a public place as the Council Chamber and an effort is being made to have the first meeting kept down to but a few until matters are in shape after which a large public meeting should be called and the plans for the complete organization submitted to the employes for their final consideration.

This would mean the elimination of considerable labor and anxiety and besides matters would be in shape so that the members would not be bothered about the details until they were ready to be acted upon.

The election of officers is not essential at the present time although this is important and will be arranged for at a general meeting. There are those who are willing to throw the organization open to voters who are not on the payroll but this is to be determined at an early conference. The most interesting part is the formation of the organization and while it is the desire that no names be mentioned now a list will be given out in the very near future.

Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong has already given his approval for an organization such as the employes have in mind and Chairman Samuel C. Jamison stands ready to back such while Director Frank Booth, of the Department of Supplies, is an enthusiast and suggests that nothing will be lost by organizing and seeing what can be done in order that the employes may be given some chance against the system now in vogue.

There are others in responsible positions who are very favorable to the plan but they will not be admitted. The heads of the departments are not to be entitled to recognition and this will exclude quite a number whose influence may be detrimental at times were the heads of the departments to allie themselves on one side or the other and attempt to exercise their personal and political influence. This is the most dangerous part of the organization and it is one that must be avoided. Of course it must be understood from the start that employes as a rule are loyal to the administration and if they are not, there is disaster ahead as no administration will tolerate men who are not faithful. Mayor Armstrong has men about him at present who are not loyal and there are some of this element going about with a stilletto in the sleeve. The Mayor it is said is powerless to protect himself but the Mayor has the power to destroy an appropriation and he may be persuaded to do that very thing in the next budget. There are demands being made upon Mayor Armstrong for a cleaning up and a reading-out of some of the departments. The Mayor may be persuaded to do this and if he does there will be some promising plums to hand out.

SATURDAY IS THE CLOSE OF THE BIG CONTEST

All is in Readiness to Award the Big Prizes--Judges are Selected. Read Below.

The Tribune's Big Prize Contest will be brought to a close on the evening of May 20th at 6 o'clock. The local candidates must have all their business in by that time and the out-of-town candidates must mail their business in order that it will reach here not later than Monday the 22nd.

The votes will be counted and the prizes awarded on Monday afternoon, May 22nd. The names of the judges who will preside are given below. These men are all uninterested parties and have been selected because of their high public standing and character and in whom the public has implicit faith. They have been in public office for many years and have shown by their deeds that they are honest and care nothing, but which is right.

NO PERSONAL CHECKS ACCEPTED.

No personal checks will be accepted after Friday, May 19th. Make all your business CERTIFIED CHECKS or P. O. MONEY ORDERS. This rule must be strictly adhered to as no business will be counted otherwise.

CHECK YOUR BUSINESS.

Check all your business that you have sent in so that in case of error, we will be able to check up all mistakes. We want every candidate to get all the votes that they have coming to them.

WHEN PRIZES WILL BE AWARDED.

Prizes will be awarded the same day they are won. Out of town candidates will be notified immediately and arrangements for shipping will be made at once.

DO YOU REALLY WANT ONE OF THESE CARS.

If you do, take one. Lot of the candidates think perhaps that these cars are already won and they do not have a chance. You are mistaken in this matter as they are just as much yours as any one else and if you will put on a little extra speed you can win out very easily. By the time that this reaches you it will be your last chance to send in your business as all out-of-town business must be in by noon Monday. Don't you think that a few too many votes would be better than a few too little? Better be sure that you have a plenty. So that on Tuesday morning when you know the winners you won't have to think if I had sent in a few more votes I would have won. If you do your best that is all anybody can do, but be sure that you do your best.

The names of the judges are as follows:

Hon, Edward D. Friebertshauser, Treasurer of Allegheny County, Allegheny County Court House, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Hon. John D. Graham, Recorder of Deeds of Allegheny County, Allegheny County Court House, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Labor Disputes Are Rare in England

Important Meeting of British Labor's Trisle Alliance

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, May 7, 1916.

Nothing much has been moving particularly in this country during the past week on the labor side of things. The Clyde strike seems to now be over although it does not follow that the wholesale deportation of strike leaders and the imprisonment of other agitators has conduced to calmness of feeling in some quarters of Glasgow. On the whole it may be said that the Clyde workers, both in Glasgow and outside, are keenly alive to the unwisdom of doing anything that will for any prolonged time hold up the supply of munitions for the army. As a result trade grievances are kept down to a minimum and it is only the fiery or perfervid few who take the bit between their teeth. It must also be remembered in connection with these much-discussed Clyde disputes of late that the regular trade unions frowned upon them and that the strikers, where they were members of these old unions, received no striking pay or allowance. The disputes were organized by men mainly outside the regular official leaders of the unions. This of course is not to their discredit but by way of explanation.

Up and down the country small labor disputes continue to take place but they are circumscribed both as to area and space. Generally they are movements for two, three or four cents per hour higher wages and generally also they finish up by the employers granting half the increase the men demand. So accustomed have trade unionists in this country now become to finding their employers give one cent where they, the men, asked for two that the rule is very largely now to demand double what they expect so that in the end everybody is satisfied. Certainly no labor disputes of late, apart perhaps from the Clyde trouble, have aroused any deep angry feelings on either side. As usual, the workmen recognize that their employers will not pay them higher money unless they are compelled to; but the chief outstanding factor in obtaining higher wages now is not so much the strike as the prosperity of business.

Never before in this country was the area of employment so great. It may be said that there are no unemployed here; neither have there been for the past twelve months. A few men in skilled trades here and there might by accident find themselves out of work for a few days or a week but that is purely accidental. Not only have all the regular workers been absorbed either by industry or the army, but hosts of new ones have come along on the lines already mentioned in these columns. The coming of the girl and woman worker is one of the most remarkable features of the present day in Great Britain. All round London and, in fact, all round the other big centers of industrial population in the country, factories rise almost in a night. You pass a green field one morning and see cows grazing there; you go by the same place three months afterwards and find rows of factories there crammed with diligent and painstaking girls and women with a few male overseers. In most cases they are occupied with turning out munitions of war—a very wide elastic term—whilst in others they are privately employed replacing goods formerly imported and doing things of that kind.

It is estimated that during the last twelve months easily a million fresh workers have come into employment. There have been some peculiar shiftings of occupation also. Stenographers and milliners have become conductors or guards of omnibuses or street railway cars or they have become engineers in factories; and five hundred other weird transpositions could be recorded as a result of the war and the national call for more workers in view of the denuding of labor supplies in the country by enlistments in the army.

The first full meeting of the Triple Labor Alliance, comprising the executive committees of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, the National Union of Railwaymen, and the Transport Workers' Federation, was held at the Westminster Palace Hotel, London, on April 26th, under the presidency of Robert Smillie (Miners' Federation). Consideration was given to the general policy of the Alliance, especially in relation to after-the-war problems. The meeting considered the memorandum drawn up by the

STRIKERS RETURNING; SOLDIERS GONE HOME

Men in Westinghouse Plants Going Back and Other Plants Working While Merrick is in Jail.

The strikers who responded to the call on May 1 have practically all returned to work and the peace outlook is so favorable that the National Guards have been ordered home from the strike zone and there is every indication of all plants being operated in full with abundance of orders for overtime.

The men employed by the Westinghouse interests have taken their last vote and the majority was so large for returning that many of those who had intended to still remain out practically decided to join with these who desired to return.

The men employed in the plant of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company were the first to return and these were followed by the great army employed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company while the men in the Union Switch and Signal Company were not so well satisfied and showed signs of remaining out despite the alluring offer made by the officials. However, there is now every indication that the few still remaining out will return and that the community will settle down to real prosperity.

The strike really failed for want of competent and experienced leadership and the end was predicted when one radical rabid Merrick, with revolver and shooting paraphernalia injected his presence into the dispute. Had the trouble been left to Secretary Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, the matter would have been a success and would have called forth a moral sentiment that would have worked great good both to the men on strike and the community, but when radical socialism and anarchy was flaunted into the teeth of a reputable, law-abiding, conservative christian community, the better class could quickly see a worthy cause being destroyed.

It is the destructive Merrick, who is charged with inciting the foreign element to riot and bloodshed, and this conduct on the part of the thoughtless and irresponsible gave abundance of excuses to the employers to demand protection for life and property.

The absurdity of the raid made by the irresponsible marching strikers is seen when it is known that some of the plants that were entered and the men driven from work were plants in which a scale of wages was already in force and the men were working only eight hours a day. This demonstration was entirely wrong. It lacked conservative leadership and that it was fatal is apparent by the fact that two men were killed when the rioters attempted to scale the wall of the Edgar-Thompson works and many others were injured.

The men who responded to a strike call at the Pressed Steel Car works in McKees Rocks remained out for several days, but they have decided to return and the manner in which Superintendent J. B. Rider handled the situation is very creditable. No special police were called to duty and there was no destructive and rabid Merrick on hand. Conservative union men regard this rabid socialistic propaganda as espoused by Merrick responsible for wrecking all the success that could be anticipated, and when men follow such clamorings they declare their battle is absolutely hopeless.

Secretary Morrison came from Washington to see what could be done but he left in despair after reviewing the conditions and learning for himself of the radical and thoughtless vaporings of men who had absolutely no interest in the strike save the notoriety they were able to acquire through the newspapers.

This gang brought to the workmen irreparable injury and a complete overthrow of all good intentions. An advance might have been granted by more peaceful methods. The men not only lost the time, acquired an unfavorable impression, but sacrificed and advance that might have been expected and indeed showed the employers a weakness to enforce any future demands.

That the strike was a blunder under the leadership is certain and the pity is that the men are the real sufferers while Merrick is languishing in the Allegheny County Jail where many of the most conservative men are convinced is the best place for him. There is no expression of sympathy for him and there seems, too, but few interested as to the outcome of the case pending against him which involves inciting riot.

STATE BOARD RULING OPPOSED BY UNIONS

WORCESTER, Mass., May 16.—The state board of conciliation and arbitration has issued a "certificate of normality" to the Crompton & Knowles loom works, whose employes have been on strike for wage increases since last October.

The state law provides that where a strike exists the employer must state this fact when advertising for employes. An amendment to this law, however, provides that:

"The provision of this act shall cease to be operative when the state board of conciliation and arbitration shall determine that the business of the employer, in respect to which the strike or other labor troubles occurred, is being carried on in the normal and usual manner and to normal and usual extent. Said board shall determine this question as soon as may be, upon the application of the employer."

Under this amendment the state board rules that the Crompton & Knowles concern has resumed its normal conditions and the law relative to advertising for employes does not apply. The strikers deny that the plant is operating under normal conditions and protest against the board's action. They say this statute was intended to be of service to workers in their effort to improve conditions, but it has lost its force under present rulings which are made without confering with the men on strike. The Worcester Labor News says the decision practically declares the strike off, as far as the state is concerned.

Armed with its "certificate of normality" the Crompton & Knowles management can now point to this state document in its denial of the workers' claim that usual conditions do not exist in this plant or that a strike really exists.

THE EXECUTION OF JESUS.

REPORT OF CAIPHAS TO THE SANHEDRIM CONCERNIG THE EXECUTION OF JESUS.

"Caiaphas, Priest of the Most High God, to the Masters of Israel, greeting: In obedience to your demands for a reason for my action in the case of Jesus of Nazareth, and in defense of my conduct, I beg leave to submit the following for your consideration: I would assure you that it was not on account of personal malice, envy, or hate, that existed in my own nature, nor for the want of a willingness upon my part to conform to the Jewish law in its strictest sense. I had but very little personal knowledge of the Nazarene. The most I knew of this man was from outside sources. Nor was it because he claimed to be King of the Jews, nor because he said he was the Son of God—I would that he were—nor because he prophesied or ignored the holy temple. No, nor all of these combined. There is a cause, and a more weighty matter, back of all these things that controlled my action in the matter. Therefore, I hope you will investigate strictly on legal principles the reasons that I may give.

"In order that you may be able to see and weigh the question fully, and remember the responsibility that rests upon me according to the laws of our nation, I will ask you to go back with me to the chronicles of our history as a commonwealth. First, our faith is pledged to one living and true God, this God being indescribable, unchangeable, incomprehensible, and, of course, unnameable. But yet in our daily communications with, and our applications to Him, He has been pleased to give us His name, or His several names, according to His relations to us, and they are found nowhere, only in the ark of His holy temple—there where He presents to us His strength and power. He calls himself Eloi, which means almighty in strength; that He can do what He will without effort; that He does the greatest thing as easy as He does the least. This makes Him different from all beings. In His holy ark He records Himself Elaah—existence without beginning, and no contingency as to His end. Again, He writes Himself Hhelejon—unchangeable; that is nothing but His own will can change Him. Again, He records His name Jah—knowledge that comprehends without being comprehended. Again He is written Adonia—full and free, and freely full. Combining the several names we have Jehovah—the Hebrew God. A man never can go wrong while he can pronounce this name in its comprehensive sense. This is where the Zealots, the Sadducees, and Essenes had their origin, and it is the want of being able to pronounce this name in its comprehensive sense that causes so much dissension among us Jews. Jesus could pronounce this name, but he stole it out of the temple, as I am creditably informed.

"But the object in calling your attention to pronouncing this name, with all its bearings, may be seen if we turn to the third Book of Leviticus, section 10, wherein is the special order made by our God to Moses, that we should offer the bullock, the ram, the flour and oil, and the people should fast seven days, and this should be kaphar, or atonement for the sins of all the people. Now, unless Moses was deceived, he has deceived us, or Jesus of Nazareth is a false teacher; for all he teaches is metanoeite, metanoeite, as though a man's being sorry for a crime would make restitution to the offended party. A man might repent ever so much, but what good would that do toward healing the man he had injured? None in the least. This mode of making atonement was ordained of God and revealed to Moses; but if man has nothing to do but to repent, the disease carries its own remedy with it. So a man can sin as often as he may wish to. Look at the first book, section 3: 'And God said to Abraham, by his own mouth, that each and all that were circumcised by the cutting of the prepuce should be saved.' This should be the seal of the covenant. Now, if this is not true, God must go against His own contract, violate His own promises, as well as deceive the faith and cheat the obedience of His own children. This is all so, if Jesus's teaching be true, for he sets up table (baptims) as the seal of God, I refer you to section 10, division first, where God said to Moses that He had changed the laws, converted the elements for the protection of His people, and with His own arm had delivered them out of a strong compact; and that they might remember, and that the generation to be born might remember and never forget to trust in Him when in danger, He said that once every year we should roast a kid or lamb, and eat it with unleavened bread, and this should be the sign that we would trust in Him all times of danger. Now Jesus teaches that common bread and wine are to be used instead thereof—a thing unheard of. And not only so, something that is altogether repugnant to God, and something that fosters drunkenness, and is well qualified to excite men's passions. And oh, ye Masters of Israel, but think once. Jesus calls himself the Son of God; claims to have been born of almah (the Hebrew word for virgin); that he and his Father are one—they are equal. These things will establish the following conclusions: If he is right, his Father is false. If they were one, then their teachings would be one; and if his teachings are true, God's must be wrong, or there are not those perfections in Him that we learn in pronouncing His holy name. By tolerating the teachings of Jesus, we say to the Romans that all of our former teachings are false; that the Hebrew's God is not to be trusted; that He is weak, wanting in forethought; that He is vacillating and not to be trusted, much less to be honored and obeyed. Thus the world will lose confidence in our God, and confidence in us as a religious people. This is impregnating the whole atmosphere with moral pollution. It does not only cut off, but blocks the way of all Jews from heaven; and not only this, it excludes our hope in the salvation of our forefathers, who have obeyed God in His ordinances, believed in His promises, and shouted in the triumphs of a holy life for fourteen hundred years. He entirely ignores God's holy temple—the house God had built by our forefathers under His own supervision, where He promised to dwell with His children, to hear their prayers, and to be pleased with their sacrifices. This temple is the bond of the Jews. Here all men come and be blessed. It is the earthly home of the souls of men—the place where men may hide from the storms of sin and persecution. This temple is where the foolish may learn wisdom; the place where the naked soul can be clothed, and where the hungry may be fed. This the grandest gift of our Father. Jesus completely ignores this temple; says the priests have made it a den of thieves; and sets up a sneer, and even scoffs at its sacred ordinances, and with a sort of selfish triumph says it shall be destroyed; and from his manner of saying it, I have no doubt he would be glad to see it quickly done. But what would be the condition of our people if this temple was removed? What would be the use of the priesthood if the temple was destroyed? Where would we find an answer by Urim and Thummim? How would the soul of man be purified, if the holy Bathkole, the Euroch of God should depart. There in that sacred temple of God he has been burning to the consuming of sin and the purifying of the heart since our return from bondage in Babylon. My argument is, if this temple is destroyed, or even forsaken by the Jews, we as a nation are utterly ruined. We might as well put our necks under the feet of idolatry and give up all hope

"One more subject I place before my Masters of Israel. Is it compatible with our religion, or is it consistent with philosophy, or admitted in His holy Word, that there can be more gods than one? When we pronounce Ele Laah Shaddiai-Hhelyon Adonai (which is Jehovah), there can be but one living God. By reference to section 6, No. four, He says by mouth of Moses, when he was all aglow with the glory of God—and remember He speaks either by mouth or quill; it is He that speaks, and not man—He says, 'The Lord your God is one God; there can be but one. I am and have been with you; I brought you up; I delivered you out of a strong compact; I delivered you out of their hand and kept you dry, while your enemies were drowned in the sea. I will not forsake you. I promised your father I would not. But if you forsake Me, then desolation will come upon you, and have you in swift destruction.' In section 5, three and four of David's Song of Joy: 'I am God alone. If I turn to the right or to the left, if I go down into the depths of the sea, or into the centre of the earth, or over the heavens, I should find no companion.' In section 3 He says: 'I am God alone, and alone I am God; beside Me there is no help for man nor angels.' Then in section 13, this command has been given: 'Thou shall pay to the Lord thy God once a year a half-shekel of silver, that thou and thy children, and all the strangers that are within thy gate, may know that there is no God beside Me, on whom they may call in time of danger.' Now, having all these commands and teachings from the very lips of God himself before my eyes, and being held responsible for the soundness of our doctrine and the proper inculcation of the same among the people of the Jews, what was I to do? Could I stand as the priest of the Most High God, and see your blessed religion perverted by an imposter? Could I stand and see the holy temple of our God deserted and forsaken? Could I stand and see all the holy ordinances, which had been appointed by our God for securing salvation to Israel, perverted by an imposter? All the blessed doctrines that were appointed for the government and instruction of the priesthood, thence to be imparted to the youth of our land, set aside, and that by one that could show no authority, only the authority of John the Baptists, who could give no authority only the one who sent him to baptize, and he could not tell who he was, nor whence he came? Hence you can see the responsible position that I as the high priest of God and of the Jewish Church occupied. According to our laws I was made responsible, and stood between my God and my people, to protect them in doctrine and government. I refer you to the capitulation made by the Sanhedrim and Augustus Caesar, in the holy Tosephta of the Talmuds. We submitted to taxation by the Romans, and the Romans are to protect our holy religion from foreign foes, in order that the holy temple or any of its sacred ordinances should never be molested, nor the holy city, Jerusalem, be polluted by Roman idolatry. Now the insinuating plan adopted by Jesus was well qualified to deceive the common people. It had already led many to forsake the temple, and hold her ordinances in derision, as well as to neglect the teachings of the priest or to pay the tithes for their supplies. He had already inculcated into the Jewish mind his pernicious ways of being saved to that extent that the Jewish cause was almost lost. There are two reasons for this: First, the people to whom he preached were an ignorant set, and knew but very little about doctrine of any kind. They are a restless sort of men, who are always finding fault and wanting something new, and never associate with the more enlightened part of the community in order to learn. Another reason of his having many followers is, his doctrines are congenial to unsanctified flesh. They are so suited to human nature that they require no sacrifices; they need not go to the temple to worship God; they need not fast, and they can when and where they please; they need pay no tithes to keep up the temple or the priesthood, but every man can be his own priest and worship God as he chooses. All this is so compatible with human nature that, although he has not been preaching over three years, he has more followers today than Abraham has, and they have become perfectly hostile toward the Jews that are faithful to their God; and, if it had not been for the Roman soldiers, on the day of his execution we would have had one of the bloodiest insurrections ever known to the Jewish commonwealth. I am told that there was never seen such a concourse of people assembled at Jerusalem as at the cross. One of my guards informs me that there were several hundred thousand, and, although there were two others crucified at the same time, Jesus was the great center of attraction. They would call out, 'Who is this Jesus of Nazareth? What is his crime.' Some of his friends would cry out, 'Nothing; he is being executed because he was a friend to the poor.' 'Take him down! Take him down,' they would cry out, and the soldiers would have to use their spears to keep them back. But when he yielded up the ghost he proved to all that he was hypostatical (that is, a human body), and the lodi curios had come from the iclandic covenant, and his trinitatis unitas was all a sham, for how could this unpronounced name suffer or be captured by men, or die, unless he is the one that is to die for the many? And if so, I was only accomplishing God's holy purposes, which exonerates me from guilt.

APPRCEIATIONS.

Elgin, Ills., May 12.

I am enclosing herewith a money order for the renewal of my subscription to your excellent paper. It is certainly up to the minute and a great factor at the present time in the work of enlighting the people on the principles of justice and equity.

Your willingness too, to give your time, energy and talent to the dissemination of these principles assuredly marks you as being a lover of righteousness. Such labors will surely be rewarded. I have deeply appreciated the sermons of Pastor Russell, he like yourself, is proving himself to be a valiant soldier for the truth, He like yourself, is proving himself the true light (the pure word of God) may shine more brightly on the path of the just. May the Lord continue to bless his efforts.

I have also read with keen interest the articles by N. E. Nelson and also add my opinion to others that they are worthy of being put into book form.

Wishing you continued success in your efforts on behalf of truth and righteousness and with sincere gratitude to you for continuing my paper beyond the time limit, I am

Yours Cordially,
M. H. WOODLEY.

Please find renewal for my subscription to the Tribune for another year. I wish to express my thanks for continuing to still forward the paper to me since I see my subscription has expired. May the Lord bless you in sending out this Light to others, and may you continue in this glorious work of spreading the Gospel Light.

Quincey, Ill., May 10.

As much as I will miss the Tribune having taken it for seven years, I must stop it on account of financial reasons. I take other papers printing our dear Pastor Russell's sermons and other matter from the pen of him and the dear Pilgrim Brothers, but as the Tribune was the first paper I ever took which printed the sermons in full and in such clear type, it will be like shutting the door in the face of a dear friend, and if God so wills I may be able to subscribe again in the near future. Thank you so much, dear Brother, for the fearless way in which you have defended Presnt Truth without fear or favor from any man "but who shall be afraid for if God be for us who can be against us."

With a loving adieu to you and all of the dear friends in Truth with whom I have become acquainted through the columns of the Tribune, I am your sister in His name, still determined to fight the good fight of faith.

MRS. L. M. CURRY.

St Louis, Mo., May 12.

I see by date and address tag on my paper my time of subscription expired April 19, 1916, and again we are without the price to renew. The many years of pleasant, helpful, profitable reading will never be forgotten, and we will miss the regular visits of the Labor Tribune. Some dear friend paid our last subscription, and we thank them for it; God will reward them. May our Heavenly Father bless you in all good things, for He is rich and will minister to all our needs. We are rich toward God in the spirit of a sound mind in Christ Jesus. We thnk you kindly for all your kindness in sending us the Tribune.

Yours in Him.

Will you please stop sending the Tribune to Mrs. W. E. Yates. Sister Burke has been sending it to me. I was not able to subscribe for it, and I did love to read Pastor Russell's sermons. Now she is sending me the Enterprise, and please don't send any more Tribunes. Stop the Tribune, please.

MRS. W. E. YATES.

As I am getting old and have not much of this world's goods to depnd on, but I cannot hardly get along without my dear old Tribune while I live, as it is such nice large printfor my old eyes who served me so well for nearly 88 years. Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformtion next place in the Divine Economy, as taught in the Bible, and, in order to have his fellow-churchmen countenance his theories of Evolution, must find some place in their system of thought to place Him. Drummond, in line with Beecher, says: "We are confronted at once with incarnation. There we find how the Christ-life hath clothed himself as matter, taking literal flesh and dwenlt among us. The incarnation is the life revealing the Type .... the revealing of God. But why should God be revealed. Why, indeed, but for man? Why but that 'beholding as in a glass the glory of the only begotten we should be changed into the same image'... It was necessary that Type should be the highest conceivable Type. In other words, the Type must be an ideal for all true human growth, effort and achievement, an ideal is acknowledged to be indispensible ... Believers and unbelievers have been compelled to acknowledge that Christianity holds up to the world the missing Type—The Perfect Man."

Beechr and Drummond singularly recognized and believed the nonsensical and absurd doctrine of the Trinity. They did not go to the opposite extreme of the Unitarian school of denying the pre-human existence of Christ—that He was a mere man, but in recognizing the perfection of Christ they fancied that this implied the doctrine of the Trinity, of the three Gods in one. They did not recognize that Jesus could be perfect, as a man like Adam before he fell from perfection, and not be in some mysterious way a part of the God-head. The fact is, as set forth by Pastor Russell in his Atonement Between God and Man, that the Logos was made flesh, a perfect human being as was Adam before he fell, and as such was an ideal pattern for Christians to follow and copy. This feature contained in thes quotations can be fully appreciated and admitted and the doctrine of the Trinity and the doctrine of Evolution associated therewith be denied. Jesus as an ideal human pattern is the thought expresed by the Master in reply to the question propounded by Phillip: "show us the Father." His reply was "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father." That is to say God was manifestd in the life of Christ in the sense that His character was exemplified in a manner that could be appreciated by the human mind, "if ye had known me, ye should have known the Father also." This applies to all human beings to the extent that they may be blessed with an inheritance of the original image and likeness of God in which Adam was created; this is the element of truth that our Unitarian friend have applied to Christ—that he was simply a Great Teacher. They did not recognize the Scripture which taught that Christ was a perfect human being as was Adam before the fall from his Edenic perfection; when he was "God manifested in the flesh."

The thought contained in these quotations of these men, Christ is an ideal pattern for the choice of the Christian to which he must grow and attain, does not answer to the prominence to which the Bible gives Him—it is only a partial statement of the Truth and the truth partly stated, in conjunction with error, makes the error the more insidius. There are many Scriptures which point specifically to the death of Christ that cannot be reconciled to the system of philosophy formulated by Beecher Drummond, and these they dispose of by denying the doctrine of the Fall.

Abbott, in justification of Beecher in posing as an expounder of the Bible in harmony with Darwinism as applied to the creation of Man, says, "The doctrine of Adam's Fall occupies no such fundamental position in the Bible as it occupies in the Puritan Creeds... The Fall of Adam is narrated in the third chapter of Genesis. It is not again referred to in the Old Testament, nor in the New Testament, except parenthetically by the Apostle Paul In the one chapter where the Apostle Paul treats of the nature of sin, the seventh chapter of Romans, he represents it as an emergence of the flesh against the spirit, a representation quite in harmony with the scientific doctrine of evolution." In order to be consistent with their profession as Bible students, these men dispose of the account of the Fall in Genesis by saying that it is an allegory, and then try to give an account of the New Testament Scripture of the death of Christ along some other line—Becher says that the suffering and death of Christ was for the purpose of "developing in men confidence in God and sympathy with Him." This is a very unsatisfactory account for the many statements concerning Christ's death made by Christ and His Apostles.

THE CRIPPLE AT LYSTRA

Acts 14:8-20—May 21.

History Repeats Itself—Paul and Barnabas Persecuted — Slandered and Maltreated by Professedly Religious Leaders—A Notable Miracle—Honesty Rewarded With Stones.

"He giveth power to the faint; and to him that hath no might He increaseth strength."—Isaiah 40:29. R. V.

LEAVING Antioch of Pisidia, Paul and Barnabas went to Iconium. There they preached the Word faithfully for several months; for it was an excellent field of labor. There also opposition was aroused. Finally the chief Jews and those Gentiles whom they influenced plotted to stone the missionaries as blasphemers. When Paul and Barnabas were made aware of the plot, they fled to Lystra, twenty miles away.

Arriving at Lystra, they began to preach the Gospel as courageously as though there had been no previous opposition. Amongst the auditors was a cripple who manifested much interest in the Apostle's words. St. Paul, perceiving that the man had faith, called out to him, "Stand upright on thy feet!"—a thing that the man had never done. He had the necessary faith and obeyed the Apostle's command. Thus a miracle resulted, to the astonishment of the assembly. The effect was electrical; and the people shouted in their own dialect, "The gods have come down to visit us!"

St. Paul Heals a Cripple.

Lystra figured as the scene of a mythological event, the tradition being that Jupiter and Mercury had once come to this city in the form of men, but had been refused lodgings until they came to the hut of a poor man, who entertained them to the best of his ability. They rewarded him by turning his hut into a gorgeous temple, and punished the others with a flood. This tradition was perpetuated by a statue of Jupiter at the city gate as its protecting god.

It is easy to discern how a comparatively ignorant and superstitious people might jump to the conclusion that the visit of the missionaries was a repetition of this visit of Jupiter and Mercury, handed down through tradition. They called St. Paul Mercury, because in their tradition Mercury was the speaker; and Barnabas they called Jupiter. Forthwith the priest of Jupiter prepared to offer a sacrifice of oxen before the statue of Jupiter, at the city gate, in honor of the supposed gods present with them as men.

The missionaries were probably preaching when they heard of the commotion in the city and of the sacrifice about to be offered. Most earnestly did they entreat the people to desist, explaining that they were nothing but imperfect men, that their mission was the very reverse of what the people supposed, and that Jupiter and Mercury were only products of ignorance and superstition. Running in amongst the excited people, with difficulty they restrained the populace from sacrificing in their honor.

Sudden Change of Sentiment.

Wisdom from on High guided Paul and Barnabas to know that it would be useless to quote the Scriptures to these people, who had no knowledge of them. The missionaries discoursed, therefore, on what the people could understand and appreciate. They explained that in times past the living God, who made all things, had permitted the nations to walk in their own ways. He had interfered particularly in the affairs of only the one nation—Israel—except so far as the others might cross His Plan. But now He was sending a Message of instruction to all nations, that they should turn from the vain traditions received from their ancestors, and should recognize the only true God and His Son, who had redeemed the world and whom the Father had ordained should in due time become its King, to bless all the families of the earth.

The sudden change of sentiment which resulted from the Apostle's plain statements of the Truth led the Lystrians to look at the missionaries with very different eyes. They may have felt rather mean about their own superstition, which had so quickly roused them to do reverence to men who repudiated it and acknowledged their unworthiness of it. While the populace was in this spirit, certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium came thither, explaining that the missionaries were imposters, working upon the credulity of the people. The populace was ready for just such leading in the reverse direction. As a result, St. Paul was stoned, and dragged outside of the city, where he was left for dead.

St. Paul, Stoned, Recovers.

As the disciples stood about the Apostle's prostrate form, supposing that he was dead, he arose and returned to the city. We are not to suppose that all of the citizens joined the mob which stoned him, although there must have been general sympathy on the part of the majority. The next day the missionaries went to Derbe, a distance of thirty-five miles. This implies that the Lord wrought a miracle in Paul, that he might continue his journey.

We are very much pleased with your paper, especially becase of the large space you devote to the printing of Pastor Russell's sermons which we enjoy so much, and which brings joy and comfort to so many hearts. Also the many letters from friends far and near are read with interest. Pittsburgh, Pa., May 10.

Wishing through your kind favor through this means to thak the one who has extended my subscription to your paper for another year. Also to send my appreciation to you for the religious features of the paper, as I have not missed a copy of it since you began to publish Pastor Russell's sermons in 1904 up to the present time. I am also glad to see from time to time the names of those who have dared to be a Daniel still on your list. Also glad to be able to recogaize the Lord's method of choosing, as the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh upon the heart. (1 Sam. 16:7; 1 Cor. 13 capt.) And such are found with the following spirit: A deaf and dumb person being asked to give his idea of forgiveness, took a pencil and wrote: "It is the sweetness which follows. Yield when trameled upon."

Very respectfully,
R. J. CRAIG.

I have this day renewed my subscription through the W. T. B. & T. Society. I wish to express my very sincere appreciation of your paper. I had thought of subscribing to another well known and much appreciated "Truth" paper, but being unable to subscribe to two, I felt that it would be greatly unjust to discard an old friend to pick up a new, so have continued, and will continue so long as I am able my subscription to the dear old Tribune, a paper which is always welcome in my home for its many good features, especially its Truth matter.

We appreciate the Tribune, first because the editor is striving for the rights of the people; pleading their cause, when they claim their rights in a reasonable way and not by physical force or intimidation. Second, by considering both sides of all questions—of right and law. Third, because he admits to his columns the defense of the Truth and teachings of the Bible by the champions of the I. B. S. A., especially C T Russell. Fourth, because the Tribune reaches many who understand little Jehova's Plan of the Ages—for the recovery of man from the Adamic conditions of death. John 5:28; Matthew 11:23-24). Fifth, Doubtless, the Tribune is a champion for free press, free speech and the free worship of God, as our government rightly administered, will defend. Now as the Tribune maintains this position, justice and right, he will get his reward in due time, because justice and right is the foundation of God's throne.

Youngstown, O., May 12,

I see by the tag on my Tribune that my subscription is up, so I hasten to renew it again, as we do not wish to be tardy. We know that money is required to run a newspaper. We wish to tell you that your loyalty in standing for the Truth on every subject, especially religious subject, is appreciated very highly. We always put in a good word for the "Old Reliable" as the first paper (so far as we know) to publish Pastor Russell's sermons, and for myself I thought it would show ingratitude on my part to stop the Tribune for any other paper, so you can depend on my subscription as long as you publish the sermons and as long as I can get the necessary amount to pay for it. With best wishes for the success of the Tribune, I remain

Yours truly,

WEEKLY ADDRESS of PASTOR RUSSELL of the LONDON TABERNACLE and of NEW YORK CITY — TEMPLE —

GOD'S BENEDICTION UPON HIS PEOPLE.

CONDITIONS POSITIVE FOR HAVING AND FOR ABIDING UNDER THIS BENEDICTION.

What This Means to Spiritual Israel—Not Earthly Prosperity and Luxuries, But Favor, Rest, Protection, Joy—Those Thus Blessed Must be Sympathetic and Helpful—The Only True Gospel—The New Commandment—The Christian's Proper Loyalty to His King and to His Comrades—Cultivation of Thankfulness Essential.

DAYTON, Ohio, May 14.—Pastor Russell spoke here today from the text, "The Lord bless thee and keep thee: the Lord make His face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace." (Numbers 6:24-26. He said:

While many blessings were pronounced in olden times upon the Natural Israelites, we are not to forget that Natural Isreal was a picture of Spiritual Israel. All of God's blessings to the natural seed of Abraham are still more abundantly applicable to the Church of Christ, which is the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. If the Lord shall bless us, will it mean that we shall have temporal prosperity? This is by no means certain; for temporal prosperity is not the promise to Spiritual Israel. To this class the blessing of the Lord is of a far higher kind than this.—1 Corinthians 10:11; Galatians 3.29; John 16.33.

The Lord's blessing was very richly with our Lord Jesus Christ and with His Apostles. Yet they did not have fine houses or chariots or great luxury of any kind. Therefore in wishing you the blessing of the Lord we are not wishing you earthly prosperity, but rather whatever the Lord may see best to give you as His children. The Bible treats the Church of Christ from the standpoint of a New Creation. Not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit, does our God deal with us. The Bible keeps before our minds continually the thought that those who have consecrated their hearts and their lives to the Lord are dead, so far as the flesh is concerned. (Romans 8:10; Ephesians 2:5; Colossians 3:3.) They are to be dead to fleshly hopes, ambitions and pursuits, but alive toward God, alive to the Heavenly promises and ambitions, alive to the glory, honor and immortality promised to the faithful overcomers, alive to the things which God set before us in His Word. To this class our text is applicable.

The thought of having the light of God's countenance upon us is a beautiful one. It means that He will look graciously toward us, will give us His favor, His protection, His blessings; that there shall be rest and peace in our hearts. It is inspiring to think that the Almighty One who inhabiteth Eternity is our Father; and that He is prepared to do for us everything that could be expected from an almighty, gracious, loving Father—provided that we are His children, that we have accepted His terms in Christ.

It does not matter to us, therefore, whether men shall bless us or whether they shall curse us. They cursed both our Lord Jesus and His Apostles. Moreover, it was largely the chief religionists who did this. Our Lord said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you." This hate came particularly from the religious world. "If ye were of the world," the Master continued, "the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15:18-25; 1 John 3:11-13.

GOD SEEKS STRONG CHARACTERS.

Our Lord proceeds to tell us that it is only a natural thing that darkness should be opposed to light. It has always been so, both physically and morally. Physical darkness cannot be in the same place with light; for the light swallows up the darkness, so to speak. Spiritual light works in the same way. If not quenched, it will scatter the darkness. In proportion, therefore, as your life emanates the light, in the home, at your work, or in any other place, there will be opposition from those who are under the dominion of the Prince of Darkness. (John 3:19-21; 1 John 2:8-11.) This class do not wish to have the light reveal and thus rebuke their darkness, do not wish to have the Lord's way; for they have plans and projects of their own that would be thwarted by the way of the Lord.

But it is not for us to succumb to opposition. On the contrary, we are to overcome, to be faithful to the light, and to let it shine before men. Only to the overcomer is the proposition made that he shall sit down with Christ in His Throne. (Revelation 3:21.) The Lord is not looking for a company of weaklings, without moral and spiritual backbone. Those who will sit with Him on the Throne must receive the new spirit, the new disposition, the new mind, the mind of Christ, and must maintain it.

While these overcomers will not be contentious in the objectionable sense of the word, they will nevertheless "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," as the Apostle enjoins. (Jude 3.) This they will not do with fleshly bitterness, however; for at the same time they will be developing the fruits of the Holy Spirit—patience, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, love. (Galatians 5:22, 23.) These are the fruits that must appear in those who have received the Spirit of God.

Our main overcoming is in ourselves. We are to rule our spirit, to exercise self-control, to "be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might." We are to overcome our own natural preferences, our weaknesses, the spirit of the world in ourselves. This is our first victory. Then there are things that we are to overcome in the way of opposition from the Adversary and his servants. (Romans 6:16.) We may never "give place to the Devil," never yield to that which would be in opposition to the Lord and His Cause. But we are to be ready to lay down our lives in support of "the Truth as it is in Christ Jesus." We are not to contend about little matters that are purely personal, and that would not affect the Truth. We should be ready to waive any personal preferences where no principal of rightcousness is involved. But where principle is at stake, we must stand fast. We may not compromise principle.

RESPONSIBILITY UPON CHRISTIANS.

When we look back to the time when the bishops of the Church began to call themselves "apostolic bishops," we can see what injury the compromising spirit has wrought in the world. Then it was that the Divine arrangement was set aside, and the creeds of men were substituted for God's Word. The Apostle Paul says, "The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." (2 Timothy 3:16, 17.) No matter who may seek to teach us, we must not receive the teaching except as it is proved to be in full accord with the Word of God. Men have been in error in the past, and often are in error now.

We are to look for a "thus saith the Lord" to be back of all teachers and teachings. If any one comes to us with any doctrine that cannot be proved by the words of our Lord Jesus or of the Apostles or of the Prophets, we should not accept it. St. Paul warns, "Though an angel from Heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Galatians 1:6-9.) Even the angels are not authorized to be the teachers of the Church, as shown in the Word of God.

As we seek to be overcomers, seek to be wholly faithful to the Lord, and as we trust His promises, we abide in His love. As our Lord Jesus said, "If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love." (John 15:10.) He did not force these commandments upon us. He merely pointed out to us the opportunity and the privilege of becoming His disciples. Then we voluntarily said, "Dear Lord, we desire to be Thy disciples. We desire to give up all earthly interests in order that we may share with Thee in Thy sacrifice. Enroll us amongst Thy followers—this is our prayer." After we have been accepted of the Lord, He says to us, "Now, in harmony with your request, I give you these commandments. They are your instructions as to how to walk in My ways. If you wish to be faithful disciples and to continue in My love, keep these injunctions."

While our Lord endorsed the Ten Commandments given to Natural Israel, He made it plain that the essence of them all was contained in the one broad command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength; and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." —Matthew 22:37-40; Luke 10:27.

THE "NEW COMMANDMENT."

To His disciples the Master said, "A new commandment I give unto you." (John 13: 34, 35.) This was an additional commandment, which went beyond the Law; for it means sacrificial love. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13.) This is the love which our Lord Jesus had for us. If we have the same love for the brethren that He manifested, then we have the self-sacrificing love. The Apostle John says, "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because He (Christ) laid down His life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16.) Our Master laid down His life for us. This is the measure of His love; and we are to love as He loved.

If we are true disciples, true followers of the Master, we shall be willing to lay down our lives for the brethren. We are to love and to desire to help all who love the Lord. We are to be forbearing and long-suffering with their frailties. Otherwise we cannot remain under the benediction of our text.

The Apostle Paul says that if we bite and devour one another we are in danger of being consumed one of another. (Galatians 5:15.) There would be a continual clash and warfare; and we would die as New Creatures. In order to glide along together without much friction we need much of the lubricating oil of the Holy Spirit. More and more we should learn to appreciate the good qualities of the Lord's people, to learn the lesson that if God shows favor to any one we have sufficient reason for loving that one.

Whether or not we can see anything to admire in another of the Lord's people is another question. No matter how uncouth one may be according to the flesh, we must love him and be patient with him until he learns to do better; for we must recognize that the Lord must have seen honesty of heart there or He would not have received that one as His child. This does not mean that we are to ignore serious faults in the brethren, and to make no kindly effort to assist them to overcome their weaknesses and blemishes; but that as long as they give evidence of trying to do the Lord's will we should be patient, sympathetic and brotherly with them.

THOUGHTS FOR CHRIST'S SOLDIERS.

There are many lessons which the children of God may learn from the armies of the warring European nations. What heroism those soldiers are manifesting as they fight for their various countries! Because of patriotism or some other motive, those men over there endure most terrible conditions. If men will thus endure from love of country, what should the Lord's people be willing to endure for the Heavenly country! If these soldiers do such things for earthly kings, princes and captains, what shall we do for our obligation as soldiers of the Cross of Christ?

As we consider how these soldiers of the warring armies labor under such unfavorable circumstances and conditions as are reported from time to time, in contrast with the favorable conditions which we enjoy, we should feel an increase of courage. We should be ashamed of anything like cowardice, of anything of disloyalty, when we see these earthly soldiers, without any such hope as inspires the soldiers of the Cross, without the backing of the Holy Spirit, yet displaying such courage and loyalty to their rulers. If they so endure, "what manner of persons ought we to be?"—2 Peter 3:11.

No matter what may have been their station in life, when these soldiers get into the ranks they are fighting for one general cause. If they had difficulties with one another before, this is all left behind in their desire to serve the common cause. In their fight against the common foe they must stand together; for they are enlisted under the direction of one commander, and they are fighting for the one ruler.

Likewise the followers of our Lord Jesus are all soldiers under one great Captain—our Lord. We are all enlisted under the banner of the Heavenly King, not for a few years, but until death. We have a common foe; and we are all children of one Father. We have not entered upon this warfare to escape hardship and trial. It is a battle all the way down to the close of our earthly life.

What should be our course, then? In our dealings with the brethren, should we not deal in holiness, in helpfulness, in sympathy, in love? Do we not all have trials of our own? Do not the brethren have trials and difficulties also? Then let us be loyal to them and to our King. "Let us show forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light," by being true soldiers in the army of Christ.

CLOSING WORDS OF BENEDICTION.

May the blessing of our text be our portion. May "the Lord bless thee and keep thee!" May each one of us enjoy the blessing of the Lord day by day! But should any one desire to leave Him at any time, He will not hold such a one back; for it was by giving up our own will that we were accepted by the Lord at all. Our remaining with Him is altogether a voluntary matter.

"The Lord make His face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace." As the Scriptures show, the peace of God is not that peace which comes from having no enemies to overcome, no difficulties to surmount. We have enemies within and without; and we shall have them, down to the end of our sojourning in the flesh. The Master said, "Peace I leave with you: My peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." (John 14:27.) He then declared that His peace would be of a kind that we might have in the midst of afflictions and tribulations.

"Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one Body; and be ye thankful," urges the Apostle Paul. (Colossians 3:15.) We have great reason to cultivate thankfulness. The more we study the matter, the more we shall see how much we have to thank God for. If our hearts are filled with gratitude, all murmuring and repining will be crowded out; for there will be so much discerned for which to praise the Lord that there will be no room for ingratitude. As we go onward in the narrow way, we should note all of our blessings, both great and small. If we have trials, difficulties and perplexities, we should realize that these are all working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Thus will the Lord bless us and cause His face to shine upon us. Thus will He lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace.

We trust that more and more we are coming to appreciate this peace of God, which passes all human understanding. May the Lord grant each of us more and more the wisdom, grace, strength and peace needful to enable us to press on in the narrow way to the end of our course! "Faithful is He that hath called you, who also will do it." He will do "exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think, according to the riches of His grace" and His loving-kindness in Christ Jesus our Lord. Blessed are they that put their trust in Him!

Essay V.

His indifference to this vital question of the Christian religion, the Fall, is further indicated by remarks made in the paragraph that follows the above: "Now, it is worse than folly to undertake to say whether this means total depravity, whether it means Adamic depravity, or whether it means depravity at all." He then introduces the development theory coupled with the idea of a Personal God operating upon man and "accelerating" the civilization produced by Providence, then continues:

"That man is susceptible of gradual change, and, in the divine providence, of an unfolding which we call civilization, and of which centuries are the term, all know and all admit; but can that unfolding be accelerated? Can it be in part induced by man himself? Is there in nature a new development theory of the Spirit? That is the present question. Under the influence of the divine Spirit, whatever is low in man is lifted up; by which watever is dull and of the flesh may be spiritualized; by which watever could not come together through long ages of devlopment (if it came together at all, which is a matter of more than doubt) may come speedily together. There is a doctrine, in other words, of a new birth in Christ Jesus. By the Power of the Holy Ghost men are transformed, inspired, and brought into a state in which it is not mockery when we are called sons of God. So that it is the avowed opening of this new kingdom of influence, it is the direct inspiration of the human soul by divine contact, that constitutes the peculiar operating element of the New Testament."

In other words the evolution of the human race has been "arrested" and to complete this development is the purpose of Christianity, according to Beecher's statement, "whatever could not come together through long ages of development may come speedily together by the power of the Holy Ghost." Further on in the sermon he refers to the "Fruits of the Spirit," or character of Christ as the culminating features of this "accelerated" civilization. This sounds singularly like the essence of Drummond's Ascent of Man published in 1894, 21 years later, which was "an attempt to christianize evolution by laying stress on altruistic elements in natural selection."

Drummond formulated a more complete system of philosophy of the Evolution of the New Testament taught by Beecher near the close of his career, and says plainly what Beecher hints at, that man has evolved from lower forms of life: "Why should Evolution stop with the Organic—Whence has all this system of things come, is after all, of minor importance compared with the question, Whiter does all this tend. So stupendous is the development from the atom to the man that no point can be fixed in the future as distant from what man is now as he is from the atom. But it has been given to Christianity to disclose the lines of further Evolution." (Natural Law in the Spiritual World, Page 401.)

Becher further elaborated upon his sermon Evolution and the New Testament by a series of twenty-six sermons (published in book form in 1885) under the gereral title, Evolution and Religion. Abbott gives a concise statement of the essence of these series as consisting of two phases: "Part I, Eight sermons discussing the bearing of the evolutionary philosophy on the fundamental doctrine of evangelical Christianity." Drummond's Natural Law in the Spiritual World is also to the same purpose and import: "An attempt to reconcile evangelical Christianity with the doctrine of Evolution." The second series of Beecher's sermons was also an anticipation of Drummondism, the essence of which, in the words of Abbott, is: "II. Eighteen sermons discussing the application of the evolutionary principles and theories to the practical aspect of religious life." The essence of Drummond's Ascent of Man "is an attempt to christianize evolution by laying stress on altruisitic elements in natural selction."

Emerson's statement that "every revolution was first a thought in one man's mind, when that thought occurs to another man, it is the key to that Era" can be verified in several instances in history and also in this instance of narrative of Beecher and Drummond, Dante and Petrarch, the two Italian poets, jointly effected the Italian Renaissance by reviving an interest in the forgotten Greek and Roman learning, by embracing it in their poetry which set the world to thinking and thus paved the way for the Reformation. Luther and Zwingli, independently, and in different countries, formulated the same doctrines from the Bible, which effected the Reformation; this was done without the knowledge of the other, and when they compared notes later, found only one item of disagreement, and these men were of entirely different types and training. Similarly, in France, Voltaire, the aristocrat, and Rousseau, the commoner, taught the same principles, unknown to each other, which later brought on the French revolution. We have just noted that Beecher anticipated much of what Drumond taught, and they were men completely different types; Beecher was a lover, and arrived at his conclusions primarially from his intuition, and Drummond was a logician, which his scholarly works reveal. Drummond may or may not have gotten his inspiration from Beecher during his visits from England to America to address chautauquas, to formulate his thoughts in book form; this is improbable, for Abbott, in his biography of Beecher, does not mention Drumond in connection with the life and work of the orator and it is probable that the two men nevr met At any rate the importance of these men in embracing new theory of "revolutionized my educational beliefs," and since Drummond has left Darwinism into their teaching, is equal to that which we have just noted in the field. Darwinism has revolutionized the theological thought of modern religion by finding its way into Protestant Theological Seminaries since the war between Science and Orthodoxy was declared off by the the past, for Beecher says that it publications of Drummond. This would verify the statement of our Concord Seer: "Every revolution was first a thought in one man's mind, when that thought occurs to another man, it is the key to that Era."

THE DEATH OF CHRIST THE CORNERSTONE OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Beecher, in teaching the doctrine of the New Creation, by defining it merely as the development of character, or the flowering of the good in man's endowment, without the proper basis for that doctrine—the present sinful state of humanity as the results of God's Justice pronounced upon Adam for disobedience and the race represented in Adam and the Plan of Redemption providing a substitute for Adam to satisfy the claims of Justice against the human race, before there could be any release of any number of the Adamic family, justifying them to the privilege of becoming a Son of God by adoption through the begetting of the Holy Spirit—were building on false promises; and "every man's work shall he made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire (annarchy, the culminating effects of teaching of an agnostic tendency-....shall try every man's works of what sort it is." "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." In line with St. Paul we have the words of Christ (John 10:1): "Verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door (the basic truth of Christianity—the Sacrificial Death of Christ) into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and robber (by breaking into the Lord's store-house of Truth: "unto the wicked—the unjustified, who do not believe in the efficiency of the blood of Christ—"the Lord sayeth, what hast thou to do to declare my statutes?") But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. To him the Porter (Bible) openeth and the sheep hear his voice ('Which alone perfectly blends Justice, Love, Wisdom and Power.'"- Elsewhere Christ says to the same effect: "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

There are many other Scriptures that point to Jesus Christ as the essential fact in Christianity. But there are more ways than one of recognizing this fact; Beecher admits that Christ is the very essence of Christianity, but understands Him to be so, not that His death attoned for sin, but that He is simply the ideal pattern to copy. He saw the practical phase of Christianity to the exclusion of the philosophical until he became infected with Darwinism, and then sets out to introduce Christ as a philosophical necessity to the morality of the Christian. We quote his words: "The last years of my life I dedicate to this work of religion, to this purpose of God, to this development, on grander scale of my Lord and Master Jesus Christ. I believe in God. I believe in immortality (life beyond the grave). I believe in Jesus Christ as the incarnate representative of the spirit of God. I believe in the esential truths that go to make up mortality and spirtual religion. I am neither an infidel nor an agnostic, nor an atheist; but if I am anything, by the grace of God, I am a lover of Jesus Christ, as the manifestation of God under the limitations of space and matter .. .."

Drummond likewise recognized the fact that Christ occupied a promi-

PUBLIC PLUNDER NOW ON; BIG RAID ON TREASURY

Politicians Under Pretense of National Guards Demand $150,000,000 as a Pork Barrell Hand-out, but the Dynamite Squad is Busy.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Bound to plunder the public treasury to the tune of $150,000,000 the politicians backed by the machinery of the National Guard have been busy lining up the Pork Barrell Brigade and this aggregation has been augmented by the valuable aid of some of the New York newspapers, while Senator Borah in the upper house and Congressman Meyer London in the lower, are busy blowing up the bridges and tearing up the tracks, in order to block the progress which threatens a raid on the nation's treasury.

The monumental sum is merely for military equipment and high salaries while commercial pursuits and business of more vital importance for the advancement of the people is left without able sponsors because the political rake off is not sufficient and the personal gain to the lobbiest is not alluring enough.

However the American Union Against Militaryism with headquarters in the Muncey building has taken up the matter in the interest of the people and there promises to be some lively discussion and interesting revelations between now and the time the pork gets to the point where the politicians will be able to take a bite.

When we asked the captian of one of the National Guard regiments (in West Virginia) if he felt they had the power to put to death a striking mine worker if they wanted to, he said they had. "We had the power to do so," he said. When we asked him WHERE WAS THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, he calmly replied that it was suspended during the time of the operation of martial law.—Senator Borah, discussing the National Guard features of the Army bill.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—It is about time that Labor woke up to what is being "put over" on it in the name of "preparedness."

As it now turns out, the biggest single item of "pork" in the whole "preparedness" campaign is likewise the very feature which has the most menace to the interests of labor, organized and unorganized.

That item is the $50,000,000 subsidy which the powerful National Guard lobby has pulled down—or threatens to pull down—for the organized militia of the several states. Most of this $50,000,000 will go directly into the pockets of the members of the guard. In salaries ranging from $500 per annum down. This salary is frankly designed to attract and hold men to the disagreeable duties which the business interests of the country impose, at intervals, upon the National Guard. The remainder of the appropriation will be used to purchase armored motor cars, machine guns and other types of "efficient" equipment.

The slogan of the National Guard in this raid upon the treasury is: "Fork over a subsidy and 'federalize' us."

That contains two propositions, both of which are inimical to labor.

Senator Borah, in the upper house, and Congressman Meyer London in the lower, are making a hard fight against the National Guard proposition and they are being backed by those Senators and Congressmen who find the National Guard lobby pretty hard to stomach.

Senator Borah has attacked the scheme on two grounds. First, that it is a vicious thing to build up, through a subsidy from the federal treasury, a huge military machine which will grow to dominate federal politics. He predicts that the National Guard will, in a few years, be demanding anywhere from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 and that the congressmen will be afraid to say no. His second point is that the National Guard, through its development of the court martial, has demonstrated that it is unfit to be entrusted with any more power.

"Our fore fathers dreaded the idea of a big standing army," said the Senator, "but here you propose to create a standing army of 400,000 with greater powers than any army ever had on American soil.

"For this National Guard machine will have more power than the Regular Army has ever dreamed of having. It will have three sorts of power. Like the Regular Army, it will have the power of the gun, the power of brute force,—not something to be lightly handed over to any group of men. Secondly, it will have—what the Regular Army has never had since the Civil War—the power to court martial and punish civilians. Since the Dick law was passed a few years ago, the National Guard has repeatedly superseded the civil authorities with an effrontery unparalleled in American history. And finally this huge military machine will have—what the Regular Army does not have—the power of the ballot. By its vote it will control or aim to control, federal politics in every congressional district, to make and unmake members of both houses of Congress. Our fore fathers would turn in their graves if they could see us yielding ourselves blindly into the hands of a machine like that."

Originally there were two rival bills in Congress for the re-organization of the Army. One was the Hay bill and the other was the Chamberlain bill. Both of them attempted to "federalize" the militia and to pay it a huge annual subsidy in return for its promise to enlist up to its full strength and to achieve military efficiency. Those two rival bills have now been coalesced into a compromise bill which retains the Nationoal Guard provisions in full. The New York newspapers are making a desperate effort to coerce Congress into passing the army bill without debate but if labor begins to make itself heard on the "militia pay" scheme—which is the way the National Guard provisions are loosely described—there is every likelihood that Congress will kill it.

There is no time to lose, however, as the National Guard lobby is on the ground and is pulling every wire it can reach.

The American Union Against Militarism—formerly the Anti "Preparedness" Committee—with headquarters in the Munsey Building, Washington, D. C., is fighting the bill hard. The granges are also said to be against it.

"$3-A-DAY" BILL FAVORED.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The house committee on labor has unanimously agreed to a favorable report on the bill presented by Congressman Nolan, a member of the labor group, which provides that no employe of the federal government shall receive less than $3 a day. The author of the bill was instructed by the committee to prepare a report to the house embodying reasons why the bill should be passed. The committee held extended hearings on this question and the witnesses convinced committeemen that the government's minimum rates in a large percentage of cases do not cover the present standard of living.

The Nolan bill proposes a minimum of $3 a day for all who have been at least two years in the government service and who are 21 years of age or over. Those who work less than eight hours a day shall be paid not less than 37c cents an hour.

STEEL ORDERS DOUBLE.

NEW YORK, May 22.—For the third time this year the monthly statement of unfilled orders of United States Steel Corporation, issued last week, broke all records. On April 30 the orders stood at 9,829,551 tons, an increase of 498,550 tons over those on March 31, which broke the previous high record of 8,568,966 tons on February 29. The unfilled orders of the corporation have more than doubled in the year.

AUTO SHOPS GRANT INCREASES.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—Practically every auto repair shop in this city has accepted the $4.50 wage rate of Machinists' union. The old scale was $4. There are about 100 of these concerns in San Francisco and over one-fifth of them have been unionized as a result of the machinists' agitation.

THE BIG CONTEST COMES TO AN END

The Judges Counts the Votes and Awards the Prizes to Successful Contestants

The Big Prize Contest came to an end Monday, and on schedule time the judges took charge while anxious friends of the contestants kept the 'phone busy inquiring as to who were the successful prize winners.

From the start the interest grew and as the contest approached the closing hours the enthusiasm became intense.

Every contestant had friends and each schedule was scrutenized closely. The unfortunate part of it all is there are not enough prizes to go the rounds as each candidate worked hard and is deserving. The hardest burden to bear is that of defeat, but as fate had ordained all could not win and the Tribune's regret is there are loosers. It is said the hard fought battles live in history, but Washington lost more battles than he ever won. Loss tempers the individual and prepares one for greater things. It is certain the experience is worth a great deal and a battle such as that just closed by the contestants in the Big Prize Contest must naturally have its effect for good on each contestant. It is worth a great deal to know how to approach men and women in all walks of life and when there is a purpose that distressing faculty of reluctancy and timidity is destroyed and the individual is better prepared to approach men in the highest walks of life without feeling abashed. This element distroyed in the individual he becomes splendid material for what life has in store. It is said of President McKinley when he was defeated for Congressman from Ohio he became Governor; his defeat as Governor lifted him into the Presidential chair. So it was with Lincoln. Douglass defeated Lincoln for the United States Senate, but Lincoln won the presidency. Thus defeat only opens the way to greater things and he who can stand defeat stands open for the world's highest praise.

As a defeated candidate for President of the United States sends his congratulations to the victorious chieftain, so let the hats be off to the winners.

The results as tabulated and audited by the judges are submitted as follows:

We, the undersigned, selected to judge, count and audit the votes of the respective candidates in the Tribune's Big Prize Contest, respectfully submit the following schedule:

More Compulsory Military Service

Scottish Conference Denounce Compulsion.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, May 4th, 1916.

Compulsory military service is now to be extended to married men between the ages of 18 and 41 except where exemption can be obtained for special reasons. Under the previous military service bill compulsion was only applied to unmarried men; now it is compulsion for all unexempted males. This new measure will have a further influence in depleting the already short labor supplies in the country and will no doubt mean a further big incursion of female labor into occupations formerly operated entirely by men. Upon this question of compulsory military service, trade unionists are to a certain degree divided in opinion. British trade unionists in amendment at the above-mentioned Scottish convention. The former secured, as I have said, 66 votes and the latter 46, being lost therefore. Here is the anti-compulsion resolution:—

This congress declares its strongest opposition to compulsory military service, believing conscription to be a violation of British civil liberty and a menace to the economic advancement of the country in general and the working class in particular. Continental experiences prove that conscription is the chief weapon used by the employing classes in times of industrial dispute. We therefore call upon the Labor Party to press the Government for the repeal of the Military Service Act.

Here is the amendment, which was lost:—

This congress declares its strong opposition to compulsory military service in normal times and conditions, but, seeing the Government have declared that compulsion is necessary to obtain the number of men required to enable them to carry on the war to a successful issue, we call on the Parliamentary Committee and the Labor Party to take all necessary steps to secure that no compulsory military measure shall continue in force after the war.

So far as official labor in English is concerned I can pass on a statement by G. J. Wardle, a Labor Member of Parliament, editor of the "Railway Review," the organ of the National Union of Railway Workers, and also acting chairman of the Labor Party. This statement was issued just before the Government announced the above-mentioned further extension of compulsion to married men. Wardle is a man whose opinion carries weight and here is what he says:—

"I want to make two categorical statements. The first is that there has been no enlargement of the demands of the army since Lord Kitchener and Asquith met the labor committees last September. I think that it is important, since in some quarters it is being alleged that the army is constantly increasing its demands and crying 'Give, give,' irrespective of the needs of the country and its previous commitments. The second is that the number required has all along been assented to by those responsible as being well within the mark of those who can be spared from industry without affecting in any degree the vital interests of the nation or reducing beyond our capacity the number of those engaged in necessary occupations. It is a question of releasing those who can be spared, and those only. I may add that there has never been, and there is not now, any question as to the absolute necessity of obtaining these numbers if this country is to fulfill its obligations to its Allies and take its full share in winning the war, and that the question of how to obtain them has all along been left entirely to the Government, with the exception of the pressure which has been applied by the press referred to and a certain impatient number of politicians."

At a meeting on April 27th of the parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress, over which Harry Gosling presided, the following resolution was carried:—"That as the Bristol congress resolution dealing with the question of conscription was based upon the absence of definite information, and as such information has now been submitted to the committee by three responsible ministers of the Crown, the parliamentary Committee have fully considered the position as thus outlined, and decide to advise trade unions to support the recruiting proposals put forward by the Government in order that the required 200,000 unattested married men may be obtained."

NEW MAYORALTY LOGS FOR THE SAWMILL

Political Hewers Swinging the Axe With Desperate Intent on Stout Timber

The enthusiasm displayed by the friends of Chairman Samuel C. Jamison in their persistency to make him their choice for Mayor to succeed Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong has had a remarkable effect in drawing the enemies fire and Chairman Jamison now occupies the centre of the political stage, while the howling mob of dissatisfied plebian is filling the air with execrations.

"Jamison for Mayor?" they interrogate. "What an easy mark." Wish they would make him their choice. Wouldn't it be easy sailing for us"? It's the opposition ejaculating and as they move away there is heard this audible soloquy, "Won't it be a cinch for the fellows against him"? And on memory's canvas there flashes a portrait of the "fellows" the western unite of the eastern triumverate. As the male species of the bovine resents the crimson so does the name of Jamison when flaunted in the presence of some excite curious animation.

ROBERT GARLAND

What can be expected from those who have become unfortunate victims of party politics; and leadership must necessarily submit to the wails of those who have undergone the sting of defeat and cruel humiliation. One office and ten candidates; nine must be offended but Chairman Jamison, it is said, carries a grade of ointment the like of which is not equalled in the county by any other leader and while nine receptive candidates for one job have been offended and mortally wounded almost unto political death Jamison has the real balm, with soothing properties like that in Gilead and when applied the wound is healed, the scrowl and contempt evolutes to a smile while the foe is transformed into a friend.

No matter who may be suggested the politician well knows there is obviously some latent weakness uncovered as the name is offered for public recognition or political approval.

As a compromise the name of Councilman Robert Garland has been mentioned by Jamison's friends. Garland, a forcible factor, a man of strong character and splendid training both in municipal affairs and in the commercial world. A man whose business acquaintance extends into almost every business and industrial institution in the city and far beyond the narrow confines of the city. He is a manufacturer and a large employer of labor and exceptionally qualified to administer the affairs of a great city. "But Garland," the opposition contends, "is a manufacturer and the labor leader would not support him." The answer comes back. "The labor leader would not support him? The labor skates are in the market all the time with an endorsement and an endorsement at the last market price ranges from $25 with car fare and board to Harrisburg and return—and there are those who are cruel enough to declare the "leader of the phantom army of two million was compelled to sacrifice train fare and board. The skates do not wield any influence and the men in the mills and factories have long since acquired the habit of casting into the scrap pile any endorsement of the labor "skate." Garland is as obnoxious to the enemies of Chairman Jamison as the latter is and they contend that the "business council" has not improved its opportunities sufficient for available Mayoralty timber. The fault it not with Graland but a forelorn faction in apparent pitiful plight It may be premature to conjecture which ring the hat shall be pitched into, but it may not be amiss to intimate that Garland's aspirations will find no receptive incubator among the enemies of Jamison.

The friends of Dr. J. P. Kerr may look with hope and exultant expectation upon that ray of effulgent glory bursting in upon the distressing shadows that now threaten his ambitions. But yesterday the word of Caesar stood against the world: now lies he there and none so poor to do him reverence."

Where Dr. Kerr's chances once bore the brilliancy of a noonday sun, objects have arisen here and there to cast a somber reflection and, perchance, the light that once shone so bright may be obscured if the trend of changing sentiment is indictive of delicately expressed intimations..

There are those who are putting forward the apologetic endorsement that Dr. Kerr is a splendid man for Mayor—BUT—and hereby hangs a tale—"BUT"—the door upon which the gate of doubt swings. BUT the next Mayor will not be taken from the South Side. It took a century or more to get the present one from amid the artisans "BUT" no more, and thus Dr. Kerr's alleged cravings and ambitions are being dissipated. Dr. Kerr never declared himself a candidate for Mayoralty honors and the doctor is reluctant to being mentioned as one espousing the municipal policies of a faction whose champion he is regarded. But Dr. Kerr's friends are not on the administration's side of the house nor will he conflict much with Chairman Jamison only when the lines are being more closely drawn and the cards must be out on the table. But as intimated the doctor is being shunted by his own, and the rejection may become more pronounced as time develops. There is another "greater than he" who is waiting to be hailed as the returning hero but it may be presumptuous to anticipate the far distant future. Coming events may send more pronounced shadows and the secret will eventually be out and so may Dr. Kerr be "out."

THE EXECUTION OF JESUS.

REPORT OF CAIPHAS TO THE SANHEDRIM CONCERNIG THE EXECUTION OF JESUS.

"But it seems to me a necessity that he should be removed. That this may be evident to your minds, I ask you to contrast our present condition with the past. Jesus of Nazareth spent two years in Egypt under the instruction of Rabbi Joshua, and learned the art of thaumaturgy to perfection, as has never been taught in any of the schools of necromancy among the heathen. If the healing miracles of Jesus are true, as they must be (for they are so acknowledged by his foes as well as his friends), he must have learned it from Horus and Serapis, as practised by those heathen priests. He came back to Palestine as a physician, and was by nature an enthusiast as well as a Hebrew patriarch, and when John's preaching excited idealistic minds, Jesus also went to that teacher, and was inspired by him to inculcate and promulgate his doctrines. Notwithstanding his youth and inexperience, Jesus started out as a public orator and teacher with the doctrines of John, and in that capacity referred exclusively to his authority, as every public teacher in these days has to be ordained by some acknowledged authority. As long as John was at large, Jesus in the capacity of an itinerant teacher and phyisician roused the people of Galilee to metanoia (repentance of sin), to bring about a restoration of the kingdom of heaven. He met with the same opposition that John did from those who would not admit that they were more sinful than their progenitors were, or that asceticism was the proper means for the restoration of the kingdom of heaven. But he met with the same success among the lower classes, such as foreign harlots, Sodomites, publicans, and other Roman agents, but the intelligent portion remained cold and unmoved by his enthusiasm. The cures which he performed appeared miraculous to his followers, but most ridiculous to the intelligent Jews and men of sober and reflective minds.

"Jesus embraced the humanitarian doctrine of the Hillelites, presenting conspicuously the cosmopolitan spirit of Judaism, and he did it almost in the words of Hillel, who had taught it before. Their faith and doctrine being alike, it was not hard for him to create excitement, or to find plenty of followers. In addition to all this, he taught a system of low morals, and so void of all ritualistic ideas that it was easy for him to get any number of followers. He taught the people that there was but one living and true God, but he taught them that he was that God, and that his father was merged into himself, and could not manifest himself only through him, which theory would confute itself if they would only stop to reflect, for as he was hypostatical or corporeal, his assistance was cut off from all that was not immediately in his presence, which is altogether incompatible with the faith of the Jews. Right in the face of this doctrine he would teach that there was a special providence, as well as a general providence, as if there could be a general providence without a God that could be present in all places at all times, as we learn in pronouncing His name. He taught that the dead will rise and live again in a future state of happiness or misery according as they have lived here. Therefore he taught future rewards and punishments; but he being present, how could he reward in the future? He taught the revelation and the prophets, but contradicted all they teach. He taught the election of Israel by the Almighty, but ignored all the doctrines of Isreal. He taught the eternity of God's laws, and promises in the super-importance of the humanitarian over the ritual laws and doctrines, but I do not think he wished to abolish the latter, or even the traditional laws, but merely to supersede them by a higher life. The natural result of all this was that he disregarded, the laws of Levitical cleanness, which were considered so important by the Shammaites and Essenes, and also by the Hillelites. This is the point where division commenced, and the breach grew wider and wider until an insurrection must have been the result. He so far cut himself loose from the Jews that he ate with unclean sinners, pulicans, and lepers, and permitted harlots to touch him, while his disciples went so far as to eat their meals without washing themselves. Furthermore, he looked upon the whole of the Levitical institutions, temples, sacrifices, and priesthood included, as no longer necessary and not worth the life of the animals. This was certainly the opinion of the Hillelites. Jesus, it seems, found in this Hillelite school a party furnished to hand, ready to take up with his heresy (and a large party they are, almost sufficient to divide the whole Jewish commonwealth). They taught the repentance of sin, the practice of benevolence and charity, the education of the young, and goodwill toward mankind, as possessing much more moral worth than all the Levitical cleanness, or compliance with the whole moral law given to us by our God to govern us. His preaching was of the parabolical style. He would rely on a text of scripture, for he seemed to hold the scriptures in high veneration, so his preaching was on the midrash style of the scribes—a maxim expressed in the style of Solon or of Sirach's son. His great object was to come as near the Jewish theology as possible so as to destroy the Jews' entirely, and establish his own. Hence he resorted to the allegorical method of the Egyptian Hebrews, uttering many good and wise sayings, which were not now to the learned, but which were taken from the comon wisdom of the country, which was known by all who were acquainted with literature of the rabbis. But they were new to his class of hearers, who were not accustomed to listen to the wise. He had no education, comparatively speaking. He was full of nervous excitement, all of which went to inspire his hearers with enthusiasm. He took but little care of his health or person; cared not for his own relatives. He traveled mostly on foot in the company of his disciples and some suspicious women, and lived on the charity of his friends. He seemed to take no notice of the political affairs of his country; would as soon be governed by one nation as another. In fact, it seemed if he had any preference it was for the Romans. It seems that he became so infatuated that he really thought he was the head of the kingdom of heaven. This manner of preaching, along with his presumption, aroused his enemies to a powerful pitch, and it was all I could do to keep the zealots from mobbing him in the temple. They had no confidence in a doctrine that set the Jewish laws at naught, and mocked the priesthood of God, and they with the Sadducees and scribes were not willing to submit to a man who acknowledged no authority higher than himself, and was seemingly endeavoring to overturn everything that they held more sacred and dearer than life. Jesus's mode and manner were well qualified to deceive the unsuspecting. 'Let us have all things in common,' said he, 'and he that would be greatest among you will prove his greatness by rendering the greatest service to all, and if any of the higher powers compel thee to go a mile, let him that is compelled go ten miles.' This caused him to be attacked more in his policy than in his doctrine. The great question with the Jews was, here are the Romans upon us; how can we get rid of them? Jesus's idea was to let the Romans alone; it matters not who rules and governs the nations; if they abuse you, love them in return, and they cannot be your enemies long; no man can continue to abuse another who returns injuries with love. Keep from them; pray in secret for the return of the kingdom of heaven and God's grace, and this will soon make all things right. 'Pay your taxes,' he would say to them; 'it is only Caesar's money you pay, which is unlawful for you to have—unlawful on account of its idolatrous effigies.' Again, he would say to his hearers, 'You cannot conquer the Romans; better convert them, and they are your enemies no longer. They already have your temple in their possession; their yoke is getting heavier every day, and the more you fight against them the more they will abuse you; therefore, wour only chance is to love them, and try to make your yoke easy and your burden light by having them your friends.' Indeed, the conduct of Jesus was so strange and incompatible with the interest of the Jews as a nation, that it seemed to me that he was a subject employed by the Romans to keep the Jews submissive and obedient to all their tyranny and abuse.

"This policy was most powerfully attacked by the officiating priest, by the Shammaites and Zealots, and, in fact, the whole Jewish nation was becoming aroused to a war heat. The reprimands of Jesus were so severe against the rich and highly educated that they had turned against him, and brought all the power they had, both of their wealth and talent, so that I saw a bloody insurrection was brewing fast. The public mind of the Jews was becoming more and more divided and corrupt; heretical doctrines were being diffused all over the land; the temple was forsaken and the holy sacraments neglected; the people were dividing into sects, and these breaches were like a rent in a garment—tearing wider apart continually. As it seemed to me, the whole of the Jewish theocracy was about to be blown away as a bubble on a breaker.

"As the Jews became more and more divided and confused, the tyranny of the Romans increased. All they wanted was an excuse to slaughter the Jews and confiscate their property. At this time both the doctrine and religion of the Jews were spreading rapidly all over Rome, which gave the Romans great alarm. Sejane undertook to have an ordinance passed in the Senate, abolishing the Jewish religion from Rome; and when he found it would cause an insurrection, they banished all the Jews from Rome, and back they came to Judea with all their idolatry and heresy, and many other corrupt principles from the Romans, which fitted them to join any party for profit. Up to this time the Roman governors had shown great kindness to the Jews. There never was a better man than Hyrcan. The Jews enjoyed great peace during his administration. But Tiberias has turned against us; Pilate has removed the army from Caearea to Jerusalem? I say, no nation with any self-respect or one that had any energy left, would or could stand it without a struggle.

"Now, the preaching of John the Baptist and Jesus of Nazareth had brought all these things upon us. When Herod Antipas captured John, it quieted matters in Galilee, so that they had peace until Jesus started it up afresh. I had issued orders to Jesus to desist from preaching, unless he taught as the Jews taught. He sent me the impertinent word that his doctrine was not of this world, but had reference to the world to come; when he was all the time doing all he could to destroy the peace and harmony of this world. Now, according to our law in the Saphra, by Jose. B. Talmud, it devolves on me to see that the people have sound doctrine taught them. Hence it is my duty to examine all the midrashim, or sermons, of all the preaching priests, and if anyone teach the people wrongly, or if his conduct is not in correspondence with his profession, to cause him to desist; or if any disregard the holy laws of ablution, or in any way defile himself, or if he shall be guilty of misconduct in any way, either in manner of life or doctrine, to adjudge such as one, and pronounce sentence for his crime upon him. This I did upon Jesus of Nazareth, to save the Church from heresy, and to save the cause of the Jewish commonwealth from final ruin. But understand that I did not act rashly nor illegally, as I am accused. I only passed sentence under the protest and order of the whole court belonging to the high priest, containing twelve members, or elders, and priests. Thus you will see it was not my voluntary act, but was a legal one and in accordance with law. After I examined Jesus on the various charges, he said in the presence of all the court that each and all of them were true. I then reasoned with him, and asked him, if the court of the high priest would forgive him of these charges would he desist from these things in all time to come. He answered most emphatically and positively he would not. Under these circumstances I was compelled, according to our law, to sentence him to die; for if he continued to promulgate his pernicious heresies the Jews, a nation, must perish with their religion. And, as you find in the Toseppta, that the nation has always the right of self-preservation, and as we had conceded the right to the Romans of executing our criminal laws, it became my painful duty to send him to Pontius Pilate, with the following charges:

"'Caiaphas, High Priest of the Most High God, to Pontius Pilate, Governor of the Roman Province:

"'Jesus of Nazareth is thus charged by the Hight Court of the Jews:

"'First, with teaching the doctrine that there are more gods than one, which is contrary to the teachings of the Jewish law, which he most positively refuses to desist from in presence of this court.

"'Second, he teaches that he is a God, which is contrary to the Jewish law, and he is visible and comprehensible; and, after being asked to desist by this court, he most positively affirms that he is the Son of God.

"'Third, he teaches and affirms that the Bath kole (Holy Spirit) cannot come until he goes away, which is contrary to the teachings of the Jews; because it was He that brooded over the waters, and has been in the habitual light of the world ever since; from all of which he refuses to desist.

"'He teaches baptism as the seal of God, instead of circumcision, which was established by the decrees of God with Abraham as a seal of the Jews; and when adjured to desist by this court declared he would not.

"'He teaches asceticism as the means of salvation, contrary to the Jewish custom; and affirmed in the presence of this court he would not desist.

"'He teaches that the Levitical ablution is of no service, while we hold that the outward washing is the sign of inward purity; and when adjured to desist he emphatically refused.

"'He has abrogated the ordinance given by God to Moses of the pascal supper, wherein we should roast a lamb and eat it with unleavened bread; but Jesus has introduced a custom altogether different—without any authority. He has introduced common bread and wine, which are not only forbidden, but are well qualified to excite men's passions and make them forget God rather than to remember and trust Him, this feast having been introduced that we should remember to trust Him in the hours of trouble. When asked why he did this, all he would say was: "Hitherto I work, and my Father works."

"'He has abrogated the priesthood, and set the temple at naught, which is the very life's blood of the Jewish faith.

"'Were it not that God our Father has given us these holy ordinances we would not be so tenacious of them. We know they are the pillars upon which the Jewish theocracy is built, and that we canot live without them. Although Jesus of Nazareth has been abjured time and again to stop teaching these ways of death, he has as often declared he would not; therefore it devolves on me as the proper and the only officer to pronounce sentence upon him.'

"These charges were written by my scribe, and sent with the officers to Pilate for his consent. Of course, I did not expect him to execute him as he did, but it seems that the mob was so great that Pilate never received them. I expected Pilate to send Jesus back to me, so that I could send him to you for your approval; and if so, then I would proceed to try him with Urim and Thummim, with the regular lacktees on guard, as our law requires; but it seems that Pilate thirsted for his blood. Like all guilty tyrants, he was afraid of his own shadow, and wished to destroy everything that threatened his power.

"'With these reasons for my actions, I submit the case which I am sure will be considered favorably by my Masters of Isreal."

I enclose renewal for one year. Please pardon me for waiting so long. I did not have the money when payment was due and did not want to stop the paper as others have done, for I felt sure that I would have that much some time.

I much appreciate and thank you very much for keeping on sending the paper for I would not like to miss a copy as it seems to bring me an everlasting good through the sermons and other similar truths. So may the good work go on.

Truly your friend,

Ridgefield Park, N. J., May 18.

Through the "Watch Tower Society", I have recently renewed my subscription, expiring May 13, to the "National Labor Tribune." I do this with pleasure, especially because of your continued publication of Pastor Russell's masterly addresses on the Truth, as God's Word reveals it, and also of your printing these naw in larger type and neater form. It certainly rejoices the religious readers of the "Tribune" to see it devote to such a beneficient feature, together with the S. S. lessons and other literature anent the Truth, two pages or so out of the eight in each issue. Keep up this good work, dear editor, which you have been privileged to appreciate and to do, and, as part of God's blessing, your contented subscribers will help along your useful, noble task.

Yours sincerely,
LOUIS F. RUEL, SR.

Wilmington, N. C., May 18.

Have just renewed my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower, I am a little late in renewing and want to thank you for continuing the paper, as I'm very anxious to receive every copy.

The principal feature of your paper as it appeals to me is, Pastor Russell's sermons, the appreciations and other religious features, and as long as I'm able to pay for it, and while the Tribune continues to publish those precious truths. I want the paper.

Please accept this as a feeble expression of my appreciation for your services in carrying forward this message of the Kingdom, it is a source of strength, and comfort to the hearts of many. May the Lord bless you in your efforts to serve Him in this way.

Sincerely yours,
J. A. PRICE.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformtion

Men usually see one thing to the exclusion of others and fancy the truth they discovered the greatest, like the lover regards his doxie, if this were not the case nothing would be done. The distinction consists in the amount of emphasis placed upon the various doctrines. Drummond emphasized the doctrines of Evolution out of it's proper portions—he made it the touchstone of his system of thought which is Darwinian and denies the Fall from Edenic perfection, and consequently the necessity for the atoning blood of Christ. Russell emphasizes the doctrines of the Atonement by putting it in its proper place—the radi of the whole system of thought and all other doctrines fall into their proper relation to it, including the truth respecting Evolution as applied to the creation of the lower animals.

Cromwell, Ct., May 21.

You will please find enclosed money order to pay for the renewal of my subscription for another year. Will you kindly get my name correct in the next copy as there is another by the same name here as you have my name. The correct name for me is William R. Savage not as you have it at present Wm. B. Savage. There is just that one middle letter difference and if you will kindly make the change I will be very much pleased for the same. I do not want to miss a single one of the grand good paper, or a single sermon of our dear Pastor Russell's. I have been a reader of your paper for ten years and I enjoy its weekly visit very much especially the religious features of the paper, also the exposing of the frauds, in fact I just enjoy the whole paper and do not want to get along without it. Do not publish this letter as I object to seeing my name in pdint and do not like publicity at all.

Thanking you for all your kindness to me and asking God's blessing on you all there, I am

Yours in the service of the Truth.
WILLIAM R. SAVAGE.

Mansfield, O., May 18.

I herewith send you my subscription which, according to your statement pays my subscription up to September 16th, 1916. I have taken your valuable paper for quite a number of years and would not do without it so long as you print Pastor Russell's sermons and many other good things so appreciative to a truth hungry soul. I had always renewed through the Watch Tower, but I must have overlooked it when I renewed the Tower last December. Thank you for reminding me of it. Your large print and prompt delivery are also much appreciated by us all.

Yours for the Truth,
JOHN FENDRICH.

Charleston, S. C., May 21.

I realize that I should have notified you long ago of my renewal to your excellent paper, (which I enjoy very much, especially the sermon). I renewed through the Watch Tower. Wishing you continued success,

I remain your truly,

THE GENERAL COUNCIL AT JERUSALEM

Acts 15:22-33—May 28.

The First Ecumenical Council—"The Spirit of a Sound Mind" In Settling Doctrinal Differences—The Yoke of the Law Covenant Vs. Christian Liberty—Lessons For Our Day.

"For freedom did Christ set us free."—Galatians 5:1.

FINALLY St. Paul and Barnabas returned from their missionary tour, and reported to the congregation at Antioch. Together the Church and their missionaries rejoiced in their mutual service for the Gentiles. The cause was quite prosperous everywhere. Then came a season of contention and doctrinal differences. Certain brethren came from Jerusalem and, perceiving that the Gentile Christians ignored circumcision, raised a great commotion on that score, claiming that while circumcision would not save without Christ, neither would Christ's salvation be operative without circumcision.

The minds of many of the Church were disturbed, and for a time a split seemed probable. But better counsels prevailed; and St. Paul and Barnabas were sent to Jerusalem as a committee to confer with the Apostles there.

In the account the kindly deference of the Apostles, one to another, is quite marked. It is also noticeable that they based their conclusions upon what they found written in the Old Testament Scriptures and upon the leadings of Divine providence. Gradually for several years the Truth had become more plain to them—that God's special favor to the Jews had given place to a general favor toward people of every nation, so that all men everywhere who believed in God, accepted His promises and consecrated their lives in harmony therewith, might henceforth have equal privileges with those of Jewish birth. They knew of God's covenant relationship with Israel; and it took time to convince them that the Divine Program had taken another step forward.

The Missionarics Report.

Similarly, in this end of the Age, there are many who realize that only a "little flock" has been called and has responded, under the present High Calling. It is difficult for these to grasp the thought that a change of dispensation is now at hand, and that God purposes to complete the work of this Age for the Elect and to inaugurate a new work for the new Age for the benefit of "all the families of the earth"—the non-elect.

The Conclusion of the Matter.

The conclusions of the conference are given us in a few words; namely, that God had recognized believers of Gentile birth by His Holy Spirit in just the same way that He had recognized believers of Jewish birth; and that these Gentiles had received this Divine favor without having come under the bondage of the Law Covenant. The Apostles realized that the Law Covenant was indeed a yoke so heavy that neither they nor their forefathers had been able to bear it. Christ had relieved them of that yoke. Why, then, should they put it upon brethren upon whom the Lord had never put it?

In Verses 22-29 we have the decision of the Apostles upon the question. They not only wrote it out, but sent it to Antioch by two trusted brethren, Judas Barsabas and Silas, with St. Paul and Barnabas, that the Church might have it in both written and oral testimony. The declaration was that the disquieting teachings had not been authorized by the Apostles at Jerusalem. Then they briefly summed up, not as law, but as necessary things, the following: Abstain from sacrifices offered to idols, from blood, from things strangled and from harlotry. It was not intimated that these things would make Christians of unbelievers; for nothing but faith in Christ and full consecration to walk in His steps could constitute them Christians.

As a matter of fact, the Apostle Paul has pointed out most forcefully that "Love is the fulfilling of the Law." (Romans 13:10.) Love for God would control the life as respects holiness; and love for our neighbor would control as respects earthly justice. The things recommended by the Council at Jerusalem were necessary for the preservation of the fellowship of the Body of Christ, composed of Jews and Gentiles, with different education and sentiments.

Decision Forwarded.

The wise course followed by the Council at Jerusalem brought good results. Harmony prevailed—unity of spirit, fellowship amongst the members. The secret of this harmony lay in the fact that the Lord was recognized as having supervision of the affairs of the Church, and as guiding her course through His appointed channels, the Apostles.

Similarly today, where honesty of heart prevails amongst the Lord's people, schisms, divisions, should be unknown. The Lord's guidance and instruction should be sought—His Word through the Apostles.

Dear Sirs:—Noticing slip on my last "Tribune" reminds me of the fact that my subscription is past due and that in order to receive that gladsome "Message" through the columns of the Grand Old "Tribune" it is absolutely necessary that we keep up our part of the contract, pay up, and this we are doing today through The Watch Tower Office.

We are glad that you are handling "The Message" in such a commendable manner, a style which is far beyond most papers in handling "The Truth" in its various features, sermons of our dear Pastor, the Sunday School lessons. Brother Nelson's article, the voices of the people, and the way labor questions, and news in general is presented.

At our last "Tower" study the conversation came up respecting the spreading of the Truth, and one of the Brethern called the attention of the friends to the Grand Old Labor Tribune, the space and prominence which it gave to the sermon and it was a grand testimony offered on behalf of the "Old Reliable." We wish success to crown your efforts.

Yours very truly,
MR AND MRS. N. D. EDWARDS.

State Sanatarium, Minn., May 16.

Much as I like the "Labor Tribune", I will have to ask you to cancel my subscription because of the lack of funds.

I am laid up with that dread disease Tuberculosis and if I ever get better it would not be under a year or two so I could not even make the promise of paying for it in any reasonable length of time.

It is not because I think the Tribune is behind any other paper in the country publishing the sermons, for I do not, I would rather have it than any other.

Another thing in the Tribune's favor with me is, it stood by the truth when it was a stand for principle and opposition.

So you can see why I am discontinuing the paper, I remain,

Your well wisher,
JOHN RIES.

Oswego, Ind., May 20.

Am today renewing my subscription through Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society and wish to again express my appreciation of the Tribune, especially your treatment of Pastor Russell's sermon, the large print and prominent place you give it, also the letters and other articles of interest to every lover of Truth from time to time. I admire also the moderation with which you treat the perplexing labor problems now coming up so frequently. With best wishes I am

Yours sinverely,
HAROLD POUND.

Kansas City, Mo., May 19.

Please find enclosed postal order for the renewal of my subscription to the Labor Tribune. I thank you very much for your kindness in continuing to send it after my subscription had expired, as I should have disliked very much to have missed one copy of the dear old Tribune as long as you continue to print our dear Pastor's sermons in such lovely large type. They are indeed meat in due season. I also enjoy all the other religious features very much.

May the dear Lord bless your efforts in spreading the truth.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. A. H. WOODS.

Carthage, Mo., May 19.

I am sorry that I let my subscription go delinquent so long and I have only the poor excuse of negligence to offer as an excuse.

I appreciate very much the religious feature of the Tribune and especially the Pastor Russell sermons, and the style adopted for printing the same.

With best wishes for the success of your paper,

I am very truly yours,
E. T. HARDAWAY.

GOD SELECTS SAINTLY JEWELS

MANY EXPERIENCES OF CUTTING AND POLISHING ESSENTIAL.

Humility and Meekness Necessary—Patience and Gentleness Also Invaluable Qualities — God's Faithfulness Beyond Question—God's Book of Remembrance — God's Name Stands for His Character — The Church to Be a Glorious Diadem in the Hand of Their God.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 21.—Pastor Russell spoke in our city today from the text, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it; and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon His name. And they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that Day when I make up My jewels." (Malachi 3:16, 17.) He said:

Humility is a very important trait of character in any one, and especially in the Christian. If we do not possess humility and meekness, the Lord cannot use us, and we cannot make any progress. We do not know what may be one another's difficulties; but we know that we all have imperfections. But should fight a good fight with ourselves. If we get ourselves into full line with the will of the Lord, He will help us by His providences.

Should our imperfection be especially along the line of lack of meekness, the Lord will try us in this respect, to show us our need in this direction. Or it may be along the line of lack of gentleness. We may be rude, and may say and do things in an unkind manner. The Lord may therefore permit us to have certain trials in order to give us an opportunity of developing this quality of character. We may have tests of love for the brethren, for our own family, for our neighbors. The Lord might even hide His face from us for a time to give us a test of love for Him.

All such experiences "work together for good to them that love God, to the called according to His purpose." These are the ones who are desirous above everything else of becoming copies of God's dear Son. With these the Lord is now dealing.

THE LOYAL MAY HAVE CONFIDENCE.

This matter of our testing and trying as New Creatures begins with our begetting of the Holy Spirit, and ends when we die. But one may be sure he is an overcomer; one may have confidence, "full assurance of faith." (Hebrews 10:22.) When we entered into our covenant with God (Psalm 50:5), we gave Him our time, our talents, our influence, our strength—everything that we had. In return, He gave us the begetting of His Holy Spirit, His providential care, and His exceeding great and precious promises respecting the future. If we are still seeking to walk in the footsteps of our Lord Jesus Christ, then all is well with us. Therefore we need not fear. If any one breaks the contract, it will be ourselves. God will surely carry out His part.—1 Thessalonians 5:24.

Thus we may have confidence, in accordance with the Divinely appointed conditions. As the Apostle says, "If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God." (1 John 3:20, 21.) But if our heart condemn us, then it is not well with us. If we have not been living faithfully to the full extent of our ability, then our hearts will condemn us; and what our heart condemns in us God will also condemn. This means that if we wish to become members of the Bride class, we must be more diligent, more zealous. We must study our character, and see to it that we develop the necessary qualities for a position in the glorified Church.

Ask yourself, "How much have I cultivated these Heavenly fruits and graces—the faith, the patience and the brotherly-kindness that go with love?" Then say to yourself, "This day I shall keep watch over myself and note what my hands are doing, how my time is spent, what my words are, what my thoughts are." Whoever has a proper love for our Lord, a proper appreciation of what He has done for us and of what He will yet do, will not find this careful scrutiny of thought, word and deed a hard thing. It brings before us continually thoughts of God and of Christ and of the glorious things which He has in reservation for those who love Him more than anything else.

Those who thus study their character are the class mentioned in our text when it says, "They that reverence the Lord spake often one to another." They spake to one another in Bible studies, in prayer meetings, every Sunday at worship or in the home. They wish to have all the helps the Lord is providing in these last days. They desire to know all the various parts of God's Plan. They have become separated from the masses of nominal Christians and have been brought together through the knowledge of His Word. So now they converse about the good things that the Lord has shown them. They have a fellowship of spirit.

This desire for fellowship with those of like precious faith is not selfishness, nor an impropriety. This class are especially anxious for fellowship with those who have characters similar to their own, similar faith in the precious blood of Christ, similar consecration, those who are passing through similar experiences at the hands of the great Polisher of the jewels. Their conversation, therefore, will be respecting "the things which belong to their peace"—the things which are uppermost in their hearts; for this class are all seeking first the Kingdom of God and its righteousness, and in earthly matters are content with whatever the Lord's providence shall arrange for them.

GOD'S BOOK OF REMEMBRANCE.

When "the Lord hearkened and heard" this class who spoke often one to another, He had a book of remembrance written for them. It is not that the Almighty had to write down this information so as not to forget, but that this statement gives us the thought that He does not forget and that He loves this class. God loves the world with a broad, sympathetic love; but He has a special love for His true Church, those who have consecrated themselves fully to Him during this Gospel Age. To such the Master says, "The Father Himself loveth you." They are as dear to Him as the apple of His eye.—John 3:16; 16:27; Zechariah 2:8.

This book of remembrance was kept for those who thought upon His name. In olden times the name stood for character. Now we too often give names at random. Too many times an ignoble character bears a noble name. But in olden times people were very particular to attach a name that would fit the person's character. For instance, our Lord was named Jesus, because He was to save His people from the sins. (Matthew 1:21.) Jesus means Saviour. God's name stands for His character, glorious in righteousness.

Not very many think highly of the character of our God. There is reason for this. For centuries the religious teachers have described the Divine character in such a way as to make it very undesirable for any to think much about Him. To many the name Jehovah God stands for One who is to be feared for His mighty power, for One who will throw them over to the Devil, rather than One who is to be loved because of His great love for all His creatures.

But with God's dear children this is not so. They love God and delight to study about His name, His character and to think of His care for them. They are trying diligently to be like their Father in Heaven; and He is showing them His character more and more. Something of the lengths, the breaths, the heights and the depths of His wonderful love has been revealed to this class; and they are still longing to know more about Him.

By and by the world will be made to know about God's wonderful character and plan. The light of the knowledge of the glory of God will then fill the whole earth. (Isaiah 11:9; Habakkuk 2:14.) But the Church of Christ get this knowledge beforehand. In coming into the family of God we have entered the School of Christ, and He is teaching us all these things. They are written in the Bible "for our admonition upon whom the ends of the ages have come," in order that by thus knowing Him we may be prepared for our glorious inheritance with Christ Jesus our Lord and Head.—1 Corinthians 10:11; Colossians 1:12.

THE LORD'S PRECIOUS JEWELS.

God's promise to this class that reverenced Him and thought upon His name is that they shall be His in that Day when He shall make up His jewels. As one who cares for precious jewels, so God cares for His saints. The man who handles the jewels sees to it first that they are properly cut and polished; and afterwards he mounts them. But they would not look well except they were mounted; for the mounting has much to do with the beauty of the jewels.

God is now cutting and polishing these saintly jewels of His. The first and greatest of these was our Lord Jesus Christ. The twelve Apostles were twelve large stones, fine-grained and beautifully cut. All down the Gospel Age jewels of different sizes have been found and cut. Presently God will mount all the jewels that remain unmounted. This mounting is done in the First Resurrection.

Of His jewels our God will make a beautiful diadem, set in the gold of the Divine nature. Is He to wear this royal diadem? Oh, no! Jehovah needs no diadem to add to the charms of His person. To the jewel class the Prophet declares, "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:3.) The Church will be in the HAND of our God, to be exhibited to angels and to men, as a piece of marvelous workmanship which God has wrought.

In preparing these jewels the Lord has not used force, coercion. Originally they were some of the poor sons and daughters of Adam. God did not compel them to leave their father's house, but simply led them by His Spirit and by the exceeding great and precious promises of His Word. Ultimately they will be diamonds of the first water—pure, stainless. They are to be faultless in love before the Father; and perfect love casts out not only fear, but also selfishness, animosity, evil surmisings, evil speaking, pride and self-love. As they daily think upon the character of God, His goodness, His infinity, His plan, His love, they come to know Him more and more intimately and to realize His grand perfection more clearly. Thus they are gradually changed into His character-likeness—"from glory to glory."—2 Corinthians 3:18.

GOD'S JEWELS ARE HIS SONS.

The Lord presents to us in His Word great truths under figures of speech which even the least learned can comprehend. For instance, instead of telling us that He has knowledge of His faithful ones and will never forget those who are His, and who diligently endeavor to know and to serve Him, He pictures the information, telling us in His Word that He has a "book of life" and a "book of remembrance." Through these figures we get the thought which He would have us get; namely, that He takes full knowledge of them that are His.

Then he encourages this class with the assurance that their love and devotion shall one day have its reward; that a great change is coming in His general dealings with the world of mankind; and that then every sigh, every tear and every sacrifice for righteousness' sake and for love of the Lord, for His cause and for His brethren shall be rewarded in a manner that is beyond our present comprehension. This class, however, serve not for selfish reasons, but from devotion, from fidelity and consequently from love; hence they shall find that the light afflictions of the present, which are for only a moment, are working out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, as they look not at the things now seen, but at those now unseen—the eternal things.—2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.

Without attempting to detail the riches of grace in reservation for them that love God, the Scriptures use two figures which are quite expressive to the eye and the ear of faith—God's jewels, God's faithful sons. These two phrases suggest a full explanation of present experiences. The proper father will instruct, correct and discipline his son, although he may pass by the greater faults and blemishes of those who are not His children. As respects jewels, we all know the necessity for cutting and polishing them, to the intent that their real qualities may be developed. Thus the Church class see themselves in their Heavenly Father's school of discipline, in preparation to be His heirs—joint-heirs with Christ in His Kingdom. They see the necessity of the trials, the perplexities and the persecutions of this present time, that they may be polished and prepared for the glorious future.—Romans 8:17; Galatians 3:20.

The time for making up these jewels is the close of the Gospel Age. The faithful followers of our Lord Jesus from His day until now will all have part in the First Resurrection. All of the jewels now living will, when polished and found worthy, be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," to be with their Lord—the moment of their death being the moment of their change. These have no need to sleep in death; for the gathering-time of the saints has come. They will be spared from passing through the culmination of the great Time of Trouble already begun.

OUR DAY THE CLOSE OF THE AGE.

According to our best knowledge of the Word of God, we have now come down to the close of the Gospel Age. All about us we see the foretold signs of our Lord's Second Presence and of the end of the Age. To His Church our Lord Jesus said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads; for your deliverance draweth nigh." (Luke 21:28.) We see "these things" coming to pass in the great war in Europe, in the mutterings of revolution among the nations, in the world-wide Zionist movement of the Jews, etc. The Church, the Bride of Christ, is almost complete. But we do not yet know how long it will be until we shall have finished our earthly course. That is for the Lord to determine.

"Faithful is He that hath called you, who will also do it." Our eye of faith has sighted the prize of glory, honor, immortality and joint-heirship with Christ. "God hath given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these we might become partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4.) And we have been able to receive these promises. There is nothing that compares with them. The more we know of the great Divine Plan of the Ages and of the privileges which we may have in that Plan, the more we are enthused, the more we would glorify the Father and the Son, the more we rejoice together as brethren in the Body of Christ.

Those who have comprehended this Divine Plan for human salvation have an abundant theme, a never-ending theme, a theme which above all others will fill their hearts and their minds, and which will crowd out all complainings and murmurings, as wholly improper of so many Divine favors and who have "much advantage everywhere," in that they have delivered unto them the Divine oracles. Especially is this true in view of our adoption into the family of God as sons, "joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord, if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together."

Let us, then, as true sons of God, remember the importance of honesty—"truth in the inward parts"—when we come together to study the Divine Word and to help one another as members of the Body of Christ. "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory," but let each esteem the other greater than himself in saintliness, seeking to see in each other, so far as possible, the noble, the good, the true; and let each seek to watch his own heart and to know of his own blemishes. Thus shall personal humility and brotherly love keep pace with our growth in the knowledge of Divine things.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Essay V.

Copyright 1916 by N. E. Nelson.

It is not our purpose to enter into an examination of these Scriptures here, that would be quite unnecessary, for Pastor Russell has done this in his masterly production, The Atonement between God and Man. But since quoting Abbott's statement that St. Paul only referred to the fall in one instance, (Rom. 7) we here present a few quotations proving to the contrary. In 1st Cor. 15:3 St. Paul points to the Death of Christ and the Fall of Adam as the fundamental element of the gospel: "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died according to the Scriptures (Old Testment)". That the Apostle had in mind the Fall of Adam is indicated by his remark later on in the same chapter on the resurrection: "For since by man (Adam)came death, by man (Christ) also came the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." St. Paul again refers to the Fall of Adam (Rom. 5:12) and the death of Christ as a substitute for the sin of Adam, to satisfy the claim of justice against the race condemned in him, as follows:

"Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned: * * * death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adams transgression. For if by one man's offense death reigned by one; much more they which received abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one. Jesus Christ * * * Therefore as by the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous."

These quotations from Beecher and Drummond, indicating that they did not believe in the Sacrificial Death of Christ, in spite of the Scripture which point to it, and the fact that they were fore-runners of the spirit of the age, remind us of the statement of the prophet concerning Christ that He shall be "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense." The experience of these men, in repudiating Christ and the many doctrines associated with His work, is in line with the Scripture that those who "walk in the light" that shines "more and more unto the perfect day" are limited to those who enter by the "door into the sheepfold", who are justified by faith in the death of Christ; or in the words of Solomon: "Light is sown for the righteous". That the "righteous" here referred are the justified is indicated by the fact that the Bible recognizes no others as righteous: "there is none righteous, no not one." Continuing this line of thought we apply it to the statement of David: "unto the wicked (the unjustified, who do not believe in the efficacy of the blood of Christ) the Lord sayeth, what right hast thou to do to declare my statutes?" This would indicate that they have no right to pose as public expounders of Christianity unless they are first justified by faith in God and His provisions in Christ. This is in line with the thought contained in the parable of Christ quoted heretofore: that those who "entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climeth up some other way, the same is a thief and robber", by breaking into the Lord's storehouse of Truth reserved only for the righteous, the justified.

This same parable (Jno. 10) supplies us with a corroboration of this thought respecting the public beacon lights of christianity; the following qualification is lacking in Drummond in poising as bringing out "meat in due season" for the Household of Faith we read: "He that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep * * * and the sheep hear his voice * * * he goeth before them (in advance doctrinally) and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice." The "sheep" here is a metaphore for the common people that follow in the foot steps of the Great Teacher; "not many wise, not many noble", are of this class. He who would be their leader must of necessity speak to them in terms which they can appreciate in order to feed them—to lead them into the green pastures and still waters. Applying this test to Drummond we find it to be consistant with what we have just presented, that he was doctrinally a "wolf in sheeps clothing" in his first book, Natural Law in the Spiritual World, for in it he purposely concealed the virus of Darwinism which struck at the very foundation of the Christian religion. This book is not addressed to the "sheep" but the false "shepherds" of Christendom—the scholastics. "Drummond was a profound scholar, and wrote his books in the language of the scholar for the perusal of such as could understand them. He made no effort to reduce his arguments to the language of the common people." The same applies to a limited degree to Beecher's oratory by which he inspired the cultured to do and to become.

THE DOCTRINE OF EVOLUTION NOT INIMICAL TO THE DOCTRINE OF THE ATONEMENT

The experience of the individual mirrors the experience of the race—there is a relation between the days of our life and the centuries of time. This principle applies on a smaller scale to nations as well—the experience of a cluster of men is often typified by the experience of an individual. Beecher, like the poet, was a representative man—his experience in the sphere of thought in which lived, in being blinded to these plain statements of scripture just quoted on the doctrine of the Atonement, due to being distorted by being associated with the creeds of the Dark Ages, portrays the experience of the whole cluster of Darwinian theological speculators that follow him. The repulsive teachings of the Dark Ages, of dispatching the great bulk of humanity to an eternity of torture, and only a small proportion of humanity being saved, associated with the Scriptural doctrines of the Atonement, has led those who have had their senses exercised by the study in the Book of Nature to reject it. The Bible is today repudiated by those who think it teaches the popular creeds and are denying its authority—they deny the plenary and verbal inspiration of the Bible. The Refermation started with the Reformers holding up the Bible as the authority in matters of faith above that of the Catholic Priesthood, and now we see the speculative branch of Protestantism posing with their judgment as superior to that of the writings of Christ and His Apostles. When Beecher became infected with Darwinism, he also denied the inaccuracy and infallibility of the Bible and saw nothing in it but the development theory in experience of the race; he finally reached the conclusion that the Bible was "the record of the gradual and progressive unfolding of human knowledge in respect to social and spiritual things through vast periods of time." That is to say, the development theory is applicable to the unfoldment of man's God given endowment in experience both individually and collectively and the record of this, history, is instructive both in a practical and philosophy aspect. This proposition was consistant with his services in American politics in the slavery question before and after the civil war, and is also a good theoretical basis of the civic reforms carried on by the present-day clerics who have no special inclination towards theology except that they still cling to the creeds of the Dark Ages.

Beecher made the mistake of trying to make a local principal universal. The development theory of Evolution can be measurably applied to the growth of the Christian as outlined in the New Testament; and it can also be measurably applied to the development of education and character in the life of the race outside of Christianity; and it can also be literally applied to the account of the creation of vegetation and the lower animals in certain periods of time, until they became fixed and permanent species, as recorded in Genesis; but it cannot be applied the account of the creation of Man. Wright, Dana, Dawson and Vail recognized this distinction in applying the Evolutionary theory, in their studies in the science of geology. It was simply a question of proper classification in science, just as in theology we "rightly divide the world of truth."

In Essay II: Caption, Science, (Tribune issue Nov. 25th, 1915) we pointed out Drummond's function in the religious world when he declared off the war between Science and the teachings of the Established religion on the question of Creation, by pointing out that the development theory could be reconciled with the acount in Genesis by making the "days" to mean long Epochs of time. We also give a brief synopsis of his superstructure built on the evolutionady theory—Natural Law in the Spiritual World—which is an elaborate intellectual treatise of anelogical arguments buttressing the doctrine of the New Creation, as presented from Beecher. We also pointed out that Drummond had discarded the Orthodox doctrine of an immortal soul by limiting it to those who are borne again, and singularly enough Beecher had reached the same conclusion and with this went the hot hell theory of the Dark Ages—all who die outside of the sphere of Practical Christianity retrograded into eternal death or oblivion.

We further noted that Pastor Russell's system embraced the doctrine of the New Creation without denying the Fall and the Restitution taught in the Bible. Russell also embraced the truth of Evolution by placing it in the proper place in the Divine Program, as applied to the creation of the lower animals; he did not reconcile Christianity with Evolution, but reconciled the truth of Evolution with the Divine Plan of the Redemption built upon "The Cross." This meant that Man, phrenologically, was an exception to the development theory of Creation.

VICIOUS ATTACK MADE UPON FRANK MORRISON

Federation Secretary Not Responsible and Trouble Arose Over Committee's Report.

A vicious and most despicable attack is being made upon Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor by the flooding of the newspaper offices and the various local unions throughout the entire country with a most defamitory letter by a coterie passing under cover as a campaign committee of Mailers Union No. 6.

Frank Morrison is regarded as one of the foremost leaders in the country and his honesty of purpose in carrying out the principles "the greatest good to the greatest number" and judiciously deciding all questions according to the facts, has brought upon himself the wrath of a few mailers who desired to usurp the prerogratives of others. The awful crime with which secretary Morrison is charged should not be placed at the door of the Secretary and if it was there was no alternative but to render the decision as it was rendered.

The circular is not only unfair but an imposition and the effort to bring about his defeat as a delegate from the International Typographical Union to succeed himself will avail nothing. Secretary Morrison carries not only the respect of those in the unions but he has a remarkable influence on the outside and the effort to discredit him will not be regarded seriously.

The whole argument merely sets forth to what extremes some men will go to injure a cause if their selfish ends are not gratified. Mailers Union No. 6 would wreck all other unions to force an unjust decision from a committee of competent men.

Their position is as unfair and unjust as the circular letter they are sending into every local union and they cannot succeed. Secretary Morrison is being assailed merely because he refuses to permit himself or his office to be dragged into a dispute that has been settled not by himself but by a competent committee.

Mailers throughout the United States are appealed to to vote for Dennett of Los Angeles, Hayes of Cleveland, McCullough of Omaha and Stevenson of Toronto, and they are imperatively ordered to vote against Morrison.

The alleged reason for this attack is the stand taken by Mr. Morrison in voting for the report of the committee on adjustment, when that committee upheld the decision of the Executive Council in the matter of the controversy between the Mailers and the Bookbinders.

The history of the case follows:

The Philadelphia convention referred to the Executive Council for action Resolutions Nos. 103 and 106, which provided that the International Typographical Union should relinquish immediately all claim to jurisdiction over single wrapping and binders, and to surrender to the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders such single wrapping as it may have under its jurisdiction.

The Executive Council requested the officers of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders and the International Typographical Union to carry out the following decisions of the Executive Council in regard to single wrapping rendered in 1911 and 1913, respectively.

"After examining the evidence and hearing the oral arguments, and until the two organizations interested effect a mutual agreement on the subject, it is the sense of the Executive Council that 'single wrapping,' where now performed in commercial bindery houses by members of the Bindery Workers' Union, should not be disturbed, and that there should be no interference with the rights of the Bindery Workers' Union to organize non-union workers engaged at single wrapping in commercial binderies, but when the work in question is performed in purely printing offices, it comes under the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

"In the controversy between the International Typographical Union and the Bookbinders about 'single wrapping,' the wrapping of newspapers not being in question, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor defines the term purely printing offices' as employed in the decision rendered June 15, 1911, to mean printing offices without a bindery connected therewith.

A conference was arranged between the representatives of the two organizations concerned at which propositions from both sides were considered and each rejected by the other.

A report of this conference was made at a meeting of the Executive Council when representatives of the Bookbinders and the International Typographical Union were heard. It was decided that the above-quoted decisions rendered in 1911 and 1913 be reaffirmed and emphasized, and that both organizations be strongly advised to conform to them.

At the San Francisco convention the adjustment committee approved the decision of the Executive Council, and the report of the committee was adopted. There was no dissenting vote. Messrs. Hayes, McCullough and Stevenson were present in the convention at the time the report was acted upon and did not speak or vote against the report. Marsden G. Scott, president of the International Typographical Union, was also present as a delegate, and by his silence acquisced in the action of the convention.

It is palpably unfair, yet typical of Gang politics in the Typographical Union, that Morrison should be censured and Hayes, McCulough and Stevenson praised for doing the same thing. As a matter of fact, the Gang desires to defeat Morrison with Dennett not because Morrison has failed in his duty or that there is any hope of Dennett arising about mediocrity, but solely because Morrison has always run for office on his record as a trades-unionist not hampered by unlawful alliances or controlled by an unholy allegiance to those who would control the I. T. U. in order to advance their personal ends.

It is just such despicable methods employed by the Gang in their political endeavors that will eventually make the Typographical Union a by-word and a hissing. Hayes, McCullough and Stevenson made no mistake when they voted for the adjustment committee's report in San Francisco. They merely gave the Bookbinders' International, one of the allied printing trades, a square deal. Had they voted against the report, their action would have been reprehensible. So with Morrison. He stood with his colleagues. And because he d'd what he considered his duty, as he has always done in the past, he is singled out for an attack by a collection of politicians who hesitate at nothing to accomplish their nefarious purposes.

We are convinced the membership will reject this scurrilous attack and reprove those behind it at the polls next Wednesday.

THE SECOND MONUMENT UNVEILED TO AN EMPLOYER

Shaft in Memory of Augustus Pollack, Said to Be Only One Erected to Employer.

CALLED CHAMPION OF LABOR

WHEELING, W. Va., May 28.—Labor today paid a unique tribute to an employer when a monument to the late Augustus Pollack, a Wheeling tobacco manufacturer, who died in 1906, was unveiled on the public square. The exercises were preceded by the most impressive demonstration ever given in this district.

Policemen and firemen and city officials preceded 10,000 marchers, representing every branch of industry in Wheeling and vicinity. Twelve bands and a drum corps donated their services.

In spite of intermittent showers, the space around the monument was packed when Michael Maloney, chairman of the memorial committee created by the Ohio Valley Trades Assembly 10 years ago, opened the exercises with a brief eulogy of Mr. Pollack.

Harry Corcoran, secretary of the committee, read a report showing collections aggregating $8,474 for the monument from 3,000 individuals, 750 local unions and six international unions.

President Louis Leonard of the Trades Assembly presided and Harry Corcoran, Jr., released the flag from the commemorative tablet on the base of the monument, on which was inscribed "Labor's tribute to a friend."

George W. Keyser, a stogie maker in the Pollack factory, who originated the monument movement, spoke briefly.

The principal address was made by M. F. Tighe of Pittsburgh, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamation, a former president of the local Central Trades Union body, who declared that with the exception of the monument erected to the memory of Thomas A. Armstrong, founder of the National Labor Tribune, Pittsburgh, Pa., it was the second time in history that labor had raised a monument to an employer. He eulogized Mr. Pollack as a consistent friend of union labor.

The monument, designed by Fred F. Faris of Wheeling, is a tall granite shaft surmounted by an eagle with outspread wings, with two figures at the base representing labor. It is the work of S. Absjornsen, a Chicago sculptor.

LABOR EDITORS CONVENE.

CINCINNATI, May 27.—The annual convention of the International Labor Press of America, held in this city, elected its old officers and will submit the question of the next convention city to a referendum. The convention favored a congressional investigation of the increased cost of print paper.

THE M E. CHURCH AND ORGANIZED LABOR

Masterly Debate in the General Conference Puts the Church in the Lime Light

When a great ecclesiastical body spends two days in a debate on Industrial Democracy and Collective Bargaining, it means that the members of that body are getting some education on the labor problem.

That was what happened last week at the Quadrennial Session of the Methodist General Conference. This gathering is the law-making body of the denomination. It is made up of 815 delegates representing 4,000,000 people of 26 different nationalities all over the world. The majority of the delegates came from small communities where there is no labor question.

It is a sign of the times that one of the greatest ecclesiastical organizations, with the tremendous pressure of administrative business upon it, should give two whole sessions to facing the needs of labor. The debate is generally characterized as the most brilliant heard before that body in many years.

The issue was precipitated when the Methodist Federation for Social Service introduced a Statement on the Social Question. The Statement contains five sections, one devoted to Industrial Conditions, and one to Industrial Democracy.

Daily newspapers carried in headlines all over the country the statement that the Methodist Church went on record against organized labor. This is not true.

What really happened was that the Conference adopted the entire Statement on the Social Question including the section on Industrial Democracy. But it did strike out the words which committed the denomination to a preferential policy in its publishing and other business.

Very naturally the fight was waged around the concrete situation produced by the controversy between the Allied Printing Trades and the Methodist Book Concern. For a number of years the Methodist Federation for Social Service, under the leadership of Harry F. Ward has sought to secure an adjustment of the controversy which would be satisfactory to union labor but without avail. The introduction of this general principle of preference to union labor was an attempt to settle the question. What was wanted was a straight preferential policy.

But that particular part of the Report was lost by a vote of 447 to 280. One factor which helped to defeat the clause was a parliamentary tangle which confused the issue. Another feature which lost many votes was the injection of the race question. The 90 to 100 colored delegates, together with a good number of people interested in the welfare of the negro were undoubtedly influenced by the statement that the unions discriminated against negroes.

But notice what the Conference did adopt:—

"The first method of realizing democracy in industry is collective bargaining . . . . . The principle of collective bargaining being generally accepted, the urgent question is what method shall embody it. To recognize the principle without supporting some method that will make it effective is but to mock the hopes and struggles of the workers with barren words and to deserve their indignation and contempt."

After attention has been called to the methods of collective bargaining now in use, the conclusion is:

"It would naturally follow that since the church is itself a large employer of labor, directly and indirectly, it must itself in some way realize collective bargaining; either in one of the two forms which are now developing or in some other yet to be devised . . . . . In recognition of the price being paid by organized labor to improve the conditions of industry, on account of its general contribution to the community welfare, every possible endeavor should be made to work with it, insofar as its methods are just and insofar as the rights of unorganized men are not infringed upon."

Fully 75 to 90 per cent were in favor of adopting these principles and of making an earnest effort to work them out in practice. This is the present attitude of the large majority of the Methodist Church toward organized labor.

Three Hundred Thousand Miners Go to War

Tney Are Mostly Used for Tunnel Work

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, May 18, 1916.

Judging by the published reports it seems pretty clear that certainly some of the Irish trade union leaders have lost their lives during or after the Sinn Fein outbreak in Dublin. James Connelley, however, is still in the hospital with a wounded thigh. Liberty Hall remains a wreck. With regard to rebuilding that center of Dublin trade unionism, a curious point arises. The total estimated damage done to Dublin by incendiarism, looting, etc., is said to exceed $10,000,000. It is claimed that this loss should not fall upon the owners nor upon insurance companies; it should be made good by the British Government. Will the British Government, however, have to rebuild Liberty Hall? That would be a humorous finish to a very tragic episode.

A national convention of delegates of the Mihers' Federation of Great Britain is now sitting in London. A good deal of consideration has been devoted to the question of coal output at the present time, as many coal owners are urging temporary abrogation of the eight hour day and its substitution by a 9 or 10 hour day—this to make good the loss of men owing to the war. In this connection, by the way, it is estimated that something like 300,000 men have left the coal mines of Great Britain to either join the army as soldiers or to enlist in the special entrenching and tunnelling corps.

I notice that at this convention a letter from General Mackinnon regarding the securing of men employed at or in the pits to go to the front as tunnellers was considered. A report of a conference between coal owners and miners' representatives with the War Office was read, and also a reply from the War Office, which was considered satisfactory. As the matter was considered to be one of great urgency, it was decided by the conference to recommend that efforts should be made at once in various districts to enable the Government to secure the required number of volunteers. It is understood that the negotiations with the War Office related in part to the pay to be given to the miners who might enlist as tunnellers, and that the War Office have now indicated they are prepared to pay the men at the rate of $1.50 a day and the usual allowances.

Three years have passed since the British National Federation of Women Workers held their last convention, for twelve months ago it seemed hardly opportune to arrange the biennial meeting. Hence, on May 6th, when the delegates assembled in conference in London there was a long agenda. The president of the federation is Gertrude Tuckwell, and in the course of her opening address she dealt with some of the crises that women workers had to face at the outset of the war, when the weeks of slackness were followed by a rush of employment, and the opening up of new avenues of labor. But difficulties had been met. They had secured women assessors on munition boards, and could point in some instances to as much as $2.75 a week advance secured in wages.

Mary Masarthur, the honorary secretary, spoke of the success the federation had achieved in regard to the Munitions Amendment Act and in securing from the Ministry of Munitions a minimum wage. There is no shortage of women workers, save in certain very highly-skilled branches of industry. She paid high tribute to the way in which members belonging to all parties in the House of Commons had united to ensure that women should not be overworked. They had some powerful unions of women, as at Newcastle with 4,000 members, Redditch with 2,000, and Bristol with 1,000 members, and they hoped soon to be able to say that no member on munition work was earning less than 9 cents an hour.

The first resolution, standing in the name of the executive council, was:

That this conference of working class women, while recognizing that the scale of allowances and pensions of March 1, 1915, is a great improvement on the pre-war scale, still considers the allowances are insufficient to meet the needs of the case, in view of the excessive rise in the cost of living, and further considers the problem of house rents, raised by a wholesale enlistment of married men, cannot be met by a moratorium, which only accumulated

WESTINGHOUSE PROFITS CAUSE FAVORABLE TALK

When Company Gets Out of the Hole Employes to Get Their Share

(Special to the Tribune)

NEW YORK, May 29.—Considerable is being made here over the last statement of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Pittsburgh. The report shows that during the last fiscal year profits earned exceeded any previous year in the history of the company. Gross earnings were $50,269,000 and the net manufacturing profit, $9,429,895. The net income available for dividends, after the inclusion of interest and discounts and the payment of fixed charges, was $9,666,888. This is equivalent to 7 per cent on the preferred stock and 17.8 per cent on the $52,644,000 of common stock.

These profits do not include the substantial amounts always set aside for depreciation of property. The report states that an additional, or "special depreciation charge," is being made from month to month on the facilities being used for war orders.

However it requires immense profits in order to reestablish the prestige of the Company that suffered severe reverses during the last five or six years.

The present tremendous business is more of a God Send than that acquired in the natural course of business events or commercial pursuits.

Men were kept in employment by this big concern during the terrible business depression when in doing so the company was losing heavily. It is the opinion that when the company gets on a substantial financial footing the employes will also share in the success.

House Committee Condemns "Stop Watch" System

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The house committee on labor has ordered a favorable report of the anti-"stop watch" bill, introduced by Congressman Tavenner. Medical authorities, workers and others were quoted in opposition to these "speeding up" systems.

Congressman Browne dissented and in a minority report made favorable reference to the defense of the "stop watch" system by General Crozier, chief of ordnance, United States army, who has deliberately ignored a declaration on this subject by the last congress.

In the majority report it is stated that General Crozier "set about nullifying the effect of the 'rider' (anti-stop watch, passed by the last congress) on the military appropriation bill, and with the assistance of former Secretary (of War) Garrison and other officials of the department was almost successful."

It is further stated that: "The majority of your committee feels that the proponents of the bill made so strong a case that we are justified in urging congress to enact legislation needed to drive the 'stop watch' and bonus and premium systems from government shops.

"The opponents of this legislation have much to say about 'efficiency' and 'scientific shop management,' and they seek to create the impression that 'efficiency' can not be secured unless (a) the workman's every movement is timed by a 'stop-watch,' and (b) that the old system of the day's pay is abolished and bonuses and premiums substituted therefor.

"Your committee feels there is nothing in the evidence submitted at the hearings, or in the experience of mankind, to sustain either of these contentions.

"In this city we have the Washington navy yard, employing thousands of skilled mechanics. The 'stop watch' is not used there, and the commandant will assure you he has the 'most efficient body of mechanics ever gathered together inside one fence.'

"The workmen at the Rock Island arsenal have succeeded in defeating General Crozier's attempt to introduce the 'stop watch,' and they have demonstrated their 'efficiency' by producing munitions of war for very much less than the government pays contractors for the same articles.

"For instance, General Crozier tells us that a 3-inch gun carriage for which contractors asked the government $3,398.82 was produced in the Rock Island arsenal for $2,192.27, a saving of practically one third. And this is not an exceptional case. General Crozier is the author of the following tables, showing the difference between contract and arsenal costs, and your committee urges members of the house to carefully examine same.

"Is it necessary to still further 'speed up' workmen who have displayed the skill and industry needed to produce these results?

"The premium and bonus system of payment of employes are designed to supplement the 'stop watch' in stimulating the workers to the extreme limit of their physical endurance. When the human machine can no longer stand the strain a new one is to be substituted and the old one sent to the industrial scrap heap.

"The opponents of the legislation under discussion deny the truth of this statement, but there is a mountain of evidence to sustain the charge.

"In conclusion your committee would suggest:

"The system so persistently urged by General Crozier involves a fundamental, not to say revolutionary, change, (a) in determining what is a reasonable day's work for an employe in the national arsenals and workshops and (b) in the method of compensating the workers, to wit, the substitution of the 'bonus' or 'premium' system for the age-old 'day's-pay' system.

"The workers affected seem to be almost unanimous in their opposition to the change. They insist it will be oppressive to them and will be without benefit to the government.

"So intense is this feeling that an attempt to install the system in all the government workshops would, in the judgment of your committee, lead to very serious consequences.

"In view of these well-established facts, it seems to your committee it would be the height of folly to permit General Crozier to persist in his plan. Apparently, the only way to restrain him is to enact the bill under discussion, and your committee trusts the house will take prompt and favorable action."

WANT AN INVESTIGATION.

MILWAUKEE, May 29.—A number of local manufacturers have petitioned the state industrial commission to begin an investigation of hours of labor throughout the middle west with a view to showing that working hours in Milwaukee are as short as elsewhere. Officers of the Machinists' union have notified the commission that they will forego, for the present, their shorter hour demand and assist the commission in this investigation on condition that the inquiry includes the financial and industrial conditions of all the shops, and that the employers produce their books and "other evidences necessary to get all the facts."

Frank J. Weber, business agent of the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, said: "I do not believe, it should be given the power to force arbitration. That should be arranged at a round-table conference between employers and employes, where both can talk over matters, make suggestions and co-operate for their mutual welfare."

The Resurrection of Jesus.

REPORT OF CAIAPHAS TO THE SANHEDRIM CONCERNING THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

After having made the preceding record of Caiaphas, on unwinding the same scroll we found another report from him. It may be interesting to the reader to know what we mean by a scroll. It is similar to parchment. The Hebrew word numet means a pulp made from the bark of the reed into a paste, and dried in the sun until it is hard; when pressed and polished it shines beautifully, and its surface is as smooth as our paper. It is of two kinds: one is called papyrus, the other hierotike. The latter is more costly, and is used by priests alone. It is about sixteen inches wide, and is cemented together by a gum that exudes from a tree resembling our elm. It is written upon with some kind of indelible ink or paint, with a common reed quill, which is fashioned like our pens. The writing is done by the sopher, which is the Hebrew word for scribe. He is called grammateus by the Greeks. The report of Caiaphas is written in what is known as the square Hebrew. The letters are from a half-inch to an inch in size, so that one can imagine what a roll of parchment it would take to record a deed. It is read only with difficulty by the best Hebrew scholars, and they must have text-books to assist them. But after one has gotten the thread of the subject he can get along with it. This is the reason I got Dr. McIntosh to go with me. He and Dr. Twyman have been in the business for many years. The windlass, as it might be called (for it more resembles our common rope-winders than anything I can think of), is a square piece of timber, about three inches in diameter, to which the scroll is fastened at one end, around which it is rolled like a spool. At the proper distance are tied two transverse sticks to hold the parchment to its proper place. The windlass with the scroll is placed at one end of a table, and an empty windlass at the other end, so that as you unwind from the one to read, the scroll winds around the other. The letters are very distinct. There are hundreds of these arranged in rows. They are all lettered and numbered with their dates on them. This makes it easy to find anything desired. There is another class of books of fine sheep or goat skin, about eight by twelve inches. The writing on these is very fine and difficult to read. They are bound between cedar boards, with clasps, and contain from eight to forty sheets to the book. These are the kind of books of which Josephus wrote seventy-two.

But to return to Caiaphas's report. After unwinding several feet, as before stated, we came across another communication from Caiaphas; I hardly know whether to call it a resignation or a confession. One thing I do know, it is one of the most solemn things that I have ever read. We thanked God that we had come to Constantinople, and that Mohammed had given orders to preserve these sacred scrolls in the mosque of St. Sophia. It is as follows:

"Sanhedrim, 89. By Siphri II, 7.:

"To You, Masters of Israel: As I have made a former defence to you, and you have approved the same, I feel in duty bound to communicate to you some facts that have come to my knowledge since that communication. A few days after the execution of Jesus of Nazareth the report of his resurrection from the dead became so common that I found it necessary to investigate it, because the excitement was more intense than before, and my own life as well as that of Pilate was in danger. I sent for Malkus, the captain of the royal city guard, who informed me he knew nothing personally, as he had placed Isham in command of the guard; but from what he could learn from the soldiers the scene was awe-inspiring, and the report was so generally believed that it was useless to deny it. He thought my only chance was to suppress it among the soldiers, and have John and Peter banished to Crete, or arrested and imprisoned, and if they would not be quiet, to treat them as I had treated Jesus. He said that all the soldiers he had conversed with were convinced that Jesus was resurrected by supernatural power and was still living, and that he was no human being, for the light and the angels and the dead that came out of their graves all went to prove that something had happened that never occurred on earth before. He said that John and Peter were spreading it all over the country, and that if Jesus would appear at the head of a host, and declare for the king of the Jews, he believed all the Jews would fight for him. I sent for the lieutenant, who gave a lengthy account of the occurrence that morning, all of which I suppose you have learned, and will investigate. From this I am convinced that something transcending the laws of nature took place that morning, that cannot be accounted for upon natural laws, and I find it is useless to try to get any of the soldiers to deny it, for they are so excited that they cannot be reasoned with. I regret that I had the soldiers placed at the tomb, for the very things that they were to prevent they have helped to establish.

"After questioning the soldiers and officers to my satisfaction, my mind being so disturbed that I could neither eat nor sleep, I sent for John and Peter. They came and brought Mary and Joanna, who are the women that went to embalm Jesus's body the morning of the resurrection, as it is called. They were very interesting as they related the circumstances. Mary says that when they went day was just breaking. They met the soldiers returning from the sepulchre, and saw nothing strange until they came to the tomb, and found that it was empty. The stone that covered the sepulchre was rolled to one side, and two men dressed in flowing white were sitting, one at each end of the sepulchre. Mary asked them where was her Lord; they said, 'He is risen from the dead; did he not tell you he would rise the third day and show himself to the people, to prove that he was the Lord of life?' Go tell his disciples, said they. Joanna said she saw but one man; but this discrepancy must have been due to their excitement, because they say they were much alarmed. They both say that as they returned they met the Master, who told them that he was the resurrection and the life; all that will accept shall be resurrected from the second death. 'We fell at his feet, all bathed in tears, and when we rose up he was gone.' Both these women wept for joy while relating these circumstances, and John shouted aloud, which made me tremble in every limb, for I could not help thinking that something that was the exclusive work of God had occurred, but what it all meant was a great mystery to me. It might be, I said, that God had sent this message by the mouth of this stranger; it might be that he was the seed of the woman, and we his people had executed him.

"I asked John and Peter if they could give me any further evidence in regard to this man; that I wished to be informed of his private history. Peter said that Jesus passed by where he was, and bade him follow him, and he felt attracted to him, but at first it was more through curiosity than anything in the man; that he soon became acquainted with Mary, who told him that he was her son, and related to him the strange circumstances of his birth, and that she was convinced that he was to be the king of the Jews. She spoke of many strange things concerning his life, which made Peter feel more interested in him than he would have been otherwise. He said that Jesus was a man so pleasant in his character, and so like a child in innocence, that no one could help liking him after he got acquainted with him; that though he seemed to be stern and cold, he was not so in reality; that he was exceedingly kind, especially to the poor; that he would make any sacrifice for the sick and needy, and would spare no effort to impart knowledge to anyone that would call on him, and that his knowledge was so profound that he had seen him interrogated by the most learned doctors of the law and he always gave the most perfect satisfaction, and that the sopher or scribes, and the Hilleites, and Shammaites were afraid to open their mouths in his presence. They had attacked him so often and been repelled that they shunned him as they would a wolf; but when he had repelled them he did not enjoy the triumph as they did over others of whom they had gotten the ascendency. As to his private life, he seemed not to be a man of pleasure, nor of sorrow. He mingled with society to benefit it, and yet took no part at all in what was going on. I had heard many tell of what occurred when he was baptized, and from what his mother told me I was watching for a display of his divine power, if he had any, for I knew he could never be king of the Jews unless he did have help from on high. Once when we were attending a marriage-feast the wine gave out, and his mother told him of it, and he said to the men to fill up some water-pots that were sitting near, and they put in nothing but water, for I watched them, but when they poured it out it was wine, for it was tasted by all at the feast, and when the master found it out he called for Jesus to honor him, but he had disappeared. It seemed that he did not want to be popular, and this spirit displeased us, for we knew if he was to be king of the Jews he must become popular with the Jews. His behavior angered his mother, for she was doing all she could to bring him into notice, and to make him popular among the people, and the people could not help liking him when they saw him. Another peculiarity was that in his presence everyone felt safe. There seemed to be an almighty power pervading the air wherever he went so that everyone felt secure, and believed that no harm could befall them if Jesus were present. As we were in our fishing-boat I saw Jesus coming out toward us, walking on the water. I knew that if he could make the waves support him, he could me also. I asked him if I might come to him; he said to me to come, but when I saw the waves gathering around me I began to sink, and asked him to help me. He lifted me up, and told me to have faith in God. On another occasion we were sailing on the sea, and there was a great storm. It blew at a fearful rate, and all on board thought they would be lost; we awakened the master, and when he saw the raging of the storm he stretched out his hand and said, 'Peace, be still!' and the wind ceased to blow, the thunder stopped, the lightnings withdrew, and the billowing sea seemed as quiet as a babe in its mother's arms—all done in one moment of time. This I saw with my own eyes, and from that time I was convinced that he was not a common man. Neither did he work by enchantment like the Egyptian thaumaturgists, for in all their tricks they never attack the laws of nature. In vain might they order the thunder to hush, or the winds to abate, or the lightnings to cease their flashing. Again, I saw this man while we were passing from Jericho. There was a blind man, who cried out to him for mercy, and Jesus said to me, 'Go, bring him near,' and when I brought him near Jesus asked him what he wanted. He said he wanted to see him. Jesus said, 'Receive thy sight,' when he was not near enough for Jesus to lay his hands upon him or use any art. Thus were all his miracles performed. He did not act as the Egyptian necromancers. They use vessels, such as cups, bags, and jugs, and many other things to deceive. Jesus used nothing but his simple speech in such a way that all could understand him, and it seemed as if the laws of nature were his main instruments of action, and that nature was as obedient to him as a slave is to his master. I recall another occasion when a young man was dead, and Jesus loved his sisters. One of them went with Jesus to the tomb. He commanded it to be uncovered. The sister said, 'Master, by this time he is offensive; he has been dead four days.' Jesus said, 'Only have faith,' and he called the young man by name, and he came forth out of the tomb, and is living today,' and Peter proposed that I should see him for myself.

"Thus argue Peter and John. If Jesus had such power over nature and nature's laws, and power over death in others, he would have such power over death that he could lay down his life and take it up again as he said he would do. As he proposes to bring hundreds of witnesses to prove all he says, and much more—witnesses whose veracity cannot be doubted—and as I heard many of these things before from different men, both friends and foes (and although these things are related by his friends—that is, the friends of Jesus—yet these men talk like men of truth, and their testimony corroborates other evidence that I have from other sources, that convinces me that this is something that should not be rashly dealt with), and seeing the humble trust and confidence of these men and women, besides, as John says, thousands of others equally strong in their belief, it throws me into great agitation. I feel some dreadful foreboding—a weight upon my heart. I cannot feel as a criminal from the fact that I was acting according to my best judgment with the evidence before me. I feel that I was acting in defence of God and my country, which I love better than my life, and if I was mistaken, I was honest in my mistake. And as we teach that honesty of purpose gives character to the action, on this basis I shall try to clear myself of any charge, yet there is a conscious fear about my heart, so that I have no rest day or night. I feel sure that if I should meet Jesus I would fall dead at his feet; and it seemed to me if I went out I should be sure to meet him.

"In this state of conscious dread I remain investigating the Scriptures to know more about the prophecies concerning this man, but found nothing to satisfy my mind. I locked my door and gave the guards orders to let no one in without first giving me notice. While thus engaged, with no one in the room but my wife and Annas, her father, when I lifted up my eyes, behold Jesus of Nazareth stood before me. My breath stopped, my blood ran cold, and I was in the act of falling, when he spoke and said, 'Be not afraid, it is I. You condemned me that you might go free. This is the work of my Father. Your only wrong is, you have a wicked heart; this you must repent of. This last lamb you have slain is the one that was appointed before the foundation; this sacrifice is made for all men. Your other lambs were for those who offered them; this is for all, this is the last; it is for you if you will accept it. I died that you and all mankind might be saved.' At this he looked at me with such melting tenderness that it seemed to me I was nothing but tears, and my strength was all gone. I fell on my face at his feet as one that was dead. When Annas lifted me up Jesus was gone, and the door still locked. No one could tell when or where he went.

"So, noble Masters, I do not feel that I can officiate as priest any more. If this strange personage is from God, and should prove to be the Saviour we have looked for so long, and I have been the means of crucifying him, I have no further offerings to make for sin; but I will wait and see how these things will develop. And if he proves to be the ruler that we are looking for, they will soon develop into something more grand in the future. His glory will increase; his influence will spread wider and wider, until the whole earth shall be full of his glory, and all the kingdoms of the world shall be his dominion. Such are the teachings of the prophets on this subject. Therefore you will appoint Jonathan, or some one, to fill the holy place."

(We found that, soon after, Jonathan became high priest, though history teaches us differently.—Mahan.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 23.

I take pleasure in renewing my subscription to the paper that is more welcome than the flowers in May, because it contains the glad tidings which has cheered my heart so much, enabling me to know God—(to know Him is to love Him.) I can greatly sympathize with our friends in Christendom who must be truth hungry, as I was one of them and while sitting there in darkness I saw a great light through the "Studies in the Scriptures." That great light is 'Messiah's Kingdom at hand,' overthrowing evil and setting right on the foundation of justice. We rejoice that so many can take the stand for truth against so much error, and in subscribing to your valuable paper we are in our feeble way holding up your hands against tremendous odds. But cheer up, the Truth is mighty and shall prevail.

We wish you all the prosperity that can come to your heart and paper, in your noble efforts to serve God and man.

If Brother N. E. Nelson's essays are in pamphlet form I would like some copies as they so beautifully show the path of the just since the reformation.

Trusting that the disposal of the prizes will be a success to your paper and all concerned.

Yours in the love of Truth,
JAMES S. WATSON.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 22.

I renewed my subscription to the Tribune through Mr. Thomas Folks. I was behind through neglecting to attend to it. It should have been paid the first of the year. I want to tell you that we appreciate Pastor Russell's sermon is the reason we renew.

I remain yours respectfully,
EDW. G. BUGNER.

YPSILANTI, Mich, May 24.

I notice my subscription to the Tribune is nearly expired and as I do not wish to miss any of the papers have renewed through Watch Tower Society.

Have been a subscriber to your good paper nearly ever since it has been publishing the sermons and I assure you I appreciate its many good features—more especially the religious features. Sorry to note that so many of the dear friends are unable to take the paper and if I was able would just love to subscribe for them. Many years of success for our dear old friend The Tribune.

Your friend and well wisher,
L. B. PETTIBONE.

APPRECIATIONS.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, May 23.

Enclosed please find money order to pay for my renewal to the "Labor Tribune" or 1916. I see by the yellow label that my subscription expired the 7th inst. I cannot tell you in words how much I appreciate and love "The Dear old Tribune." It is just like a weekly visit from a very dear friend. This is my testimony, "There is no paper that prints Pastor Russel's sermons, that I like better or would accept in exchange for 'The National Labor Tribune.' And as long as I live I shall look forward each week to its visit in my home." That is, so long as it prints the Sermons of Pastor Russell and other religious matter so beautifully and so fearlessly. Wishing you much prosperity, joy and happiness during the New Year, I am your Friend.

MRS. J. S. PFISTER.

Ludlow, Mass., May 18.

I notice by the tag on the Labor Tribune that my subscription has expired or about to expire. I have to intimate to you that circumstances obliges to ask you to discontinue the Labor Tribune. I am running my 76 year now and not earning any money, but before parting I return you thanks for your good honest work and for your kindness by reserving space in your paper for Pastor Russell's weekly sermon. God bless you. You are sure to succeed and may have the largest circulation of any paper in the State of Pennsylvania.

I thank the Truth friend who first subscribed and gave it to me gratis. I may in the near future be able to have it for short period of time, but not now. Farewell for the present.

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN CRAIG.

Rocky Mount, N. C., May 20.

I wish to add another voice of thanks to the good editor of this paper for the part he is taking in the spread of the truth. I hope he gets time to meditate on the many good things he prints.

I also owe thanks to an unknown friends who is sending the paper to me. I would be very glad to know the friend's name who is presenting me with this favor. I have had the privilege of reading the paper for the past year, as I am rooming with a sister who subscribes for it. Yet I am glad to get it as I can mail or give it to others. Only I am loath to part with it, as it always contains some article that I especially want to keep, as things slip my memory so that I like to refresh it once in awhile.

We had the beautiful Photo Drama here recently, which was certainly enjoyed by all that saw it. The minds of many were refreshed with present truth. The fact that we were able to get them shown here was a clear manifestation of the Lord's loving care over his own, and has made us "strong in faith."

Praying that our salvation be nearer than when we first believed, as our deliverance means blessings to the poor groaning creation, and that the dear Lord may guide and keep His saints all the way. I am by His Grace

Yours in His Service,
MARY WHITEHEAD.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., May 25.

My Tribune for May 18th has not been received.

Will you please mail me a copy?

I do not wish to miss a single copy on account of Pastor Russell's Sermon and other Present Truth articles which I am preserving for future reference in scrap-books.

Yours respectfully,

NORTH TROY, N. Y., May 24.

I regret that I did not observe the notification tab, that my subscription has expired. The children open the paper at once, and love to read it first. Now I have never been the one who paid for it and did not attend to that. A dear sister in the Truth always paid for it on condition that I gave it to others who could not otherwise have it, I have sent it by mail and lent it from one to another. I wish I were financially able to still pay for it for it is the best of all. So please discontinue it. I am now 76½ years old, ill and can't expect to stay here long. God bless you for your fearless efforts to uphold the right in so many ways, and give you still more power to expose fraud and oppression. And for the Light you cause to shine over error and darkness through our dear Pastor Russell's sermons. God will see to it that you may be able, still to give the Truth no uncertain sound and your reward will surely follow.

Yours in the true message,
MRS. M. A. SMITH.

DAYTON, Ohio, May 25.

I failed to receive last week's Tribune, May 12th, will you please send me a copy of that issue as I do not wish to be without it. I surely appreciate the Tribune especially for its adherence to the principles of justice and Pastor Russell's sermons, and the large, clear type also the Labor news both home and foreign.

THE CALL OF THE WEST

Acts 16:6-15—June 4.

St. Paul's Second Missionary Tour. Marked Evidence of Divine Supervision of All the Interests of God's Church—The Gospel Sent to Europe.

"Come over into Macedonia and help us."—Verse 9.

FOR some time after the conference at Jerusalem St. Paul and Barnabas remained at Antioch. But seeing that there were many laborers there, and that a larger field was little worked, they planned a second missionary tour. Barnabas and his nephew John Mark went in one direction; while St. Paul went in another with Silas, with whom he had become acquainted at the Jerusalem conference and who is reported to have been a Roman citizen, as was St. Paul.

Their course lay through Syria and Cilicia to the cities of Derbe and Lystra. As they journeyed, they confirmed the faith of such as had been accepted of the Lord during the Apostle's first missionary tour. At Lystra they found Timothy, a young man well trained in the Scriptures by his Jewish mother and grandmother—his father being a Greek. Although devoutly reared, Timothy had never been circumcised. Therefore when it was determined that he should accompany St. Paul in his missionary tour, the Apostle caused him to be circumcised, lest otherwise it should become known to Jews in general with whom they should come into contact and should militate against Timothy.

"Come and Help Us."

We note that amongst the things presented to the Churches was the decision of the Council at Jerusalem that the Jewish Law should not be considered binding to the Gentiles, except in certain features noted in our last Study. After good success in the mission up to the point where our lesson begins, the Apostle had in mind a journey throughout Asia Minor. But apparently matters went unfavorably until he concluded that the Lord was hindering their efforts. Then in perplexity he began to think of other fields of labor.

St. Paul's moment of uncertainty was the Lord's opportunity for directing him. He dreamed that he saw a Macedonian beckoning to him and saying, "Come over and help us." The Apostle accepted this as of Divine leading, and promptly began the journey which took him into Europe. We have here an evidence of God's supervision of all the interests of His Church. He was not averse to permitting the Message to go into Asia Minor; for later it went there, possibly at a more opportune time. But this was the time to send it to Europe.

It is supposed that about now Luke the physician became attached to St. Paul's company. A man of education, a scribe as well as a physician, the Lord evidently provided him to be St. Paul's amanuensis, that thereby the Apostle's letters should reach many of God's people. Thus it was that he wrote not only a version of the Gospel, but also the Book of Acts and nearly all of St. Paul's Epistles.

Philippi Honored With the Gospel.

Philippi, one of the chief cities of Macedonia, appears to have been the first place for the preaching of the Good Tidings in Europe. As usual, on the Sabbath day the Apostle and his companions sought for some who worshiped God. Apparently there was no synagogue in Philippi. However, they heard of a little religious meeting held every Sabbath by the river, outside the city gate. Not having the facilities of a synagogue, the worshipers probably had no Scripture parchments, and hence no reading of the Law, but merely prayer and worship.

All this was favorable to the Gospel Message which the Apostle had to present. He spoke to those who resorted thither, commending the importance of praise to God. Then he proceeded to declare the Good Tidings of the sacrifice of Jesus, His death, His resurrection, and His Second Coming in power and great glory. Then he explained that the invitation was now being given for joint-sacrificers with Jesus, whose reward would be joint-heirship with Him in the Millennial Kingdom, as members of His Body, the Church.

Lydia's Household.

However few or many were at the meeting, there was one present whose heart was in the right condition to receive the Message—a woman named Lydia, from Thyatira, in Asia Minor, a dealer in purple. Dyes were much more expensive then than now, and the secret knowledge of how to make them was turned to financial profit. Thus it is supposed that Lydia was in quite comfortable circumstances financially. Not only did the Truth open her heart, but she was prompt to obey it in full consecration, and prompt to symbolize that consecration in water baptism—"she and her household."

The fact that her household believed implies that Lydia had adult children. We may infer that she was a widow, since her husband is not mentioned. Hence it was her right, without conference with anybody, to invite the Apostle and his companions to share the hospitality of her home.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass, May 26.

I just feel like I want to write and tell you how I appreciate the Labor Tribune. When I have so many Friends, (and the Editor included) and have not the time and stamps to spare, why can just write one letter to the Tribune and let that do for a good many at one writing. I was glad to see so many in the last number that it interested in the great and good work that is going on now from North to South and from East to West. There are names of Friends I would like to call over, but I must not take up too much of the dear Editor's time. May the Lord help us to be firm and strong to end of the narrow is one of my many prayers I trust is going up to the Heavenly Throne.

Lovingly and respectfully,
J. D. GOULD.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

The Tribune has on file over 100 names of friends of the Truth who want the paper for 1916. The Tribune has no fund to pay for subscribers of the kind referred to and we would appreciate, and the Truth friends also, if any of our friends desire to pay for a year's subscription to any of the ones referred to. We will not hereafter publish the name of the donors to said fund, but will send to any one paying for any of the above the names and addresses of any such, so that they may, if they wish, write them to see if we are fulfilling our obligation. ALL SEEK WEALTH WHO GET THE BEST?

A GODLY HEART AND A CONTENTED MIND THE ONLY SOURCE OF REAL GAIN.

Basic Cause of Man's Discontent—The Way to Lost Treasure—True Riches Found Only in God—Source and Results of True Contentment—Man's Vital Need of Fellowship With His Creator—Church of Christ Finds True Wealth Now—World of Mankind Will Find it Later, When Man Has Found His God—Those Who Find God Now Have Greatest Gain.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Pastor Russell was here today, and delivered a very practical address, taking for his text, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." (1 Timothy 6:6.) We report his discourse in part:

Six thousand years ago, away back in Eden, man met with an irretrievable loss. He lost his relationship to God. He lost his right to life, and came under the penalty of death, through disobedience. Ever since that time man has unceasingly searched for his lost treasure, has searched for happiness and for rest of mind and heart. Few have known the truth concerning man's lost estate, and few have found the way back to God. The quest for the labled fountain of youth has been unavailing. Man has continued to die ever since the death sentence was pronounced upon Father Adam.

At the time when our first parents were driven from their Eden home into the unprepared earth, there to earn their bread by sweat of face until the death sentence should be fully carried out, a vague promise of restoration was made them. Later, this promise was still more plainly stated to Abraham. Four thousand years after the fall of Adam our Lord Jesus came to earth to lay down the great Ransom-price for man's deliverance, and open the way whereby Adam and all his posterity might regain that which was lost, and once more be godly.

Today's text draws to our attention the true gain which man so long has sought in vain, and suggests how that gain is to be obtained. The Apostle is especially addressing the saints of God, those who have learned of Him and are seeking to meet the conditions for gaining the true and lasting wealth. Only these are the godly; only these can have true contentment. There is a sort of contentment, however, which even the worldly may possess—a slothfulness of mind, a carelessness, an indolence. But this is not real contentment, and can bring no gain. Such contentment is not advantageous to anyone. It is merely an apathy of the brain. But so surely as God has given us brains, just so surely does He expect that we shall use them.

TRUE CONTENTMENT BASED ON GODLINESS.

The contentment of our text has a good basis and the best of reasons for its existence. This contentment is born of faith in God, of acceptance of his terms of salvation from death, of study of the Message which He has sent through His Son. Everything that the Word of God directs us to do and to be implies perfect Wisdom on God's part. Therefore those who have come to know Him and to trust Him are becoming more and more pleased with everything in that Word. They rejoice to have found the true wisdom. They find, as the Apostle expresses it, that "the wisdom that is from Above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and of good fruits."—James 3:17.

Since the godliness and the contentment which bring great gain come only from God and a knowledge of His Word, whoever has learned this secret can be content under all conditions. To this class the Master said, "Take no thought for the morrow." He did not mean that they should be improvident, making no provision whatever beyond the needs of the present day. By careful attention to His words and to the general teaching of Scripture we see that our Lord referred to the taking of anxious thought, to a failure to exercise faith in our Father's loving care over His children.

God's Word instructs us to take proper thought for the morrow, and gives us the ant as an illustration of thrift and provident care for the future. (Proverbs 6:6-8; 30:25.) But as children of God we should be free from worry and anxious foreboding; for these indicate a lack of faith. We are to "do with our might what our hands find to do," and then to trust in the Lord for the rest. He has promised to care for all our needs, and to cause all things to work together for good to those who love Him.

In our text St. Paul puts godliness first. This quality the world does not now possess. When Adam was created, he had this likeness to God in his mental organism. Created in the image of God, He had fellowship with his great Creator. But when sin entered, it disturbed the relationship which Adam had sustained to God as His son. (Luke 3:38.) Then God cast him off from further communion with Himself. Adam lost all the privileges of a son of God, and was thenceforth permitted to take his own course. He has taken it, with all his posterity; and mankind will see where it will all end. After six thousand years it has brought the world into a very deplorable condition.

PRESENT CONDITIONS PROVE NEED OF GOD.

We look over into Europe, whose people are supposed to lead the world in intelligence and civilization. There we see them in the most lamentable and abject condition, fighting—not like saints, against their own weaknesses and blemishes, but against one another—like demons. Oh, what an illustration of what man will retrograde to when God lets go of him and leaves him to his own devices! And this is the great lesson which God designs that man shall learn.

We need to keep ourselves in the love of God—in the condition where we shall love God and He will love us. We need to realize that if we thus do, then all things shall go well with us; but that if we fail to do this, all shall go wrong, as they have in the world. As we look back over the past six thousand years of sin and death, and behold the results—the sickness, disease, sorrow, insanity, death, the funerals, the cemeteries, the terrible wars and pestilences, etc.—we aare led to exclaim, "Oh, that our race were back in the original likeness of God, where all could be God-like, where love would dominate instead of hatred, where life and peace would prevail instead of turmoil, strife and death!"

RANSOM AND RESTITUTION.

Here the Bible comes in and tells us of God's great arrangement for the recovery of the race of Adam. The image of God lost by the first Adam is to be restored by the second Adam—the Lord Jesus Christ, as the Kink of earth and the new Father of mankind. And since Mother Eve had a share in the sin which brought death into the world, so the second Eve, the Bride of Christ, will have a share in the regeneration of the world of mankind. That second Eve will be the glorified "Church of the First-borns."

The Church will not give life to the world; for life comes from the father. The life of the world was originally in Adam; and when Adam was condemned, the life of the world was lost. Adam alone was sentenced to death. His children all go into death; not because of their individual trial and death sentence, but simply because Adam, haying failed to maintain his perfection, was unable to give his children what he himself did not possess. By one man the whole trouble came. By another Man the whole trouble will be rectified. This is pointed out by St. Paul, who says, "As by a man came death by a man comes also the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive—every man in his own order."—1 Corinthians 15:21-23.

As Adam was the original life-giver to the world, and as Eve was the nourisher or care-taker of that life, so our Lord Jesus will be the second Life-giver, and the Church, the Bride of Christ, will be their nourisher and caretaker—training, discipling, teaching, and uplifting the world to human perfection. Our Lord Jesus, the Redeemer of mankind, has the right to restore to man the life which was lost in Eden. He will be the great Regenerator of the human race. To his disciples of old He said, "In the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Isreal."—Matthew 19:28.

The time of this Regeneration will be the time of the Millennial Reign of Righteousness. Regeneration means re-creation. Man has gone into death; and God's Purpose is that he shall be restored to life, under the provisions which he has made in His Son. Only the finally incorrigible will fail to gain this great gift of God to man. (Romans 6:23.) These will be destroyed in the Second Death.

How happy we are to know all this—to know that God has a Plan whereby the race which has gone down into death is to be restored to life! In Acts 3:19-23 the Apostle Peter tells us of this glad time for the worl ,dand styles it "Times of Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began."

"THE SONG OF MOSES AND THE LAMB."

How happy this knowledge makes our hearts! We can now sing "the song of Moses and of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvelous are Thy works, Lord God Almighty! Just and true are Thy ways, Thou King of saints! Who shall not fear Thee, O Lord, and glorify Thy name; for Thou only art holy. For all nations come and worship before Thee; for Thy righteous acts are made manifest." (Revelation 15:3, 4.) They are manifested to the saints now, but not yet to the world.

By the eye of faith the Church can discern that this is God's great Plan. Others do not see because they have not this eye of faith. But we do not berate them for their blindness. On the contrary, we are sorry for them. And so with the world of mankind. They perceive not, neither do they understand. We rejoice, however, that this blindness will not be an injury to them in the future, but that in God's due time all the blind eyes shall be opened, all the deaf ears unstopped. Then they shall have a share in the Restitution work.—Isaiah 35:5.

The glorified Church of Christ will have a most blessed work in the succoring of the world of mankind. How glad we are that we have such a high and Heavenly Calling! We should rejoice in this, not only because we are to be made partakers of the Divine nature, but because we are to be used of the Lord as the great Mother Eve to be the caretaker of the world. We can think of nothing that would give us more pleasure than what God has provided for us. In past years, when we were taught that when raised to the Heavenly condition we would sit upon a cloud and play a harp, we used to wonder what it was all for. We guessed a few things; and we generally guessed wrong. Now we see that our Heavenly Father has a much more profitable way for us to spend our time when we reach the Kingdom. Now we see the rich provisions of grace which God has in reservation for His people.

PROVISION FOR THE CHURCH UNIQUE.

However, in our text the Apostle is not speaking of the future, but of the present. It is to those who are now God's consecrated people that he declares, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." In what sense is the Church now godly? We have not been restored to perfection. We have not had the original godliness in flesh brought back to us, such as Adam originally enjoyed. But there is a feature of God's Plan now operating by which He provides for the class called to be the Church. He is working all things according to the counsel of His will and in an orderly way. He has made an especial arrangement in Christ, whereby during the Gospel Age those who desire to avail themselves of His great offer to leave the world and to join with Christ in His sacrifice, may be able to do so.

By nature the Church class are of the condemned race of Adam, as are all the world. But God has arranged that these may be justified by faith, may have a reckoned standing with the Father through the imputation of the sacrificial merit of Christ, and thus may be counted as perfect, all their weaknesses and blemishes being covered from God's sight through this merit. Thus they may present themselves to God as sharers in Christ's sacrifice, and be accepted of Him. Christ imputes to each one whatever that one lacks of perfection.

We are justified through the blood of Christ. Thus we can give up our little all to God, who accepts us and begets us with His Holy Spirit; and we are then made members of the Body of Christ. But we must present all that we have. We must hold nothing back. Our dear Lord Jesus gave all that He had, when He came to earth to die for mankind. He gave everything in order to purchase the "field"—the world—and the "treasure hid in the field"—the Church. (Matthew 13:44.) If we are to join Him in His sacrifice, we must have the same spirit. We cannot give as much as He did; but if we give all that we possess—our will, our time, our affection, our influence—we are doing just as He did. We cannot give more than we have.

We are to have "the mind that was in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 2:5.) If we had perfect bodies, we would give perfect bodies; but we give what we have. We come to the Father, not in our own name, but through Christ our great Advocate. When we present ourselves, Jesus, our great High Priest, offers us to the Father, and guarantees that we shall be sacrificed. Then the Father accepts us and begets us with His Holy Spirit. We are now New Creatures, with new hopes, new aims, new ambitions and prospects. 2 Corinthians 5:17. We have a new mind—a desire to do God's will and to have His will done in us. Now we are to go on and develop more and more of the mind of Christ, growing in character-likeness to our Saviour.

GROWTH IN GODLINESS.

Day by day we are on trial as New Creatures. We are to overcome the old nature with its tendencies. Daily the Lord our God proves us to see the depth of our loyalty to Him and to the principles of righteousness. He tests us as to our love for Him, for our brethren, for our neighbor. Are we daily putting on more and more the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, love? If so, we are progressing favorably; and continuing thus to the end of our course, we shall attain the prize. If we are doing the best we can, this is all that the Lord will require of us.

This matter of godliness is in our minds—the harmony of our mind with the mind of God. As the Apostle assures us, we find a continual warfare between our new mind and our fallen flesh. (Galatians 5:17.) If we have no such warfare, something is wrong; for every true child of God has this warfare. Our flesh was born under sin, and is in accordance with the world. Our new mind is begotten from Above, and is in accordance with God and with Heavenly things. So we are continually striving to keep the body under, to bring it into subjection to the mind of Christ. (1 Corinthians 9:27.) It is a fight to a finish. One or the other must die.—Romans 8:13.

It is well to note that the Apostle does not say that contentment alone is great gain, but that GODLINESS with contentment is great gain. Truly he who is godly in character, he who is God-like, whose heart is content, resting in the precious promises of God's Word, serving the Lord with gladness, is rich. If, as children of God, we are looking to Him for His providential leadings in all life's affairs, trusting Him while we endeavor to do our best to please Him, then we have learned that "Godliness with contentment is great gain."

Essay V.

GOD'S THREE REVELATIONS.

Near the opening of this essay we pointed out two kinds of religion: (1) the natural or emotional, the product of love; (2) and the rational or spiritual, the product of Truth, a spiritual begetting of the Spirit of God. We also noted, from citations from Beecher, that his religion consisted chiefly of the natural or intuitive and suggested that the circumstances of being married to one who was not his affinity indicated that it was the product of his unrequieted love. Beecher's gospel of magnifying the love of God by his humanitarian spirit continued as such as long as did his unrequieted love. About the time he became infected with Darwinism he fell in love with Mrs. Theodore Tilton, a member of his congregation, who could reciprocate his culture. Whether his evolutionary ideas was nursed by his Platonic love or whether his love was foistered by his Darwinian views, matters little; the facts are that they came at about the same time. Beecher insists that his new views of Christianity was not a new religion but an elaboration of the gospel he had preached during his entire ministry: "it has revolutionized those beliefs only to make them more spiritual, more hopeful, more full of the divine life" . . . "Do you suppose, from my nature and my whole example, I could go into the course of sermons that I have preached, and into the course of sermons that, God willing, I will preach yet, for any other reason than that I believe that the new view is to give to religion a power and a scope and a character such as has never yet been taken and known in the world at large?" This confirms the thought that all his religion consisted of the natural, but it retrograded by becoming more materialistic and more in the direction of Agnosticism and effected his social life to a marked degree as we shall presently note concerning his love affairs.

We have heretofore pointed out, in Essay III, Caption: Theology, History, Science, (Tribune issue Dec. 2, 1916), three distinct sources of Truth: (1) the Bible being pre-eminent.

The Bible contains, in the strictest sense of the term, Spiritual Truths, in addition to the Natural. The other two sources, Man and Nature, contain only the natural and are closely related; in fact Man is the highest expression of Nature, all Nature concentrated, Nature's counterpart. Or, as Emerson puts it: "All that is known or worth knowing is cunningly wrought into the texture of Man and Woman." The secrets of our constitution are unlocked in the personal relations—of Love, Friendship and Benevolence; man's intuition and reason is vitualized and brought into play in experience and experience produces history. History is an instructive product of man's endowment—it is reason and intuition applied in life. All history exists in Man, as the oak in the acorn—history is man applied.

Beecher's religion was the product of his love, a natural religion—the product of Benevolence. His love was unrequited and his Beacon says, "if not spent on one or few, doth naturally enlarge itself and maketh man human and charitable." This condition often precedes the superior religion but it requires something more, namely—Repentance. Beecher's "new life" or conception of Diety, which dawned upon him in the Ohio woods, was not accompanied by a consciousness of sin in his own experience as outlined from the seventh chapter of Romans. Luther's early experience in life was in line with St. Paul's as presented, and this, Repentance, is the proper basis for the superior religion and appreciation of Spiritual things. The key-note of the Reformation—"the just shall live by faith"—was the product of Luther's sin-sickness in his early life and his appreciation of spiritual things. Beecher's limitations in this direction is indicated by his conception of the Bible; he says it is "the gradual and progressive unfoldment of human knowledge in respect to social and spiritual (philosophical) things through vast periods of time." Apparently he saw only the natural features of the Bible—the history of Man and its lessons to the exclusion of the spiritual truths taught therein, and appreciated many of the lessons of Science. He recognized only two of the three sources of truth: Man and Nature; in his own words: "the great truth of two revelations—God's building revelation of the material globe, and God's building revelation in the unfolding of the human mind."

It appears that Beecher saw these two sources of Truth and some of the natural features of the Bible, to the exclusion of the higher spiritual teachings relating to God's plan of redemption. St. Paul's statement concerning spiritual things finds no place in his system: "We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained unto our glory." Nor the prayer of Christ to the Father: "thou hath hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Beecher did not repudiate these texts but did the equivalent by taking issue with Luther's "secret council of God." Other statements of Beecher concerning the Bible reveals his spiritual vision to be limited: "the book which has reached the highest conception of God yet attained by human consciousness;" "gives the only grand ideal of manhood known to literature;" a "living book with power of inspiring men with the noblest desires;" a "book that creates life." From these statements it will be readily seen that he anticipated much of the Higher Criticism Infidelity of Briggs, Swing, Dr. Eliot and others.

Pastor Russell may be properly said to be Higher Critic, but is decidedly constructive, not destructive. In his criticism he approaches the Bible reverently. In this he rectifies much of the wrong to which Beecher contributed in placing the Bible on a level with the great men by denying its plenary inspiration. Russell's Photo-Drama of Creation was intended to head off the wave of infidelity that is now flooding Christendom. In this he has drawn considerably from the other two sources of truth: History and Science, and shows by a detailed comparison the remarkable correspondency which could not have been had the Bible been the product of the human mind, and thus clinches his contention against Destructive Higher Criticism, that the Bible is of Divine origin, a Divinely inspired book, by checking it in the light of the recognized sources of truth of Higher Critics—History and Science.

NAMING NEXT PRESIDENT

G. O P. IN CONVENTION IN CHICAGO TO NAME WINNING CANDIDATE

The First Stages of the Convention Dramatically Told by the Tribune Correspondent--The Favorite Son Business Being Played to Perfection by Many.

(Special Correspondent to National Labor Tribune)

CHICAGO, Ill., June 7.—The National Republican party is in the midst of its quadrennial conflict and this smashing preconvention fight promises to outrival anything in the history of the Grand Old Party.

The political strategists of the Straight Republicans under the title of the "Old Guards" are under cover in the Congress Hotel while just across the street in the Auditorium Hotel are housed the Progressives and up to the present time Managing Editor Alexander P. Moore of the Pittsburgh Leader and a delegate to the National Convention from the 31st Pennsylvania district is the gobetween.

Editor Moore, a hail fellow well met, and well qualified for the distinguished office of bringing about amicable relations but the difficulties are so collossal that failure threatens the whole Progressive party.

Theodore Roosevelt and Charles Evens Hughes hold the center of the stage but a conservative prediction is, both these remarkable men will be bowled out of the running and another greater than either of these, in the opinion of the candidate makers, will be trotted out before the American people.

Massachusetts has a candidate but there is but little hope. Root of New York has been crushed by George W. Perkins and the Progressives, if harmony is to be visible upon the political horizon.

Ohio wants Theodore Burton and the Buckeye Statesmen are already planning to storm the convention through a pyrotechnic display of oratory and a diplomatic move for Chairmanship while Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania has practically gone into hiding, his boom that once bore the beauty and magnificence of a soap bubble in the sunlight has been shattered by a cruel lake breeze.

SAMUEL C. JAMISON

Who is Helping to Nominate the Next President.

Governor Johnston of California and William Allen White, the Kansas author, hold the Middle West and the Pacific Slope of the Progressives and they with George W. Perkins of New York, Van Valkenburg of Philadelphia and William Flinn of Pittsburgh of the East Colonel Roosevelt and his ambitions.

The controversy between the "Old Guards" and the Progressives is amusing and it has been a marathon for the go-between but the humor developed into seriousness when Mr. Perkins with Bull Moose viciousness hurled his challenge into the teeth of the enemy thus:

"I am for harmony and will work day and night but not for one minute will I lose sight of the fact that you can pay too high a price for almost anything and you certainly can pay too high a price for harmony.

"We could have had harmony with England in 1776 if we had paid the price England demanded. We could have had harmony in 1860 but we would have had no country as a result. We would have had no such glorious future as we had after both of these struggles.

"Now, I for one, as deeply imbued with the belief that we are facing just such as momentous a struggle, with just as important questions to decide, as existed in 1776 and 1860. These questions are internal and external.

If we evade them, compromise or temporize with them, they will simply come back to plague us in the immediate future and come back with greater force and virulence.

"This being my belief, I, for one, will not consent to any arrangement that is simply postponing the day of settlement."

This sounds the warning to the "Old Guards" and the latter are piling up impossible concessions. Even in the face of these exasperating threats. At first it was conjectured the better feeling would be eliminated since no contest was made by the Progressives but the situation grows more intricate and alarming while the doubt increases as the final conflict approaches.

Warren G. Harding of Ohio, will call the Convention together and this start for Ohio may be of such importance as to keep the Buckeye State in the lead from start to finish.

P. C. KNOX

Who is Looming Big as a Presidential Possibility.

E. V. BABCOCK

One of the Leaders in the Pennsylvania Delegation.

However, the Favorite Sons will be given the complimentary ballot and the real damage will follow.

In the meantime while the National Republican Committee is arranging the detail, drafting the plans and preparing the specifications so that no slip shall occur the Pennsylvania delegation is busy arranging for its political future and selecting suitable timber for State leadership a candidate for Governor to succeed Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh. The choice comes to the western end of the state providing the central section has nothing stronger to offer and the indications are that Pittsburgh will be given the honor providing the selection made in Chicago will meet the approval of those left behind.

The delegations here have looked "with pride" upon E. V. Babcock, the Pittsburgh lumberman and the very mention of his name seems to whisper abundance of enthusiasm among the Eastern delegates as well as those from the Central part of the State.

After closely scrutenizing the merits and the virtues of the timberman the delegates and those in the Keystone delegation feel they have a man of ability and intellect with whom to go to the voters and the candidate being free of political office no public scandal can be heralded across the state unless an effort should be made to delve into man's private ventures for alleged discrepancies but such tactics failed when inflicted upon Hon. John K. Tener in his race for the Governorship and they must eventually fail under all circumstances.

Babcock it is contended is a successful businessman of diversified interests, liberal in conception of administration and broad in his view on matters affecting the people. He is recognized as generous in desire to meet the demands of labor and is exceptionally active in the creation of legislative matters that will encourage industry as well as provide new fields of labor. He is neither impetuous nor impulsive; he is conservative but energetic. His support will come from both labor and the commercial and financial interests. Babcock is not a politician neither is he ambitious. His entrance into politics was a matter of aiding others rather than exalting himself. He seeks no office but others are trying to thrust upon him an honor which he casts aside as willing as Caesar three times cast aside the crown.

The cry here is unanimous from the Pennsylvanians for Babcock and while the politicians are working out the details in matters effecting the Nation the delegates of the Keystone State are twining garlands about the brow of Babcock and pushing him out into the field of conflict where he must lead to success the hosts who are prepared to follow and the leadership is toward Harrisburg and the prize is that now held by Governor Brumbaugh.

Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong who led the Pennsylvania delegates from the Western End of the State to the Convention has intimated that hereafter he will take personal charge of the Republican organization and that he will give personal attention to the demands of the political workers. This attitude on the part of the Mayor is the result of demands made upon him and he has consented to listen to those who are urgently pressing him for a more perfect organization.

HON. WM. COLEMAN

Elected Chairman Republican County Committee Saturday.

The administration, it is contended, has been exceptionally lax in constructing a faultless machine and the peculiar mechanism has caused the organization to wabble on several occasions.

The recent overthrow of Alpern has brought to light many imperfections and it is essential that these be overcome.

Coroner Samuel C. Jamison who has assumed the burden of responsibility has the approval here as well as the unqualified endorsement as a candidate for mayor to succeed the present incumbent, but whatever the drug compounder has in mind he is reluctant to make any comment on the persistency of friends who are thrusting upon him mayoralty honors.

Chairman Jamison has proven himself a remarkable successful chairman and his ability to organize the County and secure the greatest results from the workers has already been demonstrated.

The man whom Jamison must defeat, as a candidate for Mayor, according to the delegation here is William A. Magee, and the campaign issues of Jamison's opposition are traction legislation and the Ohio and Lake Erie Ship Canal. It is claimed that Magee will form an alliance with Dr. G. A. Dillinger, and J. D. O'Neil is pressing Dillinger into the Magee ranks.

Edward D. Friebertshauser, treasurer of Allegheny County, is a stout supporter of Chairman Jamison and Friebertshauser is among those who is urging Jamison to permit the use of his name for Mayor.

Jamison hesitates to announce his candidacy and will not until his friends indicate sufficient interest to justify a definite position.

Magee fears only one thing, that George W. Guthrie may return from the Orient and become a candidate, but the self centered Democrat is not certain of support and it is absolutely certain that men like W. H. Stevenson will not be dragged into supporting the worthless donothing in any more of his ambitions.

However while the local situation is being discussed the bands here are playing and each state is creating pandemonium over its favorite son. This joy will linger for a few days and the exuberance will result in grief—Chicago now is a city of music and cheering, with gray haired men shouting themselves hoarse over some political favorite—and the hotel accommodations are scarce while prices have increased to such proportions that they border upon extortion.

J. H. V.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 6.—There was no opposition to the leadership of United States Senator Boies Penrose in the caucus of the Pennsylvania delegation held this afternoon. He was the unanimous choice for chairman of the delegation and member of the National Committee. Gov. Martin G. Brumbaugh did not attend.

John Wanamaker of Philadelphia made a plea for a united delegation in the convention and a united party in the nation. He urged the Pennsylvanians to follow the leadership of Senator Penrose. Similar speeches were made by Alba B. Johnson of Philadelphia, and Senator W. C. Sproul of Delaware.

Senator Penrose said that he wanted the help of every delegate in working out the problems and proposed that daily caucuses be held. At present he said no one could pick the nominee of the convention. He told the delegates he was in a position to know a good deal about what is going on and he would gladly take them into his confidence. There was an understanding that there would not be a roll call in the caucus today, except the one to determine who was present. This disclosed that Gov. Brumbaugh and John A. Bell of Allegheny county were the two absentees.

"ED" FRIEBERTSHAUSER.

Treasurer of the Republican County Committee.

In the distribution of convention honors, none went to the Brumbaugh-Vare forces. Men in accord with the leadership of Senator Penrose were unanimously selected. The opponents of Mr. Penrose knew that he had the votes and thought it useless to make any opposition to his program. Senator William E. Crow of Uniontown, chairman of the Republican state committee, and a delegate from the Twenty-third District, called the caucus to order. Judge Charles L. Brown of Philadelphia offered a resolution naming Senator Penrose chairman of the delegation. The Senator thanked the delegates for his unanimous election. D. L. Gillespie of Pittsburgh named W. Harry Baker of Harrisburg as secretary of the delegation.

The following resolution designated the following committee assignments:

William W. Griest, Lancaster, vice president of the national convention.

James S. Beacon, Greensburg, credentials committee.

United States Senator George T. Oliver, Pittsburgh, resolutions committee.

John S. Fisher, Indiana, permanent organization committee.

Guy W. Moore, Wilkes-Barre, rules and order of business committee.

John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, committee to notify the nominee for president.

PILATE'S REPORT.

VALLEUS'S NOTES.—ACTA PILATI, OR PILATE'S REPORT TO CAESAR OF THE ARREST, TRIAL, AND CRUCIFIXION OF JESUS.

Valleus Paterculus, a Roman historian, was nineteen years old when Jesus was born. His works have been thought to be extinct. I know of but two historians that make reference to his writings, Priscian and Tacitus, who speak of him as a descendant of an equestrian family of Campania. From what we gather from these writers, Valleus must have been a close friend of Caesar, who raised him by degrees until he became one of the great men of Rome, and for sixteen years commanded the army. He returned to Rome in the year 31 and finished his work, which was called Historia Romania. He held the office of praetor when Augustus died, and while Vinceus was consul.

Valleus says that in Judea he met a man called Jesus of Nazareth, who was one of the most remarkable characters he had ever seen; that he was more afraid of Jesus than a whole army, for he cured all manner of diseases and raised the dead, and when he cursed the orchards or fruit-trees for their barrenness, they instantly withered to their roots. After referring to the wonderful works of Jesus, he says that, although Jesus had such power, he did not use it to injure any one, but seemed always inclined to help the poor. Valleus says the Jews were divided in their opinion of him, the poorer class claiming him as their king and their deliverer from Roman authority, and that if Jesus should raise an army and give it the power he could sweep the world in a single day; but the rich Jews hated and cursed him behind his back, and called him an Egyptian necromancer, though they were as afraid of him as of death (Valleus Paterculus, b. 72, found in the Vatican at Rome).

PILATE'S REPORT.

"To Tiberius Ceasar, Emperor of Rome.

"Noble Sovereign, Greeting: The events of the last few days in my province have been of such a character that I will give the details in full as they occurred, as I should not be surprised if, in the course of time, they may change the destiny of our nation, for it seems of late that all the gods have ceased to be propitious. I am almost ready to say, Cursed be the day that I succeeded Vallerius Flaccus in the government of Judea; for since then my life has been one of continued uneasiness and distress.

"On my arrival at Jerusalem I took possession of the praetorium, and ordered a splendid feast to be prepared, to which I invited the tetrarch of Galilee, with the high priest and his officers. At the appointed hour no guests appeared. This I considered an insult offered to my dignity, and to the whole government which I represent. A few days after the high priest deigned to pay me a visit. His deportment was grave and deceitful. He pretended that his religion forbade him and his attendants to sit at the table of the Romans, and eat and offer libations with them, but this was only a sanctimonious seeming, for his very countenance betrayed his hypocrisy. Although I thought it expedient to accept his excuse, from that moment I was convinced that the conquered had declared themselves the enemy of the conquerors; and I would warn the Romans to beware of the high priests of this country. They would betray their own mother to gain office and a luxurious living. It seems to me that, of conquered cities, Jerusalem is the most difficult to govern. So turbulent are the people that I live in momentary dread of an insurrection. I have not soldiers sufficient to suppress it. I had only one centurian and a hundred men at my command. I requested a reinforcement from the prefect of Syria, who informed me that he had scarcely troops sufficient to defend his own province. An insatiate thirst for conquest to extend our empire beyond the means of defending it, I fear, will be the cause of the final overthrow of our whole government. I lived secluded from the masses, for I did not know what those priests might influence the rabble to do; yet I endeavored to ascertain, as far as I could, the mind and standing of the people.

"Among the various rumors that came to my ears there was one in particular that attracted my attention. A young man, it was said, had appeared in Galilee preaching with a noble unction a new law in the name of the God that had sent him. At first I was apprehensive that his design was to stir up the people against the Romans, but my fears were soon dispelled. Jesus of Nazareth spoke rather as a friend of the Romans than of the Jews. One day in passing by the place of Siloe, where there was a great concourse of people, I observed in the midst of the group a young man who was leaning against a tree, calmly addressing the multitude. I was told it was Jesus. This I could easily have suspected, so great was the difference between him and those listning to him His golden-colored hair and beard gave to his appearance a celestial aspect. He appeared to be about thirty years of age. Never have I seen a sweeter or more serene countenance. What a contrast between him and his hearers, with their black beards and tawny complexions!

"Unwilling to interrupt him by my presence, I continued my walk, but signified to my secretary to join the group and listen. My secretary's name is Manlius. He is the grandson of the chief of the conspirators who encamped in Etruria waiting for Cataline. Manlius had been for a long time an inhabitant of Judea, and is well acquainted with the Hebrew language. He was devoted to me, and worthy of confidence. On entering the praetorium I found Manlius, who related to me the words Jesus had pronounced at Siloe. Never have I read in the works of the philosophers anything that can compare to the maxims of Jesus. One of the rebellious Jews, so numerous in Jerusalem, having asked Jesus if it was lawful to give tribute to Caesar, he replied: 'Render unto Caesar the things that belong to Caesar, and unto God the things that are Gods.'

"It was on account of the wisdom of his sayings that I granted so much liberty to the Nazarene; for it was in my power to have had him arrested, and exiled to Pontus; but that woul have been contrary to the justice which was always characterized the Roman government in all its dealings with men; this man was neither seditious nor rebellious; I extended to him my protection, unknown perhaps to himself. He was at liberty to act, to speak, to assemble and address the people, and to choose disciples, unrestrained by any praetorian mandate. Should it ever happen (may the gods avert the omen!), should it ever happen, I say, that the religion of our forefathers will be supplanted by the religion of Jesus, it will be to this noble toleration that Rome shall owe her premature death, while I, miserable wretch, will have been the instrument of what the Jews call Providence, and we call destiny.

"This unlimited freedom granted to Jesus provoked the Jews—not the poor, but the rich and powerful. It is true, Jesus was severe on the latter, and this was a political reason, in my opinion, for not restraining the liberty of the Nazarene. 'Scribes and Pharisees,' he would say to them, 'you are a race of vipers; you resemble painted sepulchres; you appear well unto men, but you have death within you.' At other times he would sneer at the alms of the rich and proud, telling them that the mite of the poor was more precious in the sight of God. Complaints were daily made at the praetorium against the insolence of Jesus.

"I was even informed that some misfortune would befall him; that it would not be the first time that Jerusalem had stoned those who called themselves prophets; an appeal would be made to Caesar. However, my conduct was approved by the Senate, and I was promised a reinforcement after the termination of the Parthian war.

"Being too weak to suppress an insurrection, I resolved upon adopting a measure that promised to restore the tranquillity of the city without subjecting the praetorium to humiliating concession. I wrote to Jesus requesting an interview with him at the praetorium. He came. You know that in my veins flows Spanish mixed with Roman blood—as incapable of fear as it is of weak emotion. When the Nazarene made his appearance, I was walking in my basilic, and my feet seemed fastened with an iron hand to the marble pavement and I trembled in every limb as does a guilty culprit though the Nazarene was as calm as innocence itself. When he came up to me he stopped, and by a signal sign he seemed to say to me, 'I am here,' though he spoke not a word. For some time I contemplated with admiration and awe this extraordinary type of man—a type of man unknown to our numerous painters, who have given form and figure to all the gods and the heroes. There was nothing about him that was repelling in its character, yet I felt too awed and tremulous to approach him.

"'Jesus,' said I unto him at last—and my tongue faltered—'Jesus of Nazareth, for the last three years I have granted you ample freedom of speech; nor do I regret it. Your words are those of a sage. I know not whether you have read Socrates or Plato, but this I know, there is in your discourses a majestic simplicity that elevates you far above those philosophers. The Emperor is informed of it, and I, his humble representative in this country, am glad of having allowed you that liberty of which you are so worthy. However, I must not conceal from you that your discourses have raised up against you powerful and inveterate enemies. Nor is this surprising. Socrates had his enemies, and he fell a victim to their hatred. Yours are doubly incensed—against you on acount of your discourses being so severe upon their conduct; against me on account of the liberty I have afforded you. They even accuse me of being indicertly leagued with you for the purpose of depriving the Hebrews of the little civil power which Rome has left them. My request—I do not say my order—is, that you be more circumspect and moderate in your discourses in the future; and more considerate of them, lest you arouse the pride of your enemies, and they raise against you the stupid populace, and compel me to employ the instruments of law.'

"The Nazarene calmly replied, 'Prince of the earth, your words proceed not from true wisdom. Say to the torrent to stop in the midst of the mountain-gorge: it will uproot the trees of the valley. The torrent will answer you, that it obeys the laws of nature and the Creator. God alone knows whither flow the waters of the torrent. Verily I say unto you, before the rose of Sharon blossoms the blood of the just shall be spilt.'

"'Your blood shall not be spilt,' said I, with deep emotion; 'you are more precious in my estimation on account of your wisdom than all the turbulent and proud Pharisees who abuse the freedom granted them by the Romans. They conspire against Caesar, and convert his bounty into fear, impressing the unlearned that Caesar is a tyrant and seeks their ruin. Insolent wretches! they are not aware that the wolf of the Tiber sometimes clothes himself with the skin of the sheep to accomplish his wicked designs. I will protect you against them. My praetorium shall be an asylum, sacred both day and night.'

"Jesus carelessly shook his head, and said with a grave and divine smile: 'When the day shall have come there will be no asylums for the son of man, neither in the earth nor under the earth. The asylum of the just is there,' pointing to the heavens. 'That which is written in the books of the prophets must be accomplished.'

"'Young man,' I answered, mildly, 'you will oblige me to convert my request into an order. The safety of the province which has been confided to my care requires it. You must observe more moderation in your discourses. Do not infringe my order. You know the consequences. May happiness attend you; farewell.'

"'Prince of the earth,' replied Jesus, 'I come not to bring war into the world, but peace, love, and charity. I was born the same day on which Augustus Ceasar gave peace to the Roman world. Persecutions proceed not from me. I expect it from others, and will meet it in obedience to the will of my Father, who has shown me the way. Restrain, therefore, your worldly prudence. It is not in your power to arrest the victim at the foot of the tabernacle of expiation.'

"So saying, he disappeared like a bright shadow behind the curtains of the basilic—to my great relief, for I felt a heavy burden on me, of which I could not relieve my self while in his presence.

"To Herod, who then reigned in Galilee, the enemies of Jesus addressed themselves, to wreak their vengeance on the Nazarene. Had Herod consulted his own inclinations, he would have ordered Jesus immediately to be put to death; but, though proud of his royal dignity, yet he hesitated to commit an act that might lessen his influence with the Senate, or, like me, was afraid of Jesus. But it would never do for a Roman officer to be scared by a Jew. Previously to this, Herod called on me at the praetorium, and, on rising to take leave, after some trifling conversation, asked me what was my opinion concerning the Nazarene. I replied that Jesus appeared to me to be one of those great philosophers that great nations sometimes produced; that his doctrines were by no means sacrilegious, and that the intentions of Rome were to leave him to that freedom of speech which was justified by his actions. Herod smiled maliciously, and, saluting me with ironical respect, departed.

"The great feast of the Jews was approaching, and the intention was to avail themselves of the popular exultation which always manifects itself at the solemnities of a passover. The city was overflowing with a tumultuous populace, clamoring for the death of the Nazarene. My emissaries informed me that the treasure of the temple had been employed in bribing the people. The danger was pressing. A Roman centurion had been insulted. I wrote to the Prefect of Syria for a hundred foot-soldiers and as many cavalry. He declined. I saw myself alone with a handful of veterans in the midst of a rebellious city, too weak to suppress an uprising, and having no choice left but to tolerate it. They had seized upon Jesus, and the seditious rabble, although they had nothing to fear from the praetorium, believing, as their leaders had told them, that I winked at their sedition—continued vociferating: 'Crucify him! Crucify him!'

"Three powerful parties had combined together at that time against Jesus: First, the Herodians and the Sadducees, whose seditious conduct seemed to have proceeded from double motives: they hated the Nazarene and were impatient of the Roman yoke. They never forgave me for having entered the holy city with banners that bore the image of the Roman emperor; and although in this instance I had committed a fatal error, yet the sacrilege did not appear less heinous in their eyes. Another grievance also rankled in their bosoms. I had proposed to employ a part of the treasure of the temple in erecting edifices for public use. My proposal as scorned. The Pharisees were the avowed enemies of Jesus. They cared not for the government. They bore with bitterness the severe reprimands which the Nazarene for three years had been continually giving them wherever he went. Timid and too weak to act by themselves, they had embraced the quarrels of the Herodians and the Sadducees. Besides these three parties, I had to contend against the reckless and profligate populace, always ready to join a sedition, and to profit by the disorder and confusion that resulted therefrom.

"Jesus was dragged before the High Priest and condemned to death. It was then that the High Priest, Caiaphas, performed a divisory act of submission. He sent his prisoner to me to confirm his condemnation and secure his execution. I answered him that, as Jesus was a Galilean, the affair came under Herod's jurisdiction, and ordered him to be sent thither. The wily tetrarch professed humility, and, protesting his deference to the lieutenant of Caesar, he committed the fate of the man to my hands. Soon my palace assumed the aspect of a besieged citadel. Every moment increased the number of the malcontents. Jerusalem was inundated with crowds from the mountains of Nazareth. All Judea apeared to be pouring into the city.

I had taken a wife from among the Gauls, who pretended to see into futurity. Weeping and throwing herself at my feet she said to me: 'Beware, beware, and touch not that man; for he is holy. Last night I saw him in a vision. He was walking on the waters; he was flying on the wings of the wind. He spoke to the tempest and to the fishes of the lake; all were obedient to him. Behold, the torrent in Mount Kedron flows with blood, the statues of Caesar are filled with gemonide; the columns of the interium have given away, and the sun is veiled in mourning like a vestal in the tomb. Ah! Pilate, evil awaits thee. If thou wilt not listen to the vows of thy wife, dread the curse of a Roman Senate; dread the frowns of Caerar.'

"By this time the marble stairs groaned under the weight of the multitude. The Nazarene was brought back to me. I proceeded to the halls of justice, followed by my guard, and asked the people in a severe tone what they demanded.

"'The death of the Nazarene,' was the reply.

"'For what crime?'

"'He has blasphemed; he has prophesied the ruin of the temple; he calls himself the Son of God, the Messiah, the King of the Jews.'

"'Roman justice,' said I, 'punishes not such offences with death.'

"'Crucify him! Crucify him!' cried the relentless rabble. The vociferations of the infuriated mob shook the palace to its foundations.

"There was but one who appeared to be calm in the midst of the vast multitude; it was the Nazarene. After many fruitless attempts to protect him from the fury of his merciless persecutors, I adopted a measure which at the moment appeared to me to be the only one that could save his life. I proposed, as it was their custom to deliver a prisoner on such occasions, to release Jesus and let him go free, that he might be the scapegoat, as they called it; but they said Jesus must be crucified. I then spoke to them of the inconsistency of their course as being incompatible with their laws, showing that no criminal judge could pass sentence on a criminal unless he had fasted one whole day; and that the sentence must have the consent of the Sanhedrim, and the signature of the president of that court; that no criminal could be executed on the same day his sentence was fixed, and the next day, on the day of his execution, the Sanhedrim was required to review the whole proceeding; also, according to their law, a man was stationed at the door of the court with a flag, and another a short way off on horseback to cry the name of the criminal and his crime, and the names of his witnesses, and to know if any one could testify in his favor; and the prisoner on his way to execution had the right to turn back three times, and to plead any new thing in his favor. I urged all these pleas, hoping they might awe them into subjection; but they still cried, 'Crucify him! Crucify him!'

I am enclosing a study on Talents, gleaned from back Watch Towers. As many are now thinking along these lines, I thought the notes would be helpful to other home-keeping Sisters. I will be grateful should you deem it worthy of space in your excellent paper.

MRS. L. M. BRINK.

TALENTS.

"To every man according to his several ability", Mathew 25:15. "So then every one of us must give an account of himself before God," Romans 14:12. "It is for each one of the consecrated (while yet it is day before the night cometh) to make a full and thorough inspection of himself, and to determine to what extent he has talents, abilities, privileges and opportunities to serve the Lord, and to what extent he is using these," W. T. 1901-60.

"A talent represents 3,000 shekels of silver, and the shekels in turn were the great and the small representing in our money one thousand and two thousand dollars. We may view these talents and their use from two different standpoints, and both will be true: Our natural talents may be considered first, as representing, wealth, influence, intellectual power, education, and public utterance, the person possessed of all these we might consider very richly endowed ineed—a fine talent person. Second, these talents may be viewed from the standpoint of our spiritual qualities, meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly kindness. LOVE. The Lord will doubtless measure us according to both of these standpoints, but we may be sure that eventually the chiefest of all gifts, blessings and talents in the Lord's sight will be LOVE.

"Love is the principal thing." It will be only in proportion as love of God, and for our fellow men shall have guided the use of our talents, what ever they may be, that they will be acceptable in the Lord's sight." W. T. 1906-317. Those who view the matter rightly must certainly feel that none of us have anything worthy to present to our Lord—that our very best, our most costly gifts and sacrafices, are not worthy of Him, and but feebly express the real sentiments of our hearts. How glad we are if our humble efforts are accepted of the Lord, and how we hope, that ultimately, we shall hear that same sweet voice, saying to us, "She hath done what she could,' as did Mary, of the Alabastar box of ointment. "She could not put him on the throne of earth, but she would show that she was his devoted servant forever; she could not glorify him before all the people of Israel, but she could glorify and honor Him in her own home, she could not tell His praises and sing His worth, but she could sing and make melody in her own heart, and pour upon Him a perfume which not only filled her home with its sweet savor, but which has yielded a tender fragrance to the honor of womankind in general from her day to the present time. Spikenard Mary represents one of the most beautiful elements of Christian characters amongst the Lord's people from that day until now. The Mary Class who would rather purchase perfume at a great cost whereby to serve the annointed Church the body of Christ, than to spend the same upon themselves is still with us, and has been of the Church for these eighteen centuries. Not only was the Head of the body annointed, perfumed, honored, comforted, cheered, but all the members since have likewise received a blessing from this Class, this Spikenard Mary Class. It is composed not always of the orators, the wealthy, or wise—its ministry is unostentatious, and to many, especially of the world, it seems foolishness and waste, but the Lord appreciates it, and so do the members of the Body, who are comforted and refreshed thereby. Blessings upon this Mary Class. If Mary had waited another week she might have used the perfume upon herself, but not upon the Lord. Wisdom tells us that we should not delay in bringing our Alabastar boxes of ointment, and pouring their contents upon our dear ones of the body of Christ, the feet of Christ; no matter if they do not notice us, or think of us, or pour any upon us, as members of the feet; let us do our part, let us be of the Mary Class, let us pour out the sweet perfume upon others, and the house, the Church of the Lord, will be filled with the sweet odor, even though some desciples might mistakingly charge us with being extravagant with our love, and with our devotion, notwithstanding that the Master by and by will say again, "Let her alone, She hath done what she could."

"Had I but heard
One breath of applause, one cheering word,
One cry of "Courage" amid the strife,
So weighted for me with death or life,
How it would have nerved my soul to strain
Through the whirl of the coming surge again."—W. T. 1905—165-166.

HOME MAKING TALENT.

"Woman's proper sphere of influence is the home—as saith the Scriptures. A true, pure, noble, sensible mother has an almost untellable influence for good or evil with her husband, sons and daughters. Let every mother feel that in her own family, and family connections, and in the opportunities opened for her in the Church, the Lord's family, she has abundant opportunity for the exercise of every talent and grace."—W. T. 1898—95.

Ibena, O., June 2.

I would like to add through the columns of your paper, my appreciation of Pastor Russell's sermons in large clear type, also of other information along Truth lines. My appreciation is double when I consider the sacrifice a dear Sister has made, in doing without the paper herself, that I, an isolated one, may have sufficient food for thought. I would like to add a condensed account as to how I came to know the Truth.

It was while visiting the John Dice family at Mansfield, Ohio, that I first heard of the Truth, in my twentieth year. It was a wonderful revelation to me and seemed to fill up that which I had already felt was lacking. I could grasp the spiritual phase of the Kingdom more readily than I could the Earthly. I got lots of Truth in my few days' visit, but was somewhat confused in some things.

I thought, now when I go home I will tell it to others and they will surely be as glad to get this new knowledge of God's Word as I am. How proud I was that I could tell them something they did not know. Well, I was disappointed. My mother said you must not be carried away with every wind of doctrine. I said, but I can prove the Spirits. My father treated it as of no consequence. I then talked to the minister about it, and he treated the matter as a joke, and tried to laugh me out of such ideas, but somehow I could not get rid of it, nor forget it. It was already a part of me. I knew of no one in my home town interested in the Glorious Gospel according to the Truth. I did not know there was the Bible House or anything about Pastor Russell, nor his books, so I could not grow in knowledge. I was a member of the W. B. Church, and an officer in every ordanation or society of the Church. I had taught the primary class for 14 years and thought it my place in which to serve the Master. I did not know I was in Babylon. Thus I labored for seven years more when one afternoon I called on a family in another part of town and while there a colportuer and his wife called. We had a profitable hour's talk and a little more knowledge was added to what Truth I already had. At this time I said I will not read the books so that I will not believe this doctrine just through their influence, but I expected God to give me the knowledge as I studied the Bible. I did not know there was a Divinely appointed channel of Truth for all Bible students. Being an essay writer I often brought the truth in the Church, but in such a way as to not arouse suspicion, in this way I thought to heal Babylon, but she was not healed. Years still went on and I in Babylon. One Sabbath afternoon I saw a man throw a paper on my porch, I went out and spoke to him. I found it was a tract and he a member of the Mansfield Bible Class. A short time after this a lady moved into our neighborhood, and not finding a class or Bible student in Galion where I then lived she met with the Mansfield class several times, and learned from that man who threw that tract on my porch that I was interested in the Truth.

She called on me and loaned me the books I began to read and soon we had a class in our neighborhood led by Pilgrim Brother Detwiler. O, how the Lord did bless us, we journeyed by leaps and bounds. I went to Church in the forenoon and to the Bable class in the afternoon. One discourse of Truth was worth more to me than all the sermons I ever heard in Babylon. The lady that assisted me in teaching had an influence over me, and I could not find courage to leave the Church. She died very suddenly and thus the Lord helped but I had to have several kicks from the Church to help me. You see, the bed got too short, and the covers too narrow; they told me to keep still and go to sleep, that I was disturbing the rest, but how could I when I knew it was day and time to be awake. I would not take their soothing syrup any longer, so by their help but first the Lord's help I left them to their slumbers. I gave the children of my class two talks on restitution and I shall never forget the expression on their faces and such close attention. I then gave the Missionary Society of which I was president, a talk on the Armor as treated according to Truth and another a synopsis of the Tabernacle Shadows. I was to give another talk on the Gread Pyronid but it was more than they could stand. They said it was the grandest thing they ever heard, but as soon as they found out the minister denounced it they were ready to join him in persecution. That was in 1907. I then enjoyed the blessed fellowship of those of like precious faith, but now I am isolated, living in the country, six miles from my class, and no other Truth people near here, so with a family of four small boys, bad roads in winter, harvest hand, and the rest of the family disinterested, I seldom get to meet with the dear class. I have had to observe the last three memorial suppers alone.

But by the Lord's help, I will be present when the roll is called. Pure and spotless through the cleansing flood. I will answer when they call my name, Saved by Jesus' blood. I ask all of the Saints to remember me in their prayers.

pose before the world as expounders of the Bible should also be governed by the principles that book inculcates. Success in understanding the teaching of the Bible is proportionate to obedience to its principles as applied to Christian life and conduct. "They that do the will of my Father shall know my doctrine," said Christ. The Christian life is a life of principle, with emotion subserrient. Right here is where Wesley and Beecher erred: Wesley learned from experience the truthfulness of St. Paul's advice which he failed to take when he married in his forties, at an age when all his time and talent was already the property of the world. (Knox made the same mistake with the pretext of endeavoring to rebuke the celibacy of the Priesthood, but did not profit by it as did Wesley, because perverted emotion was the ruling power of his life—not natural emotion, much less principle). Beecher erred in taking the initiative to dissolve the divine ordinance of marriage, to which he was bound until his consort had broken these vows by infidelity. Had Mrs. Beecher been faithless, the action of the brilliant orator in endeavoring to dissolve the tie would have been, to say the most (in the light of the New Testament) permissible, but not for the purpose of marrying Mrs. Tilton, who had also been induced to endeavor to dissolve her marital relations before Mr. Tilton's jealousy was aroused. The character of Mrs. Beecher shines brighter from an altruistic point of view in her fidelity to her marital vows than that of her husband's whose aesthetic culture was being reciprocated by the more talented Mrs. Tilton. This tragedy illustrates the fact that principle acted upon, early in life, makes unnecessary some of the most trying experiences of those who love God.

Livermore, May 25.

I am a subscriber to your paper for several years. I like to read it; I remember, I think it was about five years ago, when I read the execution of Jesus and Jesus' childhood and esveral other such stories in the Tribune. You are now putting them in again, and I am glad to have them once more. I get Pastor Russell's sermon all right in another paper, but I don't get the other things and the sermon is better in The Tribune.

Respectfully yours,
LOUIS SCHULZE.

Akron, O., June 2.

I have been a reader of your most valuable paper for one year and have enjoyed the sermon of Pastor Russell and all the other good religous features. I hope you will continue to publish the sermons for the benefit of all others who love the word of God. May the dear Heavenly Father bless your efforts for the good work you are doing. With best Christian love to you. As my subscription expires the first of May please discontinue the paper at this time. Am very sorry to do so, hope in the near future to be able to renew it.

MRS. IDA SMITH.

Albuquerque, N. Mex.

I will have to ask you to discontinue sending Tribune to me when my time is up. Have had another paper sent me with Pastor Russell's sermons, but it is not what the Tribune is by a long ways, and as times are hard will have to let Tribune go for a while, but I do appreciate your fearless stand for Truth and am sure you will receive blessing for it.

KING-PRIESTS, OR PRIESTLY-KINGS, NOW BEING PREPARED FOR THEIR REIGN.

The New Nation Called Out of the World During the Gospel Age—Nearly Two Thousand Years Required for Their Preparation—Abraham's Royal Seed—Called From Jews and Gentiles—All Are Covenanters — A Covenant by Sacrifice — Time for Their Reign Near at Hand.

NEW YORK CITY, June 4.—Pastor Russell spoke at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd street, near Broadway, this evening. His discourse was based on 1 Peter 2:9—"But ye are a chosen generation, a Royal Priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvelous light." The pastor said in part:

The Apostle is contrasting those who accepted Jesus as the Messiah with those who rejected Him. The word generation seemingly is used in this test to signify a race. God first called the nation of Israel to be His chosen people, His holy nation, (Exodus 19:5, 6.) For over eighteen hundred years they were trained under the Law, to demonstrate whether they wre worthy to be God's people. But God foreknew that even with their best endeavors they could not keep His Law, because they were imperfect. He knew that they could never thus gain the prize of everlasting life. (Leviticus 18:5; Romans 10:5.) He had arranged, however, for the redemption of Israel and of all the world through the death of our Lord Jesus Christ; and He knew that the Mosaic Law would be the schoolmaster to lead the Israelites to Christ.—Galatians 3:24.

The Israelites hoped that God would make of them a great people, that eventually would rule the world as God's Kingdom. Because they were the natural seed of Abraham, they considered it a foregone conclusion that God's Promise to Abraham could apply to no others than themselves. They overlooked the fact that the true Seed of Blessing would have the faith, the heart obedience, of Abraham. The Jewish nation lacked this faith and obedience.

When the Messiah came, long foretold by their holy Prophets, they rejected Him and slew Him. Only a few, "Israelites indeed," of humble, teachable heart, received Him. But God had foreknown the rejection of His Son by the nation, and had pre-arranged that when the faithful few had been gathered from Israel, the call for this Seed class should go to the Gentiles.

In Jehovah's Plan this Abrahamic Seed of Blessing was to be composed of 144,000—12,000 from each of the twelve tribes of Israel, under the headship of His Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Hence when the 20,000 or more Israelites who proved worthy had been brought into the Christian Church, the Gospel Message was sent to take out from the Gentiles a sufficient number to complete what was lacking from each tribe. These Gentiles thus became members of Spiritual Israel, all of whom have had the faith of faithful Abraham.

SPIRITUAL ISRAEL—A NEW NATION.

The Israelites having been rejected as regards the Gospel Call, a new nation was to be formed, composed of the faithful few from both Jews and Gentiles. God then opened up a new way of life, through Christ Jesus. (Hebrews 10:20.) The calling out and preparation of this new nation of Spiritual Israel has been the work of the Gospel Age. The way opened to them has not been a failure, as was the way opened for Natural Israel. The Gospel Church is "not under Law, but under grace." God's provision in Christ enables these to succeed who are walking in the new way to life. They keep the Divine Law In spirit, and the robe of Christ's merit covers all the imperfections and blemishes of their flesh which are unavoidable.

Those who were chosen from amongst the Jews became dead to the Law Covenant, under which their nation had been bound for over sixteen hundred years. Those who were chosen from amongst the Gentiles became dead to their former sins and wrong condition. Together these became espoused to Christ, the middle wall of partition separating them having been broken down. They are to be the Bride of Christ. Those who constitute this Bride class lose all their former ralationships as men, and become heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ. They are now New Creatures.—2 Corinthians 5:17.

THE KINGLY PRIESTHOOD.

It is this class that St. Peter says, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood." The office of a king is to rule, to reign; the office of a priest is to teach, to heal and to bless. These two offices are to be united in the work which this class is to perform when they shall have been exalted in the Kingdom. "Ye are a holy nation, a peculiar people," adds the Apostle. This class have become separated from all other people. They are strangers and pilgrims on the earth. With their Head, Christ Jesus, they are to constitute the New Government of Messiah's Kingdom, soon to be set up on the earth. It is not as human beings, however, that they are to reign, to teach and to bless the peoples of the world, but as spirit beings, after their glorification in the First Reserrection.—Revelation 20:4, 6.

For more than eighteen hundred years these royal priests have been in process of training, developing the character necessary to make them worthy and capable rulers of the next Age. The character tests applied to this company of prospective rulers are very rigid. They must first learn to judge and to govern themselves before they would be fit to judge and govern others. They are placed in the School of Christ to be taught of Him. They are to learn lessons of meekness, self-control, patience, faith, gentleness, sympathy, love. Without these important characteristics this class would not be able to deal properly with the sinful, fallen world. But if they have these qualities well developed, they will, the Apostle Peter tells us, have "an abundant entrance into the everlasting (age-lasting) Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." —2 Peter 1:5—11.

Our Lord Jesus, who was perfect, learned obedience, we are told, by the things which He suffered. (Hebrews 5:8, 9.) The finest quality of character can be developed in no other way. Therefore all who are to be associated with Him in the Messianic Kingdom work must suffer. If obedience were always easy, we could not learn what it really means. All who hope to be of the Kingdom class must develop faith and obedience from the very first. There can be no real growth without these characteristics; and they must continue to increase.

JEHOVAH'S PECULIAR TREASURE.

This loyal class are indeed a peculiar people, and the Lord calls them so. This statement of our text has the meaning of an acquisition. The Lord has acquired these as something especially precious. To Israel of old He declared, "Now, therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed and keep My Covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people." We know that Natural Israel was a type of the Spiritual Israel of the Gospel Age; and that the Seed of Abraham who was to inherit the chiefest promises was to be his seed according to faith and not according to the flesh. This is clearly taught in the New Testament.—Romans 4:14-16; 9;6-8; Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

Accordingly, the twelve tribes of Israel who are really God's peculiar treasure are the twelve tribes of Spiritual Israel. (Revelation 7:1-4.) These are the people who are keeping their covenant with the Lord. They are as dear to God as the apple of His eye. Nominal Christians are not included in this choice treasure. Saints alone are meant. Each one of this class has entered into a special covenant with the Lord—a covenant by sacrifice. (Psalm 50:5.) Their Lord and Master first made this covenant with the Father, and we are following in His steps.

All during the Gospel Age God has been gathering these, one by one. Not many great ones, not many mighty ones, are amongst them, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith. (1 Corinthians 1:26-29; James 2:5.) These are to be the heirs of the Kingdom which God has promised to them that love Him. He is not gathering them to any sect or party, but to Himself. "Gather My saints together unto Me," is His command. He has not instructed us to gather the world to Him; for the world's time has not yet come. On the contrary, we are to seek the humble, teachable ones, those who hunger and thirst after righteousness.

Those now gathered to the Lord are all covenanters. No one can become a member of the Bride class who does not make this covenant by sacrifice and then live faithfully up to it. This covenant is an agreement to surrender our will fully to God, to consecrate to Him our entire life, with all that we have. Whoever comes to Him during this Gospel Age must come in this way. Whoever has not made that kind of covenant with God, has not come into the Lord's family at all. God's terms are very definite. We are not to be afraid to yield ourselves wholly to God. His will for us is our very highest good. We are to remember that our Lord has said, "My grace is sufficient for thee; for My strength is made perfect in weakness." The Lord tells us through His Word that He knows that we the of the fallen race, that He does not call us because we are perfect, but that He has made abundant provision to cover all our need.

THE HOLY SPIRIT ESSENTIAL.

After we have given our will to God and have taken His will, we are then to take up our cross and follow the Master in the narrow way. (Matthew 16:24.) The Lord's people are to be just as narrow as His Word. "Strait [difficult] is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life"—the life now offered. If we walk with the Lord now, while Sin is reigning in the world, we must walk a narrow way. Of this way the Master said, "Few there be that find it."—Matthew 7:13, 14.

Those who will be of this class that follow the Master now must be willing and glad to suffer the loss of friends, of social standing, of all earthly hopes and prospects, for the sake of the Heavenly hopes and glories. All of this class will be guided by the Lord, by His Holy Spirit—not by hearing words spoken to their inner ear, not by impressions made upon their mind, but by the Word of God, the Bible, by the things written therein aforetime for our learning, our admonition. The Spirit of God operates through the inspired Word for the instruction of His people in the Truth.—1 Corinthians 10:11; 2 Timothy 3:16.

Why do we need to have the guidance of the Lord's Holy Spirit—His influence, His mind—in order to understand the Bible properly? It is because if we go to the study of the Bible with our own unaided reason, or if we go in a wrong spirit, we are sure to make a mistake and to get wrong views. But if we go prayerfully, in a spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, love, we are going in the right manner. Then, if previously begotten of the Holy Spirit, we shall understand the deep things of God. The Bible says that the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.—1 Corinthians 2:9, 14.

St. Peter points out the fact that to some who profess to be the people of God our Lord Jesus and His cross become "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense, even to them that stumble at the Word, being disobedient," (1 Peter 2:7, 8.) This class lack humility and teachableness; they lack loyalty to God, and prefer their own theories, which minister to their pride. They are blinded by their own wrong condition of heart. To the humble and faithful, this Rock, which is a Stone of Stumbling to others becomes a Refuge, Support, a Stepping Stone to God.

SOME APPOINTED TO STUMBLE.

Aside from stumbling at the cross of Christ, these unfaithful ones stumble at his teachings in general. The Master taught His disciples to love even their enemies. This unfaithful class do not wish to do this. He taught His disciples not to war, and forbade the use of carnal weapons, saying, "They that take the sword shall perish with the sword." But this class are today advocating war, and are using their influence to induce men to kill their fellowmen. They have not submitted their wills to the will of God, their minds to His mind. Hence they are always in conflict with Him and with His Plans.

Of those who profess to be God's people, but who are disobedient and who stumble at His Word, St. Peter says, "Whereunto they were appointed." What does this mean? Does God appoint that any of His people shall stumble? We answer, God does not design that any shall understand His Word at present except those who are wholly loyal and obedient. He does not wish the worldly-minded to see as yet. Unless one is in the right condition of heart, the Truth would do him harm; for it would greatly increase his responsibility. Of our Lord some said, "He hath a devil and is mad." The Master declared that if their eyes were really open to see, their sin would remain. (John 10:19-21; 9:39-41.) The whole world is stumbling and fighting against God; but being blinded by the Adversary and his sophistries and falsehoods, they are perhaps not so much to blame.

For us who have been enlightened, it would be a terrible thing to take the position which is now taken by practically the entire world, including the great majority of professed followers of Christ. On the day of Pentecost, when telling the Jews that they had been guilty of crucifying the Lord of Glory, the Apostle Peter declared that he believed that they had done it in ignorance, both they and their rulers. They were largely blinded by the Prince of Darkness; and hence there would be mercy for as many of them as would repent when they came to see their error and sin. From this we infer that the majority of people are not so culpable as they would be if they realized what they are doing.

PARALLELS OF EXPERIENCE.

During the Harvest of the Jewish Age God permitted the unfaithful Jewish nation to stumble, and gathered the faithful "Israelites indeed, in whom there was no guile," into the garner of the Christian Church, leaving the remainder to go into an appalling time of trouble and national overthrow. (Matthew 3:11, 12; Luke 13:34, 35; 21:5, 6.) They must await in the tomb the judgment of the Day of Christ, and take their place with the world of mankind, who are then to be dealt with under the great Mediator whom God hath appointed. Likewise the professed people of God today, Nominal Christendom, are now coming into a great time of trouble and overthrow, incident to the establishment of the Mediatorial Kingdom of God's dear Son. During this struggle all present institutions and systems—social, ecclesiastical, financial and industrial—will go down forever.

As to individuals, all must pass their judgment—some to become members of the Great Company who are to stand before the Throne of God and to serve in His Temple; some to be dealt with during the Age to come, under the Reign of Messiah. For a thousand years the great Mediator between God and men will be with the world, to help all the willing and obedient to rise out of degradation, sin and death conditions and to get back to perfection of human nature. But those who will then either refuse or neglect the opportunities of Messiah's Kingdom will be destroyed in the Second Death.

We rejoice to know that through the Millenial Kingdom everyone will have an opportunity to come into relationship with God, as at the first, before sin entered the world. We rejoice that "there's a wideness in God's mercy like the wideness of the sea"; and that we can see His glorious purpose not only for the faithful Church, but also for the less faithful and for all the world when they shall have learned the needed lessons, eternal destruction awaiting only the finally wilful and incorrigible. For us who see the Heavenly privileges and glories, it remains to prove our faithfulness even unto death. There will be no disloyal ones in that Kingdom class beyond the veil. Then when the Royal Priesthood shall have been installed in office, the work of the New Dispensation shall begin for the blessing of all mankind.

BEECHER'S LOVE AFFAIRS.

Concerning the quotation from Beecher in the Ohio Woods—when his conception of Deity dawned upon him as heretofore presented, Lyman Abbott has remarked: "To the interpretation of this vision and the impartation of the life which it begot in him he thenceforth gave himself. Was this vision true? Was this life of value? By the answer to these two questions his character and career must be mastered." To give the whole public life of Beecher, would be to write the history of the States during his life for his influence was marked in al of its avenues. Mrs. Beecher and her son and son-in-law have recorded his private life; and Abbott has supplied his public career and the spirit of the age in which he lived, and also his ministerial life, and and says of his work: "Nealy half a century since from the young preecher of Brooklyn I received the impulse which sent me into the ministry, the message which subsequent study has done to develop, but nothing to contradict, and the faith which life has never disappointed, but has constantly enlarged and enriched. That half cenetury has been spent with other masters, and I believe I am now far enough from the spell of Mr. Beecher's personal presence to estimate justly his life and character. Certainly this volume will not be coldly critical; I do not mean that it shall be indiscriminately enlogistic."

Abbott may be far enough away from Beecher's personality, but he is not far enough away from his theology, to properly estimate the man as the product of that theology and also the theology as the product of the man—Beecher in the evening of his manhood was not the Beecher of his youth; in his youth he created the precepts that created him in later life. Hubbard, in his Little Journies supplies considerable data which Abbott does not give and is no credit to the great orator, and perhaps for this reason it was omitted by Abbott, whose account seems to be colored by his love and esteem for the man and the fact that he was Beecher's spiritual child—he does not tell the whole truth respecting the criminal suit against him by Mr. Tilton—he says enough to discredit Tilton and enough to justify Beecher, and the truth partly stated gives a wrong impression. Abbott says the truth when he says that his "faults were superficial" but the data supplied by Hubbard required an appology for presenting it—a plea that the truth admitted it will be forgiven the sooner —"The truth will make you free" from suspicion of things that did not occur.

Beecher's domestic and social life is a proof of the proposition set forth by Pastor Russell that no matter how well born, the tendency in life is downward unless governed by the Truth and retained to our capacity. We now review some of the incidents and life of Beecher supplied by both of these men, together with the material supplied by others, with a view of accounting for them by the precepts that Beecher adopted and taught—just as we have done with the other subjects of this story. In short, we hope to prove, contrary to Abbott's assertions, that the closing scenes of Beecher's private life was no more Christian in the sacrificial sense than his public services in American politics on the slavery question could he said to be Christian; in fact, his life on the whole was quite Roycroftic, Beecher's own proposition to the contrary notwithstanding—that he centered on the life of Christ!

Abbott has been styled as Beecher's successor by virtue of occupying his pulpit in Plymouth Church after him, but in our examination of Beecher's social life, the effects of his prospects there, we think the real successor in developing his social life into a system of philosophy is no other than our late East Aurora Sage, Elbert Hubbard, just as is also Pastor Russell the successor of William Miller, although neither of them is so recognized by the followers of Miller and Beecher. Or as Emerson puts it: "When nature removes a great man, people explore the horizon for a successor; but none comes, and none will. His class is distinguished with him. In some other and different field the man will appear." Beecher did not teach some of the precepts of Hubbard concerning the "Unknown," but his life was quite Boycroftic—formulated by Hubbard into a system of philosophy—a Natural Religion of Love.

The culminating effects of Beecher's precepts and impulses were to develop a disrespect for his marital vows. He, like Knox, was a lover by nature; but was married to one that could not reciprocate his ethereal emotions, culture and gifts. He fell in love with Mrs. Theodore Tilton, a member of his congregation of the Plymouth Church, and their love was mutual. Beecher finally desired to stand before the public in his true color respecting his love affairs, and induced Major Pond to have his wife sue for divorce, and at the same time Mr. Tilton was asked to secure a divorce from his wife. His purpose was to marry Mrs. Tilton, and stand before the world with nothing to hide. This was at the discreet age of forty-four. "The mind is deceitful above all things."

Theodore Tilton was a newspaper reporter, syndicate writer and lecturer of some note. His ideas were Beecher's clothed in his own language —parrot talk. Beecher frequented the Tilton home, and on one occasion when Mrs. Tilton was sick Mr. Tilton remarked that Beecher's presence did more for the sick than the doctor and his dope. A sparring match of wits followed in which Beecher and Mrs. Tilton accused Mr. Tilton of being jealous. Mr. Tilton's taunts respecting his wife's speedy recovery lacked playfulness on this occasion, even though he insisted that he was not jealous—the idea. This incident fanned the "green eyed monster" into a flame that led Mr. Tilton to sue for one hundred thousand dollars damages for alienating his wife's affections. In this suit he included the serious charge of adultery. The case attracted the attention of the whole civilized world.

This blackmailing case lasted for five months. The great orator's heart was wrung by being caught in a whirl of circumstances which forced him to perjure himself respecting his regards for Mrs. Tilton, which was purely a Platonic affair, for, by admitting this he would also admit the charge of adultery, or the public would regard it so. His trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury. He was later tried before an ecclesiastical council which decided in Beecher's favor, so he continued his work for twelve more years.

In the court tragedy of this quartette, we have emotion paramount, not principle. Beecher loved Mrs. Tilton and denied it; Mrs. Tilton denied the truth for Beecher's sake. Mrs. Beecher knew that her husband loved Mrs. Tilton but swore white was black. Mr. Tilton was the only one that told the truth respecting their affections, yet was the least justifiable of the group. Mr. Tilton was governed by a perverted emotion, jealousy, as well as selfishness in sueing for filthy lucre, and he had an ambition to detract from the honor of Beecher to himself, for he was also a lecturer and author. The noble conduct of Beecher trying to preserve the dignity of himself, wife and Mrs. Tilton, and yet all prevarications, was a vivid contrast to te ignoble conduct of Mr. Tilton who told the truth. The cause of all this tangle is due to living along the lines of human emotion instead of Christian principles. Beecher was governed by his emotions and expediency with purity of purpose. Mr. Tilton was governed by perverted emotion with ambition and bad policy in telling the truth he thought would justify his conduct—clinging to the leter of the law, not the spirit.

MUST PAY FOR EMPLOYMENT.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Shopmen and other employes of the Washington Terminal company struck last Tuesday to secure pay for overtime and for work done on Sundays and holidays. The Washington Terminal company is the corporation name for the various railroads that own the Union station. About 400 workers are employed. Their hours range from 9 to 12 per day and wages averaged 16 cents an hour until recently, when the company raised wages 1 cent an hour after it discovered that dissatisfaction might lead to organization. About 50 employes have been discharged and the strikers demand that they be reinstated. Several of the employes have made oath that foremen have collected money as the price for holding jobs. Vice President Nolte of the Brotherhood of Railway Car Men is aiding the strikers.

Superintendent Keppel of the company announces that the strikers' places have been quickly filled. He indicates that the incident is of little moment—just a couple of hundred "common laborers" refuse to work for 17 cents an hour under present conditions and their places have been filled by strikebreakers "who were quickly secured."

PREMIUMS MEANS PROFITS.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Wage increases by the Western Union Telegraph company have served to call attention to the vast earnings of this corporation and its decreased operating expenses, due to a premium system. The last financial report of Western Union shows a total earnings in 1915 were $52,356,282; operating expenses, $40,802,317; net revenues, $11,553,969.

The 1913 report shows total earnings were $46,909,267; operating expenses, $42,327,121; net revenues, $4,582,146.

This means that in two years the business of the company increased nearly $5,400,000 and the operating expenses were reduced $1,524,804.

In the 1915 report President Carlton expressed satisfaction over these figures, which are the result of a premium system he terms "refinements in organization."

This official and General Manager Brooks testified before the recent commission on industrial relations that telegraphers were underpaid. The latter acknowledged that this condition constitutes a "grave economic injustice." In its report the commission said both Western Union and Postal telegraphers were not only underpaid, but that they were subjected to many abuses, including the establishment of arbitrary speed rates.

WANTS UNIONS "CONTROLLED."

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Wall Street Journal is worried over the eight-hour demands of railroad employes. The editor wants these brotherhoods "controlled" by law. He accords a workman the right to quit his job for any reason or no reason—but, if a number of these workmen exercise this right collectively, that's a different proposition. Therefore the Wall Street Journal's remedy is to weaken the Clayton law.

"Some day the country will realize that a certain section of the Clayton law will have to be repealed," says the editor, "and that labor combinations will have to be subject to legal control. The right of the individual to cease working when the conditions displease him, or without any reason at all, cannot be abandoned. But that does not mean that the state may not control the actions of a collection of individuals acting as a body, through appointed common agents, to achieve purposes having nothing to do with the freedom of the individual but everything to do with the lives and property of millions of persons outside the organization in question."

CHARITY TO 50,000 FAMILIES.

NEW YORK, June 6.—In a speech before the conference of charities and correction, General Secretary Riley of the Brooklyn bureau of charities estimated that there were 50,000 families who received aid from the half dozen largest charitable institutions in the city during the past year. The speaker said it requires, under present economic conditions, from $900 to $1,000 a year to support a family consisting of father, mother and three children under working age on an acceptable standard of living.

Secretary Riley's speech was followed by a discussion of the feasibility of establishing loan funds for families in temporary difficulties in order that the "standard of well being" may be maintained over periods of uncertain conditions.

The value of trade union methods, by which the heads of these families could reduce hours and maintain a living wage, were not considered.

SHORT JURIES ARE LEGAL.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The United States Supreme Court has held that juries of less than 12 men when required by common law, and verdicts by less than the entire jury, when provided for by state law, are valid, even in cases arising under federal law. The decision upholds the Minnesota law permitting five-sixths of a jury to return a verdict after being out 12 hours, and a Virginia statute authorizing trials before seven jurors.

WHY WOMEN'S WAGES ARE LOW.

ADELAIDE, South Australia, June 6.—Wages in Australia are set by wages boards, appointed by the state governments to represent the various industries. In a report by Chief Inspector of Factories Bannigan, that official states that the reason for low wages of females is "because there is no organization among these workers to enforce their claims to more equitable conditions."

WE REAP WHAT WE SOW

Galatians 6:1-10—June 11.

Not the World, but the Church—Poor Soil and Involuntary Weeds Hereditary—Sowing Represents a Voluntary Act and Personal Responsibility. What Is Sowing to the Flesh?—What Is It to Sow to the Spirit?—What Shall the Harvest Be?

"God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Verse 7.

It is true that every person has a responsibility for his every wilful act and word. It is true in a sense that every human being will have a harvest considerably in accord with his own wilful course in life. Evidently, therefore, every human being could profit from the words of our Golden Text and receive a blessing in proportion as he would follow the spirit of that text.

However, we are not to forget that the Apostle is addressing, not the worldly, but the saintly—the Church, which is composed exclusively of persons who have left the world, turned their backs upon sin, accepted the Lord Jesus as their Savior and Advocate with the Father, and consecrated their lives unreservedly to the doing of the Father's will. Such, begotten of the Holy Spirit, are in the Bible styled New Creatures in Christ. (2 Corinthians 5:17.) To these, "old things have passed away; all things have become new"—new hopes, new aims, new ambitions, new prospects, new standards.

According to the Bible, God has great and precious provisions for the world in the future, but not now. Now the Church of Christ is being selected from the world, to constitute the Royal Family of the future, when completed and perfected by the First Resurrection. Then this Royal Family, as God's Kingdom, will deal with the world of mankind, ruling, instructing, uplifting, blessing all the willing and obedient. Then the world will have its chance for sowing and reaping.

Sowing Garden Seeds.

The Soil and the Seed.

The Christian's heart is consecrated soil from the time when God accepts him as a child. Under Divine instructions special flowers and fruits are to be cultivated, styled fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit. All Christians obedient to the Voice from Heaven are seeking to eradicate the weeds of sin and selfishness, which spring naturally in their flesh because of heredity.

Originally, Father Adam's flesh was perfect. The weeds of sin had not been planted. But now there is no pure soil; sin-weeds are everywhere. Every Christian who would have the consecrated garden of his heart fruitful, pleasing to the Lord, must wage a vigorous and continual battle against the weeds of sin, in order that his heart may be in condition to receive the good seed commended in the Divine Word. He must also battle against the thorns—the cares of life and the deceitfulness of riches, which would choke the Word and make the life unprofitable.—Matthew 13:22.

The Christian who would receive the Master's "Well done!" must be very diligent in the sowing of the proper seeds in his heart. Acts, words and thoughts are the good seeds; and they must be sown persistently. They will yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness—meekness, patience, gentleness, long suffering, brotherly kindness, love. —2 Peter 1:5-11.

It is important that we sow good seed; and there is just one storehouse from which this is supplied—the Word of God. Whoever keeps this seed pure, free from contamination with worldly wisdom—"science falsely so-called"—and from traditions of men—creeds—is best prepared to produce fruits and flowers of the Master's approval.

What It Is to Sow to the Flesh.

A mistake made by some of God's people is that of sowing to the flesh, after having agreed to sow merely to the Spirit—in harmony with God's will. Sowing to the flesh does not mean a thorough rebellion against the Lord, but rather the procurement and the sowing of bad seed—unprofitable seed. The spending of time, energy, money, etc., in the pursuit of pleasure, of earthly things or of earthly riches, whether successful or not, is sowing to the flesh. The tendency of all such neglect of the Christian's covenant with God is toward corruption—death. Let us exhort one another to sow to the Spirit—in accord with the glorious promises of God, which we have accepted and to which we should be bending every energy in the development of the fruits of the Spirit.

Pulling Garden Weeds.

The Apostle urges that each Christian bear his own burden rather than to lean on the brethren; and that while seeking to do for ourselves, we should be tender-hearted toward each other, yea, toward all men. If we find a brother of the Household of Faith overtaken in a fault, we should show our own spirituality in the manifestation of the spirit of meekness and kindness toward him, remembering that we ourselves might some time be overtaken in a fault. Our standing in Christ is not because of human perfection, but because of proper wills, good intentions, fully consecrated hearts.

COLORADO PAPER WEAKENS.

PUEBLO, Col., June 6.—The dismissal by District Judge Wiley, Trinidad, of perjury charges against Horace N. Hawkins and Fred W. Clark, attorneys for the Mine Workers' union, has had a sobering effect on people who have believed they could "railroad" union miners to the penitentiary.

The Pueblo Chieftain has been a stout advocate of the coal operators' brand of "law and order," but this paper now believes it is time to call a halt in court proceedings against the miners. While it can hardly be expected the editor would make a full confession at this time, the following editorial expression indicates that the solid front presented by Colorado trade unionists has resulted in a damaged program of their opponents:

"We believe we speak the sentiment of the people of Colorado when we say, we trust the time is not far distant when all these cases will be settled for good. Those in charge of the prosecution should pick the ones they believe they can secure convictions on and try them immediately and drop the others. There are several hundred more under indictment and out on bond, not five per cent of whom can ever be convicted. There are a few against whom the state claims evidence appears to be decidedly strong. These cases should be pushed to a speedy trial and the others dropped."

CONTRACTORS BLAMED.

AKRON, Ohio, June 6.—"Carelessness and negligence" of contractors caused the collapse of the building in which the Crystal restaurant was located and in which nine persons lost their lives, May 15, according to an official report of state inspectors.

"We find that orders limiting blasting operations to 10 feet (of adjacent buildings) were disregarded, and that shots were placed and fired, one within six feet and one within five and one-half feet from the building line," the report says.

The Toughest Proposition Around the Plant---

"All right," said the Superintendent of a Steel Mill in St. Louis, "I'll let you test out your gear dressing, but I'm giving you fair warning. I picked out the toughest proposition around the plant."

You may be sure he did, for the place selected was a set of gears and pinions out in the foundry on the sand mill running at 100 R. P. M. These gears were SEVERELY EXPOSED. The men transferring sand from the cars did not make any great effort to keep the sand from going on the gears. The longest life of these gears was SIX WEEKS.

Accordingly, the gears were cleaned and was applied. This was on September 27th, 1914.

Since then there have been only two renewals, bringing the average life of the gear up to six months, an increase of 300%. There has been but one renewal of the pinion. This was on November 1, 1915, after a run of one year, one month, and four days. We know this is an unusual instance, but on April 19th of this year, we made another call and found the second pinion in excellent condition after more than 5½ months' service.

This Company is now using TEXACO CRATER COMPOUND on all gears including the annealing furnace and the locomotive cranes.

These people have saved a small fortune on gear replacement. Furthermore, they have been able to secure a material increase in service from their equipment.

And the whole cost of the CRATER used in one year was about equal to the cost of one gear and its pinion.

We want to be absolutely fair in this matter, and so we'll admit that perhaps there was more attention given to the gears, after it was found that these gears COULD be lubricated. But even so, the tremendous increase of gear life points out to you a desirable saving in your plant, particularly now when gears cost so much.

Tell us about your conditions—we'll tell you how CRATER helps.

GARMENT WORKERS STILL LOCKED OUT

Unable to Live Decently and Raise Families on Wages Paid--Disease Rampant Among Them

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Every man, woman and girl worker of the 60,000 employed in the cloak and skirt division of the garment trade in New York is necessary to the manufacturers during the two busy periods or seasons of the year. Yet the average length of time in which these workers are given employment is twenty-four weeks, less than one-half of the year. The average rate of wages for the men during the whole of the year is only $11 a week, because of their long periods of unemployment. The average for women workers, who constitute about 20 per cent of those employed, is around $6. At least three-fourths of the men workers are married and have an average of six people to support. The result is that during slack seasons and seasons of no work at all, they must borrow money or live on credit.

These are among the chief facts brought out in a report to the Committee on Industrial Relations by investigators within and without the union, under the direction of Juliet Stuart Poyntz and Dr. Trachtenberg of the Rand School.

The Manufacturers' Association is trying openly to break up union organization among the workers. The members of the Association are defiantly telling the public that they have no obligation toward the 60,000 workers, the 200,000 workers and dependents, whose services they must have during busy periods.

In fighting to maintain their organization these union workers in the most important industry in New York are trying to protect the public interest as well as their own.

"A recent study by the United States Public Health Service of the health conditions of the workers engaged in the garment industry in New York City reveals the fact that the garment workers as a class exhibit a large number of defects and diseases," says the report to the Committee on Industrial Relations. "The specialists who have made a thorough medical examination of representative groups of garment workers report that only about two per cent can be considered free from defects.

In searching for the cause of the prevalence of tuberculosis among garment workers, the investigators for the United States government showed that in their effort to provide for those dependent upon them the workers are likely to reduce their personal expenditures for necessities to the minimum, and in this way diminished resistance to the disease is produced through insufficient diet and inadequate clothing. In addition to this, the necessity for earning the greatest possible wage in order to tide over the dull season would, especially in the case of piece workrs, lead to unusual exertion, diminishing vital resistance and predisposing to tuberculous infection.

"The finishers, with the lowest annual income, had the highest morality among the garment workers. The average rate of moralty of children in garment workers' families is estimated to be about sixteen per sent."

An investigation into the home conditions of the garment workers was undertaken. The report says: "the average family numbers six people. The average number of rooms occupied per family was found to be three. They are almost invariably dark; often two of the rooms had only airshafts. Here were crowded usually five, six, or seven people. Only occasionally was there any sign of a bath that could be used. The toilets were generally in the halls and were used by occupants of the entire floor. The halls were dark and narrow. The rent paid never fell lower than $10 a month, and sometimes reached as high as $28. The average was about $16. It was quite usual to take in a boarder, or perhaps two, to help with the expenses.

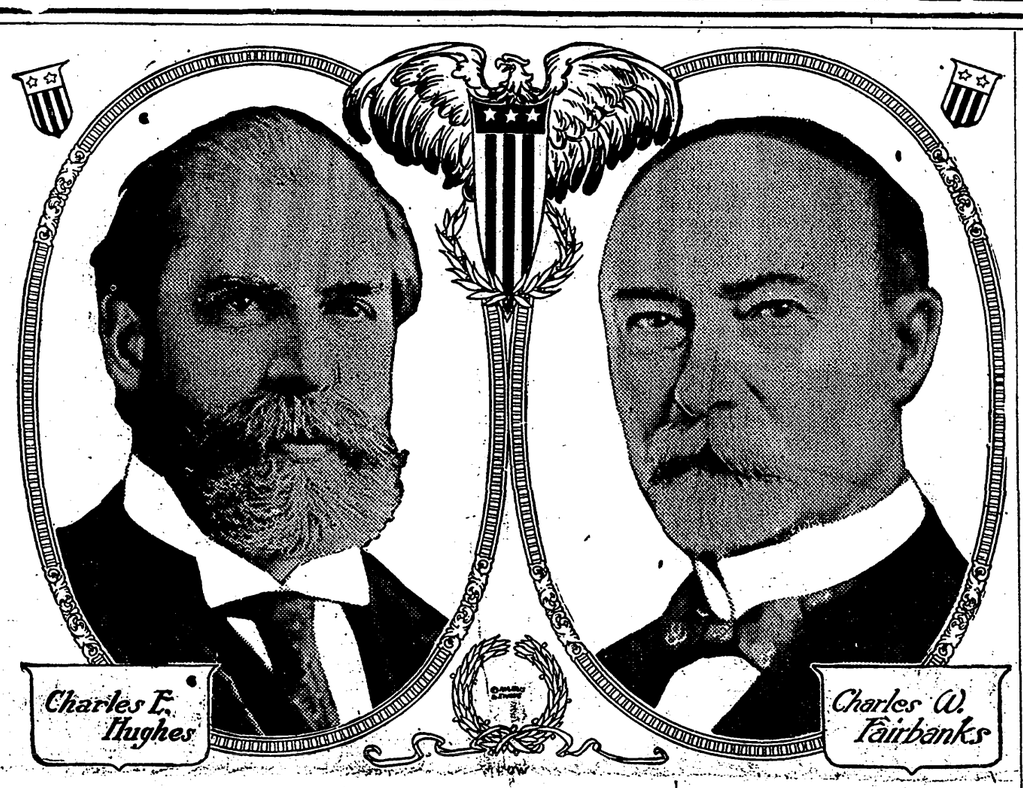
"Something more than one-third of these workers have dependents other than their immediate family to take care of."

These workers, who have been forced on strike by the lockout by the manufacturers, are clinging desperately to their union organization. It is all that protects them from the most horrible exploitation in sweatshops. They are exploited in sweatshops now, through the devices of the employers who put out most of their work to contractors and sub-manufacturers. One man told an investigator that if the bosses offered him $50 a week for the rest of his life to leave the union he would refuse it and stick to the union. This perception of the value of their union has come to these workers through seeing the determination of the men who exploit them to break up the union.

Here is an industry that has made many men in it worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, and often millions of dollars, in a few years; and yet it drives those who produce that wealth to the verge of starvation for a great part of the year. Some of the worst conditions are in the contractors and sub-manufacturers' sweatshops kept up by the leading manufacturers in the Manufacturers' Association.

The fight of these workers in New York for a decent living has attracted nation-wide attention. The lines are drawing tight between employers in New York as well as in Pittsburgh and other industrial centers to crush out the unionism that gives the workers their only chance of self-protection.

There is now little, if any, doubt that the unions are going to win their fight. The justice of their cause and their courage have won them popular favor. They have resisted efforts of the employers who have hoped by taking advantage of their poverty to force them back into the shops as helpless, unorganized, sweated workers.



CHILD WELFARE WORKERS IN WAR TIME

Financial Figures of England's Greatest Labor Union.

Thomas Reece, Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, June 1, 1916.—The sudden rise in the economic value of the British boy worker in war-time, the competition for his services, and the high wages he is paid have naturally made many of his kind less amenable to discipline than ever. Some difficulty in managing boys has been experienced in the munition factories, though the trouble is confined to a minority. The chief complaints are these: Feeling certain of easily finding another job, a boy readily leaves the works because of some slight misunderstanding or seeming injustice. His high wages tend to make him independent of home control, and extravagant and thriftless in spending them.

The Workers' Welfare Department of the Ministry of Munitions, having ing another job, a boy readily leaves successfully promoted the health, efficiency, and contentment of women and girls in the factories, has now turned its attention to boys. It has been found not so easy to deal with their case, but after much thought a scheme has been devised which, it is hoped, will reduce to a minimum the frequent throwing up of work, bad time-keeping, and general indiscipline. The scheme is founded on the belief that the boy needs outside the formal factory control, kindly supervision and sympathetic guidance. These are to be supplied by a supervisor to be appointed and paid by the management of each factory in which a large number of boys are employed.

It is proposed that the supervisor should look after the general working conditions so far as they affect the health and comfort of the boys. Before any boy is dismissed or given his discharge the case is to be notified to the supervisor, so that by an interview with the boy or a visit to his home, he may be able to remove the trouble. It it also intended that the supervisor should be told the wages each boy earns, which will enable him to appreciate the boy's financial position in his hame, and devise the best means for encouraging him to save.

It is hoped that the expenditure in the payment of the supervisors will be more than covered by the increase of efficiency of the factory and its added output. Men best qualified for the posts are those with experience in social work.

During the first quarter of the current year the Amalgamated Society of Engineers added $418,435 to their accumulated funds, making the grand total $7,272,875 of which $3,218,760 is superannuation reserve. As arrears have appreciably declined, it is obvious that the society is doing better financially than it has ever done. The quarterly increase is of course abnormal, and is largely brought about by the marked decrease in payments of donation benefits. The expenditure under this head erpresented no more than 7½ cents per members during the quarter. As a number of the older men have patriotically returned to work superannuation payments—which come, by the way, out of the general fund—are also lighter.

When the result of the ballot of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers on the question of a political fund levy of 6 cents per member per quarter was announced surprise was experienced by some people at the number of men who opposed the proposal. The majority was 13,520 and the minority 11,759. The details of the voting, which are now available, will probably be regarded as still more surprising, for they show a great deal of opposition to the levy is in the larger industrial areas. A conclusion drawn here from the figures is that the rank and file of the society do not care so much for the direct Parliamentary representation of Labor as they are assumed to do. It would be interesting, however, to know how much of the opposition is due to workers who prefer which is called "direct action" to constitutional methods.

An application for a new agreement, with improved working, conditions, has been submitted by the Licensed Vehicle Workers' Union on behalf of all grades of bus workers employed by hte London General Omnibus Company. The present agreement, which was entered into in 1914, is due to expire in a few weeks' time. The men are asking for:—25 cents increase in minimum rate for drivers and conductors to $1.89 and $1.64 per day respectively; 25 cents extra per day to each driver and conductor working "spread-over" duties beyond twelve hours, composite license holders to receive drivers' rate of pay whether working at driving of conducting; minimum rate of pay for spare drivers to be $8.75 per week, and spare conductors $7.50 weekly; over time to be paid at 25 per cent above regular mileage rates; all craftsmen to receive trade union rates of pay London district; all employees to be trade unionists, non-unionists, now in the employ of the company to become union men.

The South Wales Miners' Federation Council on May 22, received a letter from Lord Muir Mackenzie, addressed to the joint secretaries of the Conciliation Board, in which, it is understood his Lordship sugested a figure for the coal selling price equivalent to the minimum wage. The council resolved: "That, having carefully considered the letter, it expresses its regret that his Lordship should have given an opinion upon applications under consideration by the Wages Board before having the matters discussed under his presidency. The council is therefore of opinion that this action renders it impossible for him to adjudicate upon the applications." It was further resolved that the President of the Board of Trade be asked to meet a deputation of workmen in order to consider the deadlock created by this decision.

There are at present applications before the Conciliation Board for an increase of 15 per cent and from the employers for a decrease of 7½ per cent in the general wage rate.

The English Coal Conciliation Board for the Federation area, meeting at the Westminister Palace Hotel, London, on May 18, granted the applica-

LETTER FROM THE NATION'S CAPITAL

The Speeding-up System Defeated by Organized Labor--Some Immigration Figures.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The house rejected an amend- to the naval appropriation bill which would permit the use of the "stop watch", "speeding up," and other unscientific and man-killing systems in the government navy yards. This amendment was introduced by Congressman Browne of Wisconsin. As a member of the house committee on labor, he recently signed a minority report in favor of the Taylor system.

Congressman Keating (Colorado) and Nolan (California), members of the house labor group, led the fight against the amendment. Both of these congressmen are members of the committee on labor, which made a favorable report on the Tavenner (anti-"stop watch") bill.

Congressman Keating said that "it has been testified repeatedly that you can have an effeciency system without the "stop watch", the premium or the bonus system." He declared that the leader of the "stop watch" advocates before the committee on labor were James A. Emery of the National Association of Manufacturers and General Crozier, chief of ordance. United States army. Reference was made to the former's attempt to defeat the pending child labor bill and to his lobbying methods as shown by a congressional expose of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Congressman Nolan declared that Congressman Browne "was not present at most of the hearings and did not have the opportunity to hear the testimony of those in favor of the Tavenner bill." The California union iron molder further declared that while the committee on labor was taking testimony on the bill "not one of the gentlemen who appeared and represented himself as an efficiency expert and a scientific management engineer had ever had any practical shop experience." He insisted that "scientific management", as urged by friends of the Browne amendment, would merely develop a small group of "highly trained, time and motion study men" who would acquire all the knowledge in industry with American laborers and artisans trained in one simple operation.

The federal department of labor reports that 36,999 immigrants were admitted during April of this year, against 31,755 during the same period last year, and 142,207 during April, 1914, which was prior to the European war.

Of April, 1916, arrivals, Italy contributed the largest number, 4,703, followed by Greece, with 4,031. Out of the Balkan states—Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro—come but 54, against 35 in April, 1915, and 2,433 in Auril, 1914.

During April, 1916, the laborers admitted were 6,195, and the farm laborers, 4,208.

New York state secured the largest number of these arrivals, 7,660; followed by Massachusetts with 3,572; Michigan, 2,581; Pennsylvania, 1,926, and California, 1,202.

Few of these immigrants were destined to the southern states. But 5 were ticketed to Tennessee, 6 to Kentucky, 7 to Arkansas, 14 to Mississippi, 17 to North Carolina, 24 each to Alabama and Georgia, and 13 to South Carolina.

In the current issue of the Monthly Review, published by the United States bureau of labor statistics, extended reference is made to the findings of a committee appointed by the British government to investigate conditions of workers in English munitions plants.

These three systems are in vogue in munitions factories: One shift of 13 and 14 hours (the overtime system); two shifts of 12 hours and three shifts of eight hours. It is stated that the last system appears to yield the best results in the long run, for "the strain of night work, indeed strain generally, in sensibly diminished, greater vigor and work is maintained throughout the shift, less time is lost by unpunctuality or illness, and there is less liability to acident." The committee recommends the adoption of the three-shift system, without overtime, wherever a sufficient supply of labor is available.

The committee found that the reason why workers feel "done up" is because of persistent long hours and an absence of their weekly rest. It is declared that this "staleness" is becoming increasingly common, and that "for the avoidance of staleness in conditions of strenous labor it is not enough to treat workmen in the bulk and to regulate daily and weekly rests upon a physiological basis devised for the average."

Night work is vigorously condemned on the theory that it is uneconomical, that supervision is unsatisfactory, and that workers not only find it difficult to sleep during the day but their unusual meal hours make it difficult to consume substantial food and deranged digestion results.

The committee says that the true sign of fatigue is diminished capacity and that measurement of output in work will give the most direct test of fatigue.

A feature of this report is the absence of any charges that workers are willful "slackers". The public press in England and America gave much publicity to this charge several months ago, but the committee makes flat declaration that it is a physical impossibility for men to avoid "growing stale" where they are compelled to work long hours.

It is stated that, as a whole, munitions workers have been allowed to reach a state of reduced efficiency and lowered health which might have been avoided without reduction in output.

By a vote of 47 to 22 the senate has confirmed the appointment of Louis D. Brandeis of Boston to the position of associate justice of the United States supreme court.

He took the oath of office last Monday and now occupies the seat of the late Justice Lamar.

The president forwarded Mr. Brandeis' nomination to the senate January 28. A storm of protest followed and a committee of 55 Boston citizens headed by President Lowell. Harvard university, was organized to contest the nomination. The senate judiciary committee appointed a subcommittee to report on the nomination. About 50 witnesses were heard and 1,500 pages of testimony taken. William H. Taft, Joseph H. Choate, Elihu Root and other ex-presidents of the American Bar association protested against the nomination, as did many newspapers and individuals.

Despite this opposition, a majority of the subcommittee favored the appointment, as did the full committee, by a vote of 10 to 8. When the matter came to the senate it was agreed that a vote would be taken without debate.

POTTERY WORKERS ELECT.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, June 12.—It is announced that President Menge and Secretary-Treasurer Wood have been re-elected by a referendum election for officers of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. Seven vice presidents and a delegate to the American Federation of Labor were also elected.

PILATE'S REPORT.

VALLEUS'S NOTES.—ACTA PILATI, OR PILATE'S REPORT TO CAESAR OF THE ARREST, TRIAL, AND CRUCIFIXION OF JESUS.

"I then ordered Jesus to be scourged, hoping this might satisfy them; but it only increased their fury. I then called for a basin, and washed my hands in the presence of the clamorous multitude, thus testifying that in my judgment Jesus of Nazareth had done nothing deserving of death; but in vain. It was his life these wretches thirsted for.

"Often in our civil commotions have I witnessed the furious anger of the multitude, but nothing could be compared to what I witnessed on this occasion. It might have been truly said that all the phantoms of the infernal regions had assembled at Jerusalem. The crowd appeared not to walk, but to be borne off and whirled as a vortex, rolling along in living waves from the portals of the praetorium even unto Mount Zion, with howling screams, shrieks, and vociferations such as were never heard in the sedtions of the Pannonia, or in the tumults of the forum.

"By degrees the day darkened like a winter's twilight, such as had been at the death of the great Julius Caesar. It was likewise the Ides of March. I, the continued governor of a rebellious province, was leaning against a column of my basilic, contemplating athwart the dreary gloom these fiends of Tartarus dragging to execution the innocent Nazarene. All around me was deserted. Jerusalem had vomited forth her indwellers through the funeral gate that leads to Gemonica. An air of desolution and sadness enveloped me. My guards had joined the cavalry, and the centurion, with a display of power, was endeavoring to keep order. I was left alone, and my breaking heart admonished me that what was passing at that moment apertained rather to the history of the gods than that of man. A loud clamor was heard proceeding from Golgotha, which, borne on the winds, seemed to announce an agony such as was never heard by mortal ears. Dark clouds lowered over the pinnacle of the temple, and setting over the city covered it as with a veil. So dreadful were the signs that men saw both in the heavens and on the earth that Dionysius the Areopagite is reported to have exclaimed, 'Either the author of nature is suffering or the universe is falling apart.'

"Whilst these appalling scenes of nature were transpiring, there was a dreadful earthquake in lower Egypt, which filled everybody with fear, and scared the superstitious Jews almost to death. It is said Balthasar, an aged and learned Jew of Antioch, was found dead after the excitement was over. Whether he died from alarm or grief is not known. He was a strong friend of the Nazarene.

"Near the first hour of the night I threw my mantle around me, and went down into the city toward the gates of Golgotha. The sacrifice was consummated. The crowd was returning home, still agitated, it is true, but gloomy, taciturn, and desperate. What they had witnessed had stricken them with terror and remorse. I also saw my little Roman cohort pass by mournfully, the standard-bearer having veiled his eagle in token of grief; and I overheard some of the Jewish soldiers murmuring strange words which I did not understand. Others were recounting miracles very like those which have so often smitten the Romans by the will of the gods. Sometimes groups of men and women would halt, then, looking back toward Mount Calvary, would remain motionless in expectation of witnessing some new prodigy.

"I returned to the praetorium, sad and pensive. On ascending the stairs, the steps of which were still stained with the blood of the Nazarene, I perceived an old man in a suppliant posture, and behind him several Romans in tears. He threw himself at my feet and wept bitterly It is painful to see an old man weep, and my heart being already overcharged with grief, we, though strangers, wept together. And in truth it seemed that the tears lay very shallow tat day with many whom I perceived in the vast concourse of people. I never witnessed such an extreme revulsion of feeling. Those who betrayed and sold him, those who testified against him, those who cried, 'Crucify him, we have his blood,' all slunk off like cowardly curs, and washed their teeth with vinegar. As I am told that Jesus taught a resurrection and a separation after death, if such should be the fact I am sure it commenced in this vast crowd.

"'Father,' said I to him, after gaining control of my feeling, 'who are you, and what is your request?'

"'I am Joseph of Arimathaea,' replied he, 'and am come to beg of you upon my knees the permission to bury Jesus of Nazareth.'

"'Your prayer is granted,' said I to him; and at the same time I ordered Manlius to take some soldiers with him to superintend the interment, lest it should be profaned.

"A few days after the sepulchre was found empty. His disciples proclaimed all over the country that Jesus had risen from the dead, as he had foretold. This created more excitement even than the crucifixion. As to its truth I cannot say for certain, but I have made some investigation of the matter; so you can examine for yourself, and see if I am at fault, as Herod represents.

"Joseph bured Jesus in his own tomb. Whether he contemplated his resurrection or calculated to cut him another, I cannot tell. The day after he was buried one of the priests came to the practorium and said they were apprehensive that his disciples intended to steal the body of Jesus and hide it, and then make it appear that he had risen from the dead, as he had foretold, and of which they were perfectly convinced. I sent him to the captain of the royal guard (Malcus) to tell him to take the Jewish soldiers, place as many around the sepulchre as were needed; then if anything should happen they could blame themselves, and not the Romans.

"When the great excitement arose about the sepulchre being found empty, I felt a deeper solicitude than ever. I sent for Malcus, who told me he had placed his lieutenant, Ben Isham, with one hundred soldiers, around the sepulchre. He told me that Isham and the sodliers werevery much alarmed at what had occurred there that morning. I sent for this man Isham, who related to me, as near as I can recollect, the following circumstances: He said that at about the beginning of the fourth watch they saw a soft and beautiful light over the sepulchre. He at first thought that the women had come to embalm the body of Jesus, as was their custom, but he could not see how they had gotten through the guards. While these thoughts were passing through my mind, behold, the whole place was lighted up, and there seemed to be crowds of the dead in their grave-clothes. All seemed to be shouting and filled with ecstasy, while all around and above was the most beautiful music he had ever heard; and the whole air seemed to be full of voices praising God. At this time there seemed to be a reeling and swimming of the earth, so that he turned so sick and faint that he could not stand on his feet. He said the earth seemed to swim from under him, and his senses left him, so that he knew not what did occur. I asked him in what condition he was when he came to himself. He said he was laying on the ground with his face down. I asked him if he could not have been mistaken as to the light. Was it not day that was coming in the East? He said at first he thought of that, but at a stone's cast it was exceedingly dark; and then he remembered it was too early for day. I asked him if his dizziness might not have come from being wakened up and getting up too suddenly, as it sometimes had that effect. He said he was not, and had not been asleep al night, as the penalty was death for him to sleep on duty. He said he had let some of the soldiers sleep at atime. Some were asleep then. I asked him how long the scene lasted. He said he did not know, but he thought nearly an hour. He said it was hid by the light of day. I asked him if he went to the sepulchre after he had come to himself. He said no, because he was afraid; that just as soon as relief came they all went to their quarters. I asked him if he had been questionen by the priests. He said he had. They wanted him to say it was an earthquake, and that they were asleep, and offered him money to say that the disciples came and stole Jesus; but he saw no disciples; he did not know that the body of Jesus was gone until he was told. I asked him what was the private opinion of those priests he had coversed with. He said that some of them thought that Jesus was no man; that he was not a human being; that he was not the son of Mary; that he was not the same that was said to be born of the virgin in Bethlehem; that the same person had been on the earth before with Abraham and Lot, and at many times and places.

"It seems to me that, if the Jewish theory be true, these conclusions are correct, for they are in accord with this man's life, as is known and testified by both fiends and foes, for the elements were no more in his hands than the clay in the hands of the potter. He could convert water into wine; he could change death into life, disease into health; he could calm the seas, still the storms, call up fish with a silver coin in its mouth. Now, I say, if he could do all these things, which he did, and many more, as the Jews all testify, and it was doing these things that created this enmity against him—he was not charged with criminal offenses, nor was he charged with violating any law, nor of wronging any individual in person, and all these facts are known to thousand, as well by his foes as by his friends—I am almost ready to say, as did Manulas at the cross, 'Truly this was the Son of God.'

"Now, noble Sovereign, this is as near the facts in the case as I can arrive at, and I have taken pains to make the statement very full, so that you may judge of my conduct upon the whole, as I hear that Antipater has said many hard things of me in this matter. With the promise of faithfulness and good wishes to my noble Sovereign,

"I am your most obedient servant,
"PONTIUS PILATE."

THE PHILIPPIAN JAILER

Acts 16:19-34—June 18.

An Experience With Evil Spirits—Sad Condition of a Slave—Her Enraged Owners Revenge Themselves Upon St. Paul and Silas—The Missionaries Beaten and Imprisoned—Singing Praises to God Under Adverse Conditions—A Well-Timed Earthquake.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Verse 31.

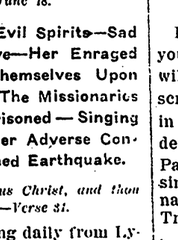
WHILE passing daily from Lydia's home to the place of worship outside the gates of Philippi, the missionaries were met repeatedly by a slave girl possessed of an evil spirit, one of the fallen angels. The spirit, working through her, told fortunes, gave intelligence of lost articles, of future events, etc. Evidently she was well known; and the exercise of her profession brought a large income to a stock company of influential men who owned her.

For several days this girl followed the missionaries, shouting, "These be the servants of the Most High God, which show unto us the way of salvation!" Of course, the girl did not know St. Paul and his companions; but the evil spirits did. The Apostle was grieved as daily this testimony was given by the girl; for he knew that the evil spirit prompting it would have no respect for the Truth. A fallen angel that had respect for God and for the principles of righteousness would not seek to obsess humanity when it knew that such obsession would be to their injury and was contrary to God's will.

St. Paul said not a word to the girl, assuming that she was not accountable. He addressed the spirit as such, commanding it in the name of Jesus to come out of her—just as our Lord and the Apostles, under His instruction, had frequently cast out evil spirits.—Matt. 10:1; Mark 5:1-17; Luke 10:17, etc.

The Syndicate's Revenge.

We can imagine what consternation was aroused amongst the owners of the slave when they found not only that their source of future gain was gone, but that the money invested in this girl was lost; for spirit-possessed slaves had a high market value. They became desperately angry; and, having no hope of getting the evil spirit back into the slave, they took revenge upon those who had financially ruined them.



St. Paul Exorcising a Demon.

Evidently the syndicate had influence; for they succeeded quickly in arousing a mob determined to have revenge. St. Paul and Silas were carried before the rulers at the market-place. There the syndicate ignored the truth of the matter, and claimed that the missionaries were teaching a religion contrary to the laws of Rome and likely to raise sedition. This was untrue; for the Lord's servants went, according to law, outside the city gates for their worship.

The false charge brought upon the missionaries the severest penalties which their judges could inflict. The magistrates rent their garments as indicative of their distress that such a disturbance had occurred, and then ordered the missionaries to be beaten with rods and put into prison.

Under these unfavorable circumstances, with backs raw and bleeding, these faithful brethren sang hymns of praise for the privilege of enduring tribulation for Christ's sake.

The Jailer Converted.

While the missionaries were singing, an earthquake shock jarred the prison walls, loosed the chains wherewith the prisoners were bound, and released the bars which fastened the doors. The jailer, finding the doors open, supposed that the prisoners had escaped. Knowing that he would be held responsible, he was about to commit suicide, when St. Paul called to him, "Do thyself no harm. We are all here."

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ."

By this time the jailer was fully convinced that the missionaries were not ordinary criminals. After he had secured the door, he brought St. Paul and Silas into his own quarters and attended to their comfort. Meantime he heard from them something respecting Jesus, the world's Redeemer. He was convicted of sin, and inquired, "What shall I do to be saved?" The answer came promptly, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." Then, taking this statement as a text, St. Paul explained to him and his household the Divine Plan of Atonement. The Truth-seed sank into good soil. Those present gratefully accepted the privilege of discipleship—to suffer for Christ's sake.

Next morning, the rulers, having learned something of the events of the preceding night, ordered the release of the missionaries. Evidently they realized that they had no just cause against the two. When the order reached the prison, the missionaries sent word back that they were Roman citizens, and that Roman law had been violated in that they had been publicly beaten and illegally condemned. These charges against the magistrates might have gone hard against them. Hence it is not to be wondered at that they came to the prison and brought the missionaries forth publicly, thus conceding that injustice had been done.

Your paper is certainly a welcome visitor in our home, we appreciate so much Pastor C. Y. Russell's sermons. They are so helpful for Bible study, they show how God's great plan is marked out in the Bible in a marvelous way, in fact they are the first thing we read in your valuable paper when it comes. Hoping they will continue to be printed.

Old Town, Maine, June 12.

I take this opportunity of adding to the many you are continually receiving my words of commendation for the stand you take for justice and righteousness, for the large space you devote to religious maters, especially those so dear to friends of Present Truth, and for the general fine appearance of the Tribune as a whole. You and your co-workers on this sheet are to be highly complimented for the thought, care and labor you have devoted and continue to devote to the improvement of your paper for the benefit of your subscribers. It is a decided pleasure to receive and read it, other and beside the fact of its special attractions to me.

I am especially pleased with the manner in which you now print Pastor Russell's sermon. When I first subscribed to the Tribune it was because you then published these sermons. I then stated that you might count me in as a subscriber so long as you continued to publish the sermons, which statement, I have repeated from time to time when renewing subscriptions. I have considered this a contract on my part and shall live up to it, as long as I have the means to pay a subscription with. With best wishes for your continued growth and success and knowing that you will be more richly rewarded in His "due time." I remain,

Most sincerely yours,
CLARENCE SCOTT.

Dear Editor:—It has been some time since I last wrote you of my appreciation of the Tribune; in the meantime I have noticed your unswerving fidelity to Truth and righteousness against many odds.

I want to inform you that I appreciate the paper more than ever and will lend my support to it as long as I can—as long as you continue your present standard in heralding the "Glad Tidings of Great Joy Which Shall Be To All People"—Luke 2:10.

I enclose herewith a poem written by a dear friend of mine, A. H. Kurzen of Dalton, O. If you think it worthy of a place in the Tribune and can use it I would be glad to have you do so; if not, it will be all right.

Very truly,
F. H. KAUFMAN.

What is the Conclusion?

If men in the past were monkeys,
Protoplasm, microbe, fish or horse,
Mosquito, bug, bird or donkeys;
How do we acount for the source?

Of the lost art of embalming,
Tempered copper,—elastic glass,
Of the Pymramid,—its planing—
How did the great structure amass?

When we draw aside the curtain
And view the scenes of the past day,
It all looks very uncertain—
Men sprung up on this Earth that way.

True, the past shows some things were crude,
Savage and fierce,—clear out of range.
Can the past be properly viewed
When facts are contrary and strange?

Take notice of this present day;
All that results because of men,
Seems no less strange the least to say,
But what is the conclusion then?

No monkeys now turn into men;
Let those who will,—think men were gods;
For the effect the cause has been—
(Thirty and three feet make two rods.)

Is there a conclusion then?
Is the question unanswered? When—
Cause and effect are asking plain,
How the thought when there is no brain?

Rocky Mount, N. C., June 10.

I am sending in my renewed subscription to the Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society. My subscription expires this month; I see it is April on the tab, but as I first subscribed in June and have renewed each time thereon, so it may be a miss print, or mistake, any way I am enjoying the many good features in your good paper, especially Pastor Russell's sermons and the nice large print you use for them. I enjoy the N. E. Nelson Esseys very much, they refresh our memorys on past history. I have been helped by the Report of Gamaliel and the ones by Caiphas very much they have the ring of truth to them. I am very glad you are giving us such a feast. I assure you I apreciate them all very much. I trust dear Editor you are having your faith made stronger by all the glad tidings of good news in your paper. May God bless you for your noble stand to help spread the Gospel to so many in your paper. You will surely receive a reward if you faint not, in God's due time. The clouds of trouble continue to grow darker, but by faith we can see the silver lining. After the world has learned the exceeding sinfulness of sin in the great trouble they will welcome Christ's Kingdom and learn righteousness. Thinking you for the good teachings in your paper, wishing you continued success, yours striving to solve the King of Kings by God's Grace.

Pastor Russell's Sphere in the Reformtion

troubles but the remote cause lay deeper. Had Beecher taught and lived the high standard of social relations of the New Testament and Tilton followed this example in Beecher, the social life of these men would not have brought them down to the common level of humanity—their experience has been partly epitomized by the maxim, to which few prove themselves an exception: "Big folk have little folk upon whose rights to trample; little folk have lesser folk and followed the example."

It will be remembered that the rule we consistently applied to all the characters of this story, who taught or lived, or harbored this social heresy, Knox, Milton, Tilton and Beecher, had no definite theological concept to rally to. Beecher and Wesley were near alike in their endowments and precepts in that they both centered on the life of Christ. Wesley produced Free Grace, Beecher revived Wesley heart religion, but centered more on culture than the life of Christ, and produces nothing definite theologically and is a mere echo in this respect. Whatever Beecher lost in not being honored with producing progressive Christian knowledge was gained by Russell whose life is a life of principle with emotion subservient. Russell's success in theology is due more to his obedience to principle and character development than to his powers of concentration and phrenological endowment. "If these things be in you and abound, they shall make you that ye shall be neither barren and unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Fidelity to principle not only led our Brooklyn Divine to be honored as a standard bearer, but also led to the cloud that now hovers over his domestic life—the secret to his honor and faultless character is also the secret to his stained reputation. In presenting the old theology from the writings of the New Testament, and all his theology is based on this authority, he consistently drew into this the rules of the Christian collective and individual life—applicable to the congregation and to the home. This included the very delicate and much avoided question of woman's sphere in the church and in the home. He not only consistently taught this but set an example by obeying the divine ordinance in his marital relations.

NATURAL LAW PARALLELED ON SPIRITUAL PLANE.

SOWING AND REAPING CORRESPOND IN KIND, IN QUALITY AND IN QUANTITY.

Sow to the Flesh and Reap Corruption—Sow to the Spirit and Reap Life Everlasting—Sow Bountifully and Reap Bountifully—Sow Sparingly and Reap Sparingly—Sow Choicest Seed and Reap Richest Grain—What Shall Our Harvest Be?

INDIANAPOLIS, June 11.—Pastor Russell was here today and gave a very interesting lecture on the text, "He that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully; but he that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly." (2 Corinthians 9:6.) A condensed report follows:

The speaker showed that reaping invariably corresponds to sowing, not only in kind, but also in quality and in quantity. It is very evident that his view on the application of both text and context differs from that of the majority of even professed Christians. Usually this passage is applied in a general way to everybody; but the Pastor applies it only to Christians. While he admits that it is true that all reap as they sow, yet he claims that only Christians —those who have made a full consecration of themselves to God and are begotten of the Holy Spirit—can sow to the Spirit; that only these are now on trial for life or death everlasting. He believes that only a few are sowing seed along spiritual lines and reaping spiritual harvests; and that the great majority are sowing along mere natural lines, whether the seed be good or evil, and will reap accordingly, some a noble and some an ignoble character.

So far has man fallen from the estate in which Adam was created that it may be truly said, as the Apostle declares, "They are all gone out of the way; they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." (Romans 3:10-12.) Instead of being a holy spirit—a holy mind or disposition—the mind of fallen man today is largely unholy, perverted and imperfect. But those who have stepped out from the world, those who have become, through faith in Christ and dedication of themselves to God, children of God, have His Holy Spirit—His mind or disposition; and this they have in proportion as they are living close to God, following in their Master's footsteps.

According to the measure that this latter class "sow to the Spirit" will they reap the character of Christ, the fruitage of the Holy Spirit. The Lord desires His people not only to sow to the Spirit, but to sow bountifully. There is a principle of justice that runs all through the matter. God does not say, "Never mind what you do. I will forgive you and make it all right with you. I know that you are imperfect." No! The principle constantly operates that whoever sows good seed will reap corresponding blessings; but whoever sows evil seed may expect to reap corresponding injury. The merit of Christ covers the Christian's unwitting mistakes when he is doing his best; but it does not make up for negligence, carelessness or indifference as to the kind of seed he sows. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

INFLEXIBLE LAW OF CAUSE AND EFFECT

Those now children of God found, before they left the world, that when they lived in accordance with the will of the fallen human nature, the things from which they expected good results and happiness gave poor results and dissatisfaction—that anticipation was much better than realization. They also found that following their own will generally yielded bad fruitage. They had sown wrong thoughts; and these thoughts produced more of the same kind. Then the wrong thoughts brought forth wrong deeds, which in time developed a wrong character. The things which at first were merely optional became fixed characteristics. As somebody has well said, "Sow a thought and reap an act; sow an act and reap a habit; sow a habit and reap a character; sow a character and reap a destiny." To the extent that an unholy character had been developed it must be painstakingly demolished, and a righteous character erected.

In this connection parents should begin with their children, by keeping before their minds from earliest childhood pure, noble, loving thoughts. While it is impossible to make them perfect, yet parents can do much toward shielding their children from the evil in the world. By giving their children a right start in life, parents would be bestowing upon them a legacy for which the children would thank them throughout eternity. If mothers could only know how much they have in their power the moulding of the minds of their children, how careful they would be! How vigilantly they would guard their own mental conditions and attitudes, in order that they might bring into the world children whose dispositions would be noble, upright—children that would be a blessing rather than a curse.

But if vicious passions control, if wrong thoughts are harbored, the child will be born with these evil tendencies; and no matter how hard he may try in after life to develop a noble character, he will have a life-long battle with the results of improper pre-natal influences. How sad it is that these facts were not set before us long ago!

The fathers also have especial responsibility along this line. Not only should they themselves be noble if they would hope to bring forth noble offspring, but they should see to it that so far as possible the mother should have the proper associations and environment, the proper care and attention. As these things are all taken into consideration in the breeding of fine horses, dogs, etc., of how much more importance is it that our children be given thus a noble heritage!

PROPER TRAINING OF CHILDREN

It is high time that all thinking people agitate this subject, and thus head off as far as possible the propagation of children badly equipped mentally, morally and physically. We cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of proper pre-natal influences in forming the bend of the child's disposition. But parental responsibility does not cease with the birth of the child. Its entire life requires supervision. Here again the mother has her care to see that the child is not unjust in dealing with its playmates—not even with the dog. She must also inculcate cleanliness of body and of mind. If she is careless about these things, the child gets the idea that it does not matter what one does; and thus the liability to do unjustly and to live uncleanly is greatly increased.

Peculiar responsibility along all lines rests upon Christian parents. As we come to see the principles of God's government, our minds should be filled with thoughts of justice, righteousness, kindness, love. These thoughts should be reflected upon our children; and thus they are taught of God. Even though they may not become spirit-begotten children of God, yet all who ever attain unto life everlasting on any plane must have this holy spirit, mind. If a child is not naturally meek, if its pre-natal development was neglected in this respect, then it should be taught meekness. It should be shown how unbecoming are rudeness and self-assertion. It should have held up before it the beauty of gentleness and kindness.

If a child is handled properly during the early formative years of its life, it will soon get these good principles fixed in its mind. Meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, kindness, love—these are traits that parents should carefully cultivate in themselves. They are qualities of the Spirit of God which He expects all His children to develop richly. However bad a Christian's habits may have been before he became God's child, the Heavenly Father expects him to eradicate his undesirable traits of character as rapidly as possible, by Divine grace. He is to dig them up by the roots, as he would pull up noxious weeds from his garden. Then he must plant instead the beautiful and fruitful things. What a beautiful adornment is meekness! How unlovely are arrogance and headiness!

As this beauty of character is manifested by the parent, it will be noticed by the children, who are very quick of discernment, and who generally have a keen sense of justice and of consistency of example. Sooner or later this beauty in the parent is sure to bear fruitage in the child, unless its character had become too firmly fixed before the parents realized their responsibility along these lines. Undoubtedly the disrespect of parents so common today and the neglect of parents in their old age are the legitimate fruitage of parental neglect in earlier days. Many parents today are reaping the harvest of their own failure to train their children properly in early childhood. In many cases evil seeds have been sown in the child mind instead of good seed; and today the bad fruitage of such sowing is evident. In other cases the seed has been sown far too sparingly; and the reaping has been in proportion.

GOD'S CHILDREN CAREFULLY TRAINED

As the child-life is a training school, so it is with the spirit-begotten children of God. As soon as we enter His family, He puts us to school; and during the remainder of our lives in the flesh we are given a systematic course of training, schooling. As New Creatures, we are in the School of Christ, where we have daily lessons to learn—lessons of meekness, love, as well as lessons of doctrine. Chronology shows us where we are on the stream of time. Doctrine is the foundation upon which our character structure is to be built. But the most important of all our lessons is that of character-likeness to our great Teacher, Christ Jesus.

St. Peter tells us that this work is accomplished through the "exceeding great and precious promises," given to us that thereby we "might be partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4). As the children of God feed upon these promises, they work in us to will and to do of God's good pleasure. Thus we become like Christ, who always delighted to do God's will. At first we were willing to do that will, but now we are striving TO DO. And this is right; for it is just what the promises are designed to do in us.

This School of Christ was opened at our Lord's First Advent. During His earthly ministry, about five hundred pupils were enrolled. At Pentecost, when the Holy Spirit was first given in begetting power, many more entered this School and came under the instruction of the Master Teacher. At first the pupils were of the Jews only; but a little later the door of favor was opened to the Gentiles also. Then all who would meet the conditions of discipleship were invited to enter this School.

The terms of discipleship are very definite and rigid. To be a disciple of Christ one must entirely surrender his will to God, and then take up his cross and follow Jesus, henceforth to have no will of his own, but to strive day by day to copy Christ. (Matthew 16:24.) This class shall, if faithful to the end of their course, reap the legitimate reward of their careful sowing to the Spirit—full character-likeness to Christ Jesus our Lord; and this will bring them joint-heirship with Him in His Messianic Kingdom.

TRAINING FOR THE PRIESTHOOD

Whoever desires to hold on to his own will can have no part nor lot with Christ now. He cannot enter the family of God at all. Before we shall be accepted of God, we must give up everything that we have. Thenceforth we are to live, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Thus the New Creature will grow stronger day by day, while the flesh—that is the fleshly nature—will grow weaker. As long as we are in this mortal body we shall have a struggle with the flesh; but through the strength of our Lord we may win a glorious victory and in due time receive a new spiritual body, like that of our glorified Lord.

This class are the ones who are to rule the world during the incoming Age. No others will be fit to rule the world. But before this class can be qualified for such a position, they must first learn to submit themselves fully to God, must have fixed characters for righteousness. No one could make a competent ruler of others until he had learned to bow to lawful authority, until he had first learned to govern himself.

The pupils whom the great Teacher is now training are to be the Prests of the incoming Age. The priests of old taught the people and healed the sick. This typified what the Royal Priesthood will do in the future, when empowered by the First Resurrection change. (Revelation 20:4, 6.) "Sown an animal body," they will be "raised a spiritual body." It will be a great class that God will have. Our Lord Jesus Christ, the great Head of the Chuch, will be there. St. Peter, St. John, St. James, St. Paul and the other Apostles, as well as the faithful saints of this Gospel Age, will be with Him. A glorious company it will be.

Some of this company, however, did not always do right before their transformation into the likeness of our Lord and Head. Sometimes they manifested a wrong spirit. But afterwards they became well developed in meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love. When all of them shall have been perfected and receive their spirit bodies, all their earthly imperfections, some of which they were never able to overcome fully, will be forgotten. Perhaps they will shine all the brighter because of what they once were and what they overcame.

CHRISTIAN RESPONSIBILITY.

It is well for us to remember, as Christians, that the responsibility of our character development rests with us personally. God does not do the wrong. We are doing this and we are to do the reaping. God supplies the seed and tells us how to sow it; but He does not do the sowing for us. Whoever is not following the Master's instructions is not making himself ready for the Kingdom. How sorry we shall be in the future, if we find that we have been giving time and attention to worldly business or pleasure or any other thing to the neglect of the development of character necessary for join-heirship with Christ, and thus miss our share of the Kingdom glories!

God expects each Christian to have the greatest concern as to his personal character development. Important as it is to assist others in the same narrow way, the building up of his own character is paramount. Each has an individual work in himself that no one else can do. God desires His children to possess character; and each develops it according as he cultivates those traits which make it.

THE WORLD'S SOWING AND REAPING.

As now it it true of the Church that we shall reap as we sow, and that the amount sowed will determine the size of the crop, so it will be with the world in the next Age. The character developed in this life will determine the status when they enter the next. The bad marks now made on their character will remain until erased by a process of discipline and development.

For instance, the Emperor Nero was probably the most contemptible man who ever lived. The man who set fire to Rome that he might see a great conflagration, who then blamed the Christians for the deed, who caused them to be covered with oil and burned as torches, and who murdered his own mother, was deeply degraded. The measure of his responsibility we are unable to estimate. We leave the decision to the Lord. But he surely sowed lavishly to his depraved flesh, and correspondingly reaped an abundant crop of evil.

With such a disposition, with sin so deeply entrenched in his nature, Nero will have an uphill road to travel if, when awakened from the dead, he shall ever regain the image of God. There is no change in death. "As a tree falleth, so it shall lie." The resurrection will find Nero in the same condition in which he died. Of such persons the Bible says that they "shall awake to shame and everlasting contempt." (Daniel 12:2.) The Hebrew word here translated "everlasting" is olam, meaning lasting, not everlasting, as in our common Version Bible. Such characters will be held in contempt as long as they continue to deserve it.

We are glad that our gracious God has an arrangement whereby Nero and all others who were born predisposed to evil may have opportunity under favorable conditions to uproot the noxious weeds of sin and regain the lost image of God. But those who refuse to do so will abide in shame and contempt—will die the Second Death.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

BEECHER'S MORAL INTEGRITY BEYOND SUSPICION.

The circumstances in connection with Mr. Tilton's accusation proves that Beecher was not guilty of the criminal charge of adultery. The original charge made by Tilton was that Beecher made an improper proposal and that his wife resented this and said his wife was as "pure as an angel from heaven." To this Beecher instantly replied by a demand for a full and thorough investigation. Tilton and his friends did everything in their power to impede, thwart and prevent an investigation. Beecher insisted that it should be absolute, thorough and complete. When this investigation was begun Tilton changed his charged from an improper proposal to one of criminal conduct. This change was necesary in order to throw it into the civil courts. Tilton evidently saw that the investigation would exonerate Beecher and for this reason took matters to law in his own words, "to strike Mr. Beecher to the heart." The committee appointed to investigate found Mr. Tilton's charges to be prompted by his malice. Their report rendered two months later was: "we find nothing whatever in the evidence that should impair the perfect confidence of Plymouth Church or the world in the Christian character and integrity of Henry Ward Beecher." This report, and the evidence upon which it was based, was reviewed and accepted by an examining committee "and the reports of both committees were layed before the church, after full public notice, and unanimously adopted by fifteen hundred members, substantially the entire resident membership of the church.'

As further indicating Beecher's morality we state that in the legal trial, the question of the criminal charge, adultery, was the only thing for the jury to decide, and nine out of the twelve believed Beecher innocent; Major Pond constructed this into an acquittal. The prosecuting attorney wanted to abondon the case before it was completed and later publically avowed his belief in Beecher's innocence. The judge who presideded at the trial said eight years later: "by the integrity of his life and the purity of his character he has vanquished misrepresentation and abuse." These statements were confirmed by the ecclesiastical tribunal held one year and a half after the court trial—"the largest and most representative council of Congregational churches ever known in the history of the denomination was called by Plymouth Church"; their report condensed was: "we hold the pastor of this church, as we and all others are bound to hold him, innocent of the charges reported against him, until substantiated by proof." These judgments were affirmed by spontaneous expressions of Beecher's fellow citizens in the city he made his home for forty years.

From all acounts, Beecher, as with Wesley and Pastor Russell, was a victim of the Satanic spirit of malice aroused by Tilton's jealousy, who was determined to drive him in disgrace from his pulpit, his city, and the position of influence he held in American life. The same charge has unjustly been made against Pastor Russell by his wife, and Mrs. Wesley also charged that her husband was on terms of intimacy with and held other women in higher esteem than his wife. Tilton's inconsistency in saying that his wife was "as pure as an angel from heaven" and then charging her with the criminal offensce with Beecher, reminds us of the statement of Mrs. Russell in the Pittsburgh Courts, that she lived with her husband for eighteen years an avowal of Platonics, a remarkable case of self abnegation, and said under oath that she did not believe her husband guilty of improper conduct with other women, and then accused him of the incontinency by concocting the "Jelly-fish" story. This inconsistency proved her accusations to be a real fish-story, and the real cause of her malice was that she, as with Tilton, was a literary aspirant, and insisted upon having her material appear in the Watch Tower, without being edited into line with the established principles of doctrine upon which the journal was established. But her story is no longer believed even by Russell's enemies who still circulate it and will son be forgotten. Time will vindicate Russell of other charges of irregularities in business made against him, and Abbott's statement concerning Beecher will apply to Russell: "I believe that future history will attach as little emphasis to this episode in the life of Mr. Beecher as history now attaches to anologous imputations, with far more to give them color, brought against John Wesley in his lifetime."

BEECHER'S SOCIAL LIFE AND CULTURE THE REAL CAUSE OF HIS STERILITY IN THEOLOGY.

Abbott states that the cause of Tilton's domestic troubles prior to the law suit, was the teaching of Tilton on the question of social relation. Tilton had become infected with the teaching of John Milton, which Abbott styled, "American theories of socialism and free-love." But Abbott does not state, as presented heretofore, that Beecher lived these precepts, without preaching them. Beecher was not guilty of the serious offenses charged by Tilton, but had lived Tilton's precepts from John Milton and had advised Mrs. Tilton to leave her husband to protect her children from this social hesesy taught by their father. Beecher did not seem to recognize that the home, with the man as the head of the family, was a Divine institution. While Beecher did not teach the radical theories on marriage and divorce as did Tilton, yet his lack of appreciation for the Home as a Divine institution is indicated by a remark he made on the question of woman's suffrage: "the individual is the unit of society and not the family and there can be no greater blunder in philosophical statement than to hold to anything else in our day."
